On one occasion while we were absent from the house he plundered a cage containing a pet canary bird, killed the fluttering inmate, plucked the feathers and then laid the bare little body in a frying pan over a gas stove, where it was left until the skin turned a beautiful brown. We came back just as the intelligent canine was adding the proper proportions of pepper and salt to the cooked morsel, when he bolted the meal hastily for fear of interruption and then scooted through the open door.

After remaining away for two days he returned with a fine young pullet in his mouth, stolen from a neighboring hennery, and this he placed at our feet, wagging his tail and winking his eyes significantly, as much as to say, "This is to square the roast canary bird." It really was a very tender chicken.—Sam T. Clover in Chicago Herald.

An Irish Ware.

Belleek ware comes from Ireland. It is as light and thin as an egg shell, very glossy and feels like satin. It is said to be very strong. The color is peculiar, being a little darker than cream, and nearly all that I saw was slightly decorated in pink. Tea and after dinner coffee cups are about the same price, $15 to $18 a dozen. There is a great variety of small dishes in this ware for bonbons, olives, salt, etc.

In odd pieces there are cracker jars in imported china, from $3 to $6 a piece, which in domestic ware would cost from $1 to $2.50 each. Bouillon cups are fifty cents each. English pudding sets of three pieces bring $1 to $6. Chocolate pots, that until closely examined look like fine Doulton, cost $1 to $3 each.—New York Telegram.

A Collection of Martyrs.

A recent canvass was made of the convicts of Joliet prison, and out of over 600 men, sent for almost every crime in the calendar, not a single one would acknowledge that he was guilty of the crime charged. The great majority looked upon themselves as martyrs to the law, and felt that they had been grievously wronged.—Detroit Free Press.

Florida is putting its best resorts in readiness for the expected winter tourists. Lawn tennis courts are being arranged, vegetables are being planted in large quantities, boats are being prepared and as the announcements say, "No efforts will be spared to make life a pleasure and to give such healthful outdoor sports as will build up those who are run down from overwork, or will give a new lease of life to those afflicted with pulmonary or asthmatical diseases."

One of the points especially noted by military observers during the recent maneuvers abroad, where smokeless powder was used, was that in a clear atmosphere, unobscured by the smoke of battle, all bright accoutrements were seen at a great distance, thus betraying the positions of the various bodies of troops.

HOW "ZERO" WAS ADOPTED.

Fahrenheit Discovered, as He Thought, the Extreme of Cold and Named It.

"Zero" is the part of every thermometer that is most watched and dreaded in this changeable climate of ours. The word is from the Spanish, and means empty, hence nothing. It was first used on a thermometer in 1709 by a Prussian merchant named Fahrenheit.

From a boy he was a close observer of nature, and when only 19 years old, in the remarkably cold winter of 1709, he experimented by putting snow and salt together and noticed that it produced a degree of cold equal to the coldest day of the year.

And that day was the coldest day that the oldest inhabitant could remember. Gabriel was the more struck with the coincidence of his little scientific discovery, and hastily concluded that he had found the lowest degree of temperature known in the world, either natural or artificial.

He called the degree zero, and constructed a thermometer, or rude weather glass, with a scale graduating up from zero to boiling point, which he numbered 212, and the freezing point 32, because, as he thought, mercury contracted the thirty-second of its volume on being cooled down from the temperature of freezing water to zero, and expanded one hundred and eightieth on being heated from the freezing to the boiling point.

Time showed that the arrangement instead of being truly scientific was as arbitrary as the division of the Bible into verses and chapters; and these two points no more represented the real extremes of temperature than from "Dan to Beersheba" expressed the exact extremes of Palestine.

But Fahrenheit's thermometer had been widely adopted, with its inconvenient scale, and none thought of any better until his name became an authority, for Fahrenheit finally abandoned trade and gave himself up to science. Then habit made people cling to the established scale, as habit made the English cling to the old system of cumbrous fractional money.

The three countries which use Fahrenheit are England, Holland and America. Russia and Germany use Baumer's thermometer, in which the boiling point is counted 80 degs. above the freezing point. France uses the centigrade thermometer, so called because it makes the boiling point 100 degs. from freezing point.

On many accounts the centigrade system is the best, and the triumph of convenience will be attained when zero is made the freezing point, and when the boiling point is put 100 or 1,000 degs. from it, and all the sub-divisions are fixed decimally.

If Fahrenheit had done this at first, or even if he had made it one of his many improvements after the public adopted his error, the luck of opportunity, which was really his, would have secured to his invention the patronage of the world.—New York World.

Christopher Columbus' Home.

The municipality of Genoa has it is reported consented to restore the house in which Christopher Columbus lived. It is rapidly falling into decay and has long stood in need of repair. Originally, when Domenico Colombo, Christopher's father, inhabited the house, in 1457, it was of two stories only, but another was added in 1683, while the serious damage to the building caused by the bombardment of Genoa by Louis XIV was being repaired. The house at Valladolid, where Columbus died in poverty in 1509, is also to be restored. It is now used as a stable; but the municipality of the town intend to purchase it and turn it into a museum dedicated to the great explorer.—London Tit-Bits.

English Farms Vacant.

An enormous number of farms have become vacant this Michaelmas, and all over England it appears to be extremely probable that land owners will have them thrown upon their hands, as in most counties there are half a dozen vacant holdings for every eligible applicant. In Hampshire, Kent, Sussex and other counties, where the principal land owners already have thousands of acres unoccupied, the prospect is really very serious. It is nearly impossible to let arable farms on any terms, and even good grazing farms will only find tenants at reduced rentals. The Kent hop farms are reported to be difficult to let even at half the present rents.—London World.

Taken by a Hansom Cabman.

People little know what a terrible power rests in the hands of a hansom cabman. They will realize it now when they hear how sternly and, it must be added, how usefully it was applied in the case of one William Jones. It appears that this person, who described himself as a commercial traveler, hired a hansom, and was driven about the town for several hours. For certain reasons the cabman suspected that there was something wrong about his fare. So what did he do but let down the front glass lights, and keep them down, thereby effectually imprisoning the vainly protesting traveler. He then drove to the Peckham police station and gave up his prisoner.

He had done well, for William Jones turned out to be a very bad character; in fact, an old and convicted burglar, whose suspicious movements had lately attracted the serious attention of the police. Brought up at the Lambeth police court, on the charge of being disorderly and as a person under police supervision, supposed to be getting his livelihood by dishonest means, he was sent to prison with hard labor for twelve months. The hansom cab has thus figured, for the first time in history, as a thief trap. It is to be hoped that its newly discovered and awful power will never be employed at the expense of the innocent.—London Telegraph.

It Worked.

A woman at Lafayette, Ind., wanted to rid an alcohol barrel of the odor. She dropped a live coal into the bung, and she won't be in walking order before Jan. 1. Nine-tenths of the barrel hit her at once, and the remainder smashed in the windows.—Detroit Free Press.

True Happiness.

Mrs. Muggers—I see a prominent society belle is dead. If there ever was a perfectly blissful existence on earth she enjoyed it while she lived.

Mr. Muggers—Because she was a society belle?

Mrs. Muggers—No; because she was engaged twenty-four times and never married.—New York Weekly.

The Man with a Loud Voice.

As a safe rule the man who howls at his dog in the field may be put down as a poor sportsman, and the dog that is howled at as a poor dog. For the matter of that, the dog which finds game for a noisy master usually does about what his dog sense tells him to. The very fact of the man's noisy demonstrations implies that he cannot make his dog obey. With dogs as with horses, the master who handles them best is not he whose voice can be heard in the next county. The quiet control of horse or dog is the only true mastery.

There is nothing to be said for noise in the field. Properly trained, a dog will obey as readily and as intelligently and as effectively a motion of hand, or gun, or head, as the bawling and roaring of a Boanerges. It is true that the dog exhorter may thereby secure a needed and beneficial degree of lung exercise; but he is not at all likely to secure so large a count of game. Of all sounds that startle the birds that of the human voice is most certain to alarm them. Every expert gunner knows this and keeps still. The shouter is a tyro; or if he shouts year after year he is certainly a poor sportsman, and when in company with others who do not share his noisy proclivities, he is voted a general nuisance. Many a grouse has been lost for no other reason than because it was startled and flushed by ill timed speech.—Forest and Stream.

The Temple of Incas.

A correspondent writes from Peru to The Germania that the remains of a temple, dating back from the period of the Incas, have been discovered while clearing the ground for a small place on one of the affluents of the upper Marañon, in the great plain which lies at the foot of the eastern Cordilleras. There was an inclosing wall of great extent, fully eighty inches thick, the inclosure within being divided by other walls into halls and smaller chambers. The plan and the painted inscriptions resemble what has been found in other places ascertained to be ancient Peruvian temples.

Hence it is inferred that this also was a similar temple. Several buildings of this kind have been found scattered over Peru. The Spaniards demolished them and floods bearing quantities of sand from the Cordilleras covered over the remains, to be succeeded later by a growth of shrubs, and even trees, quite hiding from view the masonry underneath. The Peruvian government has been moved by this recent discovery, and some regular excavations will be undertaken on sites where temples and even towns are known to have existed prior to the conquest.

New York People Eat Lots of Meat.

Besides the great influx of western meat there arrived in New York, at the great stock yards in Jersey City and the New York Central yards in 1889, 380,000 cattle, 300,000 calves, 2,000,000 sheep and lambs, and 1,750,000 hogs, making 270,000,000 pounds of beef, 36,000,000 pounds of veal, 80,000,000 pounds of mutton and lamb, and 262,500,000 pounds of pork. Counted with the western meats this makes, for the amount of butchers' meat eaten by the 5,000,000 people in the metropolitan district—New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Hoboken, Yonkers and so on—somewhere about 470,000,000 pounds; 235,000 tons of beef; 75,000,000 pounds or 38,000 tons of veal; 85,000,000 pounds or 42,500 tons of mutton and lamb, and 276,500 pounds or 8,250 tons of pork last year. This makes a grand total of 453,750 tons of meat—907,500,000 pounds—consumed by New York and vicinity in one year. That means about one pound a day for each man, woman and child—twice as much as is eaten in London.—New York News.

A Good Place for a Fight.

"Dog fights were very popular in that town. One particularly lively party of sports had great luck in evading the police. They hunted high and low for them, but never found them. They don't know to this day where the fights were held."

"I suppose you know. Where were they held—if there's no harm in telling."

"Well, they were held in the cellar of the barn of the chief of police."—Lewiston Journal.

Why He Fled on Saturday.

Bjenks—Whither?

Bjones—As far from this town as I can get. Back Monday.

Bjenks—Wherefore?

Bjones—Because I see that our Sunday paper is to contain four hundred and fifty columns and eight supplements.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Wanted Some Store Teeth.

The other day a waman not over 30, but minus her teeth, called on a prominent dentist, and asked him if he could not rent her a set of teeth to wear to a party that evening. She told the dentist that she supposed that false teeth were kept in stock and that people fitted themselves.—Waterbury American.

Digestion would be greatly promoted if rest could be taken for half an hour after a meal. A gentle walk with the chest thrown out is excellent even indoors. When a walk is taken in the house the hands should be clasped at the back.

Raspberries in October.

Rev. George Matthews, of South Dartmouth, on Saturday picked up from his red raspberry bushes one and three-fourths quarts of ripe berries, and the week before he picked two quarts. He expects to gather more this week if there is no frost.—New Bedford Standard.

The Penobscot river, the largest in Maine, drains 7,400 square miles, a region as large as the state of Massachusetts. From Old Town to Bangor, a distance of twelve miles, the river falls more than ninety feet, giving several of the finest water powers in the world.

The late Samuel J. Randall was in public life for a long period of years. With large opportunities for amassing a fortune, it appears that the total value of his estate amounted to about $5,000, consisting entirely of personal effects.

The curator of the Brooklyn institute told a reporter that one beautiful butterfly in the collection of the institute is valued at $1,000, that sum having recently been paid for a duplicate.

Boucicault was asked which he considered his best play. "The one I am going to write next," he said after a moment of profound thought.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Thomas Parker, deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Executors of the last Will and Testament of Thos. Parker, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Executors, at the office of P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo Co., Cal., the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate, in the County of Inyo, State of California.

JOHN SHEPHERD,
S. G. GREGG.
Executor of the last Will and Testament of Thomas Parker, deceased.
Dated at Independence, Cal. April 4, 1891.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, San Francisco, California. Location of works Inyo county, Cal.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AT A meeting of the Board of Directors, held the 30th day of March, 1891, an assessment (No. 12) of Ten Cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, No. 132 California street, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 12th day of May 1891, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on FRIDAY, the 29th day of May, 1891, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

G. W. LUCE, Secretary.
Office, 135 California St., San Francisco, California.

FOR SALE CHEAP.

Two span first class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
Bishop Creek, Cal.
Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING SALOON.
Shaving, Hair Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.
WM. H. RUFF, Prop'r

IRWINS' SALOON.
wards and Market Streets,
Independence, Cal.
THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt and furnished in a style second to none on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.
THE BAR
Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.
JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

BELL'S
Flouring Mills,
A. N. BELL, Prop.
TRY BELL'S
EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.
Having added Patent Rolls and other Improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out a flour that is fully
Equal to the Best.
Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.
A. N. BELL.
Independence, Cal.

P. W. FORBES — P. H. MACK
MACK & FORBES.
Real Estate Agents,
Address
P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal — P. W. FORBES, Bishop, Cal.

FORBES & TOBEY,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.,
—DEALERS IN—
LUMBER
OF ALL KINDS
DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS.
LATH,
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.
Matched and Dressed
Flooring.
sep11tf

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and
Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YNA LL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-Officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.
In obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "Independent" Building, Independence, Inyo county, Cal.

A. R. CONKLIN,
Attorney-At-Law
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the States of California and Nevada.

JOHN W. P. LAIRD,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Independence, Cal.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M. D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)
Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED.
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.
Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:
Saturday ..... January 24th
" ..... February 21st
" ..... March 28th
" ..... April 18th
" ..... May 23rd
" ..... June 20th
" ..... July 18th
" ..... August 15th
" ..... September 12th
" ..... October 17th
" ..... November 14th
" ..... December 12th
JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

BOOTS AND SHOES
MADE AND REPAIRED.
THE BEST MATERIAL.
FIRST-CLASS WORK
Repairs done Promptly.
Prices Reasonable.
A. J. DAVIS,
nov 30-tf — Independence.

NORMAN
HOUSE.
Independence, - Cal.
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates.
Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.
O. F. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine.
FRED BURKHARDT.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE WHY ORDER OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE AND PERSONAL PROPERTY SHOULD NOT BE MADE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE County of Inyo, State of California.

In the matter of the estate of John Mullane deceased.

Order to show cause why an Order of sale of real estate and personal property should not be made.

Richard Hessian Sr. the Executor of the last will and testament of John Mullane, deceased, having filed his petition herein, duly verified, praying for an order of sale of all the real estate and all the personal property of said deceased, for the purposes therein set forth, it is therefore ordered by the Judge of said Court, that all persons interested in the estate of said deceased, appear before the said Superior Court on Saturday, the 18th day of April, 1891, at two o'clock in the afternoon of said day, at the Court room of said Court, at the Court House in the town of Independence, in the said County of Inyo, to show cause why an order should not be granted to the said Executor to sell all of the real estate and all of the personal property of the said deceased. And that a copy of this order be published at least four successive weeks in the Inyo Independent, a newspaper published and printed in the said County of Inyo.

GEO. M. GILL.
Judge of said Superior Court.
Dated March 19th, 1891.

[ENDORSED.]

In the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California.

In the matter of the Estate of John Mullane deceased.

Order to show cause why an order of sale of Real Estate and Personal Property should not be made.

Filed March 20th, 1891.
J. N. YANDELL,
Clerk.

PROBATE NOTICE

Notice for publication of time appointed for proving will, etc.

In the matter of the Estate of Thomas Parker deceased.

Notice is hereby given that Saturday, the 4th day of April A. D. 1891, at ten o'clock a. m. of said day at the Court Room of said Court, at the town of Independence, in the County of Inyo State of California, has been appointed as the time and place for proving the will of said Thomas Parker, deceased and for hearing the application of John Shepherd and S. G. Gregg for the issuance to them of letters testamentary thereon.

J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Petitioner.
Dated March 19th, 1891.

PROBATE NOTICE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE County of Inyo, State of California.

In the matter of the Estate of Peter Dierkson deceased.

Notice for publication of time appointed for probate of will.

Notice is hereby given that Saturday, the 18th day of April, A. D. 1891, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, and the Court-room of said Court, at the town of Independence in the County of Inyo, State of California have been appointed as the time and place for proving the will of said Peter Dierkson, deceased, and for hearing the application of John F. Lubken for the issuance to him of Letters of Administration with the will annexed thereon.

J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Petitioner.
Dated April 2d, 1891.

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROPRIETOR
Horseshoeing ..... $2 00 for
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK

PIONEER BREW
INDEPENDENCE
BEER ICE CO
The Bar is supplied with the Best of Liquors and Cigars.
The Coolest Hall in the town see what comfort you can have weather.
PHILIP GERRIG, PROP.

J. W. Mu
BLACKSMI
—AND—
General Iro
Wagons and Repai
HORSESHOEING.
Shop on Edwards
Court House, Ind

Pio
Livery & Fee
INDEPENDE
Having returned and resu the above well known feed a can be assured of findi Teams, Saddle Horses, Livery
in general. Also pound or ton.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, APRIL 10 ..... 1891.

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 98
Lead, 4 35
Copper, 13.70
Tin, 20 40
Sugar, .06
Coffee, 20@ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 9 @ 11.

Religious Services.

Rev. H. J. Winsor will breach in Lone Pine at 11 a. m.; George Creek 2:30; Independence at 7 p. m. Sunday school at Lone Pine and Independence at 2 p. m.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

MONDAY, April 6, 1891.

Estate of G. A. Thede, deceased—Filed petition and order fixing time for hearing.

Broder vs. Conklin—Filed three acceptances and two stipulations.

WEDNESDAY, April 8, 1891.

Filed articles of incorporation of Lone Pine Canal Company.

THURSDAY, April 9, 1891.

Fehrman vs. Goodale—Issued summons.

DIED.

WILLIAMS—At Lone Pine, April 4th, Daniel H. Williams, a native of Canada, aged about 57 years.

LUCAS—At Lone Pine, April 7th, John Lucas, a native of New York, aged about 47 years.

Pete Labarge is in town to-day.

A. C. Stevens was in town yesterday.

A special train came down last Sunday.

Mrs. Frank Fitzgerald visited Independence early in the week.

Charley Nolan is to be station agent at Soda vice Miss Stansfield.

The Supervisors made a short session this week completing their business on Wednesday evening.

Pat Clinton is suffering from a severe attack of the grip. The disease is prevalent in this county.

A. O. Collins has been appointed Sheep License Collector and W. F. Matlack Coroner and Public Administrator.

Harry Louden was in town during the week. Harry is an enthusiastic horseman and is well posted in racing vernacular.

Miss Dora Shepherd returned home last Monday evening from a visit with her sister, Mrs. Butler, at San Francisco.

The Sunday evening service at Independence begins at 7:30 on Sunday next, and will be so continued until further notice.

Felix Gomez, accused of selling whiskey to the Indians was released from custody last Monday, the complaining witness failing to appear.

Collins & Son of Warm Spring have purchased a fine young Shire stallion in Los Angeles. Charley Collins expected to arrive with him to-day.

Mrs. Jessie Wightman arrived in Independence last Monday from San Francisco. She expects to be detained in the valley some little time on legal business.

Now is a golden opportunity to secure the finest piece of land under the Eastside canal. For the quality of it intending purchasers are referred to Superintendent McIver and the Index. Only six dollars an acre.

To meet the growing demands of Kern County the Daily Californian has been started at Bakersfield. It is a bright newsy sheet and is sure to contribute greatly toward the advancement of that section.

Dr. L. L. Woodin made what Eastern people would consider a long buggy ride at the end of last week. From Independence to the Johnson ranch and return, thence to Darwin and return, a distance in all of 148 miles was covered in thirty-three hours by wagon.

John Shepherd, Road Overseer of District No. 5½, has done some excellent work in his district and also in the 5th District. New roads have been made where the old were cut up and filled with sand, and the bad places repaired. The drive to Lone Pine is at least an hour shorter than formerly.

Is not a man a thief in his heart who boasts of lobbying an unjust bill through the Board of Supervisors, which was, in fact, afterwards reconsidered and cut down. His fingers had the fantods when he made such an ass of himself, which accounts for his frankness.

D. Stubblefields camp in Mazourka canyon was destroyed by fire last Monday. He left a small fire burning in the morning, and on his return the bed, camping utensils and a consiberable quantity of hay and grain were destroyed. He returned to town immediately for fresh supplies.

In last week's issue a short item appeared in regard to a 1st of April joke perpetrated upon Mr. Turner. In this week's Index an article appears which seems on its face a slap at the INDEPENDENT. The person who wrote it intended a return joke upon the other parties, but seemed incapable of expressing himself as he wished.

Heavy Frost.

On Monday night a storm of rain and snow set in and continued until noon of Tuesday when it gradually cleared away. On Tuesday night there was a heavy frost, ice forming half an inch thick. It is feared that the peach, nectarine and apricot crops are entirely ruined. The leaves on apple and pear trees were frozen and turned black under the warm sun of Wednesday.

Close of School.

The public school at Independence closes to-day, the term having lasted seven and one half months and the appropriation being exhausted.

During the term Elna Matlack was neither absent nor tardy. Jeanette Wood was absent one half day, Minnie Levy absent one day and Cora Craig absent two days. A full report of the term's work will be given in next week's issue.

SUPERVISORS' PROCEEDINGS.

MONDAY, April 6, 1891.

The Board met at 7 o'clock in regular session, present, Love, Watterson and Steward; absent, Stewart and Fitzgerald.

No business was transacted and Board adjourned until next day.

TUESDAY, April 7th.

Board met at 10 o'clock a. m., present Love, Watterson, Steward and Fitzgerald; absent, Stewart.

Supervisor Love was elected temporary chairman.

The following claims were allowed and ordered paid:

J. S. Gorman	$ 2 90
C. W. Rathbun	20 80
A. E. Janvier	27 70
A. W. Eibeshutz	113 70
John Baxter	13 00
Mrs. Keppler	20 00
Bancroft & Co.	12 00
J. J. Moore	1 52
D. Holland	9 00
L. W. Allingham	6 00
J. N. Yandell	8 15
J. H. Shannon	18 50
P. W. Forbes	6 10
Henry Levy	5 10
Independence Water Co.	8 00
Daniel Crough	28 40
F. E. Densmore	19 00
J. W. Muphy	3 00
C. W. Craig	168 75
I. J. Woodin	100 00

The Board adjourned until 1 o'clock p. m., at which hour it reconvened, same members present.

The following claims were allowed and ordered paid:

N. Rhine	$ 19 73
L. Wood	3 00
Claim of C. W. Craig was reconsidered.
Inyo Independent	$160 00
P. A. Chaffant, $17 05, allowed	12 25
Bancroft, Whitney & Co.	50 00
R. Carrasco, $12, allowed	10 00
W. A. Chaffant	30 75
W. H. Huff	3 00
C. W. Craig	36 20

Resignation of E. L. Smith as Justice of Peace accepted.

Warrants ordered drawn to cover expenses of Special Election.

Reports of Overseers of Road Districts Nos. 1, 2, 4 and 5 accepted and approved and claims allowed as follows:

James Nevins, District No. 1		$18 00
W. H. Powers	" 2	72 25
S. J. McMurry	" 4	43 50
John Keegan	" 5	72 02
W. L. Hunter	" 6	10 00
Claim of D. Holland allowed		9 00

Clerk ordered to draw a warrant monthly from April 7th for $10 in favor of Mrs. Donley, an indigent person.

A rebate of $18 40 allowed W. D. McLaren on Bishop Building Fund.

Board adjourned until next day.

WEDNESDAY, April 8, 1891.

Board met at 10 o'clock a. m., same members present.

Bill of C. W. Craig allowed in full.

Bill of Independent reconsidered.

Petition of J. H. Bulpit et als. considered.

Bill of P. A. Chalfant reconsidered and allowed in full.

Petitions read and A. O. Collins appointed Sheep License Collector.

Petition of Assessor Chalfant for $350 for deputy allowed $300.

Reports of Auditor and Treasurer accepted and approved.

Dr. L. L. Woodin	$35 50
A. W. Eibeshutz	4 25

Board adjourned until 1 o'clock p. m., when it reassembled, same members present.

Claim of John Shepherd on Road District No. 6 allowed, $5.

Order directing bridge built across East Side Canal rescinded.

Application of R. Love for $25 additional for Bridge No. 2 granted

Claim of G. W. Rose for carrying election returns allowed, $20.

Board adjourned until 7 o'clock p. m., at which hour it reassembled, same members present.

Claim of Independent allowed in full, $160.

Claim of C. W. Craig for $168 75 allowed $155 25.

Claim of I. H. Mulholland for $114 15 allowed.

On petitions being presented W. F. Matlack was appointed Coroner and J. W. Murphy Constable.

Claims of members of Board adowed and Board adjourned.

Appreciation.

The following is a clipping from the Bakersfield Echo:

MR. EDITOR: Permit me to express my appreciation of the way the business of the Superior Court has been conducted since Judge Conklin has presided over the same. It is refreshing to an old timer to see a judge who has the good of the county and litigants at heart, and who manifests the same by his acts and decisions. The old probate business of the county is being looked after and we hope will be cleared for once. I don't think it ever has been since the county was organized. When the master hand holds the reins of the law every thing goes as if by clock work. I must say that the citizens of Kern should feel a sense of relief at the way the business is being conducted. Too much cannot be said in praise of an officer who performs his duty and hands his decisions down without fear or favor. JUNOR.

Mining Pays Best.

Chris Crohn discovered that farming in Sonoma did not pay and returned to Inyo last summer to resume mining. He has been engaged for several months past in developing the Augusta, a patented mine owned by him about three and a half miles north of Cerro Gordo on the S dine side of the ridge. A piece of ore taken from the ledge was brought to town to be sent below for assay; it is black metal and will assay at least five hundred dollars per ton. A tunnel is being run on the ledge, and some ore is being taken out for shipment. The mine is likely to develope into a valuable property.

A Grisly Find

It is reported that the skeleton of a man was founk by two prospectors in the mountains near Darwin last week. The deceased had evidently died from thirst as an empty water bottle was found beside him. The flesh was entirely eaten away from the bones with the exception of the feet which were protected by his boots. It is probably several months since the death occurred. Beside the skeleton was found a number of coins to the value of about sixty cents, in nickels, pennies and Chinese money. There is no clue to the ideny of the remains.

An Old Pioneer.

Under the above heading the following article was published in the INYO INDEPENDENT of October 3, 1870:

There is stopping at the Inyo House at this time an old pioneer named Atkinson who passed through this Valley in 1843. Mr. Atkinson was with Capt. Joe Walker who was piloting a company of immigrants through to California. Among the immigrants was George P. Yount, who subsequently settled the somewhat noted Yount ranch in Napa County, and other well known pioneers. The party had wagons, the appearance of which so terrified the original denizens of the sage brush that they incontinently fled to the mountains. The route traveled by Walker and his party lay along the eastern side of Owens river and around the lake, near which their mules gave out and they were compelled to leave their wagons. The same season Fremont came down the valley, and it was on this trip he cached the brass howitzer some where near where Aurora now stands. The gun was a few years ago recovered and is now in Virginia City. Capt. Dick Owens, a mountain man, was with Fremont, and from him our valley, river and lake inherited their names. Mr. Atkinson subsequently took part in the war with the Mexicans in California, most of the time as interpreter for Com. Stockton. He is 75 years old, and like so many of the adventurous spirits whose lives are spent in subduing the wilderness, Mr. Atkinson, near the end of life's journey possesses neither a home nor much of this world's goods. His old comrade, Capt. Walker, is but little better off pecuniarily. He is living in Oakland, we believe.

In the Century for February is an article by "M. N. O." on the Fremont expedition which states that Captain Richard Ower, from whom the valley was named, left Fremont at Walker lake in 1845, and went south, Fremont himself crossing the mountains to Sutter's Fort for supplies.

The same issue contains the following items:

Mr. Ferguson's teams have hauled from the Belshaw furnace at Cerro Gordo 1,800 bars of lead down to the lake at Ferguson's Landing for the more convenient loading on downward-bound teams. There are about 1,000 bars more at the works, and increasing at the rate of 100 each day.

The shipment of fine bullion per Wells Fargo & Co.'s Express last week, from the Kearsarge mine was 3,720 ounces.

Obituary.

Daniel H. Williams died at Lone Pine last Saturday, and a large concourse of friends followed the remains to the grave on Sunday. Mr. Williams was a pioneer and a resident of Cerro Gordo in its palmy days. When lively times began at Lone Pine he erected the hotel now known as the Whitney House where, he died. He was respected wherever known and died as he had always lived, a thoroughly honorable and honest man.

John Lucas died at Lone Pine on Tuesday and was buried on Wednesday. Mr. Lucas was an early settler in the valley, coming here a very young man. An old register reads as follows: John Lucas, aged 24, native of New York, farmer by occupation, residence Independence, registered June 1, 1868. About 1880 he located at Lone Pine on the ranch where he died. By constant labor he had built up a fine ranch property, well stocked. In his death the community loses an energetic, representative man and a good citizen. He leaves a widow and infant son. A brother, who visited him two years ago, lives at Perry's Mills, New York.

The Greatest Discovery of The Age.

An infallible remedy for the cure of catarrh and deafness in all its stages, by one who has been a great sufferer from catarrh and almost total deafness.

No catarrh or slimy green and yellow sticky matter discharging from the nose. No deafness. No ringing cracking sounds in the head. No mucous matter lodging in the throat. No occasional hacking cough with throwing up slimy green and yellow sticky matter. It is a blessing that words cannot describe.

For further information, write for circulars. Address Frank Wurtz & Co., Wausau, Wis. Drawer 1029.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For Sale!

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE

Eastside Canal.

There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,

C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

MARY A. BALL, Plaintiff, vs. ROBERT BALL, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Robert Ball, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant and for costs of suit, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 28th day of February, A. D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

72 I. O. F. 72

THE

72d Anniversary of I. O. O. F

Will be Celebrated by a

GRAND BALL

AT THE

Agricultural Pavilion, Independence,

ON

Monday Evening, April 27, 1891.

Admission Free to All!

FLOOR MANAGER.....Bertrand Rhine.

FLOOR DIRECTORS.....N. E. CONKLIN, G. H. LEWIS, J. W. MURPHY, ROBERT O'NEAL, B. F. GRAY

INVITATION COMMITTEE

ROUND VALLEY: C. F. Wildasinn, H. Evans

BISHOP: John Bourland, Robert O'Neal, P. P. Keough, O. H. Hill, J. H. Bulpitt, I. P. Yaney.

BIG PINE: S. G. Gregg, J. C. Schalten, L. Newman, J. R. Eldred

CERRO GORDO: Pat. Clinton

INDEPENDENCE: Walter James Jr., E. Robinson, P. W. Forbes, C. W. Craig, Dr. J. D. Blair, P. H. Mack, J. E. Shepherd

LONE PINE: J. R. Moffett, R. C. Spear

KEELER: Thos. Boland, B. F. Gray, John Anton, Sam. Levy, Finley Bedford.

☞ Free transportation to and from trains and to pavilion.

☞ Supper at Norman House. ☜

MISCELLANEOUS.

THOMAS & HILL,

DEALERS IN

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL.

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $25 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. Can work in spare time or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDIS

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

☞ Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere.

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
n47tf

Lake View Hotel

Keeler, Cal.

John Barnes, Prop'r.

☞ First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—

Wines, Liquors, & Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

☞ All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.

DENTISTS.

OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSfield, opposite the Southern Hotel.

Prompt and careful treatment given and the least possible pain inflicted. Address,

WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

BISHOP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE BISHOP.

Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St

In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable

S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK

BREWERY,

L. MUNZINGER & CO., Proprietors.

All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.

☞ Customers supplied on all points ☜

☞ Of the C. & C. Railroad. ☜

Send orders to

L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

F. E. Bosworth,

Watchmaker & Jeweler.

BISHOP, CAL.

Fine and Complicated Watch Repairing a Specialty.

Guns, Sewing Machines, Organs and Music Boxes Put in Perfect Condition and Warranted.

I Prefer to do all work at your house and will call if you will write to me at Bishop.

A NEW DEAL!

LONE PINE

Livery. Feed & Sale Stable.

A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.

OPPOSITE SNOWDEN HOUSE.

Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,

—DEALER IN—

General Merchandise,

LONE PINE,

INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE, INYO CO. CAL.

Dealer In GENERAL MERCHANDISE, GROCERIES MINERS Supplies

PROVISIONS, &c., &c., &c

A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R R

TAKING EFFECT

Sunday, November 16th, '90

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1	To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Mound House	11:30 p m	5.50 p. m
Dayton	12:00 p. m.	5:10 p. m.
Wabuska	2 05 p m	2 50 p. m
Hawthorne	5 50 p. m.	11.10 a. m.
Luning	7:05 p. m.	9 55 a. m.
Soda Springs	8:05 p m.	9:15 a. m
Belleville	9:15 p m.	7:55a. m.
Candelaria	Ar. 10.00 p. m	Lv. 7.2 a. m.
	No. 3. Leave—	No. 4. Arrives—
Belleville	8 20 a m	5:25 p m.
Benton	11:50 a m	1:35 a.m.
Besecp Creek	2:00p. m.	11:05 a. m
Alvord	2.45 p. m	10:00 a. m
Independence	4:20 p. m.	8:30 a. m
Lone Pine	5:10 p. m.	7:40 a. m
Keeler	Ar 5:55 p. m.	Lv. 7.00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R., which connect at Reno with east and west bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (35 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's. tri weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville, Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stages for Columbus (8 miles), Silver P Montezuma, Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.

D A BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles

OF

Fashionable Clothing Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOL

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries a canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES, PEANUTS, WALNUTS, TOYS!

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE

Blacksmith Shop.

R. C. Spear, Prop'r

—ALL WORK ON—

MINING TOOLS, FARMING IMPLEMENTS & FREIGHTING OUTFITS

—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—

HORSE SHOEING, CARRIAGE WORK, GENERAL REPAIRING

☞ All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON

KEELER, CAL.

In Lake View Hotel

BEER, WINES, LIQUORS and CIGARS

All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.

JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.

J. C. MILLER, Lessee.

—THE BAR—

Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of WINES, LIQUORS, & CIGARS

☞ The most careful attention given to the amusement and comfort of patrons.

A FINE BILLIARD TABLE

Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon. sept-12 td

YOUR MONEY, OR YOUR LIFE!

This question is a "pert" one, but we mean it. Will you sacrifice a few paltry dollars, and save your life? or will you allow your blood to become tainted, and your system run-down, until, finally, you are laid away in the grave? Better be in time, and "hold up" your hands for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a guaranteed remedy for all scrofulous and other blood-taints, from whatever cause arising. It cures all Skin and Scalp Diseases, Ulcers, Sores, Swellings and kindred ailments. It is powerfully tonic as well as alterative, or blood-cleansing, in its effects, hence it strengthens the system and restores vitality, thereby dispelling all those languid, "tired feelings" experienced by the debilitated. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Salt-rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Makers, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

It appears that the criminal has on the average jury entirely too many of his peers.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE BLIND.

Dr. La Grange wishes to make known his New Treatment for the cure of all diseases of the Eye: —Cataract, Defective Vision, Inflammation, etc., etc., without Operation or Pain. The remedy can be applied by the patient, and is simple, safe and sure in its effects, strengthening the muscles and nerves of the eye, removing pain almost instantaneously. It is a marvelous discovery and a blessing to the sufferer.

For further particulars address with stamped envelope, R. J. LA GRANGE, M. D., 215 Powell st., fourth door from Geary, San Francisco, Cal.

Office Hours, 11 till 3.

People who have no time to pray during Lent have lots of time to sin all the balance of the year.

SPREADING FOR LEAGUES AROUND

The marshy, overflowed lands, sunken lots and half submerged river banks, which give them birth, the seeds of malaria impregnate the air, and are inhaled at every breath by thousands unprovided with any adequate safeguard against the baneful influence. Yet such exist—potent alike to remedy or to prevent, pure in its constituents, and the professionally recognized substitute for the hateful drug, quinine. Its name is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a family specific and safeguard, foremost not only as an antidote to malaria, but also as a means of permanently removing dyspepsia, and relieving constipation, liver complaint, rheumatism, kidney and bladder ailments, and nervousness. Among invigorants it takes the first place, and is also a superb appetizer. Use it systematically.

Puck has noticed that it takes two to make a bargain, but that only one of them can get the best of it.

DIAMOND VERA-CURA

—FOR—

Dyspepsia

and all Stomach Troubles,

INDIGESTION, Nausea, Sour Stomach, Giddiness, Heartburn, Constipation, Fullness, Food Rising, Disagreeable Taste, Nervousness.

At Druggists and Dealers, or sent by mail on receipt of 25 cts. (5 boxes $1.00). In stamps. Sample sent free on receipt of 2-cent stamp.

THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., Baltimore, Md.

St. JACOBS OIL FOR Stablemen and Stockmen.

CURES

Cuts, Swellings, Bruises, Sprains, Gall, Strains, Lameness, Stiffness, Cracked Heels, Scratches, Contractions, Flesh Wounds, Stringhalt, Sore Throat, Distemper, Colic, Whitlow, Poll Evil, Fistula, Tumors, Splints, Ringbone and Spavin in their early Stages. Directions with each bottle.

"German Syrup"

G. Gloger, Druggist, Watertown, Wis. This is the opinion of a man who keeps a drug store, sells all medicines, comes in direct contact with the patients and their families, and knows better than anyone else how remedies sell, and what true merit they have. He hears of all the failures and successes, and can therefore judge: "I know of no medicine for Coughs, Sore Throat, or Hoarseness that had done such effective work in my family as Boschee's German Syrup. Last winter a lady called at my store, who was suffering from a very severe cold. She could hardly talk, and I told her about German Syrup and that a few doses would give relief; but she had no confidence in patent medicines. I told her to take a bottle, and if the results were not satisfactory I would make no charge for it. A few days after she called and paid for it, saying that she would never be without it in future as a few doses had given her relief." ①

Coughs, Sore Throat, Hoarseness,

ASK SMITH'S CASH STORE 18 FRONT ST. S.F.

to send you their catalogue of cash prices to consumers the

HOME CIRCLE.

Address as above. Mention this paper.

S. F. N. U. No. 455. New Series No. 10

BEBEE;

or,

TWO LITTLE WOODEN SHOES.

By "OUIDA."

CHAPTER XIII.

The next day, waking with a radiant little soul, as a bird in the forest wakes in summer, Bebee was all alone in the lane by the swans' water. In the gray of the dawn all the good folk except herself and lame old Jehan had tramped off to a pilgrimage, Liege way, which the bishop of the city had enjoined on all the faithful as a sacred duty.

Bebee doing her work, singing, thinking how good God was, and dreaming over a thousand fancies of the wonderful stories he had told her, and of the exquisite delight that would be for her in watching for him all through the shining hours, Bebee felt her little heart leap like a squirrel as the voice that was the music of heaven to her called through the stillness:

"Good day, pretty one! you are as early as the lark, Bebee. I go to Mayence, so I thought I would look at you one moment as I pass."

Bebee ran down through the wet grass in a tumult of joy. She had never seen him so early in the day—never so early as this, when nobody was up and stirring except birds and beasts and peasant folk.

She did not know how pretty she looked herself; like a rain washed wild rose; her feet gleaming with dew, her cheeks warm with health and joy; her sunny clustering hair free from the white cap and tumbling a little about her throat, because she had been stooping over the carnations.

Flamen loosed the wicket latch, and thought there might be better ways of spending the day than in the gray shadows of old Mechlin.

"Will you give me a draught of water?" he asked her as he crossed the garden.

"I will give you breakfast," said Bebee, happy as a bird. She felt no shame for the smallness of her home; no confusion at the poverty of her little place; such embarrassments are born of self consciousness, and Bebee had no more self consciousness than her own sweet, gray lavender bush blowing against the door.

The lavender bush has no splendor like the roses, has no colors like the hollyhocks; it is a simple, plain, gray thing that the bees love and that the cottagers cherish, and that keeps the moth from the homespun linen, and that goes with the dead to their graves.

It has many virtues and infinite sweetness, but it does not know it or think of it; and if the village girls ever tell it so, it fancies they only praise it out of kindness, as they put its slender, fragrant spears away in their warm bosoms. Bebee was like her lavender, and now that this beautiful Purple Emperor butterfly came from the golden sunbeams to find pleasure for a second in her freshness, she was only very grateful, as the lavender bush was to the village girls.

"I will give you your breakfast," said Bebee, flushing rosily with pleasure, and putting away the ivy coils that he might enter.

"I have very little, you know," she added, wistfully. "Only goat's milk and bread; but if that will do—and there is some honey—and if you would eat a salad I would cut one fresh."

He did enter, and glanced round him with a curious pity and wonder both in one.

It was such a little, small, square place; and its floor was of beaten clay; and its unceiled roof he could have touched; and its absolute poverty was so plain—and yet the child looked so happy in it, and was so like a flower, and was so dainty and fresh, and even so full of grace.

She stood and looked at him with frank and grateful eyes; she could hardly believe that he was here; he, the stranger of Rubes' land, in her own little rush covered home.

But she was not embarrassed by it; she was glad and proud.

There is a dignity of peasants as well as of kings—the dignity that comes from all absence of effort, all freedom from pretense. Bebee had this, and she had more still than this; she had the absolute simplicity of childhood with her skill.

Some women have it still when they are four score.

She could have looked at him forever, she was so happy; she cared nothing now for those dazzling dahlias—he had left them; he was actually here—here in her own little, dear home, with the cocks looking in at the threshold, and the sweet peas nodding at the lattice, and the starling crying "Bonjour! Bonjour!"

"You are tired, I am sure you must be tired," she said, pulling her little bed forward for him to sit on, for there were only two wooden stools in the hut, and no chair at all.

Then she took his sketching easel and brushes from his hand, and would have kneeled and taken the dust off his boots if he would have let her; and went hither and thither gladly and lightly, bringing him a wooden bowl of milk and the rest of the slender fare, and cutting as quick as thought fresh cresses and lettuce from her garden, and bringing him, as the crown of all, Father Francis' honeycomb on wine leaves, with some pretty sprays of box and mignonette scattered about it—doing all this with a swift, sweet grace that robbed the labor of all look of servitude, and looking at him ever and again with a smile that said as clearly as any words, "I cannot do much, but what I do, I do with all my heart."

There was something in the sight of her going and coming in those simple household errands, across the sunlit floor, that moved him as some mountain air sung on an alp by a girl driving her cows to pasture may move a listener who indifferent has heard the swell of the organ of La Hague, or the recitative of a great singer in San Carlo.

The gray lavender blowing at the house door has its charm for those who are tired of the camellias that float in the porcelain bowls of midnight suppers.

This man was not good. He was idle and vain, and amorous and cold, and had been spoiled by the world in which he had passed his days; but he had the temper of an artist; he had something, too, of a poet's fancy; he was vaguely touched and won by this simple soul that looked at him out of Bebee's eyes with some look that in all its simplicity had a divine gleam in it that made him half ashamed.

He had known women by the thousand, good women and bad; women whom he had dealt ill with and women who had dealt ill with him; but this he had not known—this frank, fearless, tender, gay, grave, innocent, industrious little life, helping itself, feeding itself, defending itself, working for itself and for others, and vaguely seeking all the while some unseen light, some unknown god, with a blind faith so infinitely ignorant and yet so infinitely pathetic.

"All the people are going on a pilgrimage," she explained to him when he asked her why her village was so silent this bright morning. "They are gone to pray for a fine harvest, and then each one prays for some other little thing that she wants herself as well—it costs seven francs apiece. They take their food with them; they go and laugh and eat in the fields. I think it is nonsense. One can say one's prayers just as well here. Mere Krebs thinks so too, but then she says, 'If I do not go, it will look ill; people will say I am irreligious; and as we make so much by flour, Good will think it odd for me to be absent; and, besides, it is only seven francs there and back; and if it does please heaven, that is cheap you know. One will get it over and over again in paradise.' That is what Mere Krebs says. But, for me, I think it is nonsense. It cannot please God to go by train and eat galette and waste a whole day in getting dusty.

"When I give the Virgin my cactus flower I do give up a thing I love, and I let it wither on her altar instead of pleasing me in bloom here all the week, and then, of course, she sees that I have done it out of gratitude. But that is different; that I am sorry to do, and yet I am glad to do it out of love. Do you not know?"

"Yes, I know very well. But is the Virgin all that you love like this?"

"No; there is the garden, and there is Antoine—he is dead, I know. But I think that we should love the dead all the better, not the less, because they cannot speak or say that they are angry; and perhaps one pains them very much when one neglects them, and if they are ever so sad, they cannot rise and rebuke one—that is why I would rather forget the flowers for the church than I would the flowers for his grave, because God can punish me, of course, if he likes, but Antoine never can—any more—now."

"You are logical in your sentiment, my dear," said Flamen, who was more moved than he cared to feel. "The union is a rare one in your sex. Who taught you to reason?"

"No one. And I do not know what to be logical means. Is it that you laugh at me?"

"No. I do not laugh. And your pilgrims—they are gone for all day?"

"Yes. They are gone to the Sacred Heart at St. Marie en Bois. It is on the way to Liege. They will come back at nightfall. And some of them will be sure to have drunk too much, and the children will get so cross. Prosper Bar, who is a Calvinist, always says, 'Do not mix up prayer and play; you would not cut a gherkin in your honey,' but I do not know why he called prayer a gherkin, because it is sweet enough—sweeter than anything, I think. When I pray to the Virgin to let me see you next day, I go to bed quite happy, because she will do it, I know, if it will be good for me."

"But if it were not good for you, Bebee? Would you cease to wish it then?"

He rose as he spoke and went across the floor and drew away her hand that was parting the flax, and took it in his own and stroked it indulgently and carelessly, as a man may stroke the soft fur of a young cat.

Leaning against the little lattice and looking down on her with musing eyes, half smiling, half serious, half amorous, half sad, Bebee looked up with a sudden and delicious terror that ran through her as the cherished of the snake's gaze runs through the bewildered bird.

"Would you cease to wish if it were not good?" he asked again.

Bebee's face grew pale and troubled. She left her hand in his because she did not think any shame of his taking it. But the question suddenly flung the perplexity and darkness of doubt into the clearness of her pure child's conscience. All her ways had been straight and sunlit before her.

She had never had a divided duty.

The religion and the pleasure of her simple little life had always gone hand in hand, greeting one another, and never for an instant in conflict. In any hesitation of her own she had always gone to Father Francis, and he had disentangled the web for her and made all plain.

But here was a difficulty in which she could never go to Father Francis.

Right and wrong, duty and desire were for the first time arrayed before her in their ghastly and unending warfare.

It frightened her with a certain breathless sense of peril—the peril of a time when in lieu of that gentle Mother of Roses whom she kneeled to among the flowers, she would only see a dusky shadow looming between her and the beauty of life and the light of the sun.

What he said was quite vague to her. She attached no definite danger to his words. She only thought—to see him was so great a joy—if Mary forbade it, would she not take it if she could notwithstanding, always, always, always?

He kept her hand in his, and watched with contentment the changing play of the shade and sorrow, the fear and fascination, on her face.

"You do not know Bebee?" he said at length, knowing well himself; so much better than ever she knew. "Well, dear—that is not flattering to me. But it is natural. The good Virgin, of course, gives you all you have, food and clothes, and your garden, and your pretty plump chickens—and I am only a stranger. You could not offend her for me—that is not likely."

The child was cut to the heart by the sadness and humility of words of whose studied artifice she had no suspicion.

She thought that she seemed to him ungrateful and selfish, and yet all the mooring ropes that held her little boat of life to the harbor of its simple religion seemed cut away, and she seemed drifting helpless and rudderless upon an unknown sea.

"I never did do wrong—that I know," she said timidly, and lifted her eyes to his with an unconscious appeal in them.

"But—I do not see why it should be wrong to speak with you. You are good, and you lend me beautiful things out of other men's minds that will make me less ignorant; Our Lady could not be angry with that—she must like it."

"Our Lady!—oh, poor little simpleton!—where will her reign be when Ignorance has once been cut down, root and branch?" he thought to himself; but he only answered:

"But whether she like it or not, Bebee!—you beg the question, my dear; you are—you are not so frank as usual—think, and tell me honestly?"

He knew quite well, but it amused him to see the perplexed trouble that this, the first divided duty of her short years, brought with it.

Bebee looked at him and loosened her hand from his and sat quite still. Her lips had a little quiver in them.

"I think," she said at last, "I think—if it be wrong, still I wish it—yes. Only I will not tell myself it is right. I will just say to Our Lady, 'I am wicked perhaps, but I cannot help it.' So—I will not deceive her at all, and perhaps in time she may forgive. But I think you only say it to try me. It cannot, I am sure, be wrong—any more than it is to talk to Jeannot or to Bac."

He had driven her into the subtleties of doubt, but the honest little soul in her found a way out, as a flower in a cellar finds its way through the stones to light.

He plucked the ivy leaves and threw them at the chickens on the bricks without, with a certain impatience in the action. The simplicity and the directness of the answer disarmed him; he was almost ashamed to use against her the weapons of his habitual warfare. It was like a maître d'armes fencing with bare steel against a little naked child armed with a blest palm sheaf.

When she had thus brought him all she had, and he to please her had sat down to the simple food, she gathered a spray of roses and set it in a pot beside him, then left him and went and stood at a little distance, waiting, with her hands lightly crossed on her chest, to see if there were anything that he might want.

He ate and drank well to please her, looking at her often as he did so.

"I break your bread, Bebee," he said, with a tone that seemed strange to her. "I break your bread. I must keep Arab faith with you."

"What is that?"

"I mean—I must never betray you."

"Betray me! How could you?"

"Well—hurt you in any way."

"Ah, I am sure you would never do that."

He was silent and looked at the spray of roses.

"Sit down and spin," he said impatiently. "I am ashamed to see you stand there, and a woman never looks so well as when she spins. Sit down—and I will eat the good things you have brought me. But I cannot if you stand and look."

"I beg your pardon, I did not know," she said, ashamed lest she should have seemed rude to him; and she drew out her wheel under the light of the lattice, and sat down to it, and began to disentangle the threads.

It was a pretty picture—the low, square casement; the frame of ivy, the pink and white of the climbing sweet peas; the girl's head; the cool, wet leaves; the old wooden spinning wheel, that purred like a sleepy cat.

"I want to paint you as Gretchen, only it will be a shame," he said.

"Who is Gretchen?"

"You shall read of her by and by. And you live here all by yourself?"

"Since Antoine died—yes."

"And are never dull?"

"I have no time, and I do not think I would be if I had time—there is so much to think of, and one never can understand."

"But you must be very brave and laborious to do all your work yourself. Is it possible a child like you can spin, and wash, and bake, and garden, and do everything?"

"Oh, many do more than I. Babette's eldest daughter is only 12, and she does much more, because she has all the children to look after; and they are very, very poor; they often have nothing but a stew of nettles and perhaps a few snails, days together."

"That is lean, bare, ugly, gruesome poverty; there is plenty of that everywhere. But you, Bebee—you are an idyll."

Bebee looked across the hut and smiled. "Count the daisies!" echoed Bebee. "Oh, I know what you mean. A little—much—passionately—until death—not at all. What the girls say when they want to see if any one loves them! Is that it?"

She looked at him without any consciousness—except as she loved the flowers.

"Do you think the daisies know?" she went on, seriously, parting their petals with her fingers. "Flowers do know many things—that is certain."

"Ask them for yourself."

"Ask them what?"

"How much—any one—loves you?"

"Oh, but every one loves me; there is no one that is bad. Antoine used to say to me, 'Never think of yourself, Bebee, always think of other people, so every one will love you.' And I always try to do that, and every one does."

"But that is not the love the daisy tells of to your sex."

"No?"

"No; the girls that you see count the flowers—they are thinking, not of all the village, but of some one unlike all the rest, whose shadow falls across theirs in the moonlight! You know that?"

"Ah, yes—and they marry afterwards—yes."

She said it softly, musingly, with no embarrassment; it was an unreal, remote thing to her, and yet it stirred her heart a little with a vague trouble that was infinitely sweet.

There is little talk of love in the lives of the poor; they have no space for it; love to them means more mouths to feed, more wooden shoes to buy, more hands to dive into the meager bag of coppers. Now and then a girl of the commune had been married, and had gone out just the same the next day to her plowing in the fields or to her lace weaving in the city. Bebee had thought little of it.

"They marry or they do not marry. That is as it may be," said Flamen, with a smile. "Bebee, I must paint you as Gretchen before she made a love-dial of the daisies. What is the story? Oh, I have told you stories enough. Gretchen's you would not understand just yet."

"But what did the daisies say to her?"

"My dear, the daisies always say the same thing, because daisies always tell the truth and know men. The daisies always say 'a little;' it is the girl's ear that tricks her and makes her hear 'till death,' a folly and falsehood of which the daisy is not guilty."

"But who says it if the daisy do not?"

"Ah, the devil, perhaps—who knows! He has so much to do in these things."

But Bebee did not smile, she had a look of horror in her blue eyes; she belonged to a peasantry who believed in exercising the fiend by the aid of the cross, and who not so very many generations before had driven him out of human bodies by rack and flame.

She looked with a little wistful fear on the white, golden eyed marguerites that lay on her lap.

"Do you think the fiend in these?" she whispered, with awe in her voice.

Flamen smiled. "When you count them he will be there, no doubt."

Bebee threw them with a shudder on the grass.

"Have I spoiled your holiday, dear?" he said, with a certain self reproach.

She was silent a minute, then she gathered up the daisies again, and stroked them and put them to her lips.

"It is not that they do wrong. You say the girls' ears deceive them. It is the girls who want a lie and will not believe the truth because it humbles them; it is the girls that are to blame, not the daisies. As for me, I will not ask the daisies anything ever, so the fiend will not enter into them."

"Nor into you. Poor little Bebee."

"Why, you pity me for that?"

"Yes. Because, if women never see the serpent's face, neither do they ever scent the smell of the paradise roses; and it will be hard for you to die without a single rose d'amour in your pretty breast, poor little Bebee."

"I do not understand. But you frighten me a little."

He rose and left his easel and threw himself at her feet on the grass; he took the little wooden shoes in his hands as reverently as he would have taken the broidered shoes of a duchess; he looked up at her with tender, smiling eyes.

He threw himself at her feet on the grass.

"Poor little Bebee!" he said again. "Did I frighten you, indeed? Nay, that was very base of me. We will not spoil our summer holiday. There is no such thing as a fiend, my dear. There are only men—such as I am. Cast by the daisy spell over for me, Bebee. See if I do not love you a little, just as you love your flowers."

She smiled, and the happy laughter came again over her face.

"Oh, I am sure you care for me a little," she said softly, "or you would not be so good and get me books and give me pleasure; and I do not want the daisies to tell me that, because you say it yourself, which is better."

"Much better," he answered her dreamily, and lay there in the grass, holding the little wooden shoes in his hands.

He was not in love with her. He was in no haste. He preferred to play with her softly, slowly, as one separates the leaves of a rose to see the deep rose of its heart.

Her own ignorance of what she felt had a charm for him. He liked to lift the veil from her eyes by gentle degrees, watching each new pulse beat, each fresh instinct tremble into life.

It was an old, old story to him; he knew each chapter and verse to weariness, though here still was no other story that he still read as often. But to her it was so new.

To him it was a long beaten track; he knew every turn of it; he recognized every wayside blossom; he had passed over a thousand times each tremulous bridge; he knew so well beforehand where each shadow would fall, and where each fresh bud would blossom, and where each harvest would be reaped.

(To be Continued.)

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Porterfield & Losey, 832 Market street, San Francisco.

Life drives us till we're out of breath
With striving, begging, giving;
We have to work ourselves to death
That we may get a living.

MARION HARLAND.

The celebrated authoress, so highly esteemed by the women of America, says on pages 103 and 445 of her popular work, "Eve's Daughters; or, Common Sense for Maid, Wife and Mother:"

"For the aching back—should it be slow in recovering its normal strength—an ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER is an excellent comforter, combining the sensation of the sustained pressure of a strong warm hand with certain tonic qualities developed in the wearing. It should be kept over the seat of uneasiness for several days—in obstinate cases, for perhaps a fortnight."

"For pain in the back wear an ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER constantly, renewing as it wears off. This is an invaluable support when the weight on the small of the back becomes heavy and the aching incessant."

The Longton, Kan., Times has this interesting item: Our mother has been very sick the past week, but we think she is better this morning.

HOW'S THIS!

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligation made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Price 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

A Chicago man has invented an electrical device to stop runaway horses. Now let somebody invent a device to stop runaway cashiers.

Dr. Wallace Ely has removed his offices to 215 Powell St., San Francisco, Cal., where he continues to give special attention to Kidneys, Bladder, Prostate Gland and all diseases arising therefrom. Diabetes and Bright's Disease treated according to the latest approved method. Most cases can be treated successfully by correspondence. Consultations daily from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. WALLACE ELY, M. D., 215 Powell St., 4 doors from Geary St., San Francisco, Cal.

Miss Weston—Which of your many books do you consider of the least account, Professor? Professor Writer—My bank book, Miss Weston.

The entire book is ably written and gives trusty information for everyone growing fruit of any sort or kind. Sent free by Stark Bros., Louisiana, Mo.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Beware of imitations of the genuine Seal of North Carolina Plug Cut Tobacco.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.

No other baking powder does such work.

The Cod That Helps to Cure The Cold. The disagreeable taste of the COD LIVER OIL is dissipated in

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil with HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME AND SODA.

The patient suffering from CONSUMPTION, BRONCHITIS, COUGH, COLD, OR WASTING DISEASES, may take the remedy with as much satisfaction as he would take milk. Physicians are prescribing it everywhere. It is a perfect emulsion, and a wonderful flesh producer. Take no other

TOWER'S FISH BRAND This Trade Mark is on The Best Waterproof Coat In the world. Send for illustrated Catalogue, Free. A. J. Tower, Boston.

WANTED!

A steady and industrious man to travel and solicit for the Pacific Coast Home Supply Association. $3.00 per day guaranteed. Address, P. C. H. S. A., 132 Market St., San Francisco.

INDISPENSIBLE TO HOUSEKEEPERS. Ask Your Dealer for it. Write for Circular. AMERICAN OIL CO., Agts. 11 to 15 Main St., San Francisco, California.

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED.

To THE EDITOR—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy free to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their express and post-office address. Respectfully,

T. A. SLOCUM M. C., 181 Pearl St., New York.

It were easier for a camel to get through the needle's eye than for the average man to get the end of a thread through.

Any article that has outlived 24 years of competition and imitation, and sells more and more each year, must have merit. Dobbins' Electric Soap first made in 1865 is just that article. Ask your grocer for it. He has it or will get it.

No woman but his own wife ever finds out how disagreeable a man can be.

Sudden Changes of the Weather often cause Pulmonary, Bronchial, and Asthmatic Troubles. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" will allay the irritation which induces coughing, giving immediate relief.

He said his mind was quite made up,
Whereat a cad officious
Remarked, he'd always thought his mind
Was more or less fictitious.

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation permanently. For sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all druggists.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

BIG G. Cures in 1 to 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Mfd. by THE EVANS CHEMICAL CO. CINCINNATI, O. U. S. A. Trade Mark. Big G is the acknowledged leading remedy for all the unnatural discharges and private diseases of men. A certain cure for the debilitating weakness peculiar to women. I prescribe it and feel safe in recommending it to all sufferers. A. J. STONER, M. D., DECATUR, ILL. Sold by Druggists. PRICE $1.00.

PENSION! LAND AND INDIAN DEPREDATION CLAIMS. Special attention given to the above. NATHAN BICKFORD, Solicitor of Claims, Washington, D. C. References furnished in any state. Blanks and information free.

HUMORS of the BLOOD & SKIN Cured by Cuticura

HUMORS OF THE BLOOD, SKIN, AND Scalp, whether itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, blotchy, or copper-colored, with loss of hair, either simple, scrofulous, hereditary, or contagious, are speedily, permanently economically, and infallibly cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood and Skin Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. CUTICURA REMEDIES are the only infallible blood and skin purifiers, and daily effect more great cures of blood and skin diseases than all other remedies combined.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston, Mass. Send for "How to Cure Blood and Skin Diseases."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Backache, kidney pains, weakness, and rheumatism relieved in one minute by the celebrated CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

THE SMOKER
Will have no other Tobacco
Who once tries
"SEAL OF NORTH CAROLINA"
Plug Cut.
This is the secret of its
Immense sale.

VASELINE.

FOR ONE DOLLAR sent us by mail, we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all the following articles carefully packed in a neat box:

One two-ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline	10 cts.
One two-ounce bottle Vaseline Pomade	15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream	15 "
One cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, scented	25 "
One two-ounce bottle of White Vaseline	25 "
	—$1.10

Or for stamps any single article at the price named.

If you have occasion to use Vaseline in any form be careful to accept only genuine goods put up by us in original packages. A great many druggists are trying to persuade buyers to take VASELINE put up by them. Never yield to such persuasion, as the article is an imitation without value, and will not give you the result you expect. A bottle of Blue Seal Vaseline is sold by all druggists at ten cents.

Chesebrough M'f'g. Co., 24 State St., New York.

USE NEW WELLINGTON COAL.

BEST TREE WASH.

Greenbank Insecticide, powdered Caustic Soda, etc.

BEST SHEEP WASH.

Calvert's Carbolic. Prices reduced. T. W. JACKSON & CO., Sole Agents, 104 Market St., S. F.

CANNON'S DIP.

The Advantages Claimed for this Dip are:

It is non-poisonous, and can be used with perfect safety at all times and in all circumstances.

It saves time and trouble, no precautions being required as in the case of poisonous Dips.

It does not stain the wool, but promotes and improves its growth, improves the appearance and increases the value of the wool.

It is composed of the very best materials, and never varies in strength and quality.

It never fails to produce the desired effect.

Its effects are lasting.

It is easy to use and does not require heating.

Its use may be repeated on the same Sheep as often as desired without the slightest risk of injury.

Non-Poisonous, Easy to Use, and Always Effective.

LIBERAL DISCOUNTS TO THE TRADE.

J. W. GRACE & CO.,

430 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco, Cal., Agents for the Pacific Coast.

This Picture, Panel size, mailed for 4 cents.

J. F. SMITH & CO., Makers of "Bile Beans," 255 & 257 Greenwich St., N. Y. City.

CURE Billousness, Sick Headache, Malaria. BILE BEANS.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH, RED CROSS PENNYROYAL PILLS DIAMOND BRAND

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE. The only Safe, Sure, and reliable Pill for sale. Ladies, ask Druggist for Chichester's English Diamond Brand in Red and Gold metallic boxes sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other kind. Refuse Substitutions and Imitations. All pills in pasteboard boxes, plain wrappers are dangerous counterfeits. At Druggists, or send us 4c. in stamps for particulars, testimonials, and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Name Paper. Sold by all Local Druggists. CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO., Madison Square, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION 25 CTS. 25 CTS.

Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Pleasant and agreeable to the taste. Children take it without objection. By druggists.

SALZER'S NORTHERN CROWN SEEDS ARE THE BEST FOR ALL SOILS AND CLIMES.

They will yield for you, OATS 135 bu., WHEAT 40 bu., BARLEY 60 bu., CORN 100 bu. POTATOES 500 bu. per a.

Send 8 cents for sample farm seeds and catalogue.

Send 6c. for pkg. "Acme Radish" and elegant catlg.

Our Catalog is the finest ever published in America.

On Trial:—35 pkgs. Earliest Vegetable Seeds, post pd. $1. 15 pkgs. Elegant Flower Seeds, post paid, 50 cents.

Low Freight to Pacific Coast States. "ACME" the new 17 day Radish

JOHN A. SALZER, LA CROSSE, WISCONSIN.

"The greatest burdens are not the gain-fullest." You can lessen

LIFE'S BURDEN by using SAPOLIO

It is a solid cake of scouring soap used for cleaning purposes.

What would you give for a Friend who would take half your hard work off your shoulders and do it without a murmur? What would you give to find an assistant in your housework that would keep your floors and walls clean, and your kitchen bright, and yet never grow ugly over the matter of hard work? Sapolio is just such a friend and can be bought at all grocers.

JAMES LEFFEL WATER WHEELS

THE JAMES LEFFEL & CO. We send FREE to those desiring information, the Finest Pamphlet Published.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, or Liberty St., NEW YORK CITY.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor.

Independence, Cal.,

FRIDAY, APRIL 17, 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXII. NO. 44. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., APRIL 17, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1068.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.25
Three Months	1.00
One Month	50
Single Copies	20

A BOY'S SECOND SIGHT.

He saw his Father Chasing a Jug.

THE SEER EVENTUALLY A WRECK.

Remarkable Gift of a Boy Who Lived Half a Century Ago.

Looking over Watson's "Annals of Philadelphia," published in 1830, I came across a remarkable story, which cannot fail to be of interest both locally and generally, even at this late day. The author says:

"The good people of Caledonia have so long and exclusively engrossed the faculty of second sight that it may justly surprise many to learn that we also have been favored with at least one case as well attested as their own. I refer to the instance of Eli Yarnall, of Frankford. Whatever were his first peculiarities, he in time lost them. He fell into intemperate habits, became a wanderer, and died in Virginia, a young man.

This remarkably gifted person was born in Bucks county, Pa., and came with his parents to the vicinity of Pittsburg. The account of him contained in the narrative before mentioned is in substance as follows:

When Yarnell was living near this city, being then a child only 7 years of age, as he was sitting in the house one day he suddenly burst into a fit of almost uncontrollable laughter. His mother asked him what pleased him so much. The boy replied that he saw his father (who was not at home) running rapidly down the mountain side, trying to overtake a jug of whisky which he had let fall. The jug rolled part way down the declivity, but was caught by the old man before he got to the bottom. When the father reached home he confirmed the whole story, to the great surprise of all. After this the boy excited much talk and wonderment in the neighborhood.

About two years later the Yarnalls were visited by a friend named Robert Verree, with other Quaker relatives or acquaintances from Bucks county. Verree, to test the lad's miraculous power, asked him various questions and among other things inquired what was then going on at his own home in Bucks county. The boy described the house, which he had never seen; stated that it was built partly of logs and partly of stone; that there was a mill pond in front of the house which had recently been drained, and concluded with a description of the people in the house, and of two persons, a man and a woman, who were setting on the front porch.

When Verree reached home he inquired who had been at his house at the day and hour he had held his conversation with young Yarnall. He learned that there had been a shower at the time; and several of the field hands had gone into the house to escape the rain; the persons on the porch had been faithfully described, even to the color of their hair. As to the mill pond, the men had drained it in order to catch muskrats. In short, every detail given by the boy was proven to be accurate.

The habit of the young seer, when asked to exercise his singular faculty, was to hold his head downward, often closing his eyes. After waiting for some time, apparently deep in thought, he would declare what he saw in his visions. He was sometimes found alone in the fields, sitting on a stump and crying. On being asked the cause of his grief he said he saw great numbers of men engaged in killing each other. Although he had never seen a battle, a ship or a cannon, he described military and naval battles as if he had been an actual looker on.

FINALLY BECAME A WRECK.

Some of the Quakers who saw him became much interested in the boy, believing him possessed of a noble gift, and desired to have charge of his bringing up. He was accordingly apprenticed to a Frankford tanner, but he attracted so much attention, and so many called at the shop to hold conversation with him that his master became annoyed and tried to discourage such curiosity. The boy, therefore, began to shun questions as much as possible, and seemed by degrees to lose his singular gift. He drifted into bad company and eventually became a wreck.

His mother never allowed him to take any money for answering questions, believing that his visions were God given, and that it would be wrong to turn them to account pecuniarily. Wives whose husbands had long been missing and were supposed to have been lost at sea or perished in accidents, and others whose relatives had disappeared would come to him for information. Of those still alive, he would tell how they looked and what they were doing. On one occasion a man asked him in jest who had stolen his pocketbook, and was much taken aback when the lad replied:

"No one; but you stole a pocketbook from another man when in a crowd."

And the historian of the boy's wonderful deeds states that such was the fact. This is about all there is of the strange narrative, which, like Sam Weller's love letter, ends so abruptly that the reader wishes it were longer.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

How a Mine Was Discovered.

The discovery of the Amulet mine, on Lynx creek, reads more like fiction than reality. As it has never been in print we will give it: In July, 1886, F. E. Doggett, with pick and shovel on his shoulders, was climbing the Lynx Creek mountains on his way to examine a quartz mine. Becoming weary in the ascent he stopped beneath the friendly boughs of a juniper tree to rest. After recuperating for some time he took up his pick, and in throwing it on his shoulder it slipped from his hands, and, in falling behind him, its sharp point struck him in the leg, causing great pain. Picking it up with a vehement imprecation from the pain it caused him, he stuck it in the ground, saying it could remain there, and started to walk away. He had gone but a short distance when he relented, and, returning, pulled it from the ground, bringing with it some bright and shining metal. In his anger he had unknowingly struck it into a blind ledge, which he located as the Amulet mine, and from which there has been over $50,000 worth of high grade ore shipped. From a careful examination made of the second class ore, which has been allowed to remain on the dumps, it is estimated that it contains fully 2,000 tons. Samples were procured from this promiscuously, and sampled and assayed at the sampling works, giving a value of $35 per ton, or total value of the ore on the dumps of $70,000.—Arizona Miner.

Significant Wink.

A great part of what is called a man's success in life depends upon his finding out in good season what his natural bent is, and then following it. James Nasmyth was particularly fortunate in this respect. Although his father was an artist, and he himself had no little aptitude for drawing and painting, yet he was sure that he was "cut out" for a a machinist, and a machinist he became.

Having learned his trade, he went to Manchester to start in business for himself, and there, among other good people, he met the Brothers Grant, the famous Cheeryble Brothers of Dickens.

He was first introduced to Daniel, who invited him to his house, and presented him to his "noble brother William," as Daniel always called him. At the dinner table young Nasmyth sat next to William, and was asked many questions.

"How old are you?"

"Twenty-six."

"Rather young to begin business on your own account."

"Yes, but I have plenty of work in me, and know how to be economical."

"What capital have you?" Nasmyth confessed that he had only £63.

The old gentleman thought that a very small amount, but after giving his new friend sundry cautions he added that he must keep his heart up.

"If some Saturday night you should need money to pay off your hands or for anything else you will always find a credit of £500 at 3 per cent. at my office, and no security."

Nasmyth was, of course, as much pleased as surprised, and, as he says, could only whisper his thanks in return. To these Mr. Grant responded with a squeeze of the hand and a peculiarly knowing wink.

This wink made a most vivid impression upon the younger man. It seemed full of all manner of kindness. As he describes it, "Mr. Grant seemed to turn his eye round, and brought his eyebrows down upon it in a sudden and extraordinary manner."

The "noble brother" proved every whit as kind as young Nasmyth could have expected or asked for; but it transpired, a year or two afterward, that the wink had no immediate connection with his generosity. In fact, the eye that gave it was made of glass! It now and then got out of place, and its wearer had to force it back by that odd contortion of his eyebrows, which, taken in connection with the conversation then passing, Nasmyth had understood to be expressive of all manner of kind intentions.—Youth's Companion.

Turkish Bazars.

The bazars of Constantinople, or the Tcharshu, as they are called by the natives, are situated on one of the famous hills of that oriental metropolis, facing the Bosphorus. They are unlike any other places of traffic, being altogether sui generis both in construction and design. To give the reader an idea of their singular nature they may be compared to the public markets of this country, though they differ in extent and internal arrangement. Imagine an entire city ward with its numerous blocks embraced in one edifice or inclosure, with its streets, lanes and alleys arched over and devoted to commerce. These bazars are built of stone and are one story high. Each street is allotted to some particular branch or class of merchandise; thus, there is spice bazar, called Missir-tcharshu, where all kinds of drugs, spices and dye stuffs are sold, including the famous henna, and the exhilarating hashish is procured.

There are the perfumery bazars, where the most fragrant perfumes, the ottar of roses, Khurtz tenroofs and other odoriferous pastiles and essences till the atmosphere with their delicious fragrance; the silk bazar, the dry goods bazar, of which there are two, the Kalpa Kdjebarbashi and the Uzoon-tcharshu, or the Broadway and the Bowery of Constantinople. Besides these is the Yaghlukdjilar, where the most varied and exquisite embroideries are displayed. The Kaffaflar, or shoe bazar, is an institution peculiarly oriental. There one sees the meeting of the west and the east in the motley collection of wares, the clumsy Oriental chaussers, with the patent leather boots; the tchedik-Pabbootcha or the walking shoes of the Turkish ladies of the Ancien regime, alongside of the tiny gaiters of varied colors, for the modernized hannums (ladies). The jewelry bazar is also a prominent feature of the tcharshu, for it is much frequented by all classes.—Cor. St. Louis Republic.

The Cure for Heart Neuralgia.

Angina pectoris (agony of the chest) carries off many people, one of whom, according to the newspapers, was the novelist, the Rev. E. P. Roe, who expired in one day because of its crushing anguish. Maj. Gen. George B. McClellan, according to the published reports of that time, likewise succumbed after twenty-four hours of uncontrollable pain. Just how these patients were treated I am unable to say; but Dr. Richardson, of London, long before Gen. McClellan's death, had received a prize of 25,000 francs from the Academy of Medicine in Paris for having discovered an almost infallible remedy for angina pectoris by the administration, in the small doses of 1-100 to 1-25 of a grain, of nitro-glycerine! This discovery entitles Dr. Richardson to the never ending gratitude of every suffering man, woman or child afflicted with angina pectoris.

I know a number of persons who always carry tablets of nitro-glycerine with them, and I am equally certain that all these people, by the use of nitro-glycerine, are living in comparative comfort, who would otherwise have fallen under the insupportable torture of that form of heart neuralgia, the most dreadful of all pains.—Montrose A. Pallen, M. D., in Belford's Magazine.

How to Dignify the Mechanical Arts.

We have seen how the literary education which we now consider so essential was regarded in England—as ungentlemanly. It is not so long since the physician or leech was, as Hallam says, "an inexhaustible theme of popular ridicule." The barber's pole, so common in our streets, recalls a time, not so long past, when the barber practiced bloodletting and other medical arts. It is within our own memory that the dentist stood on a level with the barber; indeed, the two were often the same person. How is it that all this is changed; that literature, medicine and dentistry have become gentlemanly occupations? Simply, I think, because they are now taught scientifically and institutions have been established for that purpose. It may be laid down as a general rule that whatever is taught in school will soon become respectable and gentlemanly, while that which is picked up in the home or the workshop will always be regarded as menial.—Professor Thomas Davidson in The Forum.

STUDY IN MEN'S BACKS.

Character Show There as Well as in the Face.

A DISSERTATION ON THE VARIOUS KINDS.

Descriptions of the Thoughtful and Purse Proud Back.

The back of an individual is an easy study—the whole of him, his figure and walk, his shoulders molded by the habits of his life, the carriage of the head, the wearing of the clothing. Face to face we see the man as he desires to be seen; but behind his back we take him by surprise, and catch sight of his character.

Follow the thoughtful man as he wanders through the streets, seeing nothing. While he walks his head and shoulders bend; one knows that his eyes seek the ground just as one sees his feet linger on it. In this manner it must have been that Macaulay walked in his famous night wanderings, when he traversed the London streets and saw nothing, a contrast to the night walks of Charles Dickens, who trod the same streets and saw everything, with head characteristically held back and slightly to one side, an energetic observer rather than a deep thinker.

Very different from what we may call the refined and intellectual back is the back of the broad and vulgar figure who struts past us as if he owned the street. His glory is not in his mind or heart, but in his pockets. He has a habit of sticking up for his rights. Even his collar sticks up, and his hair, to correspond with his inner self, is bristling. He thinks he can buy anything, from a picture, of which he knows nothing, to an elector, who knows nothing of him.

The purse proud man will never hand money out of that pocket for charity, unless he is pretty sure that his name is in a printed list of subscribers.

Not so the wealthy man who has a heart above gold. Look at him, a back view, as he stands at a public meeting called at some time of calamity or need. He is sure to be there. If the hall is overcrowded you can see him standing, never complaining of the lack of seats; he is there for the comfort of others; he forgets his own. He is a large hearted man, and everything about him is large. The big hands are only waiting behind him to give freely, the broad back can bear a goodly share of others' burdens.

As for the back of the rogue, it is of infinite variety. If there were only one sort we might all make what soldiers would call a reconnoissance to the rear and detect and outwit him. There is the sharp dealer of the business world, who is remarkably spruce at the back, and the adventurer of society, who can bow like the first gentleman in Europe, and ten thousand more varieties, from the welcher on the turf up to the gentleman who ought to be a baronet, and who has lived for the last thirty years on that statement and on charitably collecting for the savages of Borrioboola. He could straighten his body if he liked, but his mind is fixed in curves of cunning. He and his principles are as crooked as wriggling eels. He can press others to his will, too, as he presses his cane to a curve like himself.

His spare form is not the thin, bent back of the student. The back of a bookworm is another kind of bend—a curve to be respected. Nor is it the stoop of old age. The back is an index of age as well as of character. The small child stands a square, upright atom of humanity. The man grows straight to his full height; then his shoulders broaden; then his shoulders come forward, and his head goes down.

BACKBONE.

There is an old saying to describe a man of weak character that he has "no backbone." There is not much backbone in the man who walks as if not quite sure where he is going to, who drops his letters and never cares to straighten his shoulders. Follow him and note how his hat points backward, and you know from the angles to which he has set his hat and his whiskers that, seen front face, his aspect is not wise. Still he is a good natured fellow, and by some instinct we read on his back that he has an ambition to be amusing. One is perfectly certain that the man with such a back sings comic songs, and equally certain that he never knows when people cease to laugh at the song and begin to laugh at himself.

But there is such a thing as having too much backbone, and that is rather worse than having too little. When a man has too much backbone his heart is not, as people say, "in the right place." Sometimes there is no room in him for a heart at all. Now, there are some men in whom force of character is carried into the extreme, and becomes hardness and habitual severity. A severe back is a pleasanter sight to see than a severe face. It is not what we would call the just and righteously indignant back, which is straight and noble, a fine thing and a venerable. It is the bulldog shouldered back that denotes the domestic oger. His bald head shines.

One knows that in the front the veins are bursting. His mustache has been twisted to sharpness by angry fingers. His hands are clinched or pushing mightily against his hardset knee. He could strike, but he has too much pride, and his orders are harder than blows. He has a habit of getting his arm crookedly bent to his knee in self restrained wrath.

There are, indeed, many backs that are more gladly seen than the corresponding faces. The back of the bore is a goodly sight, while, on the other hand, when good-by is grievous, how much precious regard is wasted on the dear characteristic, well known back that never knows what loving looks went after it.—Toronto Truth.

A Mean Villager.

Mrs. Doublehouse—Jake, our darter wants a cabinet organ.

Mr. Doublehouse—Wall, I'll git her one. I don't like them new neighbors of ours fer a cent.—Good News.

THE ARIZONA KICKER.

Some Specimen Kicks Selected by The Detroit Free Press.

The following extracts are taken from the last issue of The Arizona Kicker:

"TEN THOUSAND REWARD.—On Tuesday night last, as we were preparing to go to bed after a hard evening's work, some murderous wretch hurled a brick through the only window in our office. It was intended for our destruction, but that Providence which watches over an editor as well as a sparrow, willed otherwise. It struck and knocked our bedstead to pieces, pied three dead ads on the stone, and then glanced off and ripped up several feet of flooring, but left our person untouched. We were out of the office inside of ten minutes, but the bloodthirsty fiend had made good his escape.

"We have been warned that we must go, and this in the seventh emphatic hint to stir our stumps, but here we squat. We don't vacate. We don't scare. We don't change our editorial course one iota. We hereby offer $10,000 reward for information that will lead to the capture of the dastard who attempted to assassinate us, and hereafter we warn the public that we shall sleep with a double barreled shotgun across the foot of the bed. Any one coming to the office at a late hour to ask us to play a game of poker should stop at Scott's corner and whistle four times as a signal."

"REVENGE.—Two weeks ago we had the pleasure of showing Steve Battle up to this community in his true light—that of a jail breaker, incendiary and robber. In revenge Steve waited for us in front of the widow Chilton's house the other night, where it is well known we are doing a little courting with a view to matrimony, and as we reached the road he made a rush for us, crying out that he would have our life. We were taken unawares, knocked down and pounded until we couldn't holler. As a result Steve Battle has been run out of this town with a rail beneath him, and warned that he will be hung if he returns. We are able to be about again, and return our thanks to such friends as have sent in flowers, sausages, butter crackers, codfish and other mementoes. We expected a dozen wallopings the first year of our stay, and will probably get 'em, as we have averaged one a month so far. The worm will turn some day, however, and then look out!"

"THANKS.—On Thursday night, just as we had exchanged our day shirt for the calico Mother Hubbard in which we sweetly sleep, music suddenly broke on the stilly atmosphere. It was a little serenade arranged for our benefit by that golden haired angel Miss Bella Hawkins, whose father has been prominently mentioned as our next mayor. She led a band of five, and they played two fiddles and sang several old ballads which deeply affected us. Indeed, for the moment we were carried back to our mother's knee, and all that night we felt much nearer heaven than ever before.

"Miss Bella is not only the superior of any songstress before the American public, but her father and mother are stars fitted to adorn any firmament. They reside in that beautiful adobe on the right as you rise Jackass Hill, and one has but to glance at the outside to realize that people of culture live there. Yes, it was a glorious serenade, and we shall feel the invigorating effects of it for some months to come. Any subscriber receiving a paper with an 'X' marked in violet ink on the margin will know that his time is half out, and that he is expected to come again in six months."

Sage Advice.

A young man who was about to start in business on Michigan avenue went to an old retired merchant the other day to secure business advice.

"Now much cash have you got?" was the blunt inquiry.

"About $500."

"And how much stock will you put in?"

"About $2,000."

"Um! Then your first move must be to engrave your name on the flagstone in front of your store, your next to paint your signs on all the fences for ten miles around the city."

"And why, O Sage?"

"That the public six months hence may recall the fact that you went into business instead of going into a lunatic asylum! Good morning, sir!"—Detroit Free Press.

Room for All.

Mormon Bishop pointing from the car window to a circus tent—There, my daughter, is something which will be new to you.

Favorite Daughter—How nice that is! Why don't we have that kind at home?

"That kind? Why, what do you think it is?"

"A family umbrella."—Omaha World.

Face to Face.

"You wouldn't think," he said, indicating a gentleman across the street, "that that ordinary, commonplace looking person has many times stared death unflinchingly in the face."

"Why, no! Is he a desperate character?"

"Not very; he's an undertaker."—New York Sun.

Emulation.

Little Tommy Reach, who has great genius and may be a comic artist some day, has been told that Benjamin West made a brush from the hair of a cat's tail. Thomas succeeds in making a brush, but the cat has lost all enthusiasm.—Life.

Newsboys Know Everything.

Some gentlemen were standing on the corner of the street while a funeral procession was passing. Two gamins were also there, and as one of the gentlemen inquired in a joking way, "who's dead," one of the boys sung out "the man in the coffin." The quickness and wit of these street boys is proverbial.—Chicago Herald.

An Economical Idea.

Mistress—Bridget, why do you break that chunk of ice in two pieces before putting it into the box?

Bridget—Faith, mum, to make it lasht the longer. Two paces wull lasht longer than wan, they kape each other cold.—New York Sun.

Forgot Himself.

Young Lady (to artist)—What do you consider the best thing you ever drew, Mr. Palette?

Artist (absently)—Oh, an ace to two aces and a couple of jacks.—Yonkers Statesman.

JAPANESE ARTISANS.

Carpenters who Work in Crude Ways

BUT THEY ACHIEVE SUPERIOR RESULTS.

A Land Where There are no Planing Mills.—Wages.

The Japanese artisan has four hands and twelve fingers. He uses his feet as an extra pair of hands, and his two great toes can wrap themselves around the articles with which he works like an American's thumb. I saw a cooper at work mending a bucket. He held the bucket between his feet while he sat down to his work and put on the hoops with a hammer and wedge. His legs were bare and his cue was tied in the old Japanese fashion, while his almond eyes closely watched the work he had before him. After ten minutes of pounding he laid down his tools and took a smoke, and during the hour that I sat near him he smoked four times. The Japanese pipe only holds a pinch of tobacco, and he could do this cheaply, but the time consumed was at least twenty minutes. This perpetual siesta is one of the features of Japanese labor. I am told by old American residents that a Japanese workman will not do one-third as much a day as an American workman, and in every case they seem to do their work in the hardest of ways.

The methods of labor in Japan are the direct opposite of those in America. The carpenters, for instance, pull their planes the other way, and when they use the drawing knife they push it from them instead of pulling it towards them. They do most of their work sitting and they do all the work on the pull stroke instead of the push stroke, and they stand the board as a rule at an agle of 45 degs. against something rather than lay it on a bench or sawhorse as we do. They do their marking, not with chalk, but with a reel and an inked string when they wish to saw in a straight line, and the whole of the work of turning the rough logs into the finest of cabinet work is done by hand.

There are no planing mills in Japan, and the sawmills can be counted on the fingers of one hand. The usual method of sawing logs into boards is to stand the log at an angle against the support and saw it by hand. The saw used is not the powerful cross cut saw of America, but a wide short Japanese instrument, which has a handle about two feet long, and which looks like a butcher's cleaver filed into a saw.

The human sawmill stands on top of the log or under it, and pulls away for ten hours a day for about thirty cents. Skilled carpenters in cities get about forty American cents a day, and the best men in the business do not get over forty-five. Still, you will find no better workmen in the world than here. Their work is done with the use of very few nails, and they have to be cabinetmakers as well as carpenters. Every Japanese house has walls which must move in grooves in and out every day, and the ordinary home is as finely put together as a bureau. The joining of everything is by dovetailing, and the Japanese could teach our American workmen much in the polishing and joining of fine woods.

Speaking of house building, the Japanese begin their work at the top. The roof goes on first, and then they begin to build the walls and to construct the interior.—Frank G. Carpenter.

A Princely Host.

One of the most lovely of Alpine health resorts is Bad-Kreuth, a hamlet of some half dozen houses built by the side of a spring of mineral water. The charm of the resort is not, however, due to its loveliness, nor to its healing waters, but to the fact that its landlord is Prince Ludwig of Bavaria, a courteous host, who in his management of the place combines a lucrative business with a most generous charity.

The prince, the eldest son of Duke Maximilian and the brother of the empress of Austria, surrendered to his younger brother, Karl Theodor, all his rights as the head of the family, because he wished to marry a lady of inferior social position, with whom he had fallen in love.

The marriage proved to be a happy one, and to this day, though more than thirty years have passed since they were united, the prince's manner to his wife is more that of a lover than a middle aged married man. They have no children, and live for the greater part of the year in a simple suite of apartments at Bad-Kreuth, where, according to a writer in The Cornhill Magazine, she diffuses brightness and happiness around her, and he shows how a prince may earn an honest livelihood, and be the first, not to receive, but to render aid.

The whole of the health resort belongs to the ducal family. The servants are theirs, and the entire management of the place is under Prince Ludwig's superintendence. He is his own butcher, brewer, dairyman and baker.

During June, July and August Kreuth is filled with southern Germans, who pay liberally for their rooms and board, and make these months the prince's harvest time. During May and September the prince receives no paying guests, but fills the house with those he calls his "friends." They are those who are too proud to ask for charity, but need a little help—officers depending upon their pay, university students, poor professors, struggling literary men and artists.

Two or three hundred of these "friends" are housed, fed and tended at the hotel during May and September as carefully as the wealthiest guests, and that, too, without its costing them one penny. If at the height of the paying season a room is left vacant, some poor invalid is invited to occupy it, and no one can tell from the manner of the host or his servants that the new arrival is not a millionaire.

Prince Ludwig never forgets a face or a name, and has a pleasant word for every one, whether a paying guest or a "friend." His manner is the same to all, the sympathetic greeting of a courteous host and the kindly greeting of a well bred man.

Next!

Man is said to be the only creature that shaves. The South American bird called the "mot-mot," the Motmotus Brazillensis, actually begins shaving on arriving at maturity. Naturally adorned with long blue tail feathers, it is not satisfied with them in their natural state, but with its beak nips off the web on each side for a space of about two inches, leaving a neat little oval tuft at the end of each.—Indianapolis Journal.

SO WHITE, SO SOFT, SO SWEET.

See the chariot at hand here of love,
Wherein my lady rideth!
Each that draws is a swan or a dove,
And well the car Love guideth.
As she goes all hearts do duty
Unto her beauty;
And enamored do wish, so they might
But enjoy such a sight,
That they still were to run by her side,
Through swords, through seas, whither she would glide.

Do but look on her eyes, they do light
All that Love's world compriseth!
Do but look on her hair, it is bright
As Love's star when it riseth!
Do but mark, her forehead's smoother
Than words that soothe her:
And from her arched brow such a grace
Sheds itself through the face,
As alone there triumphs to the life
All the gain, all the good of the element's strife.

Have you seen but a bright lily grow
Before rude hands have touched it?
Have you marked but the fall of the snow
Before the soil hath smutched it?
Have you felt the wool of the beaver
Or swan's down ever?
Or have smelt o' the bud of the brier
Or the nard in the fire?
Or have tasted the bag of the bee?
Oh, so white, oh, so soft, oh, so sweet is she!

—New York Commercial Advertiser

How He Got Clients.

Young Bitter has recently embarked upon a career as a lawyer, and hung out his shingle to attract such customers as may be caught thereby from amid the throng of passers who go up and down Washington street, seeking to devour and in the end not infrequently getting devoured. That there is in him some of the capacities necessary for the successful pursuit of the legal profession is indicated by an incident, trivial in itself, which marked the beginning of his career.

"Why is it," he was one day asked by a classmate who put out his sign in the same block at about the same time, "that people whom you don't in the least know come into your office and give you jobs, and nobody ever comes to me unless it is somebody that has been sent?"

"My dear fellow," was the reply, "it is the simplest thing in the world. When I had my sign painted I let it lie out on the grass for a week, I squirted water over it from the garden hose, and I rubbed it with a sod, so that when it was put up it looked as if it had been in use for two or three years. Your bright new sign advertised to all the world that you were just starting out, but mine gave the impression that I was an old hand; so I got the patronage. See?"

"Yes, I see," the other returned thoughtfully.—Chicago Tribune.

A Kentucky Sermon Spoiled.

It was in Breathitt county, Ky. For several months an evangelist had been laboring with the mountaineers, trying to turn them from their evil ways. Every little while something would turn up and undo the labor of months. Then the people would seem to take an increased interest in matters of religion, and hope would bud again in the evangelist's breast. One Sunday the little chapel on the mountain side was crowded, and the evangelist was exhorting his hearers to leave their rifles and hunting knives at home when they went to church.

In the course of half an hour he grew eloquent, and was just thinking that he was going to carry his point when a fat buck trotted past the chapel and disappeared in the laurel thicket. An old hound that was sleeping in the chapel door gave a yelp and started after the buck, and the male portion of the congregation grabbed their rifles and followed without waiting for a motion to adjourn. When they were out of sight the evangelist said in despair:

"Oh, it's no use, it's no use."

"Yas, 'tis," said a one legged man that was left behind; "I'll bet you a dollar they'll have that thar deer inside o' two hour."—Chicago Herald.

Natural Location.

"What did Solomon do besides build the temple?" asked a little girl of her brother, who at once replied, "He wrote the dictionary." "Does the Bible say so?" queried the sister, with wide eyes of believing interest. "I don't know as it does, in so many words, but he was the wisest man, and that's the wisest book. So of course he wrote it."

This original method of reasoning was evidently admired by a still younger member of the family who had come up to listen to the conversation.

"Well, Tommykins, what do you know about Solomon or his temple?" asked the brother jocosely.

"Everything," was the stout reply.

"Oh, you do, do you? Well, where was his temple?"

"You must think I'm smart," answered Tommy in scorn.

"Oh, you don't know, you don't know!"

"I do, too."

"Well, where was it then?"

"On the side of his head, same's 'twould be in anybody!" replied Tommy in conclusive triumph.—Youth's Companion.

Did Not Understand Irish.

A story is told of a certain mayor of Cork who headed a deputation to the late emperor of the French, and commenced an oration to his majesty in what he conceived to be the French tongue. "Pardon me," said the emperor after he had listened to the speech with much patience, "English I know fairly well, but I regret to say I have never had an opportunity of studying the Irish language."—Cork Examiner.

A new albuminous poison of 100 times the power of strychnine is extracted from the seeds of Abrus precatoria.

SHOES AND THE WEARERS.

Dealers in Footgear Give Some Facts.

CHICAGO GIRLS HAVE BEEN MALIGNED.

Eastern Women Wear the Largest Shoes.—High Heels.

"What kind of shoes are the ladies wearing nowadays?"

"If you should say that they are wearing all kinds you would just about strike it; but there is one thing certain, much more sensible shoes are worn by women today than there were five years ago. The best selling shoe we have in all sections of the country, with one or two exceptions, is the New York medium toe. A shoe with this toe has a comfortable and yet natty appearance, and is usually fitted with an inch and an eighth heel, which is a comfortable height. Next in popularity to the New York medium toe is the New York opera toe, which is more pointed at the end and has a heel one quarter of an inch higher than the former. Either of these styles of shoe may or may not be adorned with the patent leather tip which has been so popular for the last year."

"Where are the largest shoes worn?"

"I suppose you will think I will say in Chicago, but I shan't, for while in that city the sizes range from one to seven, in Boston there are very few No. 1's sold, the prevailing numbers ranging between two and seven. Chicago women have been much maligned, and it is a fact that we send more large sizes east than to any other section of the country. New Yorkers wear much slimmer shoes than are worn in any other city, and while we sell more medium sizes, threes and threes and a half, for instance, right here some women wear as high as fives. We sell very few shoes over that size in New York."

"Where are the smallest shoes worn?"

"You will be surprised when I tell you that for small feet the southern women are in the van. They wear rather wider shoes than their New York sisters, but their feet are shorter. To sum up, I think I can confidently assert that the largest shoes are worn by eastern women, slimmest by New Yorkers and the widest and smallest by the fair creatures who make the south and west their homes."

"Are there particular styles manufactured for different sections?"

"There are. Here, for instance," and the member opened a black walnut show case and took out what looked like men's shoes, "is a sample of the ladies' waukenphast shoe, which is now very popular in that city of blue blood and beans—Boston.

"You will notice that they are nearly as heavy, have as wide heels, and look fully as useful as men's shoes. We sell them nowhere else but in the east. Again, here is a pair of shoes which you will observe have perfectly square toes and narrow feet. These are what the Philadelphia belles dote upon, and you couldn't see a pair in any other city to save your neck. Funny, isn't it?"

"Are women wearing heavier or lighter shoes than formerly?"

"You would naturally suppose from my previous statement that they are wearing more sensible shoes, that I would say heavier. I regret to say that I cannot. Fair woman has come to the conclusion that distorted feet resulting from too short and too tight shoes detract from her appearance, and is therefore wearing better shaped feet coverings. You cannot persuade her to wear anything clumsy looking. A thick soled shoe is her abomination, and there are more deaths resulting every year from her determination to wear paper soled shoes than from any other cause. At least, that is my opinion. Why, just look at it a moment. The thickest shoe we make has but a three-eighths of an inch sole—about the thickness a man would wear on a summer shoe—and yet women will put on their 'thick boots' as they call them, and tramp through slush and mud all day long in them. It makes no difference if their feet are soaked when they get home; they have worn their 'thick boots,' and that settles it. That's what I like about the eastern women. They will wear comfortable and suitable shoes every time, appearances or no appearances."

"Is the French high heel as much in vogue as it was?"

"For street wear, no. For the house and carriage the most popular button shoe is the New York opera toe, with the high French heel. This shoe naturally is not adapted for much walking, and the women have discovered this. For low shoes the New York medium toe and the opera with high and moderately high French heels sell the best. For a good walking shoe $5 to $8 should be paid; for fancy ball slippers of course fancy prices are given."

A wholesale manufacturer of men's shoes said: "It would be hard to say that any particular style of shoe is being worn now. We make and sell all styles. It can be said, though, that men are getting better shoes for their money today than ever before. Not only better in quality but in fit. The time has gone by when a man expected to buy an uncomfortable, ready made shoe and torture himself by wearing it until it was comparatively comfortable. Improved methods of taking measurements and improved machinery have accomplished this, and a man can today go into a reputable ready made shoe store and get a perfect fitting shoe without the slightest trouble."

"Which section of the country demands the largest shoes?"

"That would be difficult to say, but probably the western man will wear a little larger shoes than other men. As a rule the western man, you know, is not so particular in his dress as an easterner, and so long as a shoe is comfortable that is about all he cares for."

"Do you make particular styles for different parts of the country?"

"I can't say that we do except for the south. Southerners wear more boots than men in the north. In fact there are very few of the finer grade of boots worn up here. The southern man likes boots and he wears them with high heels and is apt to get them too short for his feet. In consequence the southern foot is shorter and wider than other feet, the sizes down there ranging from 4 to 8, while in the north they range in this part of the country from 5 to 10, and in the west from 6 to 12. The eastern men have the slimmest feet. A fact which is somewhat strange is that more heavy shoes are sold right here in the city than in the country districts."—New York Press.

Of the 200 gold beaters of New York not one is a woman, while of the 900 gold cutters not one is a man.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

C. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY APRIL 17 ..... 1891.

Senator George F. Edmunds of Vermont, who has been in the Senate of the United States since April, 1866, and in nearly, if not quite all of that time, been one of the Republican leaders, has resigned, to take effect the first of November next.

And now it is the Hungarian-Polish gang of aliens rioting in Pennsylvania that appeals to foreign powers to grow at the Constitution of the United States. It may possibly dawn upon these people some day that the Constitution and institutions of America were made for ourselves, and not to please monarchial powers.

Italy suddenly discovers that in her treaty of commerce and amity with the United States it is provided that the Federal and State jurisdictions and judicial systems of the United States are distinctly recognized. The Government at Rome appears also to have found out that its demands upon the Government at Washington are not sustained by the thinking world. Italy is accordingly hedging, and the diplomatic "incident" is approaches its end.

Ex-Governor R. W. Waterman died at San Diego last Sunday evening. Mr. Waterman was always a staunch Republican and an earnest advocate of the principles of the American party, but during the greater part of his life he did not concern himself much about politics. It was not until 1886 that he entered politics. In that year he was elected Lieutenant Governor and on the death of Governor Bartlett in 1887 he succeeded to the highest office in the State, which he held until succeeded by Governor Markham, the present incumbent.

When the Hon. Benjamin Harrison arrives in California we trust that everybody will forget tnat he is any thing else but the President of the United States, and remember that the President of the United States is entitled to respect wherever he goes. Partisan politics should never degrade the Chi f Magistrate of this country in the eyes of its citizens. Leaving all else aside, let us remember that President Harrison is a man of distinguished lineage, of honorable fame as a soldier and statesman, and a citizen of unsullied reputation. He comes among us in the dual capacity of President of the Republic and honored guest, and is therefore entitled to every consideration at the hands of true hospitality.—ALTA.

It is now stated that the Mining Bureau is not one of the public institutions which the Governor crossed out of the General Appropriation Bill. The public will be glad that the Mining Bureau has escaped. It is one of the most useful institions in the State. Its extinction or suppression would be public misfortune. Its collection of minerals is invaluable and should be preserved and added to. The field work carried on each year has directed capital into mining enterprises that have employed a large number of men, with the usual beneficial results. The 50 cent limit was not intended to cut off reasonable appropriations to maintain institutions of this character. It is only expected that they shall be maintained without extravagant expenditure.

The expression of the Eastern press has at no time been so emphatic and well defined as now, in favor of radical reformation of the immigration and naturalization laws. That the disposition of the people is to put the bars up higher is unquestioned, and that it will be done we believe. It is now but a question of extent of amendment of the laws; how far restriction shall go. The probality is that it will not be pressed to exclusion of any one but the clearly undesirable elements, and more rigorous interpretation of the law excluding criminals, and those liable to become public charges. But that the demand for radical reformation of naturalization laws will be pressed in favor of requiring much longer residence and more thorough inquisition into the fitness of applicants is certain; upon that question there can be no evasion of debate. It is to be put before Congress, and in a manner that will command its very grave consideration. We do not think that the extreme will be reached of adopting the cry America for Americans, but it may be accepted as certain that in the near future the watch-word will be America for those fit to become Americans.

ELECTRIC FIXTURES.

THEY ARE RAPIDLY DISPLACING THE GAS CHANDELIER.

Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars Invested in Their Manufacture—The Greatest Taste Displayed in Their Design and Make—A Growing Industry.

With the progress of interior electric lighting and the gradual disappearance of gas illumination in theatres, hotels and private dwellings has come a new industry. It might almost be called an art, or at least an ally of an art, for it has engaged the attention of architects, and has called forth some of the best efforts of artistic designers.

This new industry is the manufacture of electric light fixtures. Only two or three years ago it was in its infancy. Today it has reached an importance almost as great as electric lighting itself, and has attracted millions in investment. The gas chandelier is daily receding to give place to the electrolier, and if the present rate of progress is maintained the electrolier may be seen in the dwellings of persons of very moderate means. It may be the climax in the advance which made the candle and the oil lamp give way to gas.

Until 1883 all the finer class of electric light fixtures were imported chiefly from France. American companies manufactured a class of plain goods which failed to satisfy the wealthy, and were too costly for others. All this is changed now. The American architecture and the American artist have taken up the matter of interior electric lighting, and the electric light fittings have become a part and parcel of architecture. The fittings are designed to suit the style of the architecture, and they cover many periods.

ART IN THE BUSINESS.

Some of these are the Romanesque, the renaissance (French and Italian), Louis XIV, Louis XV, Louis XVI, the Empire, Adams (English style), Colonial (American) and the Nineteenth century revival of the renaissance in the floral period. The materials of the fittings are chiefly wrought iron, brass and copper hammered.

Three or four million dollars are invested in the business. The American companies, which used to manufacture goods inferior to the French article, are now consolidated, and many of the best French designers are employed by them. It appears just now that the Americans are a little ahead of the French and English in this new art. But the American people are far from being convinced of this yet. The Vanderbilts and many other of the wealthy Fifth avenue families have imported electric light fittings, and will have no others. But it seems to be only a matter of a few years more when American art and American enterprise will have overcome French and English ascendency.

The fittings made today are as varied in style and far more artistic than the gas fixtures. They are considerably more costly, too. The costliest ever made was an electrolier, which now hangs in the drawing room of James Rothschild, of London. It cost $6,000. It is 28 inches in diameter, about 5 feet high, and is made of gilt bronze and rock crystal. The design is of the Louis XVI period. Sixty-eight electric lights hang from the bronze leaves, and the mellow diffusion of light is as remarkable as the beautiful design.

SOME EXPENSIVE ONES.

The cost of nearly all the finer fittings mount high up into the hundreds. One of the prettiest is a wrought iron lamp with a dragon twisting itself around it and flames in the form of electric lights pouring from its mouth. There is one of these lamps in the residence of William C. Whitney, ex-secretary of the navy. Another is a cupid holding a lamp made of hammered copper. Ten of these are in Mr. Whitney's house.

One of the prettiest of the smaller fittings is a bronze fly, from the mouth of which a light is pendant. These flies are placed at irregular intervals on the walls, and make a curious and pretty effect. Cupids holding cut glass balls, with drooping lamps of bronze, and containing twenty-four lights, are among the finest of recent productions. One recently made for a Chicago millionaire cost $4,000.

For small rooms the favorites are little electroliers of gilt and white metal and oxidized silver or copper, with rose reflectors. The designs are numerous. One made of oxidized silver is a boy's face, with light shining from the mouth. Another of the same pattern has two lights coming through the eyes.

Some of the three light fixtures are highly artistic. One of them, which is seen in many Fifth avenue houses, has one light on a globe pendant from the center, and the others at the arms, with cut glass drops calculated to increase the brilliancy of the reflection.

To fit up a large private house in the latest styles of electric lighting costs from $15,000 to $20,000, exclusive of the plant. Of course handsome fittings can be had for one-fourth of that amount, but those who want the "the latest" have to pay extremely fancy prices.—Chicago Daily News.

Americans Lead in Cut Glass.

In cut glass the American make is foremost. Water glasses in the popular strawberry and fan pattern sell for from $7.50 to $9 a dozen. Flower bowls in the same design, six inches in diameter, cost $5 each. Ten dollars will buy a handsome water pitcher. Dainty dishes for bonbons cost very little, and there is an endless variety of small pieces for table use.

Baccarat or pressed glass is much cheaper than the cut, and pretty vases cost from forty cents to $3 or $4. The designs are pretty, and the price makes them popular.—New York Telegram.

Whisky will take out every kind of fruit stain. A child's dress will look entirely ruined by the dark berry stains on it, but if whisky is poured on the discolored places before sending it to the wash it will come out as good as new.

Mr. Powderly Is Fond of Flowers.

T. V. Powderly spends nearly as much time in his garden as he does at his desk. When he is not studying labor problems he is studying the growth of his flowers. The only question that has an equal interest to Powderly is the question of food. He is exceedingly abstemious, and doubtless could give the fasting men who are coming to the front now valuable points. Powderly never eats more than two light meals a day, and thinks that he can do with less.—Cor. Chicago Herald.

Pittsburg's Favorite "Smokers."

"Talking about that apology for a smoke the Pittsburg stogie reminds me of a peculiar experience I had with that article some years ago," said an old time cigar drummer at the Continental hotel. "I was traveling for a Philadelphia house that made a fine line of goods only, and had met only with indifferent success. I was looking forward to Pittsburg as a kind of El Dorado, and imagined sales of great magnitude in the Smoky City.

"I arrived in the evening and immediately started out to interview the trade. About the first place I struck was a prosperous looking cigar store, but I noticed that among the stock the stogie seemed to predominate. I presented my card to the proprietor, talked up my stock and firm to him in great shape, but did not seem to be making any great headway.

The proprietor assured me that he was full up, but said he would look over my samples the following morning if I would step in. While I was talking to him and endeavoring to prolong the conversation, a gentleman walked in who immediately impressed me as being one of the solid men of the town. He had that unmistakable sleek and well fed air of fortune's favorite. Walking up to the counter he selected four stogies and lighted one, laid down a five cent piece and walked out.

"'Do you know who that is?' asked the proprietor of me. I replied in the negative. 'Why, that's Phipps, Andrew Carnegie's partner,' was the astounding assertion. I was completely flabbergasted. That was the mutest and yet the most convincing argument I ever had to withstand. Without a word I closed up my grips and took the next train out of town. I had come to the very natural conclusion that if men worth $20,000,000 took their smokes at four for five I did not stand much show with the plebeian smokers."—Philadelphia Enquirer.

Giving Canes Shape.

The cultivation of walking sticks for the market has been taken up as a business at some places in continental Europe, and special attention is often paid to making the roots grow into shapely forms for the handles. A London manufacturing establishment, the floor space of which covers nearly an acre, has extensive storehouses filled with native and foreign sticks, from which stock is drawn as it is wanted from the shops.

The sticks as they grow are often very crooked and have to be straightened. A heap of sand is provided on the top of a hot stove, into which the sticks are plunged until they become pliable.

The workman takes the crooked stick while it is still hot and inserts it in a notch cut in a stout board, placed at an angle inclined from him, where he bends and strains it. When it has become perfectly straight it is thrown down to cool, after which it becomes rigid and permanent in its lines. Heat is an important element in this matter and produces different effects on the several kinds of wood, the degree of heat necessary to straighten one kind of stick being often sufficient to spoil another kind.

The same power which makes a crooked stick straight is applied to make a straight one crooked; so we find that the rigid stems of bamboos, partridge canes, and all the various kinds of sticks that are required to be curled or twisted, are by the application of heat made to assume almost any shape or form.—Youth's Companion.

Costly Drugs.

Among costly drugs we might mention the following and the different sized bottles and phials in which they are sold: Agaricin, 4½ ounces, costs $13.75; colocynthin, 5½ ounces, $114.75; coniine hydrochlorate, 4½ ounces, $93.45; cyclamin, 3½ ounces, $54.05; digitoxin, 1½ ounces, $87.40; gentisin, 1½ ounces, $91.15; helitropin, 6 ounces, $51.25; dydrastine hydrochlorate, 6½ ounces, $194.80; papayotin, used as a solvent for the diphtheritic membrane, 13 ounce bottles, per bottle, $189.50. Besides the above there are various preparations made from the Calabar bean the cost of which is amazing. They are chiefly used in diseases of the eye.

One is called physostigmine alkaloid, and costs $137.50 per ounce phial. Physostigmine crystals are still more expensive, being sold in 2½ ounce bottles at a cost of $503.15. Still another preparation of the Calabar is physostigmine salicylate crystals, an aristocratic drug that surely furnishes a fitting cap sheaf for this pyramid of costly stuffs, which is furnished to the customer who is able to buy at the reasonable charge of $1,810,020 for a 2 ounce phial.—St. Louis Republic.

He Was Not Anxious to Learn.

Professor Albert Boehm, of this city, is an enthusiastic naturalist. He has a large collection of birds and animals, and makes a practice of exhibiting them at fairs. The professor was at the Winona fair, and had his museum in a tent on the grounds. One day a gentleman stepped in by the tent and looked at a couple of coons which were tied to a stake near the entrance. He did not know what the animals were and asked the professor, who told him they were coons, and said: "If you will give me ten cents and come inside the tent, when you come out you will know more about natural history than any of your normal professors." The offer was a good one, but the gentleman refused and turned away. Professor Boehm asked a bystander who it was, and was told, "Professor——, of the Winona normal school."—La Crosse Leader.

The New Game.

The climax in golf has come in England. It is not simply men who work chiefly with their brains—judges, clergymen, artists, journalists, members of parliament and novelists—that have taken to it almost en masse, and are never weary of singing its praises as the sole perfect cure for dyspepsia, the megrims and worry. Young athletes are abandoning cricket and football for golf, and are competing with each other as to who can "drive the longest ball."—Exchange.

A Wooden Horse Collar.

I venture to ask you if wooden horse collars have ever been tried, and if not why not? The present style of collar is heating, and very apt for that reason and on account of its roughness to cause sores on the neck of the horse. Zinc collars have been tried, with what result I do not know; but it seems to me that a wooden collar might be made which would be light, smooth and cool, on the same principle as the McClellan saddle tree, which for cavalry purposes has never been surpassed.—Cor. New York Cultivator.

GOD'S MUSIC.

Since ever the world was fashioned,
Water and air and sod,
A music of divers meaning
Has flowed from the hand of God.
In valley and gorge and upland,
On stormy mountain height,
He makes him a harp of the forest,
He sweeps the chords with might.
He puts forth his hand to the ocean,
He speaks and the waters flow;
Now in a chorus of thunder,
Now in a cadence low.
He touches the waving flower bells,
He plays on the woodland streams,
A tender song like a mother
Sings to her child in dreams.
But the music divinest and dearest,
Since ever the years began,
Is the manifold passionate music
He draws from the heart of man.
—F. E. Weatherly in Temple Bar.

Comedian Hart's Pitiful Condition.

Poor Tony Hart! While his relatives and friends are quarreling over the will of his dead wife, who was known in the theatrical world as Gertie Granville, the once clever partner of Ned Harrigan is slowly but surely wasting away in an insane asylum at Worcester, Mass. In fact, he is but a shadow of his former self. When Tony Hart was in the very zenith of success and fortune smiled upon him he was straight and erect in stature, but now he is bent and his gait is a shuffling one, while his voice, but a little while ago clear and musical, is nearly gone; he can scarcely articulate and the listener cannot understand him.

Paresis, that dread disease of the brain, is gradually doing its fatal work, and, according to the statement of Dr. Noble, the superintendent of the asylum, who has attended Tony since he was committed to the institution, the days of the poor fellow are numbered. Dr. Noble expressed the opinion to a visitor at the asylum, who once knew Tony that the latter can scarcely survive six months longer, and paralysis of the brain may result at any moment and be followed by death shortly afterward.

The contest over the will of the late Mrs. Tony Hart will be renewed before Surrogate Rollins shortly, when some interesting evidence regarding the bequests and the reason why no provision was made for Tony will be brought out. The fund raised at the benefit performance, and placed in the hands of Frank W. Sanger and A. M. Palmer, the theatrical managers, as trustees, is used to pay Hart's expenses at the asylum.—New York Telegram.

Keeping Cider Sweet.

Cider to be kept unfermented should be made as late in autumn as possible, as it would be difficult to keep from fermenting when made early in the season. November made cider, if bunged up tight and stored where a temperature near the freezing point can be maintained, will probably keep sweet indefinitely. Some people put in a half pound or a pound of mustard seed to the barrel of cider and others use sulphite of lime in the same way. The old time method of scalding is considered by many people one of the best and least objectionable methods.

We see this described as follows: When the cider has slightly fermented it should be drawn or dipped from the casks where it has been standing to settle into large copper kettles or an old copper still, and be heated just up to the boiling point and no longer, when it should be again put into open casks to settle and become cold. It will then be ready to be tightly bunged in barrels and stored away. During the heating a large quantity of scum will rise to the top to be skimmed off, and during the cooling most of the impurities still held in solution will be deposited as sediment in the bottom of the casks.—Popular Gardening.

Mr. Beecher's "Account Books."

I was talking with Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher a few days ago regarding the widely copied report that some account books kept by Mr. Beecher of his farming and domestic expenses had been rescued from a pile of house rubbish and were about to be published. "There is no truth in the report whatever," said Mrs. Beecher. "Why, Mr. Beecher was the last man in the world to keep such things as account books. He never kept any in his life, for he had not the patience for it. I kept all the accounts he had occasion for. Such a thing as an account book was never among his effects, and none, therefore, could have been unearthed. I have no idea how the report started, but you can deny in toto." I am sorry to spoil a very good literary paragraph, but these are the facts.—Edward W. Bok's Letter.

Air Ships to Be Operated by Electricity.

The advocates of the possibility of navigating the air by means of electricity have taken the first step toward putting their ideas into practical shape by the formation of a company with a capital of $20,000,000 having for its object the building and operating of electrical air ships. The company is to carry on its work in Chicago, and promises to have a car ready in six months. The proposed ship resembles the hull of an ordinary sea vessel. It requires only two men to operate it. The motive power is supplied by storage batteries, which work a system of wings and propellers, and also act as ballast. The driver or motorneer or "pilot" takes his place in front of the car, and controls its course by a series of levers and switches.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Home of Adam and Eve.

The Chicago Tribune has a letter from the quill of a traveler whose rare good luck it is to loaf a little in the Garden of Eden—otherwise on the Seychelles islands, in the Indian ocean, 1,400 miles east of Aden and 1,000 from Zanzibar. It was "Chinese" Gordon who tried to prove these islands to be identical with Eden. The islands number 114. They were built by coral insects and have the richest soil in the world. Palms grow 100 feet high. The white beaches are the most beautiful on the round earth. No one need work, for the trees are constantly in fruit, and the many tinted fishes that flash through the clear waters are as toothsome as they can be. Turtles abound. The people live to a great age. No hurricanes ever strike the islands. They constitute, indeed, an earthly paradise.

The new Croton aqueduct surpasses every other structure of the kind. It is estimated that the new Croton aqueduct alone will be able to supply a population of 2,120,000 with an allowance of 150 gallons a day per head. With the addition of the old aqueduct and the Bronx river pipe line the total capacity of the city's water works will be 150 gallons a day per head for a population of 2,873,000.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.
Bee Keeper.
Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.
Independence, Inyo Co. Cal

CROCKERS' HOTEL.
BIG PINE - CAL.
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in act, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
W. H. UHLEMEYER, Lessee.
sept 6 tf

FOR SALE CHEAP.
Two span first class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
Bishop Creek, Cal.
Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING SALOON.
Shaving, Hair Cutting, etc., done in the best manner
WM. H. HUFF, Prop'r

IRWINS' SALOON
[illegible] wards and Market Streets,
Independence . Cal.
THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt and furnished in a style second to none on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.
THE BAR
Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.
JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

BELL'S
Flouring Mills,
A. N. BELL, Prop.
TRY BELL'S
EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.
With added Patent Rollers and other Improvements our Mills, I am now turning out a flour that is fully
Equal to the Best
Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.
A. N. BELL.
Independence, Cal.

P. W. FORBES P. H. MACK
MACK & FORBES.
Real Estate Agents,
Address
P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal
P. W. FORBES, Bishop, Cal.

FORBES & TOBEY,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.,
—DEALERS IN—
LUMBER
OF ALL KINDS
DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS,
LATH,
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.
Matched and Dressed
Flooring.
sept 11-1 y

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and
Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

A. R. CONKLIN,
Attorney-at-Law
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the States of California and Nevada.

JOHN W. P. LAIRD,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Independence, Cal.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M. D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)
Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED.
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.
Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:
Saturday ..... January 24th
" ..... February 21st
" ..... March 21st
" ..... April 18th
" ..... May 23rd
" ..... June 20th
" ..... July 18th
" ..... August 15th
" ..... September 12th
" ..... October 17th
" ..... November 14th
" ..... December 12th
JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

BOOTS AND SHOES
MADE AND REPAIRED.
THE BEST MATERIAL.
FIRST-CLASS WORK.
Repairs done Promptly.
Prices Reasonable.
A. J. DAVIS,
nov 30-tf Independence.

NORMAN
HOUSE.
Independence, - Cal.
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates.
Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.
O. I. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine.
FRED BURKHARDT.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE WHY ORDER OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE AND PERSONAL PROPERTY SHOULD NOT BE MADE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE County of Inyo, State of California.

In the matter of the estate of John Mullane deceased.

Order to show cause why an Order of sale of real estate and personal property should not be made.

Richard Hessian Sr. the Executor of the last will and testament of John Mullane, deceased, having filed his petition herein, duly verified, praying for an order of sale of all the real estate and all the personal property of said deceased, for the purposes therein set forth, it is therefore ordered by the Judge of said Court, that all persons interested in the estate of said deceased, appear before the said Superior Court on Saturday, the 18th day of April, 1891, at two o'clock in the afternoon of said day, at the Court room of said Court, at the Court House in the town of Independence, in the said County of Inyo, to show cause why an order should not be granted to the said Executor to sell all of the real estate and all of the personal property of the said decedent. And that a copy of this order be published at least four successive weeks in the Inyo Independent, a newspaper published and printed in the said County of Inyo.

GEO. M. GILL.
Judge of said Superior Court.
Dated March 19th, 1891.

[ENDORSED.]

In the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California.

In the matter of the Estate of John Mullane deceased.

Order to show cause why an order of sale of Real Estate and Personal Property should not be made.

Filed March 20th, 1891.

J. N. YANDELL,
Clerk.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Thomas Parker, deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Executors of the last Will and Testament of Thos. Parker, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Executors, at the office of P. H. Mack in the town of Independence, Inyo Co., Cal., the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate, in the County of Inyo, State of California.

JOHN SHEPHERD,
S. G. REESE,
Executors of the last Will and Testament of Thomas Parker, deceased.
Dated at Independence, Cal. April 4, 1891.

PROBATE NOTICE.

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE County of Inyo, State of California.

In the matter of the Estate of Peter Dierkson deceased.

Notice for publication of time appointed for probate of will.

Notice is hereby given that Saturday, the 18th day of April, A. D. 1891, at 10 o'clock a. m. of said day, and the Court-room of said Court, at the town of Independence in the County of Inyo, State of California have been appointed as the time and place for proving the will of said Peter Dierkson, deceased, and for hearing the application of John F. Lubken for the issuance to him of Letters of Administration with the will annexed thereon.

J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Petitioner.
Dated April 2d, 1891

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, San Francisco, California. Location of works, Inyo county, Cal.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AT A meeting of the Board of Directors, held the 30th day of March 1891, an assessment (No. 12) of Ten Cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, No. 132 California street, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 12th day of May 1891, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before will be sold on FRIDAY, the 29th day of May, 1891, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

G. W. LUCE Secretary.
Office, 135 California St., San Francisco, California.

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ... PROPRIETOR.
Horseshoeing ..... $2 00 for Ca
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

J. W. Murphy
BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work
Wagons and Carriages Repaired.
HORSESHOEING, $2 00 for [illegible]
Shop on Edwards St., opposite Court House, Independence

Pioneer
Livery & Feed Stable.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, I can be assured of finding there the best of Livery Teams, Saddle Horses, and
Livery Accommodations
in general. Also, Hay and Feed by the pound or ton.
O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, APRIL 17 ..... 1891.

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 98
Lead, 4 35
Copper, 13 70
Tin, 20 40
Sugar, .06
Coffee, 20 @ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 13 @ 19.

Religious Services.

Rev. H. J. Winsor will preach on Sunday at the Fort at 10 o'clock, at Independence at 11 a.m., at Georges Creek at 2:30, and Lone at 7 p m.

Rev. J. Smith will preach at Independence at 7 p. m.

Rev. H. J. Winsor will preach at Keeler on Wednesday evening, April 22nd, a 7 o'clock, in the dining room of the Lake View Hotel.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

SATURDAY, April 11, 1891.

Estates of B. F. Theban and C. D. Begole—Filed oath of office of Wm. F. Matlack, Administrator.

Estate of J. C. Eddy, deceased—Filed order authorizing Wm. F. Matlack to take charge of property.

Davis vs. Keys—Judgment for Defendant.

WEDNESDAY, April 15, 1891.

Estate of John Hughes, deceased—Filed petition and order of sale.

Davis vs. Keys—Filed findings.

Estate of Wm. Walker, deceased—Filed claim of E. Robinson.

THURSDAY, April 16, 1891.

Davis vs. Keys—Judgment entered for defendant.

Will it never quit raining!

Receiver Clark visited Bishop early in the week.

Charley Summers was down from Bishop on Tuesday.

Surveyor McKnight has been in town for a couple of days.

Three feet of snow fell at Sisson on the C. P. last week.

Wm. Weatherall of Hawthorne is visiting at Independence.

Jeff Ziglar expects to start soon for his old home in Shasta County.

This is the most backward spring experienced in the valley for many years.

John Fichman came up from Keeler yesterday morning, returning early to-day.

John Alexander had an attack of the grip early in the week but is all right again.

J. W. Murphy has filed the necessary papers and is now a full fledged constable.

A. N. Bell was dangerously ill early in the week but is now considered out of danger.

Dr. I. J. Woodin has gone to Los Angeles and is expected to return home next week.

About three thousand sheep were sheared at the Rawson ranch at Blackrock during the week.

Thos. C. Boland has been laid up with severe attack of grip. At last reports he was improving.

N. T. Piper shipped to Oakland five carloads of beef cattle from his Oasis ranch last week.

N. E. Conklin has two likely looking youngsters by his Nutwood stallion, Mt. Vernon Prince.

Coroner Matlack has gone to Darwin on business connected with the estate of the late J. C. Eddy.

Al Staudinger has been in town during the week. He is suffering from a severe attack of la grippe.

Chicago has been afflicted with another great fire. The losses are estimated at over one million dollars.

The weather has been cold and damp all day. "Gentle Spring" may be coming, but it is evidently in no hurry.

W. S. Enos arrived home Wednesday from an extended visit on the other side of the mountains. He was absent over a month.

For the first time in its history the city of Denver has a Democratic Mayor. Rogers was elected by over five thousand majority.

R. W. Scott of Bishop was in town on Wednesday. He has just returned from Candelaria and reports that camp as being quite lively.

The case of Davis vs. Keys, touching the title to certain mining ground in the White Hill District has been decided in favor of the latter.

Hon. A. J. Gould came in from Darwin on Tuesday's train. He has been quite ill for some time past and came in for medical attendance.

Mrs. J. C. Roeper was taken very ill last Tuesday. Dr. Louise Woodin has been in constant attendance during the week, and her condition is very much improved.

S. P. Smith of Bishop was in town today. He brought down his fine young stallion, Antare, and is making arrangements to take mares to Bishop for breeding.

A wet silk handkerchief tied, without folding, over the face is a security against suffocation from smoke. It permits free breathing and at the same time excludes the smoke from the lungs.

W. J. Fitzgerald started for Los Angeles on Wednesday, going by way of Mojave. Mr. Fitzgerald has just completed a successful term of school here and will spend his vacation in the City of the Angels.

What an infernal thing the grippe is, anyway. When it gets a grab on a person it never knows when to let go. There is more sickness in Owens Valley now caused by that fell disease than was ever known before.

An Immense Project.

The following document was filed with the County Clerk on Tuesday and is the outcome of surveys and estimates made in the Valley by Mr. L. D. Matthews during the past year:

Articles of Incorporation of the Owens Valley Water Company.

Know all men by these presents that we, the undersigned, a majority of whom are citizens and residents of the State of California, have voluntarily associated ourselves together for the purpose of forming a corporation under the laws of the State of California. And we hereby certify:

FIRST: That the name of said corporation shall be the Owens Valley Water Company.

SECOND: That the purposes for which it is formed are, to purchase, appropriate, locate, secure and hold water rights and riparian rights. To construct water courses, aqueducts, ditches, reservoirs and all things necessary and proper for conveying and conducting water in, through and along Owens River Valley in the State of California, and into and through Indian Wells Valley in said State. For the purpose of selling and disposing of the same to the inhabitants of all towns and cities along its line, and all inhabitants in said valleys, for domestic and other purposes, and also for the purpose of irrigation, and in propelling machinery and canal purposes.

To sell and dispose of water for domestic and other uses to the inhabitants in said Owens Valley and in said Indian Wells Valley and to the towns therein. Also for the irrigation and reclamation of land, also for power and in running machinery and for canal purposes and all other purposes for which water may or can be used.

To construct a canal or water course from a point in Owens River in said Owens River Valley, where what is known as the Stevens Ditch intercepts the same, to and into said Indian Wells Valley for the purpose of floating boats upon the same and in carrying freight thereon.

To purchase and hold land necessary in carrying on the said business. Also to do all things necessary and proper in and about said business.

THIRD: That the place where the principal business of said Corporation is to be transacted is at the City and County of San Francisco, California.

FOURTH: That the term for which said Corporation is to exist is fifty years from the date of its incorporation.

FIFTH: That the number of Directors or Trustees of said incorporation shall be seven, and that the names and residence of Directors or Trustees, who were appointed for the first year, and to serve until the election and qualification of said officers, are as follows: Andrew J. Robinson, J. W. Wesson, G. P. Rixford, A. I. Sanborn, O. E. White, H. Oberson and J. F. Turner, all of San Francisco.

SIXTH: That the capital stock of said Corporation is Two million dollars, and the number of shares into which it is divided is One hundred thousand shares of the par value of Twenty dollars each.

SEVENTH: That the amount of said capital stock which has been actually subscribed is One million three hundred and twenty thousand dollars, and the following are the names of the persons by whom the same has been subscribed: N. Dodge, Andrew J. Robinson, J. W. Wesson, G. P. Rixford, A. I. Sanborn, O. E. White, H. Oberson, J. F. Turner, L. D. Matthews, Frank P. McInnis, Albert Moroff, Six thousand shares each.

The Marble Industry.

An article in the Reno Gazette on the thriving town of Verdi contains the following: "The marble works is another industry Reno should have secured. The works are employing about twenty men and when they get on to the finishing work on the Mills' building in San Francisco they will employ about eighty. They are now running seven gangs sawing marble, and have 60,000 feet of rough ashlar to polish. They are shipping three car loads of dressed marble to San Francisco every week now. It will take them nearly two years to finish the work required for the Mills' building."

Severe Loss

The dwelling at Camp Independence owned and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. James Malone was totally destroyed by fire on Tuesday afternoon. The inmates of the dwelling had gone out into an adjoining field at noon leaving a fire burning in the stove. When they returned to the building the flames had gained such headway that it was impossible to stay them or rescue anything from the house. It is a hard blow to the worthy couple to be left houseless in their old age. Every assistance that could be rendered was immediately proffered by the townspeople. The loss is about $2,500.

The Greatest Discovery o The Age.

An infallible remedy for the cure of catarrh and deafness in all its stages, by one who has been a great sufferer from catarrh and almost total deafness.

No catarrh or slimy green and yellow sticky matter discharging from the nose. No deafness. No ringing crackling sounds in the head. No mucous matter lodging in the throat. No occasional hacking cough with throwing up slimy green and yellow sticky matter. It is a blessing that words cannot describe.

For futher information write for circulars. Address Frank Wertz & Co., Wausau, Wis. Drawer 1029.

McNeil & Walker have started a soap factory at Bishop. The parties have experimented with borax from Saline Valley and have succeeded in producing a good article for laundry use. Where any article of home manufacture is equal or superior to the imported goods consumers should be careful to use the home brand.

Dr. L. L. Woodin was called suddenly to Keeler last Monday night. She was met at Lone Pine by a special, and the distance from that station to the soda works switch, fourteen miles, was covered in fourteen minutes.

The Odd Fellows of Independence are making strenuous efforts that the coming celebration on the 27th will surpass any yet given in the county. Visitors will be most cordially welcomed.

St. Petersburg and Jassi correspondents continue to report activity among the Russian troops, great numbers of which are being massed on the Austro-Hungarian frontier.

Bert Rhine expects to start for San Francisco on Tuesday of next week to attend the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Native Sons. He expects to be gone about two weeks.

Dr. F. O. Vincent, the Fresno wife murderer, has been sentenced to be hanged. He was convicted of a most cowardly crime and the sentence is considered most just.

Meteorological Summary.

Following is the report of the Signal Service Station at Keeler for the month of March, 1891.

Mean barometer 29.905
Highest barometer 30.150
Lowest barometer 29.431
Mean temperature 50.3
Highest temperature, 21st ..... 74.
Lowest temperature, 7th ..... 30.
Greatest daily range temp'ture, 19th, 29.
Least daily range temperature, 27th, 16.
Prevailing direction of wind, N. W.
Total movement of wind, 6382 miles.
Extreme velocity of wind, direction and date, 54 miles N. W. on 18th.
Total precipitation, 0.16 inches.
Number of days on which .01 inch or more of precipitation fell, 4.
Number of cloudless days 13
Partly cloudy days 8
Cloudy days 10

H. E. WILKINSON,
Sergt., Signal Corps, Observer.

Six Things a Boy Ought to Know.

First—That a quiet voice, courtesy and kind acts are as essential to the part in the world of a gentleman as of a gentlewoman.

Second—That roughness, blustering and even foolhardiness are not manliness. The most firm and courageous men have usually been the most gentle.

Third—That muscular strength is not health.

Fourth—That a brain crammed only with facts is not necessarily a wise one.

Fifth—That the labor impossible to the boy of 14 will be easy to the man of 20.

Sixth—That the best capital for a boy is not money, but a love of work, simple tastes and a heart loyal to his friends and his God.—Youth's Companion.

W. W. Hall, A. M., D. D., who has written several books on health, physical and moral, thus speaks of the housewife of some twenty years ago: "When our wives get to work they go about it too violently altogether, keep at it too long, and before they know it are perfectly exhausted, overheated, lie down insufficiently covered, take cold and are 'laid up' for days and weeks afterward."

Miss White, a missionary attached to the China Island mission, has a daring scheme in prospect to elude the vigilance of the Thibetan officials on the frontier, and to enter the dominions of the grand lama. She has already familiarized herself with the language, and is only awaiting an auspicious opportunity to attempt a feat which no Englishman has accomplished in the last half century.

Miss Ada Webb, a well figured young woman who gives a graceful performance in a large tank, has been presented by the Royal Humane society in London with a testimonial for plunging into the deepest water at the Brumley swimming baths in full walking dress and rescuing three women struggling in the water in a combination of cramp, panic and indiscretion.

Mrs. Vincent Glass, a London lady and disciple of Oscar Wilde, has invented an ornamental shoulder brace which little school children and young ladies studying the violin, piano and drawing are made to wear for a correct position. At one time all the girls in St. Helen's college wore as a gift the Vincent shoulder straightener.

A three hours' drive with a snake was taken recently by a lady in Ceylon. On getting out of her carriage she moved the cushions to find something which had slipped down, and to her horror discovered a huge cobra coiled up underneath. Had not the creature been in a semi-torpid condition she could not have escaped alive.

Apropos of the educational progress of women in England, it is worthy of note that at Birmingham there are 41 women and only 3 men candidates for the Cambridge higher local examinations; at Bradford, 24 women, 1 man; Leeds, 35 women, 2 men; at Manchester, 43 women, 1 man; at Liverpool, 59 women, 1 man.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For Sale!

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE

Eastside Canal.

There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,

C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

MARY A. BALL, Plaintiff, vs. ROBERT BALL, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Robert Ball, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant and for costs of suit, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 28th day of February, A. D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

72 I. O. F. 72

THE

72d Anniversary of I. O. O. F

Will be Celebrated by a

GRAND BALL

AT THE

Agricultural Pavilion, Independence,

ON

Monday Evening, April 27, 1891.

Admission Free to All!

FLOOR MANAGER ..... Bertrand Rhine.

FLOOR DIRECTORS ..... N. E. CONKLIN, G. H. LEWIS, J. W. MURPHY, ROBERT O'NEAL, B. F. GRAY

INVITATION COMMITTEE

ROUND VALLEY: C. F. Wildasinn, H. Evans

BISHOP: John Bourland, Robert O'Neal; P. P. Keough, O. H Hill; J. H. Bulpitt, I. P. Yaney.

BIG PINE: S. G. Gregg, J. C. Schalten; L Newman, J. R. Eldred

CERRO GORDO: Pat. Clinton

INDEPENDENCE: Walter James Jr., E. Robinson; P. W. Forbes, C. W. Craig; Dr. J. D. Blair, P. H. Mack; J. E. Shepherd

LONE PINE: J. R. Moffett, R. C. Spear

KEELER: Thos. Boland, B. F. Gray; John Anton, Sam. Levy; Finley Bedford.

Free transportation to and from trains and to pavilion.

Supper at Norman House.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THOMAS & HILL,
DEALERS IN
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL.
We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.
THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $25 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. Can work in spare time, or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EDWARD CHENOT
Independence, Cal.,
INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of
GENERAL MERCHANDIS
....Consisting of....
GROCERIES.
PROVISIONS
Tobacco, Cigars,
WINES AND LIQUORS
FLOUR & GRAIN
Together with an Assortment of
DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING
ETC., ETC
Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and price before purchasing elsewhere.
E. CHENOT.
Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
n47tf

Lake View Hotel
Keeler, Cal.
John Barnes, Prop'r.
First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.
THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
Wines, Liquors, & Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.
Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.
The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the
LARGEST AND BEST STOCK
of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.
PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.
All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.
Address orders and packages to
HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.
DENTISTS.
OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSfield, opposite the Southern Hotel.
Prompt and careful treatment given and the least possible pain inflicted. Address,
WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

NOTICE.
ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.
FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

BIG IOP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.
Harness Maker.
Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.
O. H. Hill, Prop'r.
A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE
BISHOP.
Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St
In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable
S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,
L. MUNZINGER & CO., Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
Customers supplied on all points Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

F. E. Bosworth,
Watchmaker & Jeweler.
BISHOP, CAL.
Fine and Complicated Watch Repairing a Specialty.
Guns, Sewing Machines, Organs and Music Boxes Put in Perfect Condition and Warranted.
I Prefer to do all work at your house and will call if you will write to me at Bishop.

A NEW DEAL!
LONE PINE
Livery. Feed & Sale Stable.
A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.
OPPOSITE SEWART HOUSE.
Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,
—DEALER IN—
General Merchandise,
LONE PINE,
INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,
BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.
Dealer In GENERAL MERCHANDISE, GROCERIES MINERS Supplies
PROVISIONS,
&c., &c., &c
A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.
CARSON & COLORADO R R
TAKING EFFECT,
Sunday, November 16th, '90

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1		To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—		Arrives—
Mound House	11:30 p m.		5.50 p. m
Dayton	12:00 p. m.		5:10 p. m.
Wabuska	2:05 p m		2.50 p. m
Hawthorne	5 50 p. m.		11:10 a. m.
Luning	7:05 p. m.		9 55 a. m.
Sodа Springs	8:05 p. m.		9:15 a. m
Belleville	9:15 p. m.		7:55a. m.
Candelaria	Ar. 10.00 p. m	Lv.	7.20 a. m
	No. 3. Leave—		No. 4. Arrives—
Belleville	8 25 a. m.		5:25 p m.
Benton	11.50 a. m		1:35 a m.
Bisaop Creek	2:00p. m.		11:00 a. m
Alvord	2.45 p. m.		10:05 a. m
Independence	4:20 p. m.		8:30 a. m
Lone Pine	5:10 p. m.		7.40 a. m
Keeler	Ar 5:55 p. m.	Lv.	7.00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R., which connect at Reno with east and west bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (37 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salsbury & Co's. tri weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville, Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stages for Columbus (8 miles), Silver P Montezuma, Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.
D A BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles
OF
Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc
AT
L. WOOL
CASH STORE
A small stock of fresh groceries a canned goods constantly renewed.
Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.
CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!
THE CASH STORE
Is Where You Get
WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE
Blacksmith Shop.
R. C. Spear, Prop'r
—ALL WORK ON—
MINING TOOLS,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS & FREIGHTING OUTFITS
—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—
HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING
All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON
KEELER, CAL.
In Lake View Hotel
BEER, WINES,
LIQUORS and CIGARS
All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.
JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.
J. C. MILLER, Lessee.
—THE BAR—
Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of
WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS
The most careful attention given to the the amusement and comfort of patrons.
A FINE BILLIARD TABLE!
Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon. sept-12 td

You've tried Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription have you and you're disappointed. The results are not immediate.

And did you expect the disease of years to disappear in a week? Put a pinch of time in every dose. You would not call the milk poor because the cream doesn't rise in an hour? If there's no water in it the cream is sure to rise. If there's a possible cure, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is sure to effect it, if given a fair trial.

You get your one dollar it costs back again if it don't benefit or cure you.

We wish we could give you the makers' confidence. They show it by giving the money back again, in all cases not benefited, and it'd surprise you to know how few dollars are needed to keep up the refund.

Mild, gentle, soothing and healing is Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Cures the worst cases permanently. No experimenting. It's "Old Reliable." Twenty-five years of success. Of druggists.

We are all made of clay; alack!
Too solemn 'tis for mockery;
And some are useless brie-a-bac
And some are common crockery.

SPREADING FOR LEAGUES AROUND

The marshy, overflowed lands, sunken lots and half submerged river banks, which give them birth, the seeds of malaria impregnate the air, and are inhaled at every breath by thousands unprovided with any adequate safeguard against the baneful influence. Yet such exist—potent alike to prevent or to cure, pure in no sense adulterants, and the professionally recognized substitute for the hateful drug, quinine. Its name is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a family specific and safeguard, foremost not only as an antidote to malaria, but also as a means of permanently removing dyspepsia, and relieving constipation, liver complaint, rheumatism, kidney and bladder ailments, and nervousness. Among invigorants it takes the first place, and is also a superb appetizer. Use it systematically.

Alas! Already?—"George dear, will you love me when I'm old?" "What a silly question, Penelope. Of course I do."

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE BLIND.

Dr. La Grange wishes to make known his New Treatment for the cure of all diseases of the Eye—Cataract, Defective Vision, Inflammation, etc., etc., without Operation or Pain. The remedy can be applied by the patient, and is simple, safe and sure in its effects, strengthening the muscles and nerves of the eye, removing pain almost instantaneously. It is a marvelous discovery and a blessing to the sufferer.

For further particulars address with stamped envelope, R. J. LA GRANGE, M. D., 215 Powell St., fourth door from Geary, San Francisco, Cal.
Office Hours, 11 till 3.

It is said that the Spring bonnet this year will eclipse that of all previous seasons. It generally does go to the head.

If not above being taught by a man, take this good advice. Try Dobbins' Electric Soap next Monday. It won't cost much, and you will then know for yourself just how good it is. Be sure to get no imitation. There are lots of them.

In Southern Latitude—O'Rorke—Have you got the change for $5? O'Brien—Sure. O'Rorke—Say, lend me $2, will you?

FREE CONSULTATION

DOCTOR SWEANY,
MEDICAL AND SURGICAL OFFICES,
737 MARKET STREET,
Opp. "Examiner" Office, San Francisco, Cal

For the prompt cure of all Chronic and Private Affections, Diseases of Manhood, Diseases of Women, etc., Sexual and Seminal Weakness and Nervous Affections of long standing which may have resisted all other treatment, cured quickly by scientific and modern treatment.

THOSE LIVING AWAY FROM THE CITY SHOULD WRITE AT ONCE.

Beware of persons who may speak to you on the streets and ask you to go to any other doctor, for they are hired by disreputable doctors to ensnare you in their dens.

DR. F. L. SWEANY, formerly of Philadelphia, Pa., and now so well and favorably known as the most successful Specialist on the Pacific Coast, desires to thank the public for their confidence bestowed upon him in the past and assure the afflicted generally who may call on him for medical aid that they may be sure of the most skillful and scientific treatment and be cured in the quickest possible time in the most satisfactory manner.

No cases published or exposed. Every patient's name kept strictly confidential. All references any one may desire furnished privately at my offices. I stand on my merit!

Patients who consult me are not turned over to an amateur hired substitute, as in the case of many high sounding dispensaries or institutes, but receive my own personal care and attention. Consultation always free, and the poor I treat free of charge.

DISEASES OF MANHOOD. Young Men suffering from nervous debility, from any cause whatsoever, especially from youthful errors and indiscretions, producing dizziness, loss of memory, vitality and energy, emissions, tired discontented feeling, indigestion, palpitation of heart, urinary troubles and many other symptoms not necessary to mention here, should no longer delay in seeking proper relief. Your trouble may be in its first stage. Remember it is approaching the last, and if you continue to neglect it, the time must come when you will be past human aid. I guarantee to restore all such cases in a very short time to perfect health and enjoyment of life.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN. There are many who are suffering from weak backs, frequent urination and sediment in urine, accompanied by loss of vigor and sexual power and an impairment of the general health. Many die of this difficulty ignorant of the cause, which is the second stage of seminal weakness. I guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases and a permanent restoration of the genito-urinary organs.

Blood, Skin and all Private Diseases positively cured in the shortest possible time without mercury or injurious drugs.

RUPTURE.

Piles, Fistula, Varicocele, Hydrocele and all Swellings and Tenderness quickly cured without pain or detention from business.

LADIES

Who may be suffering from any of the distressing ailments peculiar to your sex such as persistent headaches, painful menstruations displacements, etc., do not give up in despair, even if you have heretofore met with repeated failures in seeking relief. I am happy to state that I have cured hundreds of cases after other physicians had pronounced them hopeless.

Charges moderate and within the reach of all.

Patients living away from the city, who cannot conveniently call, may describe their troubles by letter and have medicines sent to them, free from observation, to any part of the country.

Office Hours—From 10 A. M. to 12 M.; 2 to 5, 7 to 8 P. M.; Sundays from 10 to 12 only.

Address,
DR. F. L. SWEANY,
737 Market Street, Opp. "Examiner" Office,
San Francisco, Cal.

BEBEE;

or,

TWO LITTLE WOODEN SHOES.

By "OUIDA."

But to her it was so new.

She followed him as a blind child a man that guides her through a garden and reads her a wonder tale.

He was good to her, that was all she knew. When he touched her ever so lightly she felt a happiness so perfect, and yet so unintelligible, that she could have wished to die in it.

And in her humility and her ignorance she wondered always how he—so great, so wise, so beautiful—could have thought it ever worth his while to leave the paradise of Rubes' land to wait with her under her little rush thatched roof, and bring her here to see the green leaves and the living things of the forest.

As they went a man was going under the trees with a load of wood upon his back. Bebee gave a little cry of recognition.

"Oh, look, that is Jeannot! How he will wonder to see me here!"

Flamen drew her a little downward, so that the forester passed onward without perceiving them.

"Why do you do that?" said Bebee. "Shall I not speak to him?"

"Why? To have all your neighbors chatter of your feast in the forest? It is not worth while."

"Ah, but I always tell them everything," said Bebee, whose imagination had been already busy with the wonders that she would unfold to Mere Krebs and the Varnhart children.

"Then you will see but little of me, my dear. Learn to be silent, Bebee. It is a woman's first duty, though her hardest."

"Is it?"

She did not speak for some time. She could not imagine a state of things in which she would not narrate the little daily miracles of her life to the good old garrulous women and the little open mouthed romps. And yet—she lifted her eyes to his.

"I am glad you have told me that," she said. "Though indeed, I do not see why one should not say what one does, yet—somehow—I do not like to talk about you. It is like the pictures in the galleries, and the music in the cathedral, and the great still evenings, when the fields are all silent, and it is as if Christ walked abroad in them; I do not know how to talk of those things to the others—only to you—and I do not like to talk about you to them—do you not know?"

"Yes, I know. But what affinity have I, Bebee, to your thoughts of your God walking in his corn fields?"

Bebee's eyes glanced down through the green aisle of the forests, with the musing seriousness in them that was like the child angels of Botticelli's dreams.

"I cannot tell you very well. But when I am in the fields at evening and think of Christ, I feel so happy, and of such good will to all the rest, and I seem to see heaven quite plain through the beautiful gray air where the stars are—and so I feel when I am with you—that is all. Only"——

"Only what?"

"Only in those evenings, when I was all alone, heaven seemed up there, where the stars are, and I longed for wings; but now, it is here—and I would only shut my wings if I had them, and not stir."

He looked at her, and took her hands and kissed them—but reverently—as a believer may kiss a shrine. In that moment to Flamen she was sacred; in that moment he could no more have hurt her with passion than he could have hurt her with a blow.

It was an emotion with him, and did not endure. But while it lasted it was true.

CHAPTER XVI.

Then he took her to dine at one of the wooden cafes under the trees. There was a little sheet of water in front of it, and a gay garden around. There was a balcony and a wooden stairway; there were long trellised arbors, and little white tables, and great rose bushes, like her own at home. They had an arbor all to themselves; a cool sweet smelling bower of green, with a glimpse of scarlet from the flowers of some twisting beans.

They had a meal, the like of which she had never seen; such a huge melon in the center of it, and curious wines, and coffee or cream in silver pots, or what looked like silver to her—"just like the altar vases in the church," she said to herself.

"If only the Varnhart children were here!" she cried; but he did not echo the wish.

It was just sunset. There was a golden glow on the little bit of water. On the other side of the garden some one was playing a guitar. Under a lime tree some girls were swinging, crying Higher! higher! at each toss.

In a longer avenue of trellised green, at a long table, there was a noisy party of students and girls of the city; their laughter was mellowed by distance as it came over the breadth of the garden, and they sang, with fresh, shrill Flemish voices, songs from an opera bouffe of La Monnaie.

It was all pretty, and gay, and pleasant.

There was everywhere about an air of light hearted enjoyment. Bebee sat with a wondering look in her wide opened eyes, and all the natural instincts of her youth, that were like curled up fruit buds in her, unclosed softly to the light of joy.

"Is life always like this in your Rubes' land?" she asked him; that vague, far away country of which she never asked him anything more definite, and which yet was so clear before her fancy.

"Yes," he made answer to her. "Only—instead of those leaves, flowers and pomegranates; and in lieu of that tinkling guitar, a voice whose notes are esteemed like king's jewels; and in place of those little green arbors, great white palaces, cool and still, with ilex woods and orange groves and sapphire seas beyond them. Would you like to come there, Bebee?—and wear laces such as you weave, and hear singing and laughter all night long, and never work any more in the mold of the garden, or spin any more at that tiresome wheel, or go any more out in the wind, and the rain, and the winter mud to the market."

Bebee listened, leaning her round elbows on the table, and her warm cheeks on her hands, as a child gravely listens to a fairy story. But the sumptuous picture, and the sensuous phrase he had chosen, passed by her."

It is of no use to tempt the little chaffinch of the woods with a ruby instead of a cherry. The bird is made to feed on the brown berries, on the morning dews, on the scarlet hips of roses and the blossoms of the wind tossed pear boughs; the gem, though it be a monarch's, will only strike hard and tasteless on its beak.

"I would like to see it all," said Bebee, musingly, trying to follow out her thoughts. "But as for the garden work and the spinning—that I do not want to leave, because I have done it all my life, and I do not think I should care to wear lace—it would tear very soon one would be afraid to run; and do you see I know how it is made—all that lace. I know how blind the eyes get over it, and how the hearts ache; I know how the old women starve, and the little children cry; I know that there is not a sprig of it that is not stitched with pain; the great ladies do not think, I dare say, because they have never worked at it or watched the others, but I have. And so, you see, I think if I wore it I should feel sad, and if a nail caught on it I should feel as if it were tearing the flesh of my friends. Perhaps I say it badly—but that is what I feel."

"You do not say it badly—you speak well, for you speak from the heart," he answered her, and felt a tinge of shame that he had tempted her with the gold and purple of a baser world than any that she knew.

"And yet you want to see new lands!" he pursued. "What is it you want to see there?"

"Ah, quite other things than these," cried Bebee, still leaning her cheeks on her hands. "That dancing and singing is very pretty and merry, but it is just as good when old Claude fiddles and the children skip. This wine, you tell me, is something very great—but fresh milk is much nicer, I think. It is not these kind of things I want—I want to know all about the people who lived before us; I want to know what the stars are and what the wind is; I want to know where the lark goes when you lose him out of sight against the sun; I want to know how the old artists got to see God, that they could paint him and all his angels as they have done; I want to know how the voices got into the bells, and how they can make one's heart beat, hanging up there as they do, all among the jackdaws; I want to know what it is when I walk in the fields in the morning, and it is all gray and soft and still, and the corn crake cries in the wheat, and the little mice run home to their holes, that makes me so glad and yet so sorrowful, as if I were so very near God, and yet so all alone, and such a little thing; because you see the mouse she has her hole, and the crake her own people, but I"——

Her voice faltered a little and stopped; she had never before thought out into words her own loneliness; from the long green arbor the voices of the girls and the students sang:

"Ah! le doux son d'un baiser tendre!"

Flamen was silent. The poet in him—and in an artist there is always more or less of the poet—kept him back from ridicule, nay, moved him to pity and respect.

They were absurdly simple words no doubt, had little wisdom in them, and were quite childish in their utterance, and yet they moved him curiously as a man very base and callous may at times be moved by the look in a dying deer's eyes, or by the sound of a song that some lost love once sang.

He rose and drew her hands away, and took her small face between his own hands instead.

"Poor little Bebee!" he said gently, looking down on her with a breath that was almost a sigh. "Poor little Bebee!—to envy the corn crake and the mouse!"

She was a little startled; her cheeks grew very warm under his touch, but her eyes looked still into his without fear.

He stooped and touched her forehead with his lips, gently and without passion, almost reverently; she grew rose hued as the bright bean flowers, up to the light gold ripples of her hair; she trembled a little and drew back, but she was not alarmed nor yet ashamed; she was too simple of heart to feel the fear that is born of passion and of consciousness.

It was as Jeannot kissed his sister Marie, who was 15 years old and sold milk for the Krebs people in the villages with a little green cart and a yellow dog—no more.

And yet the sunny arbor leaves and the glimpse of the blue sky swam around her indistinctly, and the sounds of the guitar grew dull upon her ear, and were lost as in a rushing bliss of water, because of the great sudden, unintelligible happiness that seemed to bear her little life away on it as a sea wave bears a young child off its feet.

"You do not feel alone now, Bebee?" he whispered to her.

"No!" she answered him softly under her breath, and sat still, while all her body quivered like a leaf.

No; how could she ever be alone now that this sweet, soft, unutterable touch would always be in memory upon her; how could she wish ever again now to be the corn crake in the summer corn or the gray mouse in the hedge of hawthorn?

At that moment a student went by past the entrance of the arbor; he had a sash round his loins and a paper feather in his cap; he was playing a fife and dancing; he glanced in as he went.

"It is time to go home, Bebee," said Flamen.

CHAPTER XVII.

So it came to pass that Bebee's day in the big forest came and went as simply almost as any day that she had played away with the Varnhart children under the beech shadows of Cambre woods.

And when he took her to her hut at sunset before the pilgrims had returned there was a great bewildered tumult of happiness in her heart, but there was no memory with her that prevented her from looking at the shrine in the wall as she passed it, and saying with a quick gesture of the cross on brow and bosom:

"Ah, dear Holy Mother—how good you have been! and I am back again, you see, and I will work harder than ever because of all this joy that you have given me."

And she took another moss rose and changed it for that of the morning, which was faded, and said to Flamen:

"Look—she sends you this. Now do you know what I mean? One is more content when she is content!"

He did not answer, but he held her hands against him a moment as they fastened in the rosebud.

"Not a word to the pilgrims, Bebee—you remember?"

"Yes, I will remember. I do not tell them every time I pray—it will be like being silent about that—it will be no more wrong than that."

But there was a touch of anxiety in the words; she was not quite certain; she wanted to be reassured. Instinct moved her not to speak of him; but habit made it seem wrong to her to have any secret from the people who had been about her from her birth.

He did not reassure her, her anxiety was pretty to watch, and he left the trouble in her heart, like a bee in the chalice of a lily. Besides, the little wicket gate was between them, he was musing whether he would push it open once more.

Her fate was in the balance, though she did not dream it; he had dealt with her tenderly, honestly, sacredly all that day—almost as much so as stupid Jeannot could have done. He had been touched by her trust in him, and by the unconscious beauty of her fancies, into a mood that was unlike all his life and habits. But after all, he said to himself——

After all!——

Where he stood in the golden evening he saw the rosy curled mouth, the soft troubled eyes, the little brown hands that still tried to fasten the rosebud, the young peach like skin where the wind stirred the bodice, she was only a little Flemish peasant, this poor little Bebee, a little thing of the fields and the streets, for all the dreams of God that abode with her. After all—soon or late—the end would be always the same. What matter!

She would weep a little to-morrow, and she would not kneel any more at the shrine in the garden wall, and then—and then—she would stay here and marry the good boor Jeannot, just the same after awhile, or drift away after him to Paris, and leave her two little wooden shoes, and her visions of Christ in the fields at evening, behind her forevermore, and do as all the others did, and take not only silken stockings but the Cinderella slipper that is called Gold, which brings all other good things in its train; what matter!

He had meant this from the first, because she was so pretty, and those little wooden sabots ran so lithely over the stones; though he was not in love with her, but only idly stretched his hand for her as a child by instinct stretches to a fruit that hangs in the sun a little rosier and a little nearer than the rest.

What matter—he said to himself—she loved him, poor little soul, though she did not know it—and there would always be Jeannot glad enough of a handful of bright French gold.

He pushed the gate gently against her, her hands fastened the rosebud and drew open the latch themselves.

"Will you come in a little?" she said, with the happy light in her face. "You must not stay long, because the flowers must be watered, and then there are Annemie's patterns—they must be done or she will have no money and so no food—but if you would come in for a little! And see—if you wait a minute I will show you the roses that I shall put to-morrow the first thing, and take down to St. Guido to Our Lady's altar in thank offering for today. I should like you to choose them—you yourself—and if you would just touch them I should feel as if you gave them to her too. Will you?"

She spoke with the pretty outspoken frankness of her habitual speech, just tempered and broken with the happy, timid hesitation, the curious sense at once of closer nearness and of greater distance, that had come on her since he had kissed her among the bright bean flowers.

He turned from her quickly.

"No, dear—no. Gather your roses alone, Bebee—if I touch them their leaves will fall."

Then, with a hurriedly backward glance down the dusky lane to see that none were looking, he bent his head and kissed her again quickly and with a sort of shame, and swung the gate behind him and went away through the boughs and the shadows.

CHAPTER XVIII.

On a sudden impulse Flamen, going through the woodland shadows to the city, paused and turned back; all his impulses were quick, and swayed him now hither, now thither, in many contrary ways.

He knew that the hour was come—that he must leave her and spare her, as to himself he phrased it, or teach her the love words that the daisies whisper to women.

And why not?—any way she would marry Jeannot.

He, half way to the town, walked back again and paused a moment at the gate; an emotion, half pitiful, half cynical, stirred in him.

Anyway, he would leave her in a few days; Paris had again opened her arms to him; his old life awaited him; women, who claimed him by imperious, amorous demands, reproached him; and, after all, this day he had got the Gretchen of his ideal, a great picture for the future of his fame.

As he would leave her any way so soon, he would leave her unscathed—poor little field flower—he could never take it with him to blossom or wither in Paris.

His world would laugh too utterly if he made for himself a mistress out of a little Fleming in two wooden shoes. Besides——

Besides, something, that was half weak and half noble, moved him not to lead this child, in her trust and her ignorance, into ways that, when she awakened from her trance, would seem to her shameful and full of sorrow. For he knew that Bebee was not as others are.

He turned back and knocked at the hut door and opened it.

Bebee was just beginning to undress herself; she had taken off her white kerchief and her wooden shoes; her pretty shoulders and her little neck shone white in the moon; her feet were bare on the mud floor.

She started with a cry and threw the handkerchief again on her shoulders, but there was no fear of him; only the unconscious instinct of her girlhood.

He thought for a moment that he would not go away until the morrow——

"Did you want me?" said Bebee softly, with happy eyes of surprise and yet a little startled, fearing some evil might have happened to him that he should have returned thus.

"No; I did not want you, dear," he said gently; no—he did not want her, poor little soul, she wanted him, but he—there were so many of these things in his life, and he liked her too well to love her.

"No, dear, I did not want you," said Flamen, drawing her arms about him, and feeling her flutter like a little bird, while the moonlight came in through the green leaves and fell in fanciful patterns on the floor. "But I came to say—you have had one happy day, wholly happy, have you not, poor little Bebee?"

"Ah, yes!" she sighed rather than said the answer in her wondrous gladness; drawn there close to him, with the softness of his lips upon her. Could he have come back only to ask that?

"Well, that is something. You will remember it always, Bebee!" he murmured in his unconscious cruelty. "I did not wish to spoil your cloudless pleasure, dear—for you care for me a little, do you not?—so I came back to tell you only now that I go away for a little while to-morrow."

"Go away!"

She trembled in his arms and turned cold as ice; a great terror and darkness fell upon her; she had never thought that he would ever go away. He caressed her, and played with her as a boy may with a bird before he wrings its neck.

"You will come back!"

He kissed her—"Surely."

"To-morrow?"

"Nay—not so soon."

"In a week?"

"Hardly."

"In a month, then?"

"Perhaps."

"Before winter, anyway?"

He looked aside from the beseeching, tearful, candid eyes, and kissed her hair and her throat, and said, "Yes, dear—beyond a doubt."

She clung to him, crying silently—he wished that women would not weep.

"Come, Bebee, listen," he said, coaxingly, thinking to break the bitterness to her "This is not wise and it gives me pain. There is so much for you to do. You know so little. There is so much to learn. I will leave you many books, and you must grow quite learned in my absence. The Virgin is all very well in her way, but she cannot teach us much, poor lady, for her kingdom is called Ignorance. You must teach yourself. I leave you that to do. The days will go by quickly if you are laborious and patient. Do you love me, little one?"

For an answer she kissed his hand.

"You are a busy little Bebee always," he said, with his lips caressing her soft, brown arms that were round his neck. "But you must be busier than ever while I am gone. So you will forget. No, no, I do not mean that; I mean so the time will pass quickest. And I shall finish your picture, Bebee, and all Paris will see you, and the great ladies will envy the little girl with her two wooden shoes. Ah! that does not please you—you care for none of these vanities? No. Poor little Bebee, why did God make you, or Chance breathe life into you? You are so far away from us all. It was cruel. What harm has your poor, little soul ever done that, pure as a flower, it should have been sent to the hell of this world?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A church investigation with closed doors involving very serious charges against Rev. S. J. Fleming, pastor of the Methodist Church at Monte Vista, began at the Simpson Tabernacle in Los Angeles before a committee of ministers selected by the presiding elder of the district. There is a charge of embezzling $6,000 in connection with Chautauqua work at Redondo. Fleming is a brilliant young man and has many friends.

At the Coroner's investigation into the death of Protzman, the Christian scientist victim, at Des Moine, Iowa, a few days ago, it was developed that the attendants fed the patient, while delirious with typhoid fever, large pieces of sausage, raw turnips, crab apples, sauerkraut and pigs' feet.

A jury in a court at Mexico, Mo., brought in such an outrageous verdict that the Judge dismissed them in this humiliating fashion: "It is the sentence of this Court that the Sheriff conduct you to the rear door of the Court House and allow you to depart, as your services will not be again required during my term of office."

THE REASON WHY.

The reason why the PACIFIC BANK, of San Francisco, has weathered the storms which have wrecked many sister institutions during the past quarter of a century, can only be attributed to the prudent and careful policy, and its fixed principle, never to engage in speculative or questionable transactions.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding, and Itching Piles when all other Ointments have failed. It absorbs the tumors, allays the itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and Itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted. Sold by Druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price, 50c. and $1.00 per box. WILLIAMS M'F'G CO., Props., Cleveland, O.

A chief clerk in Government office in Washington has resigned because he was insulted. It is believed that some one asked him to work.

BETTER THAN QUININE.

Quinine is not only an expensive medicine, it is a harmful one if taken too freely and too often. Of course the world insists on taking great quantities of it for fever and ague. Some persons think nothing else will cure fever and ague. We say positively, and testimonials back us up, that BRANDRETH'S PILLS have often cured bad cases of fever and ague when quinine has failed. BRANDRETH'S PILLS break up the worst attack.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS are purely vegetable, absolutely harmless, and safe to take at any time.

Sold in every drug and medicine store, either plain or sugar coated.

Words Not Deeds—Fair Client—And is this what you call a deed? Real Estate Lawyer—Yes. Why? Fair Client—It looks more like words.

HOW'S THIS!

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligation made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Price 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Without a Scent—"Why do they call De Tompkyns the 'chrysanthemum?'" "Because he finds favor with society and yet hasn't got a cent."

Dr. Wallace Ely has removed his offices to 215 Powell St., San Francisco, Cal., where he continues to give special attention to Kidneys, Bladder, Prostate Gland and all diseases arising therefrom. Diabetes and Bright's Disease treated according to the latest approved method. Most cases can be treated successfully by correspondence. Consultations daily from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. WALLACE ELY, M. D., 215 Powell St., 4 doors from Geary St., San Francisco, Cal.

Experience has established the fact that lawsuits are more wearing on a man than any other.

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Porterfield & Losey, 838 Market street, San Francisco.

The Colossus of Rhodes marked a great stride in art.

Sufferers from Coughs, Sore Throat, etc., should try "Brown's Bronchial Troches."

Or Denise—He—The Bostonians are a brave people; they never say die. She—Don't they? He—No; they say decease.

Beware of imitations of the genuine Seal of North Carolina Plug Cut Tobacco.

Use Enameline Stove Polish; no dust, no smell.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.

No other baking powder does such work.

HAZELTON BROS., AND HEMME & LONG PIANOS
Sold on Easy Installments. Also dealer in Sheet Music and Musical Merchandise. CHAS. S. EATON, General Agent, 735 Market St., S. F., Cal. Send for Catalogues of Pianos and Sheet Music.

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation permanently. For sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all druggists.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

"August Flower"

How does he feel?—He feels cranky, and is constantly experimenting, dieting himself, adopting strange notions, and changing the cooking, the dishes, the hours, and manner of his eating—August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?—He feels at times a gnawing, voracious, insatiable appetite, wholly unaccountable, unnatural and unhealthy.—August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?—He feels no desire to go to the table and a grumbling, fault-finding, over-nicety about what is set before him when he is there—August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?—He feels after a spell of this abnormal appetite an utter abhorrence, loathing, and detestation of food; as if a mouthful would kill him—August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?—He has irregular bowels and peculiar stools—August Flower the Remedy.

THE SMOKER
Will have no other Tobacco
Who once tries
'SEAL OF NORTH CAROLINA'
Plug Cut.
This is the secret of its
Immense sale.

$5.00 PER DAY easily made by addressing J. P. Parker, 410 California St., San Francisco, Cal.

BEST TREE WASH.
Greenbank Insecticide, powdered Caustic Soda, etc.
BEST SHEEP WASH.
Calvert's Carbolic. Prices reduced. T. W. JACKSON & CO., Sole Agents, 104 Market St., S. F.

Westcott & Co.,
SEEDSMEN
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
ALFALFA AND GRASS SEED.
Send for Price List and Calender.

BEE KEEPERS' GUIDE
(240 pages). A complete treatise on the Management of Bees, and contains many valuable receipes. Sent by mail, bound in cloth 50 cts; paper 35 cts.
H. M. CAMERON,
479 9th Street, : : : Oakland, Cal.
N. B.—Keep this ad. for future reference, and send for Circular.

USE NEW WELLINGTON COAL.

A State of Siege

How many people there are who regard the coming of winter as a constant state of siege. It seems as if the elements sat down outside the walls of health and now and again, led by the north wind and his attendant blasts, broke over the ramparts, spreading colds, pneumonia and death. Who knows when the next storm may come and what its effects upon your constitution may be? The fortifications of health must be made strong. SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda will aid you to hold out against Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases, until the siege is raised. It prevents wasting in children. Palatable as Milk.

SPECIAL.—Scott's Emulsion is non-secret, and is prescribed by the Medical Profession all over the world, because its ingredients are scientifically combined in such a manner as to greatly increase their remedial value.

CAUTION.—Scott's Emulsion is put up in salmon-colored wrappers. Be sure and get the genuine. Prepared only by Scott & Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, New York. Sold by all Druggists.

R. H. McDonald PRES'T. F. V. McDonald, CASHIER.
ESTABLISHED 1863.
Oldest Chartered Bank on the Pacific Coast.
PACIFIC BANK
Capital Stock $1,000,000.00.
Surplus $ 800,000.00.
Av. Resources, $4,704,700.00
Yearly Volume of Business, $230,000,000.00
R. H. McDONALD, Prest.
San Francisco, California, Jan'y 1, 1891.

Deposits Received from $1 Upwards.
Money Saved is Money Earned.
PEOPLE'S HOME SAVINGS BANK
Deposit in a Good Savings Bank.
806 Market St., cor. 4th St. IN FLOOD BUILDING
San Francisco, California.
Guarantee Capital, $1,000,000
Paid up in Cash $323,333.33
Subject to Call 666,666.67
Interest per annum (5.52% on TERM Deposits for last three terms: (4.66% on ORDINARY Deposits
B. O. Carr, Manager and Sec'y. Columbus Waterhouse, President
San Francisco, California, Jan'y 1, 1891.

Cheaper than Windmills
Always ready. No Boiler, No Fire, No Smoke. No Steam. No Ashes. No Engineer. No Danger.
Electric Vapor Engine Co.
218 CALIFORNIA ST.,
San Francisco, - California.

BROOKLYN HOTEL Bush St., bet. Montgomery & Sansome, S. F.; conducted on both the European and American plan. This Hotel is under the management of Charles Montgomery, and is the best Family and Business Men's Hotel in San Francisco. Home comforts, cuisine unexcelled, first-class service, highest standard of respectability guaranteed. Board and room, per day, $1.25 to $2.00; single room, 50 cts. to $1.00 per night. Free coach to and from the Hotel.

STEINWAY, Gabler and Pease Pianos
Meaning the BEST PIANO MADE, and the favorite cheaper Pianos; all Musical Instruments; Bands Supplied; large stock of Sheet Music. STEINWAY HALL, 206 & 208 Post Street, MATTHIAS GRAY CO. Call and see our new rooms and new stock.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St. New York.

VASELINE.
FOR ONE DOLLAR sent us by mail, we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all the following articles carefully packed in a neat box:

One two-ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline	10 cts.
One two-ounce bottle Vaseline Pomade	15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream	15 "
One cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, scented	25 "
One two-ounce bottle of White Vaseline	25 "
	$1.10

Or for stamps any single article at the price named. If you have occasion to use Vaseline in any form be careful to accept only genuine goods put up by us in original packages. A great many druggists are trying to persuade buyers to take VASELINE put up by them. Never yield to such persuasion, as the article is an imitation without value, and will not give you the result you expect. A bottle of Blue Seal Vaseline is sold by all druggists at ten cents.
Chesebrough M'f'g. Co., 24 State St., New York.

INDISPENSIBLE TO HOUSEKEEPERS. Ask Your Dealer for it. Write for Circular. AMERICAN OIL CO., Agts. 11 to 15 Main St., San Francisco, California.

ASK SMITH'S 418 FRONT ST. CASH STORE to send you their catalogue of cash prices to consumers the HOME CIRCLE. Address as above. Mention this paper.

MONEY Can be made easy by raising Chickens. Our large 32-page Illustrated Catalogue tells all about INCUBATORS

Brooders, what to feed chickens, in fact all the secrets of the chicken business. If you only keep half a dozen hens you need this book. It gives more information than many of the books sold at 25 cents. We send it free on receipt of 4 cents in stamps to pay postage.
PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal.

BIG G Cures in 1 to 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Prepared only by THE EVANS CHEMICAL CO. CINCINNATI, O. U. S. A. Big G is the acknowledged leading remedy for all the unnatural discharges and private diseases of men. A certain cure for the debilitating weakness peculiar to women. I prescribe it and feel safe in recommending it to all sufferers. A. J. STONER, M. D., DECATUR, ILL. Sold by Druggists. PRICE $1.00.

"THE SPECIFIC A NO. 1."
YOUNG MEN! Cures all unnatural discharges of men, no matter of how long standing. Prevents stricture, it being an internal remedy. Cures when everything else has failed. Price, $3.00. Circular on application. Sold by Druggists or sent on receipt of price by The A. Schoenheit Medicine Co., San Jose, Cal.

FOR MEN ONLY!
VIGOR AND STRENGTH For LOST or FAILING MANHOOD, General and NERVOUS DEBILITY; Weakness of Body and Mind, Effects of Errors or Excesses in Old or Young, Robust, Noble MANHOOD fully Restored. How to enlarge and Strengthen WEAK, UNDEVELOPED ORGANS or PARTS OF BODY. Absolutely unfailing HOME TREATMENT—Benefits in a day. Men testify from 50 States, and Foreign Countries. Write them. Descriptive Book, explanation and proofs sealed (sealed) free. Address ERIE MEDICAL CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

CAST YOUR EYE OVER THIS.
SICK PEOPLE write for free illustrated family paper on surgical operations tumors, fistula, piles, varicocele, hydrocele; braces, appliances for deformities, female complaints; also, confidential book for men, explaining why thousands cannot get cured

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor.

Independence, Cal.,

FRIDAY, APRIL 24, 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXII. NO. 45. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., APRIL 24, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1069.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.25
Three Months	1.50
One Month	50
Single Copies

HELPING OUT NATURE.

Modern Medical Science stops at Nothing.

PATCHING UP A TOTAL WRECK.

All Parts of the Body Supplied except Vital Organs.

When one of Noah's grandchildren lost a finger in a haycutter or an arm in a buzzsaw, or had an eye put out or a leg cut off, or lost his hair or teeth, he was forced to go without the item thus deducted from his sum total for the rest of his mortal life. It is hard to credit the amount of patching up that may now be accomplished by the advanced processes and inventions of these days.

Suppose that a man has lost all four limbs, his hair, his eyes, his nose, all his teeth and a portion of his palate, and that he has a fractured skull and tubercles on his lungs. The gentleman may also be covered with the pits of an early case of smallpox and may have been presented at his birth with a large mole on his cheek.

First, of course, he will have his head trepanned by some skillful surgeon, and when he has had the tubercles removed from his lungs by a specialist in pulmonary diseases and has recovered from the exhausting effects of these two operations he will be in a proper state to have his eyes attended to. A rabbit is selected whose optics are of a color becoming to the subject, and one of them is transplanted by means of transference. Of course he could hardly expect to have both eyes successfully supplied in this way, but supposing he has good luck and one grows satisfactorily, the other socket, for the sake of beauty and symmetry, will be filled by one of the glass eyes now manufactured to such perfection.

GETTING LIMBS, ETC.

His next proceeding will be to call in a maker of artificial limbs and be measured for a full suit of arms and legs.

If the patient is fortunate enough to have one arm down to the wrist, he will be supplied with a hand with which he can manage to write a little and feed himself quite perfectly. His lower limbs will convey him from place to place, not very gracefully, to be sure, but still as well as many merely lame legs convey their owners, and which, sitting or resting, will present, perhaps, a more symmetrical appearance than the originals they have succeeded.

The once total wreck is still bald, toothless and disfigured with pockmarks and a mole. An artificial set of teeth, quite as good as the original article and incapable of aching, will be supplied by any good dentist, and the missing portion of the palate also will be furnished. Then the hair would naturally be his next thought.

He may have hair or portions of scalp transplanted to the uncovered cranium. But this is a long and painful process, so we will suppose that the subject contents himself with a wig. Fortunately in these days wigs are made which are entirely deceptive, and so far as appearance goes look quite as well as nature's own production. The writer of these lines has shared a room with the wearer of such a wig for several days and was not aware that his companion's Hyperion locks were not the proper growth of the head they adorned until in a burst of confidence the truth was revealed.

HOW THE VICTIM MAY APPEAR.

The beauty seeker next goes to that artist of recent growth, the "dermatologist," who first destroys his mole by "electrosis" and then gets to work on the pockmarks. These are smoothed by a disintegrating process, which loosens up the fibrous structure of the scars and smooths down the whole face by a sort of planing method.

He is still disfigured by the want of a nose, certainly a most important lack in a human countenance. This feature may now be supplied by surgery by transplanting a fold of flesh from some living arm, which is held near the face to be repaired until a portion of the fold has grown fast in its new situation, and then is wholly separated from the arm and forms a fairly satisfactory nasal appendage.

Here the former human wreck may walk about the streets or call upon his feminine acquaintances quite capable of appreciating their charms, for he has one available eye. He may smile also, for his molars and incisors are now plentiful and of pearly whiteness, and though his nose may be a trifle pudding-like and lack Grecian symmetry of line, his delicate complexion and luxuriant hair largely compensate for this trifling defect.

He will never, of course, be a satisfactory partner in the waltz, but his dignified repose and symmetrical limbs must make him an ornament to the reception and conversazione.

Thus while the vital organs remain within the trunk and the gray matter of the brain is intact a man need not despair, and surgeons believe that we may soon expect to see the ill furnished cranium supplied with such qualities as it lacks, and poets, painters, inventors and philosophers manufactured out of the raw material of the idiot ward and the stage door contingent.—New York World.

A Hard Case.

A Fort street car which was traveling the northerly end of its route was hailed by a bareheaded and excited housewife, who said to the conductor as the car came to a stop.

"Oh, sir, you and the driver and all the passengers come into my house as quick as you can!"

"What's the matter?"

"It's perfectly awful, sir. I opened the stair door and a mouse ran into the sitting room, and he's there yet. That's my daughter crying in the back yard, and that's the poor baby yelling in the kitchen, and bring your revolver and a club and"——

The conductor rang two bells and the car rolled on.—Detroit Free Press.

AWAKE WHEN NEEDED.

Lively Work by a Stupid Looking Man When Every Second Counted.

We had come down from a Virginia watering place in the mountains to a small railroad station on the banks of Cheat river. The tracks could be seen for about half a mile either way, and the roadbed ran within six feet of the bank. There was nothing to see but a plain building, a water tank and a man seated on a box with his back to the building and sound asleep. We sat down on a rock on the opposite side of the track for a smoke, and had been quiet for two or three minutes when the sleeping man suddenly sprang to his feet with a yell.

We hadn't heard the slightest noise to alarm him, neither had any of us given him a start, but as he sprang down the track and looked up and down we heard that queer noise which the rails give out when the train is approaching.

There was a switch there running alongside the platform, but the rusty rails showed that it was seldom used. The lever to throw it was a hundred feet above us. At the lower end a tie was placed across the rails.

As we looked up the track we saw two runaway freight cars coming down at a wild pace. As we looked down the track we saw the day express coming around a curve. We did not stir a foot, but the man who had slept in the sun ran to the bar and threw it over. Then he ran to the end of the switch and slewed the tie around diagonally. He did not have time to move thirty feet before the cars ran upon the switch with an awful clatter, traveled its length in two seconds, and as the wheels struck the tie the cars toppled over to the left and made one long jump into the river, splashing water fifty feet high as they struck. They were floating away as the express pulled in.

"What's the matter?" asked the conductor.

"Oh, nothing; I just switched those cars into the river," replied the man.

Never a passenger on that train knew what had happened. The man's quick wit had saved an awful calamity, yet he was the stupidest looking man you ever saw holding a position.—Detroit Free Press.

The Deadly Car Strap.

Danger, danger everywhere, and no one knows how much. It seems as though the most ordinary actions of our lives were fraught with peril. The latest thing that the ignorant public must be warned against is the innocent looking street car strap. It is filled with very venom. It is a spreader of disease, a means of contagion. One of our most eminent local scientists has said so.

Here are his words: "I have been examining street car straps under the microscope lately, and I find them filled with thousands of bacteria that might easily spread disease. These straps are clutched daily by thousands of people, and it may be readily imagined that some of these people have easily transmitted skin diseases. I haven't any doubt that the street car strap is frequently the transmitter of such diseases. It therefore behooves street car passengers to be careful about seizing hold of these straps. I believe them to be excessively dangerous."

Who will not say that this is another reason for the street railroad company to put on more cars during the busy parts of the day, and thus do away with the necessity of balancing one's self in crowded cars by means of these same fatal straps?—Buffalo Express.

When Letters Weigh Most.

Not long ago I mailed several letters, with circulars inclosed, and put what I supposed was sufficient postage on. To my annoyance I was notified next morning that the whole batch was held for postage. I went round to the post-office, and was informed that each envelope and its contents weighed just enough to turn the scale, and that I must in consequence pay the extra postage. At my request one of the letters was weighed on the official scales, and instead of being over it turned out to be a fraction under weight.

But my triumph was short lived, for I was informed that the weight when mailed was what had to be charged on, and the letter weighed more the preceding night than then. The explanation as to the loss in weight was that the letter had been copied and mailed damp, subsequently giving off quite an appreciable weight by evaporation. Now I insist on letters being copied as early in the day as possible, and on every package being weighed in the office. I don't mind paying for dampness, but I hate to have valuable mail matter held on a mere technicality.—Interview in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Mixed Metaphor.

An exquisite figure of speech was used by a shining light in an impromptu address the other evening.

"You may think you can do it," he said, with an impressive gesture, referring to a certain line of policy, "but you will soon find you have an elephant that you will not be able to accomplish."

The remainder of the speech was lost in a burst of applause.—Nebraska State Journal.

Not Easily Discouraged.

De Dude (buying a cane)—I sa-ay, mah good man, this cane won't do. The handle is too big for mah mouth.

Dealer—It's the exact size worn by the Prince of Wales, sir.

De Dude—Aw! Wait a bit. I'll go to a surgeon's and see if I can have mah mouth stwetched.—Good News.

THE DYKES OF HOLLAND.

How the Dutch Protect their Land.

ONE OF THE WONDERS OF THE WORLD.

Patching a Leak with Straw Mats.—The Alarm Bell.

A certain zealous dame is said to have once attempted to sweep the ocean away with a broom. The Dutch have been wiser than this. They are slow and deliberate people. Desperation may use brooms, but deliberation prefers clay and solid masonry. So, slowly and deliberately, the dykes, those great hill-like walls of cement and stone, have risen to breast the buffeting waves. And the funny part of it is they are so skillfully slanted and paved on the outside with flat stones that the efforts of the thumping waves to beat them down only make them all the firmer!

These Holland dykes are among the wonders of the world. I cannot say for how many miles they stretch along the coast and throughout the interior; but you may be sure that wherever a dyke is necessary to keep back the encroaching waters there it is. Otherwise nothing would be there, at least nothing in the form of land; nothing but a fearful illustration of the principal law of hydrostatics: Water always seeks its level.

Sometimes the dikes, however carefully built, will "spring a leak," and if not attended to at once terrible results are sure to follow. In threatened places guards are stationed at intervals and a steady watch is kept up night and day. At the first signal of danger every Dutchman within hearing of the startling bell is ready to rush to the rescue. When the weak spot is discovered, what do you think is used to meet the emergency? What but straw—everywhere else considered the most helpless of all things in water! Yet straw, in the hands of the Dutch, has a will of its own. Woven into huge mats and securely pressed against the embankment, it defies even a rushing tide, eager to sweep over the country.

These dikes form almost the only perfectly dry land to be seen from the ocean side. They are high and wide, with fine carriage roads on top, sometimes lined with buildings and trees. Lying on one side of them, and nearly on a level with the edge, is the sea, lake, canal or river, as the case may be; on the other the flat fields stretching damply along at their base, so that cottage roofs sometimes are lower than the shining line of the water.

Frogs squatting on the shore can take quite a bird'seye view of the landscape, and little fish wriggle their tails higher than the tops of the willows near by. Horses look complacently down upon the bell towers, and men in skiffs and canal boats sometimes know when they are passing their friend Dirk's cottage only by seeing the smoke from its chimney, or perhaps by the cart wheel that he has perched upon the peak of its overhanging thatched roof, in the hope that some stork will build her nest there and so bring good luck.—Mary Mapes Dodge in St. Nicholas.

M. Coquelin's Real Snores.

He must feel, but he must guide and check his feelings as a skillful rider curbs and guides a fiery horse, for he has a double part to play; merely to feel himself is not enough; he has to make others feel, and this he cannot do without the exercise of restraint. Let me make use of an instance afforded me by M. Coquelin himself.

Once, he says, he was tired before he came on the stage, and falling sound asleep when feigning sleep, he snored real snores instead of feigned ones. The result was, he tells us, that he never snored so badly. Naturally so, since he had lost control of the steed of feeling by the fact of his sleeping, and so it ran away and carried him he knew not where; but had M. Coquelin at some time in his experience shed real tears, while at the same time in full possession of his waking faculties, and had he been able to guide those tears into the channel that his artistic sense told him to be the right one, then we should not have heard that the audience found those real tears less effective than tears wholly feigned and the product of intellect rather than of feeling.—Salvini in Century.

The Average Congressman Is Poor.

To the average congressman $5,000 a year is considerable money. I would not like to say that there are any gentlemen in congress who do not attach more importance to the honor of a seat in the national legislature than they do to the amount of salary they are paid for their services. Still, I have good reason for saying that there are more men in congress who manage to save something out of their salaries than there are of those who practically never touch their allowances as congressmen.

There are several men now in the house who live during the session of congress upon the amounts that they receive as mileage and what they are allowed with which to purchase stationery. At home it does not cost them any ready money for their expenses, or if it does they are able to make sufficient to meet them. Consequently these congressmen are able to save the $10,000 they receive during their term of office.—John Quin in New York Telegram.

A Mastodon's Tooth.

Dr. H. Miles Cochrane, of Houlton, Me., has on exhibition at his dental rooms an extremely rare curiosity. It is the tooth of a mastodon, known as such, according to Dr. Cochrane, from the conical projections upon its surface, and showing it to belong to a vegetable eating animal akin to the elephant. It was discovered in the earth about five feet from the surface of the ground by a man engaged in excavating for a cellar to a house in Monticello. The tooth is about thirteen inches in circumference.—Kennebec Journal.

Stalked by a Panther.

Ralph Flynn, a rancher living at Wayne, on the Seattle, Lake Shore and Eastern railway, has had a dangerous encounter with a panther and narrowly escaped the claws of the beast.

Flynn started hunting early one morning, taking with him a Winchester rifle of the latest patent, which he had just bought and had not learned to handle with skill. He was looking principally for deer, and had gone about five miles through a deep thicket when he came suddenly upon the partially devoured carcass of a sheep, which had evidently fallen a prey to a panther. Remembering reports of sheep having been killed by wild animals in his neighborhood, Flynn hastened on, nerving himself for a tussle with a cougar or some equally fierce beast. With the assurance that his gun was prepared he cautiously eyed every nook as he passed, occasionally seeing fresh tracks of varmints.

Flynn traveled on about two miles in this manner without success, and gave up the chase on that line. He had just turned to retrace his steps when his eye caught what seemed to be a dog's head peering at him over a log. A second look proved to Flynn that it was a panther instead of a dog. Taking deliberate aim, Flynn rested his rifle against a tree and fired at the animal's head. The ball only stunned the brute, which, with a crazy leap, made toward Flynn. The latter's delay in reloading on account of the new patent nearly proved fatal to himself, as the panther was within twenty feet of him when he shot it dead between the eyes. The brute was between Flynn and the sheep's carcass, and had followed him by its keen scent for two miles.

It measured nine feet from tip to tip, and its hide is now a trophy highly prized by Flynn.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Love Laughs at Zero.

I blew across the Brooklyn bridge one night and wondered at my own temerity.

In those breezy spaces it was as cold as man's ingratitude. It seemed to me as if my spine were the tube of a thermometer, and that the pith and marrow thereof was a very frozen mercury. I marked time at the double quick, let me tell you, in an attempt to get away from my chills, and decided that aerial promenades were far more seasonable in June than in December.

In the dark recesses of the New York pier I beheld them sitting in a corner. She was very dear to him apparently, for he held her closer than a flapjack to an ungreased griddle, and I surmised that masculine propinquity was very much to her taste also from the way she cuddled and snuggled and rubbed her red lips against his mustaches. The wind curled and swirled around them, but did not appear to touch them, and they were so warm and comfortable in their corner that they almost seemed to radiate the heat, and I was tempted to stop and warm my hands at them.

"I never see the like," said the gray coated defender of the bridge, stamping his feet to keep them warm. "It don't make no odds how bad the night, they're always here from 8 to 12. They seem so pleased and comfortable like that I hain't the heart to tell them to move on. In fact, it kinder seems to take the chill off to watch 'em. But how they keep so warm is a mys-terry to me. Ah, love, love, yer as queer as Boston beans. There's no fathomin' ye. A hug and a kiss is better nor a conflagration."

How the Conductor Settled It.

Everybody is familiar with the spectacle of two women in a street car endeavoring to pay one another's fare, but it remained for an energetic Brooklyn conductor the other day to take the matter in his own hands and straighten out the snarl. As usual, when the two were seated each plunged for her purse, which receptacles were brought out with mutual protests. No. 1 got out her coin, a dime, saying complacently, "It's all ready, my dear." But No. 2 had a quarter which she "really wanted changed." So it went on while the conductor stood before them waiting for some decision. None came and he grew impatient. He counted out some change in each hand. "Let me have your dime, please," he said to No. 1, and she obediently handed it over. Then he put out his hand to No. 2, who gave him her quarter, not understanding what was coming. Then quickly to No. 1 he handed a nickel, and to No. 2 twenty cents in change before either of the women discovered his intention, and walked off to the platform muttering something that probably would not look well in print.—New York Times.

Wouldn't Ben Franklin Stare!

Globular lightning can be produced with so called statical electricity, obtained from an influence machine. Two thin brass wire points from the poles of a powerful machine being held at a certain distance from the opposite sides of an insulated plate of mica, ebonite, glass or the like, there appear small red luminous balls, which move about, now quickly, now slowly, and are sometimes still. Even better effects were had with a glass or paper disk which had been sprayed with paraffine. Small quantities of liquid or dust seem to be the carriers of the light. A slight air current makes the spherules disappear with hissing noise.—New York Journal.

A Time for Everything.

A Bucks county man drifted into a Market street eating house and ordered fried eggs. The waiter promptly formed a speaking tube of his hands and bawled to the dim distance, "Adam an' Eve wid de sunny side up." Rapping with his fork handle on the table the patron said emphatically, "I don't want any of that Sunday school kid-din'; I want a meal." A neighbor's explanation averted a tiff.—Philadelphia Record.

Very True.

Miss Monroe (of Pittsburg)—The bare thought of the fair being a failure makes me shiver.

Miss Beacon Streete (of Boston)—Yes, the nude in perspective of non-success is certainly chilling.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

THE PEOPLE'S KITCHEN.

One of the Conveniences of Switzerland.

A BLESSING TO THE WORKING PEOPLE.

Public School Children Furnished with Soup Gratuitously.

During my recent vacation I had an opportunity of visiting one of the "Cuisines Populaires" that are coming to be a peculiar feature of some industrial centers in Switzerland. In 1877, while a socialistic congress was in session at Chaux-le-Fonds, near Neuchatel, one of the speakers said: "All the arguments in the world will not have as much effect on the working man as a good plate of hot soup." These seed were sown on good ground, for a month later the first popular kitchen was opened, and similar institutions are now to be found in other parts of Switzerland. The aim of these kitchens is to supply working people with good wholesome food at cost price. They are not charitable institutions in any sense of the word, nor do they depend on contributions from the rich, nor on subsidies from the state, in order to keep them going. They are joint stock concerns, but in order to interest the largest number of persons possible in their success the value of the shares is fixed at a minimum sum.

The one I visited has a capital of 10,000 francs, 7,000 francs of which has been paid in, and the shares are held by very nearly 7,000 persons. It owns the building it occupies, which, though by no means palatial, is amply sufficient for the purpose. On the ground floor there are two dining rooms, large enough to accommodate from 600 to 650 persons, a smaller one for women, a waiting room and an office. The establishment is run on a strictly cash basis, but instead of paying with money customers settle by means of checks, which can be purchased in any quantities, and it is not unusual for workmen to purchase these checks in sufficient quantities to last them a month. The kitchens are all located in the basement, where is also the "cantine," a branch of the institution about which I shall say more presently. The bill of fare and the prices are the same in all the dining rooms. Three meals are served up in close succession, and as no one is allowed to remain at table after he has finished his repast the institution is able to feed about 1,800 people daily.

Between meal hours food can be had by any who want it, but no wine is ever served except when accompanied with food. The prices charged are as follows: Soup, one quart, 3 cents; half quart, 2 cents; meat, boiled or roast, one-fifth of a pound if the latter, a trifle more if the former, 5 cents; a ration of vegetables, 2 cents; wine, 2 cents a glass, 3 cents per half pint or 12 cents for a litre; a ration of bread, 1 cent. So you see a person can have a square meal, composed of bread, meat, vegetables and a glass of wine (and I may add that this latter article is of a good quality and sold pure), for 12 cents. The institution not only supplies its customers with meals, but also sells them cooked food to carry away with them. This branch of the bureau is conducted at the cantine, where prices for bread and meat are the same as in the dining rooms, but the portions are one-tenth larger, and two portions of vegetables are sold for 3 cents.

Cuisines populaires also furnish the public schools of the town with soup gratuitously and with bread at cost price. The managing committee are supplied with a certain number of checks that they can give away as they please, and all the food left over at the end of each day is distributed to the poor. The cuisine is managed by a board of directors who form three committees, charged respectively with looking after the wine, food and furniture. The employes are few in number: a stewardess, who receives a salary of 1,200 francs a year; a female cashier and cook, each of whom is paid 65 francs a month, and some girls to wait on table, who are paid 25 francs monthly. In addition to their wages all the employes are fed of course, and those who are only employed a few hours each day can gain the rest of their time in factories.—Henry Haynie in New Orleans Picayune.

An Editor's Fairness.

That editors are heartless beings—ever regardful of themselves, always regardless of the author—has become almost a proverb in the minds of hundreds of literary people, especially those whose editorial experience is limited. Once in a while an instance leaks out which shows the fallacy of this belief, and the following is such a one:

Quite a well known author not long ago sent a poem to a prominent magazine. The poem was duly read, accepted, and a generous check was sent the author, who was thoroughly satisfied with the amount paid. The poem was laid by for a while, when it was again read by the editor, this time with a view to illustration. The merit of the verses not only again appealed to the editor, but so strikingly did it impress itself upon him at a second reading that he had another check made out and forwarded to the author, with a note saying that the editor felt the previous amount insufficient with the striking merit of the work.

The cynical mind will say, "Yes, but such a course is exceptional." Not at all, my friend, only the instances do not come to light. Who is the editor in this case? Well, I will give the names: Mr Alden, of Harper's Magazine; the author Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, and the poem, "The Quaker Lady."—Edward W. Bok's Letter.

Getting Along Easy.

"There is nothing like letting other people exert themselves for you," sighed a tall, spare gentleman as he followed in the wake of a portly individual as they passed through the swinging doors at the postoffice corridor. The portly gentleman hurled himself against the door with a bang, and as it swung back the gentleman behind him passed out without lifting his hands from his overcoat pockets.—New York Times.

Competition in Marriage Fees.

The marriage license fee in Quebec is $8. As a lower charge is made in the United States many couples living near the boundary line cross the border to get united. In all probability the Quebec charge will be reduced to meet the foreign competition.—Toronto Mail.

Novel Ideas in Textiles.

There has recently been brought forward by a German chemist a method for rendering fabrics proof against the ravages of decay for an indefinite period. With this process it is said that, no matter how delicate the texture or color of the fabric may be, its long life is assured.

The inventor took his ideas from the fact that he learned that the wonderful state of preservation exhibited by the headbands of Egyptian mummies was due to their having been impregnated with a kind of resin. Acting upon this information the chemist made experiments with the substance extracted from birch bark, and he found that the green tar left over after the oil used in tanning had been extracted from the white bark of the birch tree yields a substance neither acid nor alkaloid.

This, in solution with alcohol, forms a liquid with the power of resisting, after once becoming dry, even the action of alcohol itself, and it is claimed possesses the property of making textile fabrics apparently imperishable as far as decay is concerned. And a great point claimed for it is that it readily unites with the most delicate as well as brilliant colors.

Perhaps the most novel idea in the textile line is that of an Englishman named Stillbers, who, it is said, has actually made a cloth of spiders' webs, which has been employed for purposes of surgery. A gentleman traveling through the country who recently stopped in Washington stated that this man Stillbers had gone quite extensively into this spiderweb cloth making.—Interview in Washington Post.

Excused for Being Hungry.

It is not often that politeness is used as legal tender and a means of defense at the same time, but it can be worked successfully in the hands of the proper persons. One night a weak, miserable looking old man, with straggling gray hair, gaunt eyed and hungry, wandered into the little restaurant at the corner of C and Eleventh streets, kept by "Billy" Robertson.

The old man sat down at a table and swallowed four big bowls of strong soup in rapid succession, and then tackled a robust layout of corned beef and cabbage, after which he topped off the load with a cut of pumpkin pie. When he had finished the waiter laid a check beside his plate. Taking his check the old fellow approached the counter and whispered to the proprietor:

"Say, will you excuse me?"

"Excuse you for what?"

"I haven't any money."

Billy put on a fierce front and made a movement as if to throw the polite old man into the street.

"Please don't hit me," he exclaimed in alarm. "I just got out of a hospital, where I didn't get enough to eat, and I've been sick, too. I haven't any money to pay with, and I do hope you will excuse me."

The restaurant man could only comply with this modest request, and the polite old man was then and there excused.—Tacoma Ledger.

Chewing Gum.

A correspondent inquires whether the use of chewing gum is really beneficial, as some persons have asserted.

The opinion has one plausible argument in its favor. The saliva is an important digestive fluid. On it depends the digestion of all starchy substances—bread, mush, potatoes and the like. It is for this reason that thorough mastication of such foods is necessary in order that the saliva may be duly mixed with their particles. For the same reason it is better to eat bread dry than to moisten it, and dry bread is practically easier of digestion than mush, which is often swallowed without sufficient mastication.

Now, as the saliva is copiously secreted in gum chewing, it might be thought that the stomach would thus be aided in the digestion of starchy fod, but just here comes in another physiological fact, namely, that the saliva loses its digestive power very soon after entering the stomach, being neutralized by the action of the gastric juice.—Youth's Companion.

Insanity Proven.

Family Physician—You say you are alarmed about your husband?

Anxious Wife—Dreadfully. I'm sure his reason is tottering on its throne.

F. P.—What are the symptoms?

A. W.—In the first place, poor dear John wants to—to run for congress.

F. P.—This is serious.

A. W.—And then only yesterday he wanted me to invite mother to spend a whole year with us.

F. P.—This is conclusive. I'll be ready to sign his commitment whenever you wish.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Big Bells in Russia.

The Russians eclipse all other nations in the magnitude of their scale of bell founding. An immense bell, weighing over 100 tons, was founded in Moscow in the early part of the eighteenth century. It was 20 yards in circumference and 23 inches thick. During a fire in the same year a piece weighing eleven tons was broken out, and for nearly a century the bell remained sunk in the earth. It was then excavated, and now forms the dome of a chapel which has been built beneath it.—New York Ledger.

"Elsie" is but one of the many derivatives from Elizabeth, and stands in the same category as Bessie, Lizzie, etc. Elizabeth is from the Hebrew, and means "worshiper of God" or "consecrated to God."

FIGHT WITH AN OCTOPUS.

A Terrific Battle with a Devil Fish.

A MONSTER WITH SEVEN FOOT TENACLES

It's Terrible Strength.—How it was Killed.

Three young men aged about 18 years had an exciting encounter with an octopus, or devil fish, under the old wharf belonging to the Myers Canning company, at West Seattle. It resulted in the frightful creature being killed after a fearful struggle. It was necessary to sever completely every one of the horrible creature's tentacles from its body before it gave up the struggle. The fight was witnessed by quite a number of spectators.

The boys were fishing for tomcod from the front of the wharf when they noticed a considerable commotion in the water under the wharf. One of them, Dick Smith, took a long pole and climbed under the wharf, to find out, if possible, the cause of the disturbance. He had not gone far when in the semi-gloom he discovered a strange shape and saw a pair of small eyes glaring at him. In his fright he poked at the animal with his pole, but to his horror and amazement it was wrenched from his hand as easily as though it had been a straw.

Young Smith gave a frightened yell and climbed to the top of the wharf to give the alarm. Several boys, arming themselves with poles and spades, climbed down under the wharf to investigate this marine monster and if possible capture it.

After the eyes of the boys had become accustomed to the gloom they beheld to their wonder and surprise that the creature with which they had to deal was a huge devil fish, lashing the water into foam with its merciless arms, which were spread out for a distance of about seven feet in every direction.

The boys attacked the creature with poles and spades. One boy made a strike at the animal, cutting it slightly with a spade. The infuriated creature seized the spade in its grasp and threw it far out among the piles.

The fight continued for some time, the animal seizing everything that was thrust at him. Several times one of the boys narrowly missed being caught and drawn beneath the surface by the monster of the deep.

At length, by a united pull at several poles which the octopus has seized in his blind rage, he was drawn from the water, but even then he kept up the fight with unabated fury, striking viciously at everything within reach.

One after another the tentacles were severed from the frightfully misshapen body. Even after the last arm had been severed the animal did not give up the fight, and when any one approached it, glared at them and caused its body to quiver in a manner that induced a thrill of fear to run over the beholder, even with a knowledge that it was harmless.

The devil fish was finally dispatched with a spade. The arms were carried away by the several boys who had severed them as trophies of the fight, but the body remained on the ground and was viewed by many people during the remainder of the afternoon.—Seattle Press.

Letters as Metaphors.

Some curious examples of the use of letters as metaphors may be found in the works of Lightfoot and Wetstein. We often hear of a person having a "stigma upon him." A stigma was formerly the branding iron used by the Greeks for marking their criminals. It was in shape not unlike a small figure five (5), and was usually applied upon the forehead, cheek or back of the hand, where it would not fail to be noticed. The Hebrews are said to have used their final letter, tau, for a similar purpose (see Ezek. ix, 4). In the Talmud it is fabled that the Book of Deuteronomy came and prostrated itself before God and said:

"O Lord of the universe, thou hast written in me thy law, but if a testament is defective in some parts it is defective in all. Behold, Solomon endeavors to root the letter job out of me. Neither shall he multiply wives" (see Talmud, Sanhed., xx, 2. Bible Deut. xvii, 17). "Then," says the Talmud, "the holy blessed God answered, 'Solomon and a thousand such as he shall perish, but the least letter shall not perish out of thee."—St. Louis Republic.

How Animals Die.

That beasts and birds go aside from their comrades to suffer the extreme trials of death is a pathetic fact not generally known. Whales come ashore when they feel ill, so that the waves may dash out the life that is fast ebbing away—deliberate cases of suicide, you will say. Sometimes, no doubt, their friends desert them. The healthy ones feel that the companionship of an enfeebled individual is a possible source of danger. Or it may be that the sight of death is intolerable to them, just as it has been to many human races. Whatever the explanation, the fact remains that in the animal world, as a rule, creatures go away and die by themselves; the denizens of the water commit what might be called suicide by leaving their own elements for one in which they cannot exist.—St. Louis Republic.

His Crowning Effort.

"Ah, Lionel, that poem is beautiful!"

"Yes, Agatha, it is the crowning effort of my life."

"And, Lionel—my Lionel! It will bring you fame, eternal fame, will it not?"

"Yes, Agatha—and perhaps $2."—Life.

Pleased with the Compliment.

Stranger (perforce obliged to take dinner at Aunt Dinah's)—Aunty, these pies are not the kind my mother used to make.

Aunt Dinah (very much pleased)—No, indeed, sah, I spec's not. Will yo' hab anudder piece?—New York Sun.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

C. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY APRIL 24 ..... 1891.

The fact that Germany is paying a small premium for gold, and that Russia is also making strenuous efforts to increase her stock of the yellow metal, has an ominous look, and is some justification for the fear felt in Europe that a conflict may be immediate.

The late P. T. Barnum was the greatest advertiser the world has yet produced. It is estimated that in the last twenty years he spent upward of $3,000,000 in newspaper advertisements. He understood the benefits to be derived from such expenditures, and made them pay to a remarkable extent.

The sending to the front of a large force of British troops shows how serious the situation in Manipur is. Britain's hold on India is one built on conquest and maintained by force. She cannot afford to allow the wave of rebellion to gain much headway for fear it might roll through the most populous and valuable of her possessions.

Two carloads of green peas and a carload of apples were shipped east from Los Angeles last Sunday. This is probably the first carload of apples that was ever sent east from Los Angeles. It is not generally known that at the New Orleans exposition the Los Angeles apples carried off the sweep-stakes and most of the other premiums. It had usually been supposed, prior to that, that this region was not specially adapted to the growth of this delicious fruit. Thus is dispelled another of the bizarre illusions as to that section.

The Homestake mine, in the Black Hills, of which the late Senator Hearst was the principle owner, is generally supposed to be the richest gold mine in the world. For fourteen years the company has never missed paying a dividend, and each month from $150,000 to $200,000 in gold is taken out. The vein is 300 feet wide and about two miles in length, and there is enough ore in sight to keep all the mills busy for the next twenty years.

Depew is accepted as the post-prandial orator of America. Blaine is the magnetic man of the Republican party. Harrison has about made up his mind to be the presidential platform orator. He and his amiable wife are rapidly approaching us. Angelenos are determined to receive Mrs. Harrison with enthusiasm., and they are also resolved that the Presedential Office shall be greeted with the respect which its great and exceptional dignity merit. The shriekers of the "bloody shirt" must really feel ashamed when they note the splendid reception which the President is accorded everywhere in the South. This is not manworship. It is respect for the highest constitutional dignity on earth.—HERALD.

Reformation in the immigration laws should be begun by a rigid shutting out of criminals and paupers. That is already to some extent attempted, but it should be made more thorough. Then there should be a further qualification; every immigrant should be required to possess some education; technical or otherwise, from which he can derive a support. Finally, we believe that Hungarians, Italians and such like should be shut out entirely. We are no longer in need of immigration to develop our Western country. The South still needs and desires a substantial class of white immigrants, but immigration nowhere is now to be sought after as it once was. The time has come when the immigrant should ask permission to come, and then that permission should be granted only to the worthy. Such occurrences as those in New Orleans and Mt. Pleasant, Pa., prove this to be true, and the matter cannot too soon be pressed on the attention of Congress.

The Law Is No Good.

The Ohio law which demands that all executions be conducted in prison and between midnight and daylight was intended to suppress newspaper particulars; but in this it is a grand failure. Full particulars are always to be obtained by a hustler. If there can be any cruelty in hanging a murderer it is certainly cruel to rouse him up at midnight to walk to his death.—Detroit Free Press.

Women of fashion to whom economy is an unknown word wear black tights for which they pay from $5 to $12 a pair in silk and from $3 to $9 in fine jersey or cashmere wool. A garment of this sort is hosiery and suit in one piece and gives the wearer a freedom and grace to which there is nothing comparable in the petticoat line. With a silk slip and a tailor made suit the outfit is perfect.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

MRS. FRANK LESLIE'S SCHEME TO HELP WOMEN WHO NEED IT.

The Time to Be Careful—In a Good Work. Poor Anna Dickinson—A Costly Dress. Dinner Table Novelties—The Lukewarm Bath—She Wants an Asp.

As the immortal Lydia Pinkham of the perennial smile says, "Woman sympathizes with woman," and it is doubtless this tender feeling which has induced Mrs. Frank Leslie to make a will bequeathing a large portion of her fortune for the purpose of founding an institution for her poorer sisters.

"I have not yet decided exactly what form my woman's institute shall take," she says. "I want to supply that lack in woman's life which is so large a factor in the life of a man—the ability to get the best facilities for improvement, relaxation and home life at cost price. Perhaps I want my woman's institute to be a woman's club, where my artist women can have their studios and my literary women the very best of instruction and companionship."

This is a very laudable scheme, but it has its dangers. Philanthropy on so large a scale needs the shrewdest management to be made successful. Mrs. Leslie should remember the terrible failure of A. T. Stewart's post mortem generosity to the working women and profit by it. If her scheme takes the shape of an institution to help young women who are artists it will be of great assistance to a class of persons whose opportunities for study are in this country comparatively small.

Women artists need help much more than literary women, for the latter have plenty of opportunities for self improvement now, and for the exercise of their craft the newspapers offer them chances which they never before have enjoyed. However, any plan which tends to make the condition of women in cities easier than it is at present is to be commended, for their lot at present, though much better than it was fifty years ago, is by no means an ideal one.—New York Telegram.

The Time to Be Careful.

Now is the season above all others for mothers carefully to watch their flock—especially the older children, who have had a winter of study and necessarily curtailed exercise; the boys and girls who have had their brains worked while their bodies have remained comparatively inactive all through the winter. Spring examinations, too, are before many a young student, just at the time when they feel the greatest lassitude and disinclination for work. "How I wish I could take them all out of school for a few weeks," said an anxious mother the other day, noting the pale faces and lessening appetites of her children. "We all had to go through it," said the more philosophic parent. "I expect they can stand it—they will have to be educated like every one else."

And that is just the hard part of it in this world! The battle is to the strongest—nothing stops; a week of absence from school or college means harder work later on. Therefore, unless the need is urgent, we cannot take our children out of the treadmill of daily work; but it behooves us to be all the more careful to watch their diet, to see that they have sleep enough and exercise enough, and, if necessary, to give them some tonic adapted to their constitutions and needs.

In old days and even now, probably, in old fashioned families, the inevitable pitcher of bitters appeared every spring on the sideboard, to be partaken of generally by the whole family. Home made and brewed fresh every day, it was to be taken cold, with a little sugar to sweeten it if desired; the ingredients were different, according to the favorite recipe of the house mother, but all excellent and, as the old ladies used to say, "Good for spring sinkin'; and a clearin' of the blood."—New York Tribune.

In a Good Work.

Five years ago a little company of working girls met to talk together of something to brighten the lives of working women. The anniversary of that meeting was held in a club house belonging to a society of working women. The second anniversary was celebrated by a convention of the different clubs formed on the original plan of the first society. The third anniversary united in an association of these working girls' clubs. The fourth celebration of the day convened hundreds of delegates from different states and cities where similar clubs had been formed and united in association.

The latest step is the organization for the purpose of raising and managing a fund known as "The mutual benefit fund of the New York Association of Working Girls' societies," the object of which is to provide for its members in case of illness or death. Any working girl who is a member in good standing of one of the clubs in the New York association is entitled to membership in the new society, and by paying the small dues of twenty-five cents a month will receive in case of sickness $5 each week until her recovery, and $30 in case of her death shall be paid to her surviving relatives.

The officers of this society are Mrs. Gaspar Griswold, president; Mrs. H. Ollesheimer, vice president; Miss Potter, general secretary, and Miss Virginia Furman, general treasurer. There is also a board of managers consisting of representatives appointed from the different clubs, one representative for each twenty members, and the general officers, who have entire control of all the affairs of the society, the supervision of the fund and the payment of its benefits. Like all the working girls' societies, this new society is in no sense a charitable one, but managed on the co-operative plan entirely.—New York World.

Dinner Table Novelties.

Among dinner table novelties every one wants a chafing dish. Castors are coming back and pickle dishes are going out. So are finger bowls, alas! Wine glasses are changed at every course. The menu of a grand dinner this week was printed on half dollars. Ice cream glasses are retained as souvenirs by the guests at some entertainments. Favors which are given at dinners, etc., in some cases assume gigantic proportions, viewed financially. I went into a novelty studio on Fifth avenue one day to price some pretty butterflies, intending to take home a dozen and a half to grace a certain occasion that evening. I found that the "cute little things" were sixty dollars a dozen.—New York Cor. Pittsburg Press.

Poor Anna Dickinson.

"There is an impression abroad," said a well known lyceum manager who has directed the lecture tours of some of the most celebrated men and women of the latter half of this century, "that Anna Dickinson is an old woman. This is far from true. Anna Dickinson began her career when she was a mere child—not more than fourteen or fifteen. She is now about forty, in the prime of life. Her present illness might, I think, be traced to various causes. The principal one, in my opinion, is her failure on the stage of a few years ago. Her manner of lecturing was so forcible and dramatic that some injudicious friends of hers thought she could have even a greater success as an actress than she had as a public speaker. Now that was poor logic, as they found out.

"There is a vast difference between the platform and the stage. But if there is any quality that Anna Dickinson possessed to a marked degree it was persistency. She was determined to succeed, but the public and the press wouldn't have it. Her performance of male parts was jeered at. Her 'Hamlet' was denounced as a feeble imitation of Booth's.

"Her first play, the 'Crown of Thorns,' was very well received, and if her health had not gone back on her she might now repeat that success sometime, for she has lately been at work writing a new drama. Poor Anna! She was a great woman in her day, and she has had a great career. I believe that if she recovers from her present trouble she may do something yet which will show that her career isn't by any means ended."—New York Telegram.

She Caught an Editor Napping.

A very bright little woman who writes well and often for the magazines has caught an editor napping, and a more jubilant woman I have never seen. She just seems to revel in her conquest. Not long ago the editor sent her a commission to write an article on a given topic. She accepted, and in a fortnight forwarded the manuscript. Back came a letter from the editor saying that she had not treated the subject as he wished, and, with some suggestions, asked her to rewrite the article. She was disappointed, but with her disappointment came an idea. "Now I will test my theory that there are editors who are not so sharp as people imagine," said my lady, and forthwith she prepared to put her scheme to trap her editorial friend in motion.

She allowed her manuscript to lie in her desk for one month, then, untouched and without a single revision, had the manuscript transferred by the typewriter. With a sweet and gracious little note the manuscript, in its new form, went back to the editor with the single query, "Is this more to your idea of what the article should be?"

In two days came back the response, "The article, as revised, is exactly in accordance with my ideas, which I am glad I was successful in making known to you." Oh, that woman! Her life has been sunshine after that day. She has caught a prominent editor napping, and the height of her ambition seems to be reached.—Edward W. Bok's Letter.

A Costly Dress.

I was shown a dress made for the czarina in Paris. It was composed of a short train, corsage and high Medici collar in stamped velvet. The pattern in relief was of a cold, pearl gray, and the ground of a pinkish gray, of a tender hue, which, however, will have its full value in electric light. The front part of the skirt followed in hue the gray of the velvet flowers, and was trimmed in diagonal curves, with five rows of pink and gray ruches of cut silk. Between the ruches there were bunches of the finest silver thread, looking like thistledown. The upper part of the body had a square cut aperature filled in with pink silk, on which silver braid was vertically applied all over. The stomacher and dorsal peak were outlined with a triple cord of pink silk, gray silk and silver, ending in tassels, which repeated the thistledown effect. The dress had inside the skirts, from the knees down, six rows of fully gathered Valenciennes lace, enlivened with alternate flots of pink and pearl gray narrow ribbon. The flot is made by arranging a ribbon in a quantity of falling loops all held together.—Mrs. Crawford in London Truth.

Where the Men Sew.

A novelty in the way of sewing classes is that which has taken the place of the Mondays aboard the receiving ship Vermont in the Brooklyn navy yard. It is a novelty because the men come, and more than that, they actually work. They thread needles, find thimbles, run the sewing machine, and one or two of them display their navy life training by pronounced skill in closing a seam.

A second feature, which is not usual with these functions, is that the young maids and matrons sew for the heathen to the accompaniment of band music—the navy yard band being stationed in its usual place, whence its melodies float into the captain's cabin, where industry, supplemented with chocolate and cakes, is "at home."

A young woman who is a member of this class admits that when the music becomes too inspiring some pairs of restless feet cease tapping impatient time to a valse or schottische and go whirling about instead, but this aberration of the routine "is merely temporary," she says, "and does not really interfere with the work."—Her Point of View in New York Times.

The Lukewarm Bath.

The newest "fad" for the lengthening of days is the lukewarm bath. The human body absorbs a considerable quantity of water in a lukewarm bath, which causes a softening of the tissues. Falconet demonstrated by the scales that a person remaining in the lukewarm bath for an hour absorbs through the skin more than three pounds of water. The bath has a tendency to decrease the number of pulsations and respirations, and consequently arrest the rapidity of the consumption of vitality.—Herald of Health.

The Women Did Not Care.

The Rapid, during her last cruise, had a curious little experience, reminding one of the legendary story of the Sabine fair, who, having once been abducted by bold bad Romans, had no mind to return to their homes. Captain Castle received information that one Goral, a chief in the Solomon islands, had made a raid and carried off ten women. When he arrived at Goral's stronghold, however, he found that the ladies preferred to remain in their new domicile, and were by no means anxious to be rescued.—London World.

Mrs. Stowe and Argyll.

A friend who has just come from the house of Harriet Beecher Stowe tells me that the authoress still retains her physical strength. Each morning she leads the devotions at the breakfast table, praying, reading the Scriptures and singing a hymn. The only time she takes up her pen is to write to some member of the family, but one day in each month is set aside for a letter to the Duke of Argyll, the two writing to each other in alternate months.

Mrs. Stowe's letters to the duke are said to be vigorous, and from them her correspondent gets no idea of her mental health. The two discuss international affairs of all kinds, and even Mrs. Stowe's daughters are ofttimes surprised to see how thorough is their mother's knowledge of every day affairs as she learns of them through such newspapers as she cares to read. The author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is now nearly seventy-nine years old.—New York Letter.

She Wants an Asp.

A taxidermist on Sixth avenue, who also deals in birds and animals, states that the taste for unique pets is steadily growing in New York. He constantly receives orders for such unconventional members of the kingdom of comparative anatomy as frogs, coons, possums, jackdaws and crows, and one woman wrote recently to request that he secure for her "an asp like the one used by Fanny Davenport."—New York News.

Over One Hundred, but Active.

The ladies of Trinity African Methodist Episcopal Zion church, Long Branch, gave a Martha Washington tea party Thursday night. The feature of the party was the impersonation of Martha Washington by Aunt Judy Cummins, who is said to be 111 years old. Mrs. Cummins is spry and enjoys good health. She surprised the young folks by the ease and grace with which she led the grand march.—Newark Advertiser.

Steamed oysters are a nice change and are very appetizing served in their shell. Buy the oysters unopened, wash thoroughly, using a brush or coarse cloth; place them separately in the steamer or in a large sieve put on top a large pot of boiling water. The deep shell must be undermost in order that no juice may be wasted. As soon as the oysters open they are done, and should be served at once, with pepper, salt, butter, etc., to taste.

The daughter of Rev. Dr. Henry Wilson, the assistant rector of St. George's Episcopal church, in New York city, a cultured young woman who has shone in fashionable society, has joined the Salvation Army. This is only the outgrowth of her interest in city mission work, and in donning the simple uniform of the army and subjecting herself to its severe discipline she feels that she is enlarging her circle of usefulness.

People never tire of talking over the late Katherine Wolfe's superb gift to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. She did more than any one man for the museum's valuable collection. She has not only bequeathed thousands of dollars and notable paintings by old and modern masters, but she has left a stated income to be used every year for the purchase of more pictures.

Many of the trained nurses in Bellevue hospital, New York, belong to the Bellevue Guild, a society devoted to the best interests of the profession. The badge consists of a silver cross with "Aye, ever ready!" inscribed on one side and "Bellevue Guild" on the other. Just now the company of mull caps and seersucker gowns is collecting funds for a club house.

Juvenile jewelry, if worn at all, should be extremely simple, and all ornaments set with precious stones are in extremely bad taste. The foolish mothers who send their girls to school loaded with trinkets display, to say the least, very questionable taste, and this custom is apt to foster vanity and a longing for meretricious display.

Among the munificent gifts illustrative of the generosity of American women may be mentioned the $50,000 donation of Mrs. Leland Stanford to the Kindergarten Association of San Francisco, and the same amount given by Mrs. W. H. Vanderbilt for the erection of a mission building in New York city.

There is a lady in New York who at present is earning a salary of $5,000 a year teaching fashion how to play a scientific game of whist. Two or three other teachers have all they can do instructing classes in the Ladies' New York club.

All the widows of distinguished men seem to be engaged in writing about them. Among the number are Mrs. Custer, Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Beecher and Mrs. Jefferson Davis.

She Was Dazzled.

They tell a good story at the expense of Col. Moore, one of the members of the Everett Piano company, and no one enjoys it better than he does. While he was a resident of Colorado some years ago he was appointed a member of the staff of Governor Grant, and on the day the governor was inaugurated the staff appeared in resplendent uniforms, that of Col. Moore being further embellished with the medals he had won for distinguished bravery in the Crimean war, for he had served there when a mere lad.

The colonel is a large, handsome man, and with his uniform and medals is pretty apt to make considerable of a display. On this occasion, when the inauguration was over, he called upon a friend while still in uniform. A little girl answered the bell, and as she went back into the house with eyes wide open in astonishment her mother asked, "Who is it?" to which she replied, "I don't know; I think it's God!"—Boston Traveler.

Keeping the Chicken Back.

When the chicken incubator show was here, a young man infatuated with the idea purchased one and placed therein about thirty eggs. According to the rule they were to be hatched the 2d of the month. But it appears that the young man's watchful wife observed a fine brown egg giving way under pressure, as it were, on the 1st of the month, and thinking the chick was appearing prematurely, she promptly pasted some brown paper over the aperture in the egg and with a self satisfied smile awaited the coming of her husband. He declares now that there is nothing like a woman for ingenuity.—Lawrence Eagle.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.
Bee Keeper.
Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.
Independence, Inyo Co. Cal

CROCKERS' HOTEL.
BIG PINE - CAL.
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in act, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
W. H. UHLEMEYER, Lessee.
sept 6

FOR SALE CHEAP.
Two span first-class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

P. H. MACK.
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
Bishop Creek, Cal.,
Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING SALOON.
Shaving, Hair Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.
WM. H. HUFF, Prop'r

IRWINS' SALOON
Corner Edwards and Market Streets,
Independence . Cal.
THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt and furnished in a style second to none on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.
THE BAR
Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.
JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

BELL'S
Flouring Mills,
A. N. BELL, Prop.
TRY BELL'S
EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.
Have added Patent Rolls and other Improvements to our Mills; I am now turning out a flour that is fully
Equal to the Best
Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.
Independence, Cal A. N. BELL.

P. W. FORBES P. H. MACK
MACK & FORBES.
Real Estate Agents,
Address
P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal
P. W. FORBES, Bishop, Cal.

FORBES & TOBEY,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.,
—DEALERS IN—
LUMBER
OF ALL KINDS.
DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS,
LATH,
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.
Matched and Dressed
Flooring.
sept 11-tf

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and
Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
Obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal

A. R. CONKLIN,
Attorney-at-Law.
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the States of California and Nevada.

JOHN W. P. LAIRD,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Independence, Cal.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)
Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED.
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.
Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891 will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:
Saturday ..... January 24th
" ..... February 21st
" ..... March 28th
" ..... April 18th
" ..... May 23rd
" ..... June 20th
" ..... July 18th
" ..... August 15th
" ..... September 12th
" ..... October 17th
" ..... November 14th
" ..... December 12th
JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

BOOTS AND SHOES
MADE AND REPAIRED.
THE BEST MATERIAL.
FIRST-CLASS WORK.
Repairs done Promptly.
Prices Reasonable.
A. J. DAVIS, Independence.
nov 26-tf

NORMAN
HOUSE,
Independence, - Cal.
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates.
Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.
O. L. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Timepieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine
FRED BURKHARDT.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 18th day of April, 1891, in the matter of the Estate of John Mullane, deceased the undersigned, the Executor of the Last Will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, and subject to confirmation by said Superior Court, on and after Tuesday, the 12th day of May, 1891, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Mullane at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Mullane at the time of his death, in and to the certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo, State of California and particularly described as follows, to wit: The South half of the North East quarter; and the North West quarter of the South East quarter of Section No. Seven, and the South West quarter of the North West quarter of section No. Eight, all in Township No. Nine South, Range No. Thirty-four East, Mount Diablo Meridian, containing one hundred and sixty acres.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned, near the town of Big Pine, in the County of Inyo, State of California, and may be left at the place herein designated, or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, gold coin of the United States, ten per cent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

RICHARD HESSIAN.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Mullane, deceased.

NOTICE OF SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 15th day of April, 1891, in the matter of the Estate of John Mullane, deceased, the undersigned, Executor of the Last Will and Testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, on and after the sixth day of May, 1891, at the residence of the undersigned, near the town of Big Pine, County of Inyo, State of California, the following personal property to wit: Seventy head of stock cattle, more or less; One plow; One wagon; One horse; One cooking stove and utensils; One set harness; One shovel; One hay fork, and one trank.

RICHARD HESSIAN.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Mullane, deceased.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of PETER DICKSON, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNDERSIGNED, Administrator of the estate of PETER DICKSON, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his residence, in the town of Lone Pine, in the county of Inyo, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in the county of Inyo.

Dated April 18th, 1891.

JOHN F. LUBKEN,
Administrator of said Estate.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Thomas Parker, deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Executors of the last Will and Testament of Thos. Parker, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Executors, at the office of P. H. Mack in the town of Independence, Inyo Co., Cal., the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate, in the County of Inyo, State of California.

JOHN SHEPHERD,
S. G. REEG
Executors of the last Will and Testament of Thomas Parker, deceased.
Dated at Independence, Cal. April 4, 1891.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, San Francisco, California. Location of works, Inyo county, Cal.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AT A meeting of the Board of Directors, held the 30th day of March 1891, an assessment (No. 12) of Ten Cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, No. 132 California street, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 12th day of May 1891, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on FRIDAY, the 29th day of May, 1891, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

G. W. LUCE Secretary.
Office, 135 California St., San Francisco, California.

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROPRIETOR.
Horseshoeing ..... $2 00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

J. W. Murphy.
BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work
Wagons and Carriages Repaired.
HORSESHOEING, $2.00 for CASH
Shop on Edwards St., opposite the Court House, Independence.

Snug little FORTUNES have been made at work for us by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Benn, Toledo, Ohio. See out. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work at home wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Capital not needed. You are your own time all the time. Many workers. Full information free. Address them, NEW and WONDERFUL, H. Hallett & Co., Box [illegible]

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, APRIL 24 ..... 1891.

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 98
Lead, 4 35
Copper, 13.70
Tin, 20.40
Sugar, .06
Coffee, 20 @ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 13 @ 19.

Religious Services.

Rev. H. J. Winsor will breach in Lone Pine at 11 a. m.; George Creek 2:30; Independence, 7:30 p. m. Sunday school at Lone Pine and Independence at 2 p. m.

On Sunday, May 3d, Rev. E. W. Van Deventer, D. D., will be with us. Services will be held as follows: At Lone Pine, Love Feast, 10 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m. to be followed by Communion of Lord's Supper. Georges Creek at 2:30 p. m. At Independence, 7 p. m. Praise Service at 7:30. Sermon by Dr. Van Deventer and administration of the Sacrament.

On Tuesday Dr. Van Deventer will deliver his popular lecture, "The Wild Young Man and His Stay-at-Home Brother."

On Wednesday evening he will preach at Keeler.

Collection for Presiding Elder fund.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

SATURDAY, April 18, 1891.

Fehrman vs. Goodale—Filed dismissal of action.

Estate of G. A. Thede, deceased—Filed order setting aside personal property.

Owens Valley Water Co. vs. Wm. H. Mitchell—Action to condemn riparian right Filed complaint and issued summons.

Estate of John Mullane, deceased—Filed order of sale of real estate and personal property.

Estate of Peter Dieckson, deceased—Filed proof of will. John Lubken appointed Executor.

WEDNESDAY, April 22, 1891.

Owens Valley Water Co. vs. Wm. Mitchell—Filed original summons.

Estate of Peter Dieckson, deceased—Filed inventory and appraisement.

Estate of C. D. Begole, deceased—Filed Petition for letters of administrotion.

Estate of B. F. Theban, deceased—Filed petition for letters of administration.

Estate of James Ward, deceased—Filed petition for letters of administration.

THURSDAY, April 23, 1891.

Estate of John C. Eldy, deceased—Filed petition for letters of administration.

A Blockade.

INDEPENDENCE, April 24th.

H. LEVY.—There will be no train down to-day. The stone wall south of Summit gave way this morning. RICHARDS.

John Hughes came in from Darwin yesterday.

W. S. Enos west to round Valley last Tuesday.

R. C. Spear of Lone Pine was in town yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Mack visited Lone Pine yesterday.

Bert Rhine started for San Francisco last Tuesday.

R. Hessian of Big Pine visited Independence early in the week.

Henry M. Stanley has been appointed Governor of the Congo Free State.

President Harrison will arrive in San Francisco at 7 o'clock p. m. next Tuesday.

Mrs. W. L. Hunter has returned home from a visit with relatives in Sonoma County.

Don't forget that the grand march at the Odd Fellows' Ball Monday night will start at 8:30 sharp.

A great deal of water is coming down in the creeks, the result of the last few days of warm weather.

Mrs. James McDonald and her sister, Miss Rose Kelly, came in from Darwin on yesterday's train and return to-day.

Vincent, the Fresno wife-murderer, is the first man to be sent to San Quentin for execution under the new law

Cap. Wat has been busy for over a week past trimming the trees and plowing and leveling on the Court-house grounds.

Charles Turner, having completed his term of school at Camp Independence, started for San Francisco last Tuesday.

County School Superintendent Shannon has made an apportionment of the delinquent fund for the various school districts.

A law passed by the last Legislature requires that all executions of criminals shall take place either at San Quentin or Folsom.

The Kern County Gazette says that a tri-weekly stage will soon be run on the Keeler-Mojave line to accommodate the increased passenger travel.

F. E. Densmore Esq. has gone to Santa Rosa as Representative of Mt. Whitney Parlor, N. S. G. W., to attend the meeting of the Grand Parlor.

Mrs. James R. Moffett has returned home from a lengthy visit to San Diego. Her sister, Mrs. Rougney, came with her and will remain in Inyo.

John Baxter has been in very poor health for a long time past. He started for San Francisco last Tuesday morning to secure the best medical treatment, and will probably remain some time.

J. E. Reynolds came in from Modock at the end of last week. He spent a day or two in town and then started for Los Angeles where he expects to remain a considerable length of time.

The Owens Valley Water Co. have commenced suit against Wm. Mitchell and will make a test case of the riparian rights case. This will be a matter of great interest to all residents of the valley.

Racing Twenty Years Ago.

The following is taken from the INDEPENDENT of January 3, 1871:

The races over the Lone Pine race track were largely attended, passing off to the satisfaction of everybody, and a considerable amount of money changed hands. The event had been looked forward to with vast interest by sporting men, and the event will show that our racing stock, although termed "sage-brushers," will require racers of more than average fleetness to beat them.

On the first day's race, single dash of one-half mile, for purse of $100, the following entries were made:

C. Mulkey.....names blk s Billy Buffum
Hitchcock.....names s f Lucy Jane
A. J. Slinkard.....names b g Coal Tar
P. W. Bennett.....names b g Sheep Driver
W. M. Donathan.....names b c Maneater

Won by Billy Buffum, time not given, with the horses coming in in the following order: 1st, Billy buffum; 2d, Maneater; 3d, Coal Tar; 4th, Sheep Driver.

SECOND DAY.

Single dash, one-fourth mile, for purse of $50, free for all horses except those owned in Lone Pine. The following horses were entered:

Gill.....names b c Frank
Crumley.....pames g h Pet
Slinkard.....names b g Coal Tar

The first heat was decided as "dead," or a tie. On the second, Pet won by two feet.

[An account of a trotting race is here given which Bennett's horse, Ebony, won. But from the following it is evident that the time given, 2:32, is a miss-print: "In order to decide more bets as to the time Ebony would make in a race he again shot beautifully around the track in 3:22½."]

THIRD DAY.

Running race, mile and repeat, best two in three, purse $150, with the following horses entered:

W. M. Donathan.....names b h Snipe
C. Mulkey.....names s m Lucy Dale
P. W. Bennett...names b h Sheep Driver

After a fair send off the horses started off keen for the lead. When about half way round Snipe was unfortunate enough to find a jack upon the track, which he struck and fell over, but he manfully started again and came up to the score but a length or two behind Lucy. This heat was justly, we think, decided off. Time, 1:52¼.

In the next heat Mulkey's mare came up two lengths ahead, winning the heat in 1:54 with Snipe second.

Third heat was won with the mare in the same relative position at the outcome, Lucy winning in 1:49¾.

The track was somewhat uneven, and rather dusty, but the horses were well handled and all express themselves well satisfied with the manner in which the whole races were conducted.

Some coin changed hands on races not on the programme but our time and space forbids referring to them this week.

The Pahrump Mines.

George Clark arrived in San Bernardino on Tuesday last from the now famous gold mines in the Pahrump valley. These mines were discovered by George Montgomery, who Mr. Clark said, happened to sit to rest and put his hand, on a fifty-dollar gold nugget sticking out of a rock. The news spread to Daggett, and now a rush to the camp has commenced.

Out of a five-foot hole, eight and a half feet deep, Montgomery took out quartz from which he pounded out in a hand-mortar $800 in gold.

In addition to the gold bearing rock, Mr. Clark says the silver and copper ledges are very rich, and that he has no doubt they will rival the famous Virginia City mines. Montgomery has located three silver claims three and a half miles from the main gold mine. The first assay showed 136 ounces to the ton. His partner afterward sent another batch of rock to San Francisco, after he had gone down four feet, which assayed $13,000 to the ton.

The miners get their fruit, vegetables and meat from the ranch, and other supplies from Daggett. There are seventy inches of water at Horseshoe tem springs, which lies six miles from Montgomery's and three miles from the Yount claim. They are within seven miles of good timber, and 35 miles of a sawmill

The location of the mines, as to getting supplies, is very fortunate. They are reached from Daggett by way of Cave springs and Granite ridge. The one great essential in making the trip is a good supply of water. It is dangerous to start without that, and every one going there should be careful in this respect. After reaching the mines, local supplies of food are very good.

Ho For Breyfogle!

The Breyfogle fever is spreading. A man named Collins arrived in Palmetto this week with $1,800 in gold, which he claimed to have pounded out in a mortar in the ten days in which he was in the new district.

C. Shaber and A. McArthur leave for Breyfogle in the morning.

M. J. Plamenez, J. McNulty, V. Coschino and C. Ferrero, start Tuesday next.

Jack Knapp and another man whose name we could not learn started for the scene of excitement Wednesday last.

By wagon road the Breyfogle mine is 200 miles from Candelaria. The road is a good one, water being within a day's journey in all cases excepting between Amargosia and Ash Meadows, a distance of 55 miles where it is necessary to pack it. Nevada miners will find Candelaria a good point to start from.—Chloride Belt.

Fined One Hundred Dollars.

Sheriff Gorman sent forty dollars to Constable Drake of Bishop on Tuesday as a reward for the arrest and conviction of a Mexican for selling whiskey to Indians. The culprit was fined one hundred dollars and the amount turned into the School Fund. Mr. Gorman is making a hard fight to break up the detestable traffic, and the money paid for rewards comes out of his individual purse. A drunken Indian is getting to be an unknown quantity on the streets of Independence, and the recent conviction will have a salutary effect on the vendors at Bishop.

Mr. R. Van Dyke of Lone Pine met with a very painful accident a few days ago. He had been in the habit of entering a field by jumping a large ditch and passing through a gap in a wire fence. Unbeknown to him a wire had been strung across the gap, and on jumping the ditch he landed against it, cutting a gash several inches long in his scalp. The wound bled profusely and was very painful, but not serious. A silver wire was inserted and the cut carefully dressed.

A New Road.

Messrs. Frank Fitzgerald and Charles Anthony have broken ground on a new road from Darwin to Panamint and Wild Rose. The road when completed will shorten the distance about eighteen miles. The old road through Shepherds canyon is badly washed out and has been impassable for some time. The new road, besides making the distance shorter, will actually cost less than to make adequate repairs on the old one. There are a number of mines that the opening of the road, and the better facilities for transportation, will enable the owners to work at a profit and make a considerable increase of business in that part of the country. It is said that Mr Hall of Austin will develope valuable antimony mines in that region if the road is built. While great credit attaches to the enterprising individuals who are building the road, still the Supervisors should take hold of the matter, declare it a county road and render assistance. In view of the fact that nearly all of the income of the county is from the mines, too much encouragement cannot be given to any enterprise that will assist in new developments. An appropriation for this road will yield larger returns to tax payers than any other expenditure that could be made. On proper representation being made there is no doubt that the board will render any assistance needed to further the project.

Modock Mines.

There was sold on the March account from the Modock mines thirty-one tons of ore, netting $4,931.73, of which ten tons from the main tunnel netted $2,229.48. The mines in general are looking well, and since the return of Superintendent Fitzgerald the force of men has been increased so that the output will be at least double for the balance of the year. The grippe has laid out all the men with one exception, and in consequence the April output will not be so large as it should be. The mines in the Modock district have added more to the coin of the county for several years than any other enterprise in it.

The Greatest Discovery o The Age.

An infallible remedy for the cure of catarrh and deafness in all its stages, by one who has been a great sufferer from catarrh and almost total deafness.

No catarrh or slimy green and yellow sticky matter discharging from the nose. No deafness. No ringing crackling sounds in the head. No mucous matter lodging in the throat. No occasional hacking cough with throwing up slimy green and yellow sticky matter. It is a blessing that words cannot describe.

For futher information write for circulars. Address Frank Wertz & Co., Wausau, Wis. Drawer 1029.

The dwelling of Mrs. Rinehackel near Big Pine was entirely destroyed by fire on Wednesday. The men were all away from the house at the time and when the fire was discovered it was too late to stay its progress or save anything from the house except a sewing machine. The building was a good substantial farm dwelling, and the loss will aggregate fully three thousand dollars. The fire started from a defective flue. No insurance.

A meeting will be held at Independence to-morrow to determine what action shall be taken in regard to the extension of the Stevens ditch to Lone Pine. It is greatly to be hoped that this work will be accomplished, as it will be the means of building up many fine homes and the creation of a great deal of taxable property.

Under the direction of Henry Rhine the telegraph line between town and the station has been put in thorough repair. Mr. Rhine gives notice that all messages from Independence to Citrus will be charged 25 cents each.

The feed on the desert between Little Lake and Mojave is said to be excellent. No better time could be chosen than the present to drive cattle out of the Valley to market.

Odd Fellows Ball Monday night.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For Sale!

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE

Eastside Canal.

There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,

C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

MARY A. BALL, Plaintiff, vs. ROBERT BALL, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Robert Ball, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant and for costs of suit, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 28th day of February, A. D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

72 I. O. F. 72

THE

72d Anniversary of I. O. O. F

Will be Celebrated by a

GRAND BALL

AT THE

Agricultural Pavilion, Independence,

ON

Monday Evening, April 27, 1891.

Admission Free to All!

FLOOR MANAGER.....Bertrand Rhine.

FLOOR DIRECTORS.....N. E. CONKLIN, G. H. LEWIS, J. W. MURPHY, ROBERT O'NEAL, B. F. GRAY

INVITATION COMMITTEE

ROUND VALLEY:
C. F. Wildasinn, H. Evans

BISHOP:
John Bourland, Robert O'Neal
P. P. Keough, O. H Hill
J. H. Bulpitt, I. P. Yaney.

BIG PINE:
S. G. Gregg, J. C. Schalten
L Newman, J. R. Eldred

CERRO GORDO:
Pat. Clinton

INDEPENDENCE:
Walter James Jr., E. Robinson
P. W. Forbes, C. W. Craig
Dr. J. D. Blair, P. H. Mack
J. E. Shepherd

LONE PINE:
J. R. Moffett, R. C. Spear

KEELER:
Thos. Boland, B. F. Gray
John Anton, Sam. Levy
Finley Bedford.

Free transportation to and from trains and to pavilion.

Supper at Norman House.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL.

THOMAS & HILL,

DEALERS IN

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $75 to $150 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. Work for us in your spare time, or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDIS

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

Buyers and consumers should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere.

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9, 1891.
n4767

Lake View Hotel

Keeler, Cal.

John Barnes, Prop'r.

First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—

Wines, Liquors, & Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.

DENTISTS.

OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSfield, opposite the Southern Hotel.

Prompt and careful treatment given and the least possible pain inflicted. Address,

WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

BISHOP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE BISHOP.

Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St

In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable

S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK BREWERY,

L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.

All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.

Customers supplied on all points Of the C. & C. Railroad.

Send orders to

L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, patrons can be assured of finding there the best of Buggy Teams, Saddle Horses, and

Livery Accommodations

in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor.

A NEW DEAL!

LONE PINE

Livery. Feed & Sale Stable.

A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.

OPPOSITE SEWART HOUSE.

Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,

—DEALER IN—

General Merchandise,

LONE PINE,

INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.

Dealer In GENERAL MERCHANDISE, GROCERIES MINERS Supplies

PROVISIONS,

&c., &c., &c

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages in any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, GEORGE STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R R

TAKING EFFECT,

Sunday, November 16th, '90

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1	To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Mound House.....	11:30 p m	5.50 p. m
Dayton.....	12:00 p. m.	5:10 p. m.
Wabuska.....	2:05 p m.	2 50 p. m
Hawthorne.....	5 50 p. m.	11 10 a. m.
Luning.....	7:05 p. m.	9 55 a. m.
Sodа Springs.....	8:05 p. m.	9:15 a. m
Belleville.....	9:15 p. m.	7:55a. m.
Candelaria.....	Ar. 10.00 p. m	Lv. 7 2 5. m.
	No. 3.	No. 4.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Belleville.....	8 23 a. m	5:25 p m.
Benton.....	11:50 a m	1:35 a. m.
Bishop Creek.....	2:00p. m.	11:00 a. m
Alvord.....	2.45 p. m	10:00 a. m
Independence.....	4:20 p. m.	8:30 a. m
Lone Pine.....	5:10 p. m.	7.40 a. m
Keeler.....	Ar 5:55 p. m.	Lv. 7.00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R., which connect at Reno with east and west bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (57 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's. tri weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville, Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stages for Columbus (8 miles), Silver P Montezuma, Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.

D A BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles

OF

Fashionable Clothing Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOL

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries a canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES, PEANUTS, WALNUTS, TOYS!

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE

Blacksmith Shop.

R. C. Spear, Prop'r

—ALL WORK ON—

MINING TOOLS,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS & FREIGHTING OUTFITS

—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—

HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING

All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON

KEELER, CAL.

In Lake View Hotel

BEER, WINES.

LIQUORS and CIGARS

All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.

JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.

J. C. MILLER. Lessee.

—THE BAR—

Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of

WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS

The most careful attention given to the amusement and comfort of patrons.

A FINE BILLIARD TABLE

Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon. sept-12 td

In reading over the literary items of the week, I found not much to interest me, until my eye caught sight of an article headed "Jenks' Dream." Imagine my surprise to find it ended up with a recommendation to use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Nevertheless, being a great sufferer from sick headache, I determined to try them, and, to my great joy, I found prompt relief, and by their protracted use, a complete immunity from such attacks. Pierce's Pellets often cure sick headache in an hour. They are gently laxative or actively cathartic, according to size of dose. As a pleasant laxative, take one each night on retiring. For adults, four act as an active, yet painless, cathartic. Cause no griping or sickness. Best Liver Pill ever made. Smallest, Cheapest, Easiest to take. For Constipation, Indigestion and Bilious Attacks, they have no equal.

Manufactured at the Chemical Laboratory of the WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

It is easy to gain a great reputation for truthfulness by allways spenking ill of yourself.

SPREADING FOR LEAGUES AROUND

The marshy, overflowed lands, sunken lots and half submerged river banks, which give then birth, the seeds of malaria impregnate the air, and are inhaled at every breath by thousands unprovided with any adequate safeguard against the baneful influence. Yet such exist—potent alike to remedy or to prevent, pure in its constituents, and the profession allyrecognized substitute for the baneful drug, quinine. Its name is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a family specific and safeguard, foremost not only as an antidote to malaria, but also as a means of permanently removing dyspepsia, and relieving constipation, liver complaint, rheumatism, kidney and bladder ailments, and nervousness. Among invigorants it takes the first place, and is also a superb appetizer. Use it systematically.

Gratitude is a virtue that has commonly profit annexed to it.

DEAFNESS CAN'T BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

A little less censure should be given the spider; flies are so willing.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE BLIND.

Dr. La Grange wishes to make known his New Treatment for the cure of all diseases of the Eye—Cataract, Defective Vision, Inflammation, etc., etc., without Operation or Pain. The remedy can be applied by the patient, and is simple, safe and sure in its effects, strengthening the muscles and nerves of the eye, removing pain almost instantaneously. It is a marvelous discovery and a blessing to the sufferer.

For further particulars address with stamped envelope, R. J. LA GRANGE, M. D., 215 Powell st., fourth door from Geary, San Francisco, Cal.

Office Hours, 11 till 3.

A man cannot always tell what is the right thing to do, but he can come near telling every time what is the wrong thing.

TO SUFFERERS FROM WEAK SPINE.

Persons suffering from weak back will take comfort in reading the following letter from Mr. A. W. Barrett, of Oswego, N. Y.:

"Ten years ago I was afflicted with a lame back. The pain was so severe that I could hardly walk or get about. Hearing much said about ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS, I applied two to the lower part of my spine. In a week I was very much better. I put on fresh plasters at the end of ten days, and two weeks afterwards found myself entirely well. If I get a very severe cold, I sometimes have a return of this weakness of the spine, but ALLCOCK'S PLASTERS cure me in three or four days."

G. W. was the only one that ever got out of the hack buildiness without having told a lie.

Do you wish to know how to have no steam, and not half the usual work on washday? Ask your grocer for a bar of Dobbins' Electric Soap, and the directions will tell you how. Be sure to get no imitation. There are lots of them.

It is not a good time to read the Bible while your wife is out in the rain cutting stove-wood.

For Coughs, Sore Throat, Asthma, Catarrh, and other diseases of the Bronchial Tubes, no more useful article can be found than "Brown's Bronchial Troches."

Dobson—"I feel certain that Jenkins is in financial distress." Noblit—"Why?" "He is beginning to live very extravagantly."

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Potterfield & Losey, 838 Market street, San Francisco.

Enforced Abstinence—"Do you play the banjo?" "Not when there are any people around." "Why not?" "They won't let me."

Use Enameline Stove Polish; no dust, no smell.

St. Jacobs Oil

A SURE CURE. A PROMPT CURE.

CURES PERMANENTLY

Rheumatism
Sciatica
Backaches
Headaches
Neuralgia.

IT HAS NO EQUAL.
IT IS THE BEST.

BEBEE;

or,

TWO LITTLE WOODEN SHOES.

By "OUIDA."

She clung to him, sobbing without sound. "You will come back? You will come back?" she moaned, clasping him closer and closer.

Flamen's own eyes grew dim. But he lied to her: "I will—I promise."

It was so much easier to say so, and it would break her sorrow. So he thought.

For the moment again he was tempted to take her with him—but he resisted it—he tire, and she would ever

There was a long silence. The bleating of the little kid in the shed without was the only sound the gray lavender blew to and fro.

Her arms were close about his throat; he kissed them again, and kissed her eyes, her cheek, her mouth, then put her from him quickly and went out.

She ran to him and threw herself on the damp ground and held him there, and leaned her forehead on his feet. But though he looked at her with wet eyes, he did not yield, and he still said

"I will come back soon—very soon—be quiet, dear, let me go."

Then he kissed her once more—many times—and put her gently within the door and closed it.

A low, sharp, sudden cry reached him, went to his heart, but he did not turn, he went on through the wet, green little garden, and the curling leaves, where he had found peace and had left desolation.

CHAPTER XIX.

"I will let her alone and she will marry Jeannot," thought Flamen, and he believed himself a good man for once in his life, and pitied himself for having become a sentimentalist.

She would marry Jeannot and bear many children, as those people always did, and ruddy little peasants would cling about those pretty, soft, little breasts of hers, and she would love them after the manner of such women and be very content clattering over the stones in her wooden shoes, and growing brown and stout, and more careful after money, and ceasing to dream of unknown things, and not seeing God at all in the fields, but looking low and beholding only the ears of the gleaming wheat and the feet of the tottering children, and so gaining her bread and losing her soul, and stooping nearer and nearer to earth till she dropped into it like one of her own wind blown wall flowers when the bee has sucked out all its sweetness and the heats have scorched up all its bloom; yes, of course, she would marry Jeannot and end so!

Meanwhile he had his Gretchen, and that was the one great matter.

So he left the street of Mary of Burgundy, and went on his way out of the chiming city as its matin bells were rung, and took with him a certain regret and the only innocent affection that had ever awakened in him; and thought of his self negation with half admiration and half derision; and so drifted away into the whirlpool of his amorous, cynical, changeful, passionate, callous, many colored life, and said to himself, as he saw the last line of the low green plains shine against the sun: "She will marry Jeannot—of course she will marry Jeannot. And my Gretchen is greater than Scheffer's."

What else mattered very much, after all, except what they would say in Paris of Gretchen?

CHAPTER XX.

The wheat was reaped in the fields, and the brown earth turned afresh. The white and purple chrysanthemums bloomed against the flowerless rose bushes, and the little gray Michaelmas daisy flourished where the dead carnations had spread their glories. Leaves began to fall, and chilly winds to sigh among the willows; the squirrels began to store away their nuts, and the poor to pick up the broken, bare boughs.

"He said he would come before winter," thought Bebee every day, when she rose and felt each morning cooler and grayer than the one before it; winter was near.

Her little feet already were cold in their wooden shoes, and the robin already sang in the twigs of the sear sweet briar; but she had the brave, sweet faith which nothing kills, and she did not doubt—oh! no, she did not doubt, she was only tired.

Tired of the strange, sleepless, feverish nights; tired of the long, dull, empty days; tired of watching down the barren, leafless lane; tired of hearkening breathless to each step on the rustling dead leaves; tired of looking always, always, always, into the ruddy autumn evenings and the cold autumn starlight, and never hearing what she listened for, never seeing what she sought; tired as a child may be, lost in a wood, and wearily wearing its small strength and breaking its young heart in search of the track forever missed, of the home forever beyond the horizon.

Still she did her work and kept her courage.

So she toiled hard and learned much, and grew taller and very thin, and got a look in her eyes like a lost dog's, and yet never lost heart or wandered in the task that he had set her, or in her faith in his return.

"Burn the books, Bebee," whispered the children again and again, clinging to her skirts. "Burn the wicked, silent things. Since you have had them you never sing, or romp, or laugh, and you look so white—so white."

Bebee kissed them, but kept to her books.

Jeannot going by from the forest night after night saw the light twinkling in the hut window, and sometimes crept softly up and looked through the chinks of the wooden shutter, and saw her leaning over some big old volume with her pretty brows drawn together, and her mouth shut close in earnest effort, and he would curse the man who had changed her so, and go away with rage in his breast and tears in his eyes, not daring to say anything, but knowing that never would Bebee's little brown hand lie in love within his own.

Nor even in friendship, for he had rashly spoken rough words against the stranger from Rubes' land, and Bebee ever since then had passed him by with a grave simple greeting, and when he had brought her in timid gifts a barrow load of fagots, had thanked him, but had bidden him take the wood home to his mother.

"You think evil things of me, Bebee!" good Jeannot had pleaded, with a sob in his voice; and she had answered gently:

"No; but do not speak to me, that is all."

Then he had cursed her absent lover, and Bebee gone within and closed her door.

She had no idea that the people thought ill of her. They were cold to her, and such coldness made her heart ache a little more. But the one great love in her possessed her so strongly that all other things were half unreal.

She did her daily house work from sheer habit, and she studied because he had told her to do it and because, with the sweet, stubborn, credulous faith of her youth, she never doubted that he would return.

Otherwise there was no perception of real life in her; she dreamed and prayed, and prayed and dreamed, and never ceased to do either one or the other, even when she was scattering potato peels to the fowls, or shaking carrots loose of the soil, or sweeping the snow from her hut door, or going out in the raw, dark dawn as the single little sad bell of St. Guido tolled through the stillness for the first mass.

For though even Father Francis looked angered at her because he thought she was stubborn and hid some truth and some shame from him at confession, yet she went resolutely and oftener than ever to kneel in the dusty, dusky, crumbling old church, for it was all she could do for him who was absent—so she thought—and she did not feel quite so far away from him when she was beseeching Christ to have care of his soul and of his body.

All her pretty dreams were dead.

She never heard any story in the robin's song or saw any promise in the sunset clouds or fancied that angels came about her in the night—never now.

The fields were gray and sad; the birds were little brown things; the stars were cold and far off; the people she had used to take care for were like mere shadows that went by her meaningless and without interest, and all she thought of was the one step that never came; all she wanted was the one touch she never felt.

"You have done wrong, Bebee, and you will not own it," said the few neighbors who ever spoke to her.

Bebee looked at them with wistful, uncomprehending eyes.

"I have done no wrong," she said gently but no one believed her.

A girl did not shut herself up and wane pale and thin for nothing, so they reasoned. She might have sinned as she had liked if she had been sensible after it, and married Jeannot.

But to fret mutely, and shut her lips, and seem as though she had done nothing—that was guilt indeed.

For her village, in its small way, thought as the big world thinks.

CHAPTER XXI.

Full winter came.

The snow was deep, and the winds drove the people with whips of ice along the dreary country roads and the steep streets of the city. The bells of the dogs and the mules sounded sadly through the white misty silence of the Flemish plains, and the weary horses slipped and fell on the frozen ruts and on the ragged stones in the little frost shut Flemish towns. Still the Flemish folk were gay enough in many places.

In the little village above St. Guido, Bebee's neighbors were merry too, in their simple way.

The women worked away wearily at their lace in the dim winter light, and made a wretched living by it, but all the same they got penny playthings for their babies, and a bit of cake for their Sunday hearth. They drew together in homely and cordial friendship, and of an afternoon when dusk fell wove their lace in company in Mere Krebs' millhouse kitchen, with the children and the dogs at their feet on the bricks, so that one big fire might serve for all, and all be lighted with one big rush candle, and all be beguiled by chit-chat and songs, stories of spirits, and whispers of ghosts, and now and then when the wind howled at its worst, a paternoster or two said in common for the men toiling in the barges or drifting up the Scheldt.

In these gatherings Bebee's face was missed and the blithe soft sound of her voice, like a young thrush singing, was never heard.

The people looked in and saw her sitting over a great open book—often her hearth had no fire.

Then the children grew tired of asking her to play, and their elders began to shake their heads; she was so pale and so quiet there must be some evil in it—so they began to think.

Little by little people dropped away from her. Who knew, the gossips said, what shame or sin the child might not have on her sick little soul?

True, Bebee worked hard just the same and just the same was seen trudging to and fro in the dusk of dawns and afternoons in her two little wooden shoes. She was gentle and laborious, and gave the children her goat's milk, and the old women the brambles of her garden.

But they grew afraid of her—afraid of that sad, changeless, far away look in her eyes, and of the mute weariness that was on her—and being perplexed were sure, like all ignorant creatures, that what was secret must be also vile.

So they hung aloof and let her alone, and by and by scarcely nodded as they passed her, but said to Jeannot:

"You were spared a bad thing, lad; the child was that grand painter's light-o-love, that is plain to see. The mischief all comes of the stuff old Antoine filled her head with—a stray little by blow of chick weed that he cockered up like a rare carnation. Oh! do not fly in a rage, Jeannot; the child is no good, and would have made an honest man rue. Take heart of grace, and praise the saints, and marry Katto's Lisa."

But Jeannot would never listen to the slanderers, and would never look at Lisa, even though the door of the little hut was always closed against him, and whenever he met Bebee on the highway she never seemed to see him more than she saw the snow that her sabots were treading.

One night in the midwinter time old Annemie died.

Bebee found her in the twilight with her head against the garret window, and her left side all shriveled and useless. She had a little sense left, and a few fleeting breaths to draw.

Bebee found her in the twilight, with her head against the garret window.

"Look for the brig," she muttered. "You will not see the flag at the masthead for the fog to-night; but his socks are dry and his pipe is ready. Keep looking—keep looking—she will be in port to-night."

But her dead sailor never came into port; she went to him. The poor, weakened, faithful old body of her was laid in the graveyard of the poor, and the ships came and went under the empty garret window, and Bebee was all alone.

She had no more anything to work for, or any bond with the lives of others. She could live on the roots of her garden and the sale of her hens' eggs, and she could change the turnips and carrots that grew in a little strip of her ground for the quantity of bread that she needed.

So she gave herself up to the books, and drew herself more and more within from the outer world. She did not know that the neighbors thought very evil of her; she had only one idea in her mind—to be more worthy of him against he should return.

The winter passed away somehow; she did not know how.

It was a long, cold, white blank of frozen silence; that was all. She studied hard, and had got a quaint, strange, deep, scattered knowledge out of her old books; her face had lost all its roundness and color, but instead the forehead had gained breadth and the eyes had the dim fire of a student's.

Every night when she shut her volumes she thought:

"I am a little nearer him. I know a little more."

Just so every morning, when she bathed her hands in the chilly water, she thought to herself: "I will make my skin as soft as I can for him, that it may be like the ladies' he has loved."

Love to be perfect must be a religion as well as a passion. Bebee's was so. Like George Herbert's serving maiden, she swept no specks of dirt away from a floor without doing it to the service of her lord.

Only Bebee's lord was a king of earth, made of earth's dust and vanities.

But what did she know of that?

CHAPTER XXII.

One day in the May weather she sat within doors with a great book upon her table, but no sight for it in her aching eyes. The starling hopped to and fro on the sunny floor; the bees boomed in the porch, the tinkle of sheep's bells came in on the stillness. All was peaceful and happy except the little weary, breaking, desolate heart that beat in her like a caged bird's.

"He will come, I am sure he will come," she said to herself; but she was so tired, and it was so long—oh, dear God!—so very long.

A hand tapped at the lattice. The shrill voice of Reine, the sabot maker's wife, broken with anguish, called through the hanging ivy:

"Bebee, you are a wicked one, they say, but the only one there is at home in the village this day. Get you to town for the love of heaven, and send Dr. Max hither, for my pet, my flower, my child lies dying, and not a soul near, and she black as a coal with choking—go, go, go!—and Mary will forgive you your sins. Save the little one, dear Bebee, do you hear? and I will pray God and speak fair the neighbors for you. Go!"

Bebee rose up, startled by the now unfamiliar sound of a human voice, and looked at the breathless mother with eyes of pitying wonder.

"Surely I will go," she said, gently; "but there is no need to bribe me. I have not sinned greatly—that I know."

Then she went out quickly and ran through the lanes and into the city for the sick child, and found the wise man, and sent him, and did the errand rather in a sort of sorrowful, sympathetic instinct than in any reasoning consciousness of doing good.

When she was moving through the once familiar and happy ways, as the sun was setting on the golden fronts of the old houses and the chimes were ringing from the many towers, a strange sense of unreality, of non existence, fell upon her.

Could it be she—she, indeed, who had gone there the year before the gladdest thing that the earth bore, with no care except to shelter her flowers from the wind and keep the freshest blossoms for the burgomaster's housewife?

She did not think thus to herself, but a vague doubt that she could ever have been the little, gay, laborious, happy Bebee, with troops of friends and endless joys for every day that dawned, came over her as she went by the black front of the Broodhuis.

The strong voice of Lisa, the fruit girl, jarred on her as she passed the stall under its yellow awning that was flapping sullenly in the evening wind.

"Oh, he, little fool!" the mocking voice cried. "The rind of the fine pine is full of pickles and stings the lips when the taste is gone, to be sure. Crack common nuts like me and you are never wanting—hazels grow free in every copse. Prut, tut! Your grand lover lies a-dying—so the students read out of this just now—and you such a simpleton as not to get a roll of napoleons out of him before he went to rot in Paris. I dare say he was poor as sparrows, if one knew the truth. He was only a painter after all."

Lisa tossed her as she spoke a torn sheet, in which she was wrapping gentians; it was a piece of newspaper some three weeks old, and in it there was a single line or so which said that the artist Flamen, whose "Gretchen" was the wonder of the Salon of the year, lay sick unto death in his rooms in Paris.

Bebee stood and read, the strong, ruddy western light upon the type, the taunting laughter of the fruit girl on her ear.

A bitter shriek rang from her that made even the cruelty of Lisa's mirth stop in a sudden terror.

She stood staring, like a thing changed to stone, down on the one name that to her filled all the universe.

"Ill—he is ill—do you hear?" she echoed piteously, looking at Lisa; "and you say he is poor?"

"Poor? for sure! is he not a painter?" said the fruit girl, roughly. She judged by her own penniless student lads, and she was angered with herself for feeling sorry for this little silly thing that she had loved to torture.

"You have been bad and base to me, but now—I bless you, I love you, I will pray for you," said Bebee, in a swift, broken breath, and with a look upon her face that startled into pain her callous enemy.

Then without another word, she thrust the paper in her bosom, and ran out of the square breathless with haste and with a great resolve.

He was ill—and he was poor! The brave little soul of her leaped at once to action. He was sick, and far away, and poor, they said. All danger and all difficulty faded to nothing before the vision of his need.

Bebee was only a little foundling who ran about in wooden shoes; but she had the "dog's soul" in her—the soul that will follow faithfully though to receive a curse, that will defend loyally to meet a blow, and that will die mutely loving to the last.

She went home, how she never knew; and without the delay of a moment packed up a change of linen, and fed the fowls and took the key of the hut down to old Jehan's cabin. The old man was only half witted by reason of his affliction for his dead daughter, but he was shrewd enough to understand what she wanted of him, and honest enough to do it.

"I am going into the city," she said to him; "and if I am not back to-night, will you feed the starling and the hens, and water the flowers for me?"

Old Jehan put his head out of his lattice; it was 7 in the evening, and he was going to bed.

"What are you after, little one?" he asked; "going to show the fine buckles at a student's ball? Nay, fie—that is not like you."

"I am going to—pray—dear Jehan," she answered, with a sob in her throat, and the first falsehood she had ever told. "Do what I ask you—do, for your dead daughter's sake—or the birds and the flowers will die of hunger and thirst. Take the key and promise me."

He took the key and promised.

"Do not let them see those buckles shine; they will rob you," he added.

Bebee ran from him fast; every moment that was lost was so precious and so terrible. To pause a second for fear's sake never occurred to her. She went forth as fearlessly as a young swallow, born in northern April days, flies forth on instinct to new lands and over unknown seas when autumn falls.

Necessity and action breathed new life into her. The hardy and brave peasant ways of her were awoke once more. She had been strong to wait silently with the young life in her dying out drop by drop in the heart sickness of long delay. She was strong now to throw herself into strange countries and dim perils and immeasurable miseries, on the sole chance that she might be of service to him.

A few human souls here and there can love like dogs. Bebee's was one.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Osman Digna is a fugitive, fleeing with a few women and followers to Berber.

THE PACIFIC BANK

has issued its twenty-seventh annual statement, which is indeed an interesting circular, and proves in figures that the past year has been the most prosperous one the Bank has ever had. It is a matter upon which all Californians may be congratulated, that the Bank still has the same able and conscientious President, Dr. R. H. McDonald, and its popular Cashier, his son Frank V. McDonald.

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED.

TO THE EDITOR—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy free to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their express and post-office address. Respectfully,

T. A. SLOCUM M. C., 181 Pearl St., New York.

A woman may weep in a palace
That her marriage did occur,
But she will rejoice in a hovel
With the fellow who's good to her.

Dr. Wallace Ely has removed his offices to 215 Powell St., San Francisco, Cal., where he continues to give special attention to Kidneys, Bladder, Prostate Gland and all diseases arising therefrom. Diabetes and Bright's Disease treated according to the latest approved method. Most cases can be treated successfully by correspondence. Consultations daily from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. WALLACE ELY, M. D., 215 Powell St., 4 doors from Geary st., San Francisco, Cal.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

A man gets too old for a great many things, but the ability to make a fool of himself is never outgrown.

Cancers cured or no charges made. Mrs. S. J. Bridge, 1130 Market Street, San Francisco.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.

No other baking powder does such work.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil and HYPOPHOSPHITES of Lime and Soda

is endorsed and prescribed by leading physicians because both the Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites are the recognized agents in the cure of Consumption. It is as palatable as milk.

Scott's Emulsion is a perfect Emulsion. It is a wonderful Flesh Producer. It is the Best Remedy for CONSUMPTION, Scrofula, Bronchitis, Wasting Diseases, Chronic Coughs and Colds.

Ask for Scott's Emulsion and take no other.

Old Gold and Silver Bought; send your old Gold and Silver by mail to the old and reliable house of A. Coleman, 11 Third street, San Francisco; I will send by return mail the cash, according to assay; if the amount is not satisfactory will return gold.

DR. R. W. PAYNE,

Specialist for Nose, Throat and Lungs.

Academy of Sciences, San Francisco, Cal.

DEPUE & AYDELOTTE'S

BUSINESS COLLEGE,

OAKLAND, CAL.

Bookkeeping, 6 mos., $50; Shorthand, 6 mos., $50; Telegraphy, 6 mos., $50.

NO VACATIONS. SEND FOR CIRCULARS, ETC.

ASK SMITH'S CASH STORE 416 FRONT ST. S.F.

to send you their catalogue of cash prices to consumers the

HOME CIRCLE.

Address as above. Mention this paper.

VASELINE.

FOR ONE DOLLAR sent us by mail, we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all the following articles carefully packed in a neat box:

One two-ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline	10 cts.
One two-ounce bottle Vaseline Pomade	15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream	15 "
One cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, scented	25 "
One two-ounce bottle of White Vaseline	25 "
	—$1.10

Or for stamps any single article at the price named.

If you have occasion to use Vaseline in any form be careful to accept only genuine goods put up by us in original packages. A great many druggists are trying to persuade buyers to take VASELINE put up by them. Never yield to such persuasion, as the article is an imitation without value, and will not give you the result you expect. A bottle of Blue Seal Vaseline is sold by all druggists at ten cents.

Chesebrough M'f'g. Co., 24 State St., New York.

Westcott & Co., SEEDSMEN

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

ALFALFA AND GRASS SEED.

Send for Price List and Calendar.

BROOKLYN HOTEL Bush St., bet. Montgomery & Sansome, S. F.; conducted on both the European and American plan. This Hotel is under the management of Charles Montgomery, and is the best Family and Business Men's Hotel in San Francisco. Home comforts, cuisine unexcelled, first-class service, highest standard of respectability guaranteed. Board and room, per day, $1.25 to $2.00; single room, 50 cts. to $1.00 per night. Free coach to and from the Hotel.

INFANTILE SKIN SCALP AND BLOOD DISEASES CURED BY Cuticura

EVERY HUMOR OF THE SKIN AND SCALP of infancy and childhood, whether torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, scaly, crusted, pimply, or blotchy, with loss of hair, and every impurity of the blood, whether simple, scrofulous, or hereditary, is speedily, permanently, and economically cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood and Skin Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. Parents, save your children years of mental and physical suffering. Begin now. Delays are dangerous. Cures made in childhood are permanent.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston, Mass. Send for "How to Cure Skin and Blood Diseases."

Baby's skin and scalp purified and beautified by CUTICURA SOAP.

Kidney pains, backache, and muscular rheumatism relieved in one minute by the celebrated CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

INDISPENSIBLE TO HOUSEKEEPERS. Ask Your Dealer for it. Write for Circular. AMERICAN OIL CO., Agts. 11 to 15 Main St. San Francisco, California.

STEINWAY, Gabler and Pease Pianos. Meaning the BEST PIANO MADE, and the favorite cheaper Pianos; all Musical Instruments; Bands Supplied; large stock of Sheet Music. STEINWAY HALL, 208 & 208 Post Street, MATTHIAS GRAY CO. Call and see our new rooms and new stock.

BEST TREE WASH.

Greenbank Insecticide, powdered Caustic Soda, etc.

BEST SHEEP WASH.

Calvert's Carbolic. Prices reduced. T. W. JACKSON & CO., Sole Agents, 104 Market St., S. F.

CANNON'S DIP.

The Advantages Claimed for this Dip are:

It is Non-Poisonous, and can be used with perfect safety at all times and in all circumstances.

It saves time and trouble no precautions being required as in the case of poisonous Dips.

It does not stain the wool, but promotes and improves its growth, improves the appearance and increases the value of the wool.

It is composed of the very best materials, and never varies in strength and quality.

It never fails to produce the desired effect.

Its effects are lasting.

It is easy to use and does not require heating.

Its use may be repeated on the same Sheep as often as desired without the slightest risk of injury.

Non-Poisonous, Easy to Use, and Always Effective.

LIBERAL DISCOUNTS TO THE TRADE.

J. W. GRACE & CO.,

430 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco, Cal., Agents for the Pacific Coast.

PISO'S REMEDY FOR CATARRH.—Best. Easiest to use. Cheapest. Relief is immediate. A cure is certain. For Cold in the Head it has no equal.

CATARRH

It is an Ointment, of which a small particle is applied to the nostrils. Price 50c. Sold by druggists or sent by mail. Address: E. T. HAZELTINE, Warren, Pa.

This Picture, Panel size, mailed for 4 cents.

CURE Biliousness, Sick Headache, Malaria.

J. F. SMITH & CO., Makers of "Bile Beans," 255 & 257 Greenwich St., N. Y. City.

BILE BEANS.

$15,000 IN GOLD AND HANDSOME PRESENTS GIVEN AWAY.

THE NASHVILLE WEEKLY "AMERICAN"

FREE BIBLE COMPETITION

"SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES" AT ONCE.

An Easy Way to Receive a Big Reward

To the 500 persons answering correctly, on or before April 30, 1891, our simple Bible question, "Where in the Bible is first found the word "Prosperetth?" we will give the following rewards:

1—One Cash Present in Gold	$1,250 00
2—One Cash Present in Gold	1,000 00
3—One Handsome Upright Piano	1,000 00
4—One Fine Family Carriage	1,000 00
5—One Pair Match Horses	1,000 00
6—One Handsome Full Pedigreed Stallion	500 00
7—One Pair Ladies' Diamond Ear Drops	500 00
8—One Beautiful Set Furniture	500 00
9—One Handsome Well Bred Driving Mare	500 00
10—One Cash Present in Gold	175 00
11—One Cash Present in Gold	150 00
12—One Beautiful Folding Bed	150 00
13—One Breech-Loading Shot Gun	150 00
14—One Gold Watch, Gent's	100 00
15—One Ladies' Gold Watch	100 00
16—One Silver Plated Tea Set	100 00
17—One Farm Wagon	75 00
18—One Family Clock	50 00
19—One Road Cart	35 00
20—One Fine Sewing Machine	25 00
To the next 10 each	Solid Gold Watch
To the next 20 each	Solid Silver Watch
To the next 100 each	Solid Gold Ring
To the next 100 each	Photograph Album
To the next 100 each	Handsome Gold Pen and Holder
To the next 150 each	A Handsome Present valued at $2 50

If a competitor should fail in the first he will stand an opportunity for one of our

MIDDLE REWARDS.

To the 500 persons whose names come in the middle, counting from number one to the last received, we will give the following rewards:

1—One Cash Present in Gold	$500 00
2—One Fine Top Buggy	200 00
3—One Fine Gros Grain Silk Dress	150 00
4—One Writing Desk	125 00
5—One Set Jewelry	100 00
6—One Gent's Suit to order	75 00
7—One Cook Stove	50 00
8—One China Dinner Set	50 00
To the next 250 each a Handsome Present valued at	$3 00

LAST REWARDS.

To those who are too late for any of the above rewards a special opportunity still remains. To the 500 persons whose names come in last we will give the following rewards: To the last named on the list we will give $250.00 in cash; to the next last we will give $100.00 in cash; to the third name from the last we will give $50.00 in cash; to the next 497 a handsome present worth $2.00.

TOTAL VALUATION, Over $15.000 in Gold and Handsome Presents.

Each competitor must in every case send $1.00 for one year's subscription to the NASHVILLE WEEKLY AMERICAN with their answer. No names will be recorded unless accompanied with the cash, for which we will send, postpaid, our splendid WEEKLY AMERICAN. Present subscribers can compete by paying for another year or for a friend. The subscription price of our WEEKLY AMERICAN is only $1.00 a year, so for the above presents. The present will be sent to the successful ones, and their names published in our WEEKLY AMERICAN, the first part of May 1891. Don't delay. The WEEKLY AMERICAN is worth much more than the money, and by answering quickly you may secure one of the largest rewards. The receiving of your paper will be your receipt.

YOU PAY NOTHING FOR COMPETING

Every parent should encourage children to enter this contest. Besides familiarizing themselves with the Bible, they secure a highly deserving and entertaining family newspaper. We enter every letter in the order and on the day received, and number the names as received and recorded in our subscription books, hence there can be no mistake. We cannot make corrections in answers after letters are received and entered. If you don't get anything but our WEEKLY AMERICAN, you will be thoroughly satisfied; it has no equal at the price. No answers will be recorded bearing postmark date later than April 30, 1891. You must send before that date. Send money by postal note, money order or registered letter, express, or draft on Nashville or New York. Do not send checks on local banks. We pay no attention to answers in letters without subscriptions to the WEEKLY AMERICAN. Don't send postal cards or telegrams. The AMERICAN is an old established family newspaper, over sixty years old; is handsomely printed, pure and elevating in tone, and a favourite in thousands of homes. To satisfy all as to its merits we mail sample copies for 5 cents. We cannot send them free.

REFERENCE: Any bank or business house in Nashville. Address

THE AMERICAN, Nashville, Tenn.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor.

Independence, Cal.,

FRIDAY, MAY 1, 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXII. NO. 46. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., MAY 1, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1070.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.25
Three Months	1.50
One Month	50
Single Copies	5

ELECTRICAL FISH.

How the Ray Defends Itself When Attacked.

POWERFUL BATTERIES AS WEAPONS.

How the Fresh Young Man From the City was Taken in.

Some years ago a young man, in all the glory of his first knickerbockers, found himself in a small village on the New England coast, and, liking the location, determined to spend the season there. The morning following his arrival he ran down to the beach, where he found a crowd of red shirted men gathered aroung a flat fish about three feet in length. "We're trying to get some one to heft it," said an old sea dog in answer to a question. "Lift it! Why, a child could do that," remarked the young man from the city.

"P'raps he could," replied the fisherman; "but if you kin lug the fish from here to the dory over yonder you kin earn $5."

"You're a fine lot of men," said the city youth, with a laugh; "can't lift a fish of that size! Why, I'll wager the same amount that I can throw it that far."

The fishermen were very anxious to take the wager, and finally the young man approached, thrust his fingers into the eyes of the fish, and, if it had been any other fish we might have said, prepared to throw, but as it was the moment his hands touched the fish a strange look of surprise came over his face, and those near might have seen a certain rigidity of the muscles. He retained the same position for several moments, then, with many grimaces, asked to be relieved, and amid roars of laughter the fish was pulled from his hands. When the young man had recovered his equanimity he confessed that it was the heaviest fish he had ever attempted to lift.

The fish was the ray, known popularly as the torpedo (torpedo marmoratus), and one of the most powerful of the marine electricians.

It is said that the physician of Cleopatra, Deoscorides, used these fishes in medicine. and Dr. Walsh, F. R. S., was probably the first to introduce its use in England.

The experiment of Dr. Walsh created a craze that swept over this country some few years ago. The most extravagant stories were circulated about the fish and its marvelous powers of healing, and it became a fashionable fad to go to the Isle of Re and take an electric shock from the fish of Dr. Walsh.

The living torpedo in these experiments was placed upon a wet towel, and from the fish extended two pieces of wire, the ends of which rested in bowls of water. A circle of persons was formed, those upon the end placing their fingers in the water, and in this way the shock was received by the entire party, and often equaled that of a Leyden jar in its intensity.

In examining the torpedo the electrical apparatus is very noticeable, being made up of two large, flat bodies lying on each side of the head. The organs are composed of numerous prisms placed vertically, each of which is subdivided by delicate septa, forming small cells, which contain a clear, tremulous, jelly like substance. In a specimen of torpedo marmoratus one may count nearly 500 of these prisms.

It has been found that the upper side of the fish is negative and the lower positive, and that the power is entirely under the control of the fish. Some curious experiments have been made; thus, the scientist Marez applied a telephone to the fish and at every ordinary shock given he distinctly heard a click. When the fish was greatly excited a loud groan was heard, which sounded like "mi," and the discharge was prolonged four or five seconds.

The electrical discharge of this fish is not of sufficient power to kill a man unless he was in an extremely enfeebled condition, but that it is fatal to other fishes has been noticed on many occasions. Moreau, a French observer, noticed turbot fall upon a torpedo in a fishing boat and the result was instantaneously fatal. They leaped high in air upon receiving the shock, and fell back dead and rigid and remained for some time bent in a curve. In appearance the torpedo is a flat fish, with a rounded head and short, thick tail.—Electrical Review.

Carving Fowls.

A goose is carved the same as a wild duck (this is also the case with a tame duck) and should be served up with turnips or olives. It should be sufficiently well done for it to be possible to carve it with a spoon or the point of a knife. Pigeons when roasted are divided into four pieces. When no company is present the most equitable way is to cut a pigeon in two longitudinally.

Chickens and capons are carved very much in the same way as turkeys. The legs make two pieces, the wings three, the white meat is left in whole slices, and the carcass is separated into six pieces. Chickens and capons are much improved by the use of truffles, but, as George Grant will tell you, truffles cannot be got in America.—Cor. Chicago Herald.

A Bear in the Road.

Six oxen ought to be enough for one bear, but they are not. On an evening not long ago John R. Sullivan, of Whitneyville, was journeying home from Wesley with six oxen tied together. When in the vicinity of Six Mile Hill they suddenly halted and manifested great fear. Mr. Sullivan, who went forward to ascertain the cause, found a very large bear standing erect in the middle of the road, and not more than two rods distant. Mr. Sullivan threw a few stones at the bear, which responded by hopping around upon its haunches and waving its fore paws as if it meant business; but the next volley caused him to assume a different attitude, and with angry snarls he left the road.—Augusta (Me.) Journal.

The Mother Bear Came Back for Revenge.

One day while proceeding up a canyon in the Raton mountains a large silvertip bear and her cub leaped out and made a rush up the sloping side of the valley. There were three in our party, and every Winchester began to talk very earnestly and excitedly. The cub tumbled dead the first fire. I call him a cub, but the truth is he was more than half as large as his mother and weighed 240 pounds. The old lady did not show any injury, and the moment the young one tumbled she turned and came back square in the teeth of the rifles, and seizing her dead cub in her mouth as a cat does a kitten raised it fairly clear of the ground and cantered up the hill—no easy matter, as aside from the 240 pounds of limp and dragging weight she had to force her anxious, loving way through oak brush which in many instances might have detained a steer. She got fairly away albeit we fired several shots after the cub fell.

We had just reloaded the magazines of our Winchesters and were communing as to taking the trail of the old bear, which showed wide and clear in broken bushes and disturbed oak leaves and pine needles, when looking up we beheld our game coming back straight for us. She meant business, too. Her red and steaming tongue lolled out of her half open mouth, and her eyes, partially closed in rage, would have seemed quizzical in expression were it not for the ferocity which leaped and flashed in their depths, like sheet lightning behind some cloud screen. She came straight to us, and we settled her troubles at the first fire. We found the cub up on the divide. She had carried it at least sixty rods, with two bullet holes in her shaggy hide, as we found when we skinned her.—Kansas City Star.

Frightened to Death.

C. W. Dunham, a prominent Kensington man, died from the effects of an accident which happened to him Saturday morning while working at his occupation as a butcher. Mr. Dunham was dressing a hog, and as he drew the body toward him a knife, which lay unnoticed upon the bench, was thrust into his groin, cutting an artery. Dr. Gillin, of Berlin, was sent for, and when he arrived it was found that surgical aid was necessary, and Drs. Lyon and Comings, of New Britain, were summoned. The flow of blood was checked, the wound was dressed and the patient left in a comfortable condition.

During the night Mr. Dunham awoke, and, thinking he was bleeding again, sent for Dr. Gillin, but when the doctor arrived Mr. Dunham had passed away. This led the doctor to believe that another artery must have been cut, so an examination was held this afternoon, and as no trace of arterial blood was found upon the bandage it was certain that the man had not bled to death, and the only theory given is that, as the patient was very weak from loss of blood, the sudden thought that he was bleeding to death caused a shock which stopped the pulsations of the heart, or, in other words, the man was frightened to death.—Hartford Courant.

A French Girl's Predicament.

A comical contretemps has just taken place in one of the provincial towns of France. Over twenty years ago the wife of a prominent citizen gave birth to a little girl who was christened Camille, and whose birth, according to French law, was duly registered at the mayor's office. But as Camille is a name that is given to boys as well as to girls in France, the mayor made a mistake in entering the registration, and set down the infant as being a boy. Time passed on and the other day Mlle. Camille—who was on the point of being married—received a notice to report "himself" for military service. Owing to the overwhelming red tapeism of French official matters, the poor girl has had all the trouble in the world to prove that she is really a young woman and not a man at all. Moral: Mothers in France should never bestow upon their daughters names that are masculine as well as feminine.—Paris Cor. Pittsburg Bulletin.

Trick of a Sturgeon.

A strange accident occurred on the steamer Columbia near Reeder's landing a few days ago. John Bernard, a sturgeon fisherman, was hauling in a huge fish, when it suddenly took a run, and before he could get clear of the line he was dragged overboard and came near drowning before assistance could reach him. Bernard is a brother to the man who was run down and drowned from a fishing boat by the steamer S. G. Reed about two years ago, and was in the boat at the time his brother was drowned. By a strange coincidence the accident occurred at exactly the same place where the fatality occurred two years ago.—Astoria (Ore.) Columbian.

He Weighed 504 Pounds.

Dr. Charles T. Bean died at his home in Chelsea recently of pneumonia. A few years ago he was obliged to abandon outdoor practice on account of growing obesity, and has been confined to his home. His general health has been fair and his mind not impaired. His unnatural corpulence, which amounted to a disease, steadily incrcased, however, and a short time since he turned the scales at the enormons weight of 504 pounds.—Boston Herald.

A Lemon Shine for a Russet Shoe.

Before putting away your russet shoes for the winter you will want to restore their old color. How will you do it? Very simply. Just squeeze the juice of a lemon on a bit of soft cloth, give the leather a thorough treatment with this, and see if your shoes don't look as well as they did when you bought them.—New York Journal.

A Cactus with 710 Blossoms.

Apropos to the fact that Amesbury claims a cactus with 44 blossoms and Georgetown one with over a 100 blossoms, it is interesting to know that in this city there is one with 710 blossoms on it.—Newburyport News.

FARM AND ORCHARD.

Valuable Suggestions to the Producers.

THE OLIVE IN FOREIGN LANDS.

Interesting Notes For the Farmer and Orchardist.

The olive is extensively cultivated in the south of Europe, solely for the sake of the oil, which is obtained from its fruit. This is a small green oval berry, containing a hard stone, in which are two seeds. The fruit must be gathered a little before it is quite ripe; the olives are spread on the floor of a room, and left several days to dry and to ferment slightly; they are then crushed in a mill, and then put into bags made of rushes, or of course canvass, which, being subjected to pressure in a screw press, the oil flows out and is received into proper vessels, which are half filled with water, on top of which the oil floats and is easily skimmed off. Where the process is carefully periormed, the stone of the berry is not broken when the fruit is first put into the mill, the mill stones being set far enough apart to avoid doing so, and the oil first drawn off is of superior quality. After all this is expressed, the mass, stones and all, is either returned to the mill, and the stones are broken, or the same effect is produced by mixing up the mass with boiling water and increasing the power of the press; by repeating this operation, not only a second, but even a third, quality of oil is obtained.

The best oil is made in the neighborhood of Lucca, Italy; that consumed in England is produced principally in Tuscany or Naples, though a great deal is brought from Spain, and some from the Ionian Islands. In this country, as an article of food, it has been heretofore treated as a luxury, and principally used by the middle and upper classes. Now, however, all classes are being educated to the fact that it is a very desirable article, both as a food and a medicine.

The following facts in regard to it are so well narrated by the Frenchman, Bertile, that we quote them: "Rich in azote, and with considerable nutritive qualities, olive oil possesses in the first place, the power of assimilating with the human body. It is instrumental in assisting in many medical cures where the method is cutaneous. It being more liquid than animal fat; always used for that purpose, it is easier to absorb. The injured parts, protected from the air by the oily substances or salves, heal more quickly. These unctions give, besides, more suppleness and elasticity to the muscles. As it is not penetrated by the poisons in the atmosphere it is used with success in counteracting the deleterious miasma around swampy districts. Taken daily by the spoonful, it is an excellent laxative to the system, and not tiresome to the stomach."

In the countries which produce the olive, the oil constitutes a large proportion, in some way or other, of the food of the people, and is an absolute necessity.

The refuse of olives, after the oil is obtained from it, is given to hogs to fatten them, is burnt as fuel, or used as a manure. The unripe fruit is also pickled in salt water, flavored with some spice, and is eaten in many countries as a relish. It is also largely used on the European Continent to improve the flavor of certain wines.

The touching story of the flight of the dove from Noah's Ark, related in Genesis, proves the existence of the olive tree in the earliest period of the world's history. It was a celebrated tree among the ancients. The Romans used the wood not only as a fuel, but on the altars of their gods; it was the emblem of peace; it held the first rank in their mythology. Minerva taught the Athenians how to prepare the fruit, and they had a most religious respect for it.—Rural Californian.

BUG ORDINANCE.

The San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors at their last meeting amended a previously passed ordinance to read as follows: The ordinance while stringent is just and we hope it will be carried out to the letter.

SECTION 1. No person or persons either as owner, agent, servant or employee shall bring or cause to be brought into San Bernardino county, California, from any district, county or State, any trees, vines, shrubs, scions, cuttings, grafts, fruits, plants, flowers or vegetables, without giving notice within twenty-four hours after their arrival at their destination to a member of the County Board of Horticultural Commissioners of said county, or to the local inspector of the district into which they are brought, nor plant, sell, expose for sale, give away or otherwise distribute any of the articles mentioned in this section, or cause the same to be done, until they shall first have been inspected as hereinafter provided and disinfected to the satisfaction of the County Board of Horticultural Commissioners of said San Bernardino county or the local inspector thereof acting under the direction of said County Board of Horticultural Commissioners.

SECTION 2. If upon a careful inspection by a Horticultural Commissioner or local inspector of said county of San Bernardino, any of the articles enumerated in section one of this ordinance shall be found to be infested with any live scale or insect pests detrimental or injurious to fruit trees or the product thereof, or to plant life, such infested articles shall be removed from the limits of the county within 48 hours, at the expense of the owner, agent or shipper, or disinfected or destroyed. The owner, agent or shipper shall have the right to elect as to the removal of said infested articles from the county or to have the same destroyed, by order under the direction of the County Board of Horticulture.

SECTION 3. Wherever the said board deem it necessary for the safety of the horticultural interests of the county, they may hold in quarantine for subsequent inspection or disinfection, or both, any of the articles mentioned in section one of this ordinance, for 14 days or less as in their judgment is necessary.

SECTION 4. The County Board of Horticultural Commissioners are hereby authorized to require any or all articles, as enumerated in section one of this ordinance, brought into San Bernardino county to be disinfected, even though a careful inspection by a Horticultural Commissioner or focal inspector should show such articles to be apparently free from scale or insect pests.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilder.

Richard Watson Gilder, editor of The Century, is thin and slight, with long gray hair, a piping, reedy voice, delicate features and a manner of nervous modesty. He looks the last man alive to have won such a very great prize as the editorship of The Century, which came about in this wise: When quite young Mr. Gilder started a small publication, Golden Days, or something of the sort. It was bought by The Century company, and its editor, who had had the good luck to win Dr. Holland's approval, was made that gentleman's assistant. A few years later Dr. Holland died, and the directors of the enterprise honored his memory by putting young Gilder in his place.

Mr. Gilder's sanctum is the handsomest in New York—in fact, altogether aesthetic. It has an open fireplace, brass andirons, with rugs, hangings, draperies and pictures in the highest style of art. It is full of greens at Christmas, of flowers at Easter. In it Mr. Gilder is altogether charming. His wife is much more substantial looking than he is. She is a cousin of Mrs. Grover Cleveland—hence the intimacy between the two families. Mrs. Gilder is also much given to art, and spends much time at the brush, especially in summer, when she is at Marion, Mass., where her husband has had built for her a studio of big granite blocks which is said to be the most unique in America.—Epoch.

An Army Electrical Corps.

The New York Electrical Review, in commenting on the suggestion recently advanced by Lieut. Fiske, and now under consideration, that an electrical corps be established in the army and navy to take charge of electrical appliances in time of war, refers to the fact that a few months ago it advanced some ideas on the same subject. It suggested that electrical men might, profitably to themselves, enroll themselves as members of the New York naval militia, and thus in a certain degree return the obligation the electrical profession owes the navy, from the ranks of which many of its most distinguished workers have been recruited.

The Electrical Review is inclined to think that some of the officers and men now in the service could be advantageously detailed to such work. In case of emergency a fair supply of competent engineers could be made available, but if civilians were pressed hurriedly into action their lack of military training might prove a serious embarrassment, so that a much higher standard of efficiency would be attained by having such a corps equipped with men skilled in the tactics of warfare.

Plea for Cosmetics.

One can't in the least blame American women if they do spend, as Kate Field says they do, $62,000,000 a year for cosmetics. Mighty sum indeed for women to spend in keeping their persons sweet and attractive, considering how many million women there are to spend it, and the women don't spend it nearly all, either! Who buys the expensive French tooth washes, essences and pomades but gentlemen? Who uses the finest face powders but the men who patronize first class barbers? Take it any way you please, send in the whole bill to the women, and it comes to about $3 a year for toilet necessaries, not by any means all white lead or calomel. Please remember that the cosmetic art is older than that of medicine and was a science before the latter was anything better than conjuring.—Shirley Dare.

Chance for Argument.

Cultured Mother—Did you write to the tailor about that suit of clothes?

Small Son—Yes, ma; here's the letter.

C. M.—Mercy! you've spelled suit s-o-o-t.

S. S.—Isn't that right?

C. M.—Of course not. Soot is the black stuff.

S. S.—These clothes are of black stuff.

C. M.—But soot is the black stuff that gathers in a chimney. The word you should use is s-u-i-t. It comes from the French and means set."

S. S.—But these clothes don't set. That's why we're sending 'em back.—Good News.

Mr. Gloer's Large Family.

Mr. Isaac D. Gloer is a man of ordinary size, weighing about 160 pounds, but he is the head of a family that weighs in aggregate numbers 1,500 pounds, and there are only four children and six in family. Mr. Gloer lives in Bowman, Ga., and is consequently a near neighbor.

Here is the way it comes about: Mr. I. D. Gloer, the old man, weighs about 160 pounds; his wife weighs 300 pounds, while his children come as follows: his son Isham weighs 190 pounds; Joseph weighs 300 pounds; Mary, 300 pounds; David, 300 pounds, which makes a total of 1,500 pounds for a family of six persons.—Athens Ledger.

An Esthetic Arab.

It was on a Back Bay street. A ragamuffin picked up a faded chrysanthemum from the sidewalk. He ran up to a gentleman passing by. "Got a pin, mister?" The gentleman saw the Arab's ambition to get the flower on the lapel of his coat, and obligingly pinned it on for him.—Boston Transcript.

A beautifying wash: Take equal parts of white tansey and rhubarb water, and to every half pint add two drams of sal ammoniac. The fluid is applied with a feather or hair pencil three or four times a day to pimples or tetters on any part of the body.

WRINGING THE HANDS.

How to Manage Them in Company.

SOMETHING FOR THE AWKWARD TO LEARN.

Making Them Unconscious.—Try it Once.

"Few people are thoroughly at ease about the disposition of their hands in company," said a teacher of the art of gesture. "And yet there is a very simple thing that may be done to get rid of that disagreeable consciousness of the members which give rise to the difficulty. You see, the hands are far more highly educated in this age of mechanical civilization than they have ever been before. It may almost be said that the brain has found its way to the ends of the fingers—that these extremeties have come to possess an inherent intelligence. For this reason the attention is so fixed by habit upon the hands that they feel awkward, just as any other part of the body will do if you think particularly about it.

"You have only to fix your attention on your little toe in order to have it become within a minute positively painful. It has often occurred to me that those monks of the Middle Ages who devoted their minds devoutly to the steadfast contemplation of their stomachs, for the purpose of bringing on a trance condition, must have felt a grievous need of Jamaica ginger.

"So, in order to be graceful in the disposal of your hands, it is only necessary to get rid of consciousness about them, and you may accomplish this to a surprising extent by a very simple gymnastic process. Let them hang limply and wring them as violently as possible for five minutes, say. This will render them unconscious to a great extent, so that you will not be disturbed for some time after by the excess of feeling in them. Consequently, while the effect lasts, you will find yourself at ease about your hands and will have no trouble about their management.

"You will be astonished, if you try it, to find how admirably it works. I have recommended it to hundreds of people, and they have uniformly found it successful. Do it once every day for a month and you will discover that, by the mere practice of the habit, your embarrassment in this regard has been greatly diminished. The time to perform the operation, obviously, is just before you enter a room full of company, though it will not do very well to be found wringing your hands in the vestibule of a house to which you have been invited, or engaged in what may appear to be a frantic exhibition of grief in the reception room."—Washington Post.

A Relic of Territorial Days.

When Noah McNaught was at Hamilton he was shown a wagon wheel which was found buried high up on the mountain side and covered with two feet of earth. From appearances it had been there sixty years. The tire was wide, the spokes were rotted off at the point of intersection with the felloes. The hub and felloes were tolerably well preserved. The root of a tree as large as a man's body had grown through and broken out three spokes. There was no mark in the dense forest indicating that a wagon road had ever existed in that neighborhood. In accounting for how this wheel could ever have gotten there, an Indian tradition recites that a government party took its wagons to pieces and packed them on the backs of mules, that one mule bearing this wheel on its back was precipitated from the mountain side and killed by the fall, leaving the wheel to be covered by the earth as the surface of the mountain became invaded.—Washington Farmer.

Sugar from Sorghum.

In a report issued by the British government is a document from the English consul at Chicago, which states the positive opinion of the author that sugar making from sorghum is now an established fact, and he believes that it will double the value to the American farmer of his corn lands. He is satisfied that hereafter there will be no difficulty of getting from 7 1-2 tons of cane 750 pounds of sugar and 1,000 pounds of molasses and 900 pounds of seed—the whole valued at over $50. This is double what the same area of wheat or Indian corn would produce. In some states—Kansas, for instance—the consul believes this industry will add a six-fold value to the farm lands. When it is remembered that but a few years ago the attempt was almost abandoned by the government as hopeless, such a report from anything but a favorable source is very encouraging.—New Orleans Picayune.

Variety in the Color of Eggs.

It may be taken as a general rule that the eggs of most birds vary more or less as regards size, shape and coloring. Guillemots' eggs vary in ground color from grayish white to grass green. The eggs of the red grouse, the rock and the plover also vary to a great extent, both in color and marking. It sometimes happens that birds whose eggs are usually bright and artistically colored will lay pure white ones, and instances of this in the case of the yellow hammer have come under the notice of the writer. House sparrows' eggs have likewise been taken quite destitute of coloring, while blackbirds' eggs have been found of a blackish hue.—Hardwicke's.

A Curious Ailment.

A curious connection between the color and the auditory sense has been observed by Dr. Albertine. He has discovered that persons suffering from daltonism, that is, color blindness to certain hues, have a corresponding deafness to certain musical notes. Special instances are given. For example, a person not having the sensation of red cannot distinguish the note sol, a person blind to green cannot recognize re, nor can the notes be produced by the voice.—Philadelphia Record.

Accounted For.

Chicago Man (in hotel corridor to fellow guest).—Excuse me, sir, but I believe you have taken my hat by mistake; I just came out of the dining room and noticed my peg was empty; yes (trying it on), I was right. This is my hat.

Fellow Guest—But, sir, you must be in error. Why, it is altogether too small for you.

Chicago Man (haughtily)—Precisely. But you must bear in mind, sir, that I bought that hat before we got the World's fair.—Clothier and Furnisher.

A Mind for Emergencies.

(Agitated whistle from composing room.)

Editor—Well?

Voice down the tube—Th' ain't no standin' matter, 'nd Murphy's pied a hull galley o' type!

Editor (promptly)—Shove it into the form and head it "The Pied Piper of Hamelin, by Robert Browning!"—Drake's Magazine.

Objected to Whole Bricks.

An old negro came tumbling out of a cabin, and just as he fell in the road, a short distance away, a brick thrown from the house struck him on the head. He lay there for several moments, and then, getting up, turned to a white man who happened to be passing and, as he wiped the blood off his head, remarked:

"Dat's jes' zackly whut make me say whut I does say."

"And what do you say?" the white man asked.

"W'y, dat dis marryin' dat the white folks talk so much erbout is er failure sho 'nuff. Now, dar's dat lady in de house (again wiping off the blood) dat I has thought er good 'eal o'. But now look at me. Is I fitten to go in s'ciety wid sich er lady fur er wife? Long ez she didn' fling nothin' but brickbats, w'y she'd sorter do, an' I could go in s'ciety wid her, but now dat she is tuck ter flingin' whole bricks w'y I kain't put up wid it. Look out fur dese ladies dat flings whole bricks."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Willing to Learn.

A Buffalo lady, showing a friend from Boston her fine house and grounds, explained that a pipe which ran across the lawn was intended to supply a fountain, "but," she added, "it doesn't work now; it's bust."

Madam's daughter, much mortified, took the first opportunity to whisper in her mother's ear: "Ma, you shouldn't say 'bust,' say 'burst.'" Ma, not too old to learn, made grateful mental note, and later on was quick to seize an opportunity to regain the ground she had presumably lost. A chief ornament of madam's drawing room was a marble presentment of her departed husband. To this she called the guest's attention.

"It is a burst of my dead husband," she said, with infinite complacency.

The guest has gone back to Boston.—Buffalo Express.

Trying His Best.

Son to Father—Dear Father: I enclose a tailor's bill for $50. Please send me check. Your loving son.

Father to Son—My Dear Son: Check enclosed. $50 is too much for you to pay for a suit. See if you can't do better next time. Your loving father.

Son to Father—Dear Father: Yours received. I have just ordered another suit for $45, and enclose bill. I may be able even to beat this next time. Your dutiful son.—Clothier and Furnisher.

Why It Was Realistic.

Heavy Villain (during a breathing spell, while he is being killed by the hero)—Say, old man, ain't you putting a little too much life into this? You're almost choking me.

Hero (tightening his grip)—At last, base villain, I have thee! (Sotto voce) I'll ease up when you promise to pay me that five dollars you owe me.—Lawrence American.

The Hackman in the Forest.

"Would you like to leave?" said the wood chopper to the Young Tree.

"I don't know but I wood," answered the Young Tree. "Can you take me down with a hack?"

"I guess so," said the chopper; "seeing you've only got one small trunk."—Puck.

The Proper Word.

A young lady (hesitating for a word in describing a rejected suitor)—He is not a tyrant, not exactly domineering, but——

"Dogmatic," suggested her friend.

"No, he has not dignity enough for that. I think pupmatic would convey my meaning admirably."—Chatter.

An Old Saying Newly Said.

Miss Kewt (who wants to bring him to the point)—I think some old bachelors are horrid.

Mr. Batchellor—What about present company?

Miss Kewt—Present company always accepted.—Judge.

At Lonelyville in July.

He (tenderly)—Do you know what makes me linger here, and why I have not left this little village two weeks ago?

She (archly)—Perhaps you are waiting for money to pay your board.—Drake's Magazine.

His Job.

"What are you working at now?" said one young man to another.

"Nothing."

"It strikes me you ought to have had that done by this time."—Washington Post.

An Old Saw.

Mahler—What a nonsensical saying that is, "Money talks."

Shaler—I think it a very wise one. "Money" does "talk," and its remarks are invariably full of cents.—Chatter.

Anatomical.

Quizz (to butcher)—Where do you say is the heart of the city?

Butcher—I hardly know; but it must be somewhere near where the lights are.—Lowell Citizen.

Infelicitous Queries.

He—By the by, talking of old times, do you remember that occasion when I made such an awful ass of myself?

She—Which?—Punch.

UNDER A TRAIN.

A Young Woman's Coolness Saves her Life.

WONDERFUL PRESENCE OF MIND.

Hanging Beneath a Trestle While a Train Thunders Above.

Clinging for her life to a rough beam while a flying express train thundered and swayed above her head. Swinging in midair with death above and below her until almost exhausted by the fatigue that came of the terrible strain upon her, physically and mentally.

This was the direpredicament in which Miss Norma Onken, of Ridgeway avenue, Avondale, was placed one afternoon, and it was only due to her cool judgment and calm presence of mind that she did not meet with a shocking death. In attempting to cross a railroad trestle which spans the rocky bed of Bloody Run, a little bed north of Avondale, she was run down by an express train, the engineer of which was endeavoring to make up for lost time by running at full speed. To prevent being hurled from the trestle she was compelled to let herself down on the outside of the track and hang on until she was rescued.

With Mr. Richard Hall, of Walnut Hills, and Miss Nannie Fisher, of Avondale, she started out for a walk. They went along the Cincinnati and Lebanon and Northern Narrow Gauge railroad toward Lebanon, and as they reached the trestle Mr. Hall and Miss Fisher held back, fearing to meet a train. Miss Onken, though knowing it to be near train time, thought to cross the trestle before the train could come.

She was about half way over when the Montgomery accommodation, due in Cincinnati at 2:35, whistled. She looked up and was horrified to see the train driving toward her with great speed. It was train No. 12, of which Ed. F. Doherty is conductor and Lee Barnard trainman, and it was traveling between thirty-five and forty miles an hour. When Miss Onken saw the train coming toward her she displayed a wonderful presence of mind by throwing herself over the side of the trestle and there clinging to the timber.

The engineer, George Collins, seeing the gentleman and lady at the other end of the trestle, reversed the engine and stopped as soon as possible; but it was not until he had passed Miss Onken some distance. Running back on the trestle Doherty and Barnard each took one of Miss Onken's hands and pulled her up on the track. Her face was black and blue, and she was more dead than alive. She was exhausted and could have held on but a very short time longer.

Without help just at that time she would have fallen into the creek twenty feet or more below her.

After resting a few moments she was able to resume her walk, none the worse for her harrowing experience. The spot where the scene occurred is noted for accidents. On the 4th of July last an old colored woman was thrown from the trestle and dreadfully injured, breaking two of her limbs and fracturing her skull. Three weeks ago there was a collision at this point, and one of the battered engines is still half buried in the mud there.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Poor Mrs. Vanderbilt.

New Yorkers are getting to be the most inveterate and cold blooded starers. I once saw Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, a sweet faced and rather pretty woman, come into Stearn's to do some shopping. The women about heard who she was and they stood around her in a circle and simply feasted their eyes upon every detail of her dress and appearance. They loudly called each other's attention to her earrings—solitaire pearls—to the fit of her dress and the way it hung in the back. They came closer and felt it. They studied the way she had her hair done up and suggested that it was worth trying when they got home. They stood shoulder to shoulder with her and learned her hat by heart. She was admirable through it all, pretended she did not see or hear or feel, finally turned around to go, with a blankly absent expression, the cortege thronging around her and escorting her, still loudly commenting, to her carriage.—Cor. San Francisco Argonaut.

Telegraph Offices and Messages.

There are two telegraph offices to every 10,000 of the population in Great Britain; in Tasmania there are eleven telegraph offices to each 10,000 of the population. In Great Britain there are 251 miles of wire to every 1,000 square miles of area; in Denmark there are 662 miles of wire to each 1,000 square miles of area. In Great Britain there are 143 messages per head per year of the people; in West Australia there are 7.5 messages per head.—New York Telegram.

Musical Mrs. Tayler.

Old Mrs. Tom Taylor, widow of the dramatist, is one of the finest amateur pianists in London. She is very small and quite feeble, but it is quite wonderful to see her hobble across a drawing room to the piano and a moment later charm and bewitch everybody by the sad, sweet and almost timid melodies she will play. Her eyes are so weak that she could not read the music if it was on the rest, and so she plays from memory or else improvises, taking her own mood for the theme.

A Practical Enterprise.

A very practical and much needed enterprise has been recently started in Washington by two ladies. It is a nursery where mothers of every nation and rank are taught how to feed and bathe their babies scientifically as well as sensibly, and how to put their troublesome charges to sleep. Samples of food are shown, and the best method of preparing them taught, and after the lecture the prepared food is given to the baby most in need of it.—Exchange.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

C. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY MAY 1 ..... 1891.

The death of Count Von Moltke is a sensational episode in European history.

Helmuth Karl Bernhard Von Moltke was born at Parchim, Mecklenburg, October 26, 1800. His father was a Danish general. Moltke entered the Prussian service in 1822; ten years later after hard study, he was admitted to the general staff. With the permission of the Prussian authorities he went to Constantinople in 1835, where he assisted in improving the fortifications of Turkish cities. He also assisted in the warfare against the Kurds and against Egypt. After his return to Berlin he was employed for many years in staff service, and in 1856 became adjutant to Prince Frederick William, and in 1858 chief of the general staff of the army. The rank of lieutenant-general was conferred upon him in 1859. After the battle of Sardowa Moltke was rewarded with the order of the black eagle and the command of the Kolberg or Second Pomeranian grenadier regiment.

Having long foreseen the contingency of a war with France, he was ready with his plans when it suddenly broke out in 1870, and their execution resulted in the most astonishing and uninterrupted series of victories ever achieved by one great military nation over another.

Besides conferring upon him the title of count and making him large donations, the emperor of Germany appointed him, in 1871, general field marshal, and in 1872 life member of the upper house.

A good many people are disappointed because silver has not advanced more rapidly under the larger purchases of the Treasury. It should be borne in mind, however, that there was known to be a surplus of from 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 ounces which could be used to keep the market price down. A New York dispatch says that London houses which have large interests East have manipulated the stock in interest of purchasers. It is estimated that the stock on hand has decreased by about 6,000,000 ounces, though as yet the market does not show it. If this estimate is true, or about true, when another 6,000,000 ounces has been absorbed it will be impossible to prevent a rise in the silver market. Silver was several years in getting down to its present ratio with gold, and time will be required to get it back. The fact that there is a general assent to the present silver policy which promises permanency will tend to restore prices.

Fava resided in the United States ten years as Minister from Italy. In that time he ought, if a fairly intelligent man, to have gained considerable knowledge of our system of government, of its dual character, of its Federal and State relations, of the decisions made concerning Federal and State liabilities, etc. But Fava has reached Paris on the way to Rome, and has unbosomed himself, disclosing that he is either a dissembler or else is ignorant of the American system of government. Really, he appears to understand less concerning it than the ordinary immigrant of six months' residence in the United States. Of course Fava's ignorance is assumed, and for a purpose.

The movement inaugurated through the co-operation of the State Board of Trade to investigate the legal and land basis of bonds issued by irrigation districts in this State, to the end that they may be definately established as valid securities in the market, promises great benefit to the irrigation projects which so greatly concern the future of California. The Chamber of Commerce has been brought in line with the Irrigation Association and State Board of Trade in the investigation, and when the report comes it will be with the endorsement of all these bodies, which is such as surely to inspire confidence of investors.

Jack the Ripper has appeared in New York. A horrible crime, possessing all the characteristics of the Whitechapel atrocities, was committed there Thursday night. The victim bore the brand of the ripper, and the police of Gotham are firm in their belief that the crime is the work of the original Jack. It is hoped they may be more successful in catching the fiend than were the London cops.

A WOMAN'S BUSINESS DRESS.

Editor Mary F. Seymour's Idea of a Costume That Any Woman Could Wear.

The resolution in regard to suggestions for a business costume for women, adopted by the recent national council of women at Washington, has created a deal of discussion among women in all parts of the country.

Miss Mary F. Seymour, editor of The Business Woman's Journal, in an interview with a reporter of the New York Sun, expressed herself on the subject as follows:

"Laying aside the question whether such a costume would be advisable or not, there is no doubt that women who are engaged in business are greatly hampered by the style of dress now in vogue. It takes twice as much exertion in a woman to walk as in a man, and you know when women are compelled to work for their living they cannot afford to expend their strength recklessly. The greatest difficulty which business women have today is to select the right kind of dress. Now my suggestion would be, in the first place, to wear a short skirt, one that would reach to the tops of the shoes. One of the greatest drawbacks of the long skirt which business women wear at present, next to its weight and clumsiness, is its tendency to drag in and catch hold of the mud in the streets and the dust on the floor. The short skirt would do away with this.

"A woman with both arms full of papers or packages could step boldly across a street, no matter how wet or dirty it might be, without being compelled to stop, transfer her burden to one arm, or hold some of it between her teeth in order to lift her skirts. This skirt should not be of heavy material; cashmere or silk is preferable to heavy woolen goods. The weight of heavy garments, distributed as it is in the skirts of woman's dress today, exhausts the vitality. Instead of having the many underskirts women are wont to have, I would suggest heavy Turkish trousers. These would be a great deal lighter than the number of skirts which would be necessary to give the same warmth, and, besides, would leave the limbs free to move. The skirt would then do nothing but conceal these trousers.

"The objection will probably be raised that such a short skirt will expose the foot in an undesirable way. It is true that women have big feet, and nothing makes them look bigger than a skirt which exposes the entire shoe and nothing more. To remedy this I would suggest that fancy leggings be worn, which extend from just above the toes to three or four inches above the shoe tops. These would conceal the line between the shoe and the stocking, and, besides having a pretty effect, would make the foot look smaller than it really is.

"So much for the lower part. The waist should be as simple and as comfortable as the dressmaker's skill can make it. I once designed a dress for myself which embodied all my ideas of comfort and convenience. The waist consisted of a jacket and a vest in one piece. The jacket was in reality nothing but two long lapels which covered a part of the body of the waist. In the vest were four pockets arranged just as they are in a man's waistcoat, two in the upper and two in the lower part. On the outside of the two lapels were two pockets similar to those on a man's coat. In the back drapery were inserted two oblong pockets, the openings of which were drawn together by elastic cord. Under one of the panels, on the right and the left sides, I had long pockets."

The reporter next asked Mrs. Lillie Devereux Blake what she thought of the idea of a business woman's costume.

"I think," she said, "that one of the greatest strains that business women could put themselves under would be to dress out of the fashion of the day. I shrink from any suggestion of a dress for women that would make the wearer conspicuous and an object of ridicule. Business women, more than all others, are dependent upon the favor of the public, and for them to wear a garment that would make them ridiculous would be almost suicidal.

"I believe that comfortable dresses can be made within the lines of fashion. They should be perfectly loose and easy, and not too long—three or four inches above the ground would be plenty. The most disagreeable and uncomfortable part of a woman's dress is the band around the waist. This can be obviated in a degree by wearing the waist and the skirt of one piece. That is, the lining of the dress is all one piece, and the drapery is put on that according to the fashion of the day or the taste of the wearer."

Mrs. Roscoe Conkling.

The reappearance of Mrs. Roscoe Conkling on the streets of New York brings back to the thousands of friends of her lamented husband, who were familiar with her face only at rare intervals, recollections of her earlier beauty. Mrs. Conkling must be more than sixty now. She is unusually tall looking, being so erect, and in her mourning garments seems actually taller than her real height, which can't be less than 5 feet 6. Her eyes are blue and her features finely chiselled. Seen side by side with Mrs. Grant, the contrast between her stately proportions and the shorter, stouter figure of her companion, whose complexion is much darker, is noticeable. Mrs. Conkling's married daughter, Mrs. Oakman, was the companion of these two ladies on their visit to the Conkling painting in the Hoffman House.—New York World.

The Chatelaine Bouquet.

The chatelaine bouquet is quite the rage. It is long stemmed and is suspended from the waist by a chatelaine of handsome ribbon, and usually consists of roses and foliage or carnations and lilies of the valley. The chatelaine bouquet is, however, appropriate only with bridal or dancing toilets.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

In England celery is much used as a last course at dinner, dipped in grated cheese—that is, the cheese is passed with it and the celery dipped as it is eaten.

A Strategic Promoter.

A man told me the other day—he would not have his name mentioned for evident reason—that when he had a big scheme to push the first thing he did was to get into debt with the people he wanted to enlist in his enterprise. "Then, of course," said he, "by helping me out they help themselves." Specious logic, to be sure, but cleverly plausible on its outward face.—Boston Traveler.

ON THE ITALIAN COAST.

Pale evening paused on a purple peak
To greet the sun ere he sank to rest;
Her brows he kissed, and her pallid cheek,
And left a blush on her dusky breast.

Then viewless lassos she softly threw
Around the necks of all living things,
Bringing them home in the twilight blue,
Amid patter of feet and flutter of wings—

Into the blue and out of the gold;
Sea birds home to their airy nests,
Lowing herds to the humble fold,
And children home to their mothers' breasts.

Tonight I paused on a purple peak,
When daylight died on the darkling main,
And something moistened my weary cheek
As thoughts long dead came to life again.

But there were no lassos my birds to draw,
My birds, my herds and my children home.
The night alone and her stars I saw,
And shadowy Ætna's awful dome.

O restless soul! Can nothing restore
The pride and promise of former years?
Or art thou a surge on yon iron shore
Which breaks and forever disappears?

—William E. S. Fales in New York World.

Admirals Rivals in Rhyme.

A London friend sends me quite a pretty story anent the daughter of Sir Edwin Arnold. She is her father's secretary and his companion in most of the journeys round the world. During her recent stay in Japan her majesty's China squadron ships and the American Pacific fleet were in the harbor of Yokohama at the same time. Sir Edwin and his daughter entertained the admirals of both fleets at luncheon, and in return were naturally invited on board the ships. The American fleet was first visited, and upon leaving the gallant American admiral presented Miss Arnold with a beautiful bouquet, tied with ribbons of the ship, as a token of the respect of himself and his officers.

This American courtesy came to the ears of the English commander, and not to be outdone by his American brother he presented Miss Arnold with a larger bouquet and doubled the number of ribbons. Then the American admiral sent Miss Arnold a few verses of his own composition. This was going a little further than the English officer was capable of, but he had some verses written to Miss Arnold and dispatched them to her three days afterward. The daughter then told her father, and she immediately found a third contestant. That same afternoon brought her another beautiful bouquet and attached was a card bearing the following lines:

TO MY DAUGHTER.

Oh, happy maid, whom two great flags conspire
To honor—blending rich melodious posies,
When admirals rhyme, the muse unstrings her lyre
To bind in pride their mayflowers and their roses.

EDWIN ARNOLD.

—Philadelphia Times.

Mrs. Gladstone.

She is one of the most charming looking women you ever saw—a sweet, kind face framed in full, soft, lovely hair and topped by a cap of velvet and lace. A gown that falls in artistic folds and doesn't rustle, and a way of looking at you as if she were interested in everything you said—that's Mrs. Gladstone. She does not care for society as it is meant by the round of balls and receptions and the giving and going to them, but she is delighted when she is at the head of her own dinner table and has about her a circle of friends who know and love her and Mr. Gladstone. Unlike the wife of any other prime minister, she never went in for having a salon, for surrounding herself with rich and powerful friends who would simply care to be received at the house of a prime minister, and yet have no real interest in the cause which he so thoroughly and entirely championed.

Instead, she has given her time to caring for him, to seeing that he was under any and all circumstances as comfortable as possible, and that in this way his health was preserved for the nation for whom he did so much good. Her happiest moments are when she is with her husband at Hawarden, but on every important occasion she has always been by his side. Just remember that this means going over the country in railway trains, being for hours on open air platforms, and then you will understand why the people of England worship Mrs. Gladstone as a heroine.—Cor. Ladies' Home Journal.

A Noble Work.

Mrs. James S. Gibbons has turned her beneficence in the channel of charity, and her large contributions to the Women's Prison association have done much to make its standing solid and sure. Mrs. Gibbons was one of the first founders of the home, and it has been mainly through her untiring efforts that a law has been passed demanding that women prisoners should be searched and looked after by women. Mrs. Gibbons visits all the prisons and talks with the women. When they leave the prison she gives them a refuge in the home until they get started, and oftentimes she finds them situations.

"Mine is a particular calling, that of helping the female prisoners," she said. "Such a woman is the most unhappy of all human beings. Once a criminal always one, and the world has not a tear for her. Our prison association hunts all these women up and leads them to a higher and nobler purpose in life."—New York Recorder.

The great plagues formerly filled nations with terror; but they are now well nigh conquered, and are known mainly as matters of history. Smallpox was a frightful disease, even within the present century, but is now powerless to gain a foothold anywhere in Christendom.

There are two prominent occupations in which there seems to be no distinction of sex in regard to honor or compensation. On the stage and in the field of literature men and women meet as equals.

Lucca, the singer, will hereafter devote herself exclusively to teaching, and she will receive only eight pupils, and such as show that they have a good future before them.

No less than 17,000 young girls and women, homeless, friendless, helpless and foodless, sleep in the open-all-night shelters of Stepney Green, London, in a year.

Gas Explosions in British Coal Mines.

In the course of last year it appears that no fewer than 285 lives were lost by explosions of gas in the coal mines of Great Britain, and nearly all of these took place during the first six months. Of the total deaths stated it appears that 273 took place in the South Wales mining district, and in nearly every instance resulted from the use of naked lights or blasting.—London Tit-Bits.

A Daring Project.

One of the features of the coming electrical exhibition at Frankfort-on-the-Main will be the transmission of power on a scale hitherto never attempted. When it was announced some months ago that it was proposed to transmit 100 horse power from Lauffen-on-the-Necker to Frankfort, a distance of more than one hundred miles, the statement was received with smiles of incredulity, but now it seems quite probable that not only will the experiment be tried, but that it will succeed, in spite of the engineering difficulties that have to be surmounted.

The government has been asked to supply line for the purpose, and on the system used the expense will not necessarily be at all severe, for the use of very high potential alternating currents is the feature of the scheme as at present planned. The alternating generator will supply a step-up transformer, that in turn will transmit its secondary current at an enormously high potential along the line, to be re-transformed by a step-down transformer at Frankfort to a potential practicable for an alternating motor. A series of experiments carried out recently at Oerlikon involve the use of pressures as high as 33,000 volts on the line.

At such a potential the current transmitted becomes so small that the line is a relatively small factor in the losses incurred, even though it be of the extreme length proposed. Nothing can better illustrate the characteristic advantages of the alternating system than this beautiful process of generating and utilizing currents at a moderate potential and transmitting them from station to station at a pressure so enormous that the losses in transit become insignificant.—Electrical World.

Greek Must Go.

The most dangerous attack on Greek in the schools and colleges yet seen was made the other day in England at a meeting of the head masters of the Eton, Harrow, Rugby, Winchester, Westminster, Charter House, St. Paul's, Clifton and other schools—one of their usual annual or semi-annual gatherings. It was led, or in fact made, by Mr. Welldon, the head master of Harrow. He advocated the abolition of obligatory Greek both at school and college and the substitution of science or modern languages, on two grounds.

The first was the need of adapting education to individual tastes and capacity. The second—in the interest of Greek study itself—was that the Greek language might be left in the hands of those who really loved it, and could cultivate it with success—to a sort of classical elite, in short, who would rescue it from its degraded condition as the bugaboo of dunces and sluggards. There was a good deal of discussion, pro and con, which elicited nothing very new, but Mr. Welldon came within two votes of carrying his resolution, this adverse majority being obtained by the adhesion of two of the smaller schools.

We doubt if anything so ominous for Greek has yet occurred, for the English public schools are its stronghold today, and indeed England may be said to be its main champion. It has never struck such deep roots in education and general culture on the continent or in this country.—New York Nation.

The Iron Port of the World.

Escanaba is the county seat of Delta county, Mich. It lies at the foot of the great pine forests and overlooks Little Bay de Noquet, the head waters of Green bay. Five years since it was practically a village in the wilderness.

According to Mr. Nursey's carefully written report, capable of the fullest verification, Escanaba is the greatest iron port of the world. He tells us that during the navigation season of 1890 it shipped 3,700,000 tons of iron ore, or nearly double that of all the ore ports of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota combined. Its lumber output amounted to about 120,000,000 feet, while the freight capacity of the vessels entering and clearing from its port exceeded 8,000,000 tons. This compares with the tonnages of the greatest seaports of the world, which are: (1) London, 19,000,000; (2) Liverpool, 14,000,000; (3) New York, 11,000,000, and next comes Escanaba with 8,000,000 tons.—Iron.

Round the World in Eighty Days.

The first of the new vessels of the Canadian Pacific line, built to establish communication between Vancouver and Japan, has left Liverpool for Vancouver, and she takes with her a number of passengers at an inclusive charge of £120 for an all-round-the-globe trip. The vessel is a magnificent specimen of the skill of the English shipbuilder. Her complement of passengers is full, and these glorified trippers are timed to be back in England within eighty days after their departure from Liverpool. They will go by way of the Suez canal and the Indian and Pacific oceans, and will cross Canada on the Canadian Pacific line.—London Tit-Bits

The Duty on Imported Gas.

The treasury department has approved the action of the collector of customs at Buffalo exacting duty on natural gas imported into that district in pipes under the Niagara river from the interior of Canada. Assistant Secretary Spaulding has informed the collector that no objection is perceived to the course suggested by him of requiring daily entries of estimated quantities and the liquidation at the end of the months according to the quantities shown by the returns of the meter.—Washington Star.

Sounded Like a Cyclone.

Two young men of the city are said to have gone out walking a day or two since, when they chanced to stroll near the old pond place above the upper factory. They heard something like a cyclone and were very much alarmed until they approached the old dam, under which was a square hole which was originally left to draw off the pond occasionally. In this was seen five large serpents which were standing upright and hissing most vigorously.—Athens (Ga.) Leader.

UNGARNERED.

The sunlight flecks my cottage floor;
A singing bird swing high, swings low,
Among the elfin sprites that blow
Red throated trumpets at my door
To wake the morning flowers.
My baby, serious eyed and wise,
Beholds the sun god's scattered wealth.
Night gowned he crawls, with clumsy stealth,
To snatch the gold from where it lies;
I watch him with the silent thought
That all the world are snatching gold
They cannot for the moment hold,
While all about, unheard, unsought,
Are songs of birds and sunny hours.

—America.

How Sparrows Clear Away Snow.

On the east side of Central park, at Sixty-seventh street, stands a clump of pine trees, where toward evening it seems as if all the sparrows in the park congregate to gossip and scold and quarrel with each other, and to pass upon the doings of their gray coated, wingless, club carrying namesakes.

The recent snow storm, however, made things rather uncomfortable for them. Every needle of the big pines was covered with the pretty, soft, light flakes, which didn't seem so pretty to the pugnacious, feathered little English-Americans. So they perched themselves on the Fifth avenue stone wall and on the rocks near by, and with their saucy looking bull heads cocked to one side held a council of war that was almost distracting to the aristocratic people that live on the other side of the street.

They seemed at length to have devised a plan to clear their perches, for they flew into the trees and then half a dozen at a time dove through the needles and against the smaller perches with such force that the light, dry snow was shaken off and fell to the ground in little white clouds. At the end of half an hour of hard work their home was entirely cleared of the disagreeable stuff.

Then, of course, they must needs hold a thanksgiving meeting, which was even more distracting than the council. But all things have an end, and one by one the noisy chatterers snuggled up to each other, sank down on their perches, tucked their heads under their wings and went to sleep to dream about cake crumbs and big fat worms.—New York Herald.

Fateful January.

The death of the Belgian heir to the throne, Prince Baudouin, has revived the old superstition concerning the fatefulness of January for the royal family of Belgium. The record of events that have caused the superstition has been increased of late years with remarkable rapidity. In January, 1867, the Empress Charlotte, sister of the Belgian king, became insane in consequence of the shooting of her husband. The king's only son, crown prince and Duke of Brabant, died on Jan. 23, 1869. In January, 1881, the royal castle in which the Empress Charlotte lived was destroyed by fire. In January, 1889, Crown Prince Rudolf of Austria, the Belgian king's son-in-law, was killed in the tragedy of Meyerling. On New Year's day, 1890, the royal castle at Laeken burned down. "Alas!" exclaimed the Belgian queen when the news of the fire was brought to her in Brussels, "it is this terrible January. It always brings us misfortune."—New York Sun.

The Carbons Ticked the Message.

A dozen people who stood chatting at San Antonio, Tex., were treated to a most remarkable electrical phenomenon. At that time the elements had entered into a conflict, seemingly, with the electric fluid from the trolleys and telegraph wires, and blue and white flashes of flame were leaping wildly from water spouts and door casements. Suddenly the carbons within the large globes hanging in the center of the room began that incessant clicking heard in a telegraph office, and the experienced ear of an operator, who happened to be one of the group, detected the fact that it was a veritable message being transmitted in the usual symbols. A notebook and pencil were drawn and the message, which proved to be an Associated Press dispatch, was written out; it was the description of the Reform club banquet, and gave the speech of Mr. Cleveland in New York city. A telegraph and electric light wire coming together is supposed to have caused the phenomenon.—Exchange.

A Movement for Cleanliness.

Over in Berlin a local woman's society is distressed over the carelessness of dentists, and is agitating a reform punishing such by legal measures. It is charged that the dentists use their instruments indiscriminately and without proper cleansing. If this be true the offense is serious enough. A tyro in medical science knows that the mouth is the hotbed of septic germs; nothing could be more simple and easy than to convey all sorts of disastrous organisms from one person to another by means of forceps and excavators. The women of Berlin will do well to compel the washing of the instruments in carbolic acid in the presence of patients, as they have set out to do, if this extraordinary carelessness exists.—New York Times.

Choked to Death by a Toy Balloon.

Charles Schneider, a 7-year-old boy, was choked to death recently by getting the gum of a toy balloon fastened in his throat. He was visiting a relative, Thomas Hern, and while playing with his little friend the gum of a balloon stuck to the roof of his mouth, and he began swallowing it. Mrs. Hern's attention was attracted by the boy's playmates. She attempted to get the gum out of his mouth, but failed.

Physicians were sent for at once, and Drs. McCord and Burleigh arrived just as the boy had breathed his last. It was some time before the gum could be gotten out, as it had become firmly imbedded in the boy's throat.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Leipsic is to have an international exhibition in the summer of 1892 for the apparatus and methods of the Red Cross societies, the most improved means of feeding and clothing soldiers, hygiene and popular cooking. It will be in the Crystal Palace, a structure of about twice the size of Madison Square Garden, New York.

Some friends who attended the funeral of a young lady in London had a novel experience the other day. A few weeks before the young lady had sung "Nearer, My God, to Thee" into a phonograph, and after the funeral ceremony the hymn was reproduced.

Little Wallace Chapman, a four-year-old Kansas City boy, has a wonderful memory. He recently repeated, verbatim, a nineteen stanza poem after hearing it read aloud three times.

Don't wait until in front of a ticket seller's window before trying to find your drapery hidden pocket. If tickets can be purchased in quantities on routes you frequently travel purchase them, and save other people's temper and your own time.

Near Walker, Vernon county, Mo., a miner excavated a petrified foot 23 inches long and 20 inches around the instep, supposed to be that of a giant. The miner has been offered $150 for it, but declines the offer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and
Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

A. R. CONKLIN,
Attorney-at-Law.
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the States of California and Nevada.

JOHN W. P. LAIRD,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Independence, Cal.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)

Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED.
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.
Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday	January 24th
"	February 21st
"	March 21st
"	April 18th
"	May 23rd
"	June 20th
"	July 18th
"	August 15th
"	September 12th
"	October 17th
"	November 14th
"	December 12th

JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

General Sherman, like George Bancroft, was very fond of young people. He liked to have them about him, and frequently treated them with more consideration than he did their elders. He was a thorough democrat in his relations with his fellowmen. He would talk with a laboring man as readily as with a millionaire.—Exchange.

Walter Miller, of Middleton, Conn., makes the strange boast that he has skinned more skunks this winter than any politician in the Nutmeg state. So far his record is forty-five skins. Mr. Miller states that the only drawback to the business is that he is compelled to live practically by himself.

The late Ben Ali Haggin's un-American name is said to have been bestowed upon him by his father out of regard for a pasha who once befriended him when he was a wanderer in foreign lands without money or friends. Now the copper king's wealth is estimated at $40,000,000.

A kind of moth or butterfly is said to have become so very troublesome and destructive in Bavaria that every possible means has been taken to destroy it. The most effective method consists of attracting the pest by means of an electric light in connection with a blow fan, which draws the insects into the suction pipe by air draught and results in millions of them being destroyed.

It is reported that Lucy Long, a little sorrel mare, ridden in many battles by General Robert E. Lee, is still living in the south and in good health, safe from the infirmities common to extreme old age.

The growth of population and area in London is marvelous. A recent return shows that the metropolis comprises 700 square miles and a population of five and a half millions.

Lenten Restriction.

Fledgely—As it is all over with us I wish you would return me the ring and watch I gave you.

Alice—I cannot give them to you until after Lent.

Fledgely—But I insist upon them now.

Alice—You know, Mr. Fledgely, that I cannot indulge in any pleasure during this season.—Jewelers' Circular.

There are two counties in Georgia that have not a lawyer. They are Echols and Charlton. The returns for 1890 show further that Charlton has neither a doctor nor a dentist.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 18th day of April, 1891, in the matter of the Estate of John Mullane, deceased the undersigned, the Executor of the Last Will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, and subject to confirmation by said Superior Court, on and after Tuesday, the 12th day of May, 1891, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Mullane at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Mullane at the time of his death, in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo, State of California and particularly described as follows, to wit: The South half of the North East quarter; and the North West quarter of the South East quarter of Section No. Seven, and the South West quarter of the North West quarter of Section No. Eight, all in Township No. Nine South, Range No. Thirty-four East, Mount Diablo Meridian, containing one hundred and sixty acres.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned, near the town of Big Pine, in the County of Inyo, State of California, and may be left at the place herein designated, or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, gold coin of the United States, ten per cent. of the the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court Deed at the expense of purchaser.

RICHARD HESSIAN.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Mullane, deceased.

NOTICE OF SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 18th day of April, 1891, in the matter of the Estate of John Mullane, deceased the undersigned, Executor of the Last Will and Testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, on and after the sixth day of May, 1891, at the residence of the undersigned, near the town of Big Pine, County of Inyo, State of California, the following personal property to wit: Seventy head of stock cattle, more or less; One plow; One wagon; One horse; One cooking stove and utensils; One set harness; One shovel; One hay fork, and one trunk.

RICHARD HESSIAN.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Mullane, deceased.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of PETER DIECKSON, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNdersigned, Administrator of the estate of PETER DIECKSON, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his residence, in the town of Lone Pine, in the county of Inyo, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in the county of Inyo.

Dated April 18th, 1891.

JOHN F. LUBKEN,
Administrator of said Estate.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Thomas Parker, deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Executors of the last Will and Testament of Thos. Parker, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Executors, at the office of P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo Co., Cal., the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate, in the County of Inyo, State of California.

JOHN SHEPHERD,
S. G. REGG.
Executor of the last Will and Testament of Thomas Parker, deceased.
Dated at Independence, Cal. April 4, 1891.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, San Francisco, California. Location of works, Inyo county, Cal.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AT A meeting of the Board of Directors, held the 30th day of March 1891, an assessment (No. 12) of Ten Cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, No. 132 California street, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 12th day of May 1891, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on FRIDAY, the 29th day of May, 1891, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

G. W. LUCE, Secretary.
Office, 135 California St., San Francisco, California.

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK.....PROPRIETOR.
Horseshoeing ..... $2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

J. W. Murphy.
BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work.
Wagons and Carriages Repaired.
HORSESHOEING, $2.00 for CASH
Shop on Edwards St., opposite the Court House, Independence.

Snug little FORTUNES have been made at work for us, by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Ross, Toledo, Ohio. See cut. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Can work in spare time or all the time. Big money for workers. Failure unknown among them. NEW and WONDERFUL. Full particulars free. Address at once, H. Hallett & Co., Box 880 Portland, Maine.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, MAY 1 ..... 1891.

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 98
Lead, 4 35
Copper, 13 70
Tin, 20 40
Sugar, .06
Coffee, 20 @ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 13 @ 19.

Religious Services.

On Sunday, May 3d, Rev. E. W. Van Deventer, D. D., will be with us. Services will be held as follows: At Lone Pine, Love Feast, 10 a. m., preaching at 11 a. m. to be followed by Communion of Lord's Supper. Georges Creek at 2:30 p. m. At Independence, 7 p. m. Praise Service at 7:30. Sermon by Dr. Van Deventer and administration of the Sacrament.

On Tuesday Dr. Van Deventer will deliver his popular lecture, "The Wild Young Man and His Stay-at-Home Brother."

On Wednesday evening he will preach at Keeler.

Collection for Presiding Elder fund.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

FRIDAY, April 24, 1891.

Manuela Diaz vs. Abraham Diaz et al.—Filed complaint and issued summons.

Estate of John Lucas, deceased—Filed request for appointment of E. H. Edwards as Administrator.

MONDAY, April 27, 1892.

Hamill vs. W. W. Collins et al.—Clerk's entry of default.

Filed demurrer Stecker vs. Fife.

WEDNESDAY, April 29 1891.

Filed stipulation, Frank Silva vs. Southern Development Company.

Filed stipulation, Broder vs. A. R. Conklin et al.—Time set for hearing, Monday, May 25, 1891.

THURSDAY, April 30, 1891.

Filed petition for appointment of guardian of estate and guardianship of John James Lucas.

Filed original Summons—Stecker vs. Fife.

Wm. Rowan, of Bishop, was in town Thursday.

George Gillian was in town several days during the week.

The sheep men are coming into Lone Pine for supplies.

Fred Bulpit of Bishop attended the ball Monday night.

L. F. J. Wrinkle was up from Keeler on Wednesday.

The town is very quiet. Nothing of of note happening.

Farmers are all hard at work. The alfalfa promises well.

Mr. and Mrs. O. I. Mairs intend making a trip to Los Angeles shortly.

The personal effects of Thomas Parker, deceased, will be sold to day.

Doctor I. J. Woodin returned from Los Angeles last Tuesday.

A very few apricots have been discovered in town untouched by frost.

S. P. Smith came down from Bishop on Tuesday, returning next day.

John L. Bourland and wife of Bishop were in town during the week.

Twenty-two bands of sheep passed by Olancha, on their way north, this season.

Mrs. Carlyle, a niece of A. O. Collins, is visiting with friends at Georges Creek.

The marble quarry sent a large delegation to the Odd Fellows' ball Monday night.

The Grand Parlor, N.S.G.W., have been most hospitably received at Santa Rosa.

Elsie and Julian Eibeshutz are coming to Independence in a few weeks to spend their Summer vacation.

A. O. Collins has proven an efficient Sheep License Collector. He has already issued licences for eleven bands.

A number of mares were sent to Bishop this week from Independence to be bred to the fine young Electioneer stallion, Autare.

Mrs. Jessie Wightman, who has been spending the last few weeks in Inyo county, left Independence for San Francisco yesterday.

President Harrison is being royally entertained by Californians, though the news of his sister's accident dampened his pleasure somewhat.

J. W. Murphy has been confined to his room for several days. He had an attack of the grippe during the month, and it finally laid him out.

Mr. John Baxter writes that his physician in San Francisco has given him great encouragement, and that he hopes to return to Inyo in a few weeks, greatly improved in health.

The Directors of the Lone Pine Canal Company elected the following officers at their meeting last Saturday: E. Robinson President; P. H. Mack, Secretary; E. H. Edwards, Treasurer.

The heart broken cries of a young mahala raised some alarm in town yesterday morning. A number of citizens rushed to her and found her clutching a dead baby to her breast: The child had been very ill, and she was hurrying to the doctor's with it, when it died.

The ball given by the Odd Fellows on Monday evening was fairly well attended, and a good time had. With the exception of Keeler there were very few present from other towns in the Valley. A special train came up from that place and brought a large delegation. The Lodge members did everything in their power to make the occasion a pleasant one, and the young people say they had a thoroughly good time.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION!

Secretary Noble's Construction of a New Land Law.

WASHINGTON, April 25th.—Secretary Noble to-day communicated to Commissioner Carter his views as to the proper construction to be placed upon the proviso in Section 7 of the act repealing the timber-culture law. The opinion is of great importance to public land States, inasmuch as it determines the question as to what point of time the words "when there shall be no pending contest or protest against the validity of such entry" apply; whether the contest or protest to prevent the issuance of patent until disposed of must have been pending before the lapse of two years from the date of issuance of the receiver's receipt upon final entry in cases existing, and where two years had elapsed before the act of March 3d took effect, as well as in those afterwards. Many thousand of homestead, desert land, pre-emption and timber culture entries are involved in the opinion.

The Secretary says, in part: "If the statute of March 3d were to be construed to invalidate all contests or protests not filed within two years after the date of final receipt and before this statute took effect, the result would be that many thousands of fraudulent claims would go to patent without further question being possible, although the contests or protests were legally pending at the date of the act, and with great loss to many citizens.

"A contest is the statutory means of acquiring homestead or other claim against illegal entry, and is thus rewarded if successful, to preserve the public domain for honest settlers. To so construe the present act as to annul and, as it were, wipe out all those contests and protests existing before March 3, 1891, not filed within two years from the issuance of the final certificate, would amount substantially to a repeal pro tanto of the statute of May 14, 1880. But the statute cannot be legally held to be repealed by implication, and least of all where it would allow patents to issue in so many cases where the experience of the Department leaves no reason to doubt that fraud has been practiced upon the laws regulating land entries, and which can be proven if the contests and protests are allowed to proceed to hearing. If it had been the purpose of Congress to provide that a contest or protest must be pending within two years after the receiver's receipt upon final entry in all cases before the statute of March 3, 1891, as well as after, it certainly would not have used so ambiguous a term as we here find.

"The makers of this law were well acquainted with the situation of affairs; the land laws have been the subject of great discussion for many years, in and out of Congress; the committees on public lands were distinguished for industry and intelligence, and they were fully aware of the facts stated. Had they desired to accomplish the purpose claimed by some, they should, and doubtless would, have used language too plain and direct to require construction. On the contrary, they use the present participle in this clause and say 'when there shall be no pending contest or protest,' meaning thereby clearly, I think, pending then presently at the date of the Act, as it was not intended to be limited to be limited to contests pending within two years after the date of the final receipt when the case had arisen before the present Act took effect, and the two years had elapsed. The statute thus becomes one of limitation as to the future, without overthrowing pending contests or protests. When the two years did not terminate before the date of the Act, a contest to be valid must be filed within the two years. There is no force in the point, I think, that the statute enumerates cases arising under timber culture or pre-emption laws, for these laws, although repealed by the present Act, have been efficacious to inaugurate entries which either proceeded to final entry or may yet do so. No new cases can arise under the timber culture or pre-emption laws, but it was necessary that this Act should notice them, to cover the whole ground.

"Neither does the proposition seem a sound one that by this statute it was intended to expedite public business. The way Congress must expect to have patents issued is by furnishing a sufficient clerical force to accomplish the work, and not by suddenly rushing great masses of cases to patent, although contests legally instituted are pending, and in which experience leaves no reason to doubt that fraud exists. To thus reward fraud and squander the public lands could not have been the purpose of our national Legislators.

"These are my views upon the law presented, and all of the points I deem it necessary to discuss."

A Law Fixing A Bounty On Coyote Scalps.

SECTION 1. Any person who shall kill and destroy any coyote or coyotes, in any county of this State, after the passage of this act, shall be paid a bounty of five dollars out of the general fund of the State Treasury for each coyote so destroyed.

SEC. 2. Any person who may kill and destroy a coyote as provided in the last section, may go before any person authorized to administer oaths, and present the scalp, containing the ears and nose of the coyote destroyed, to such officer and make and subscribe to an affidavit showing the time and place that such animal was killed, which scalp and affidavit may be deposited with the Clerk of the Board of Supervisors of the county in which such coyote was killed.

SEC. 3. The Board of Supervisors of each county of the State shall, quaterly, determine the number of scalps deposited with the Clerk of such Board during the preceding quarter, and by whom, and shall give to each person who may have deposited scalps a certificate certified by its clerk, showing the number of scalps deposited by such person and the sum due him at the rate of five dollars for each scalp. Such certificate may be presented to the Controller of State, who may draw his warrant on the general fund in the State Treasury for the sum named therein in favor of the person entitled thereto.

SEC. 4. When the certificate named in the last section is directed to be drawn, the Board of Supervisors shall, at the same time, cause the scalps to be destroyed by fire.

SEC. 5. No bounty shall be paid for any scalp unless presented within three months after the coyote is killed.

MISCELLANEOUS.

J. J. MOORE,

County Treasurer,

INYO CO., CAL.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For Sale!

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE

Eastside Canal.

There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,

C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

MARY A. BALL, Plaintiff, vs. ROBERT BALL, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Robert Ball, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing betwen the Plaintiff and Defendant and for costs of suit, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 28th day of February, A. D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

FORBES & TOBEY,

HAWTHORNE, NEV.,

—DEALERS IN—

LUMBER

OF ALL KINDS.

DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS,
LATH,
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.

Matched and Dressed Flooring.

sept 11-1

BELL'S Flouring Mills,

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.

Having added Patent Rolls and other Improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

A. N. BELL,
dependence, Cal.

P. W. FORBES. P. H. MACK.

MACK & FORBES.

Real Estate Agents,

Address, P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal. P. W. FORBES, Bishop, Cal.

CROCKERS' HOTEL.

BIG PINE - CAL.

New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates

Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in act, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

W. H. UHLEMEYER, Lessee.
sept-1f

Two span first class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THOMAS & HILL,

—DEALERS IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL.,

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $25 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. Can work in spare time, or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDIS

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and price before purchasing elsewhere.

E. CHENOT.
Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
n476tf

Lake View Hotel

Keeler, Cal.

John Barnes, Prop'r.

First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—

Wines,
Liquors,
& Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.

DENTISTS.

OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSfield, opposite the Southern Hotel. Prompt and careful treatment given and the east possible pain inflicted. Address

WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.

Bee Keeper.

Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.

Independence, Inyo Co. Cal

P. H. MACK.

ATTORNEY-AT-LAW.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,

Physician and Surgeon,

Bishop Creek, Cal.,

Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

INDEPENDENCE

SHAVING SALOON.

Shaving, Hair-Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.

WM. H. HUFF, Prop'r

FRED BURCKHARDT

Watchmaker & Jeweler

LONE PINE, CAL.

Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.

All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine

FRED BURKHARDT.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

IRWINS' SALOON

Corner Edwards and Market Streets,

Independence . Cal.

THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt and furnished in a style second to none on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.

THE BAR

Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.

JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, - Cal.

New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates.

Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.

O. I. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

BOOTS AND SHOES

MADE AND REPAIRED.

THE BEST MATERIAL.

FIRST-CLASS WORK.

Repairs done Promptly.

Prices Reasonable.

A. J. DAVIS,
nov 30-tf Independence,

SHOP DIRECTORY.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE

BISHOP.

Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St

In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable

S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK

BREWERY,

L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.

All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.

Customers supplied on all points

Of the C. & C. Railroad.

Send orders to

L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, patrons can be assured of finding there the best of Buggy Teams, Saddle Horses, and

Livery Accommodations

in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor.

A NEW DEAL!

LONE PINE.

Livery. Feed & Sale Stable.

A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.

OPPOSITE SEWART HOUSE.

Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,

—DEALER IN—

General Merchandise,

LONE PINE,

INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.

Dealer in GENERAL MERCHANDISE, GROCERIES MINERS Supplies

PROVISIONS,

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay MADE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, GEORGE STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R R

TAKING EFFECT

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1		To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—		Arrives—
Mound House.....	11:30 p. m.		5.50 p. m.
Layton	12:00 p. m.		5:10 p. m.
Wabuska	2.05 p. m.		2 50 p. m.
Hawthorne	5 50 p. m.		11:10 a. m.
Luning	7.05 p. m.		9.55 a. m.
Gods Springs.....	8:05 p. m.		9:15 a. m.
Belleville.....	9:15 p. m.		7:55a. m.
Candelaria.....	Ar. 10.00 p. m.	Lv.	7.30 a. m.
	No. 3.		No. 4.
	Leave—		Arrives—
Belleville.....	8 20 a. m.		5:25 p m.
Benton	11:50 a. m.		1:35 a. m.
Bishop Creek	2:00p. m.		11:05 a. m
Alvord.....	2.45 p. m.		10:00 a. m
Independence.....	4:20 p. m.		8:30 a. m
Lone Pine.....	5:10p. m.		7:40 a. m
Keeler.....	Ar 5:55 p. m.	Lv.	7.00 a. m.

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (35 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salsbury & Co's. tri-weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stages for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma, Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.

D A BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles

OF

Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies'
Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOL

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries & canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE

Blacksmith Shop.

R. C. Spear, Prop'r

—ALL WORK ON—

MINING TOOLS,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS
& FREIGHTING OUTFITS

—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—

HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING

All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON

KEELER, CAL.

In Lake View Hotel

BEER, WINES,

LIQUORS and CIGARS

All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.

JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.

J. C. MILLER, Lessee.

—THE BAR—

Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of

WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS

The most careful attention given to the the amusement and comfort of patrons.

A FINE BILLIARD TABLE

Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon. sept-12 1d

A peculiar fact with reference to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is, that, unlike sarsaparillas and other blood medicines, which are said to be good for the blood in March, April and May, the "Discovery" works equally well all the year round, and in all cases of blood-taints or humors, no matter what their name or nature.

It's the cheapest blood-purifier sold through druggists.

Why? Because it's sold on a peculiar plan, and you only pay for the good you get.

Can you ask more?

"Golden Medical Discovery" is a concentrated vegetable extract, put up in large bottles; contains no alcohol to inebriate, no syrup or sugar to derange digestion; is pleasant to the taste, and equally good for adults or children.

The "Discovery" cures all Skin, Scalp and Scrofulous affections, as Eczema, Tetter, Salt-rheum, Fever-sores, White Swellings, Hip-joint disease and kindred ailments.

Diplomatic Remark of a Barber's Apprentice on Drawing Blood—"It's a good enuff razor, Boss, but if you don't hold it jess so, it goes about a day under the skin."

When Dobbins' Electric Soap was first made in 1834 it cost 2½ cents a bar. It is precisely the same ingredients and quality now and doesn't cost half. Buy it of your grocer and preserve your clothes. If he hasn't it, he will get it.

A man cannot always tell what is the right thing to do, but he can come near telling every time what is the wrong thing.

Dr. Wallace Ely has removed his offices to 215 Powell St., San Francisco, Cal., where he continues to give special attention to Kidneys, Bladder, Prostate Gland and all diseases arising therefrom. Diabetes and Bright's Disease treated according to the latest approved method. Most cases can be treated successfully by correspondence. Consultations daily from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. WALLACE ELY, M. D., 215 Powell St., 4 doors from Geary St., San Francisco, Cal.

A little less censure should be given the spider; flies are so willing.

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Porterfield & Losey, 838 Market street, San Francisco.

Gratitude is a virtue that has commonly profit annexed to it.

Use Enameline Stove Polish; no dust, no smell.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

FREE CONSULTATION

DOCTOR SWEANY,
MEDICAL AND SURGICAL OFFICES,
737 MARKET STREET,
Opp. "Examiner" Office, San Francisco, Cal

For the prompt cure of all Chronic and Private Affections, Diseases of Manhood, Diseases of Women, etc., Sexual and Seminal Weakness and Nervous Affections of long standing which may have resisted all other treatment, cured quickly by scientific and modern treatment.

THOSE LIVING AWAY FROM THE CITY SHOULD WRITE AT ONCE.

Beware of persons who may speak to you on the streets and ask you to go to any other doctor, for they are hired by disreputable doctors to ensnare you in their dens.

DR. F. L. SWEANY, formerly of Philadelphia, Pa., and now so well and favorably known as the most successful Specialist on the Pacific Coast, desires to thank the public for their confidence bestowed upon him in the past and assure the afflicted generally who may call on him for medical aid that they may be sure of the most skillful and scientific treatment and be cured in the quickest possible time in the most satisfactory manner.

☞ No cases published or exposed. Every patient's name kept strictly confidential. All references any one may desire furnished privately at my offices. I stand on my merit!

Patients who consult me are not turned over to an amateur hired substitute, as in the case of many high-sounding dispensaries or institutes, but receive my own personal care and attention. Consultation always free, and the poor I treat free of charge.

DISEASES OF MANHOOD—Young Men suffering from nervous debility, from any cause whatsoever, especially from youthful errors and indiscretions, producing dizziness, loss of memory, vitality and energy, emissions, tired discontented feeling, indigestion, palpitation of heart, urinary troubles and many other symptoms not necessary to mention here, should no longer delay in seeking proper relief. Your trouble may be in its first stage. Remember it is approaching the last, and if you continue to neglect it, the time must come when you will be past human aid. I guarantee to restore all such cases in a very short time to perfect health and enjoyment of life.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN—There are many who are suffering from weak backs, frequent urination and sediment in urine, accompanied by loss of vigor and sexual power and an impairment of the general health. Many die of this difficulty ignorant of the cause, which is the second stage of seminal weakness. I guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases and a permanent restoration of the genito-urinary organs.

Blood, Skin and all Private Diseases positively cured in the shortest possible time without mercury or injurious drugs.

RUPTURE,

Piles, Fistula, Varicocele, Hydrocele and all Swellings and Tenderness quickly cured without pain or detention from business.

LADIES

Who may be suffering from any of the distressing ailments peculiar to your sex such as persistent headaches, painful menstruations, displacements, etc., do not give up in despair, even if you have heretofore met with repeated failures in seeking relief. I am happy to state that I have cured hundreds of cases after other physicians had pronounced them hopeless.

Charges moderate and within the reach of all.

Patients living away from the city, who cannot conveniently call, may describe their troubles by letter and have medicines sent to them, free from observation, to any part of the country.

Office Hours—From 10 A. M. to 12 M.; 2 to 5, 7 to 8 P. M.; Sundays from 10 to 12 only.

Address,

DR. F. L. SWEANY,
737 Market Street, Opp. "Examiner" Office,
San Francisco, Cal.

BEST TREE WASH.
Greenbank Insecticide, powdered Caustic Soda, etc.
BEST SHEEP WASH.
Calvert's Carbolic. Prices reduced. T. W. JACKSON & CO., Sole Agents, 104 Market St., S. F.

STEINWAY, Gabler and Pease Pianos
Meaning the BEST PIANO MADE, and the favorite cheaper Pianos; all Musical Instruments; Bands Supplied; large stock of Sheet Music. STEINWAY HALL, 206 & 208 Post Street, MATTHIAS GRAY CO. Call and see our new rooms and new stock.

BEBEE;

or,

TWO LITTLE WOODEN SHOES.

By "OUIDA."

CHAPTER XXIII.

It was dark. The May days are short in the north lands of the Scheldt.

She had her little winter cloak of frieze and her wooden shoes and her little white cap, with the sunny curls rippling out of it in their pretty rebellion. She had her little lantern, too; and her bundle, and she had put a few fresh eggs in her basket with some sweet herbs and the palm sheaf that Father Francis had blessed last Easter—for who could tell, she thought, how ill he might not be, or how poor!

She hardly gave a look to the hut as she ran by its garden gate; all her heart was on in front, in the vague far off country where he lay sick unto death.

She ran fast through the familiar lanes into the city. She was not very sure where Paris was, but she had the name clear and firm, and she knew that people were always coming and going thence and thither, so that she had no fear she should not find it.

She went straight to the big, busy, bewildering place in the Leopold quarter where the iron horses fumed every day and night along the iron ways. She had never been there before, but she knew it was by that great highway that the traffic to Paris was carried on, and she knew that it would carry people also as well.

There were bells clanging, lights flashing, and crowds pushing and shouting as she ran up—a little gray figure, with the lantern spark glimmering like any tiny glow worm astray in a gas lit city.

"To Paris!" she asked, entreatingly, going where she saw others going, to a little grated wicket in a wall.

"Twenty-seven francs—quick!" they demanded of her.

Bebee gave a great cry, and stood still, trembling and trying not to sob aloud. She had never thought of money; she had forgotten that youth and strength and love and willing feet and piteous prayers—all went for nothing as this world is made.

A hope flashed on her, and a glad thought. She loosed the silver buckles and held them out.

"Would you take these? They are worth much more."

There was a derisive laughter; some one bade her with an oath begone, rough shoulders jostled her away. She stretched her arms out piteously.

"Take me—oh, pray take me! I will go with the sheep, with the cattle—only, only take me!"

But in the rush and rear none heeded her; some thief snatched the silver buckles from her hand, and made off with them and was lost in the throng; a great iron beast rushed by her, snorting flame and bellowing smoke; there was a roll like thunder, and all was dark; the night express had passed on its way to Paris.

Bebee stood still, crushed for a moment with the noise and the cruelty and the sense of absolute desolation; she scarcely noticed that the buckles had been stolen; she had only one thought—to get to Paris.

"Can I never go without money?" she asked at the wicket; the man there glanced a moment, with a touch of pity, at the little wistful face.

"The least is twenty francs—surely you must know that!" he said, and shut his grating with a clang.

Bebee turned away and went out of the great, cruel, tumultuous place; her heart ached and her brain was giddy, but the sturdy courage of her nature rose to need.

"There is no way at all to go without money to Paris, I suppose" she asked of an old woman whom she knew a little, who sold nuts and little pictures of saints and wooden playthings under the trees in the avenue hard by.

The old woman shook her head.

"Eh!—no, dear. There is nothing to be done anywhere in the world without money. Look, I cannot get a litre of nuts to sell unless I pay beforehand."

"Would it be far to walk?"

"Would it be far to walk?"

"Far! Holy Jesus! it is right away in the heart of France—over two hundred miles, they say; straight out through the forest. Not but what my son did walk it once—and he a shoemaker, who knows what walking costs; and he is well to do there now—not that he ever writes. When they want nothing people never write."

"And he walked into Paris?"

"Yes, ten years ago. He had nothing but a few sous and an ash stick, and he had a fancy to try his luck there. And after all our feet were given us to travel with. If you go there and you see him, tell him to send me something—I am tired of selling nuts."

Bebee said nothing, but went on her road; since there was no other way but to walk she would take that way; the distance and the hardship did not appal two little feet that were used to traverse so many miles of sun baked summer dust and of frozen winter mud unblanchingly year after year.

The time it would take made her heart sink, indeed. He was ill. God knew what might happen. But neither the length of leagues nor the fatigue of body daunted her. She only saw his eyes dim with pain and his lips burned with fever.

She would walk twenty miles a day, and then, perhaps, she might get lifts here and there on hay wagons or in peddlers' carts; people had always used to be kind to her. Anyhow she counted she might reach Paris well in fifteen days.

She sat under a shrine in a by street a moment and counted the copper pieces she had on her; they were few, and the poor pretty buckles that she might have sold to get money were stolen.

She had some twenty sous and a dozen eggs; she thought she might live on that; she had wanted to take the eggs to him, but after all, to keep life in her until she could reach Paris was the one great thing.

"What a blessing it is to have been born poor; and to have lived hardily—one wants so little!" she thought to herself.

Then she put up the sous in the linen bosom of her gown, and trimmed her little lantern and knelt down in the quiet darkness and prayed a moment, with the hot agonized tears rolling down her face, and then rose and stepped out bravely in the cool of the night, on the great southwest road towards Paris.

Her way lay out through the forest, and in that sweet green woodland she was not afraid—no more afraid than the fawns were.

At Boitsford she shrank a little, indeed. Here there were the open air restaurants, and the cafe gardens all alight for the pleasure seekers from the city; here there were music and laughter, and horses with brass bells, and bright colors on high in the wooden balconies, and below among the blossoming hawthorn hedges. She had to go through it all, and she shuddered a little as she ran, thinking of that one priceless, deathless forest day when he had kissed her first.

But the pleasure people were all busied with their mirth and mischief, and took no notice of the little gray figure in the starry night. She went on along the grassy roads, under the high arching trees, with the hoot of the owls and the cry of the rabbits on the stillness.

At Groenendael, in the heart of the forest, midnight was striking as she entered the village. Every one was asleep. The lights were all out. The old ruined priory frowned dark under the clouds.

She shivered a little again, and began to feel chill and tired, yet did not dare to knock at any one of the closed house doors—she had no money.

So she walked on her first ten unknown miles, meeting a few people only, and being altogether unmolested—a small gray figure, trotting in two little wooden shoes.

They thought her a peasant going to a fair or a lace mill, and no one did her more harm than to wish her good night in rough Flemish.

When the dawn began to whiten above the plains of the east, she saw an empty cow shed filled with hay; she was a little tired, and lay down and rested an hour or two, as a young lamb might have lain on the dried clover, for she knew that she must keep her strength and husband her power, or never reach across the dreary length of the foreign land to Paris.

But by full sunrise she was on her way again, bathing her face in a brook and buying a sou's worth of bread and fat milk at the first cottage that she passed in bright, leaf bowered Hoeylaert.

The forest was still all around her, with its exquisite life of bough and blossom, and murmur of insect and of bird. She told her beads, praying as she went, and was almost happy.

God would not let him die. Oh, no, not till she had kissed him once more, and could die with him.

The hares ran across the path, and the blue butterflies flew above head. There was purple gloom of pinewood, and sparkling verdure of aspen and elm. There were distant church carillons ringing, and straight golden shafts of sunshine streaming.

She often felt tired, and her wooden shoes were wearing so thin that the hot dust of the road at noonday burnt her feet through them. Sometimes, too, she felt a curious brief faintness such as she had never known, for the lack of food and the long fatigue began to tell even on her hardy little body.

But she went on bravely, rarely doing less than her twenty miles a day, and sometimes more, walking often in the night to save time, and lying down in cow sheds or under haystacks in the noontide.

So she walked on until she reached the frontier of France. She began to get a little giddy; she began to see the blue sky and the green level always swirling round her as if some one were spinning them to frighten her, but still she would not be afraid; she went on, and on, and on, till she set her last step on the soil of Flanders.

Here a new, strange, terrible, incomprehensible obstacle opposed her; she had no papers; they thrust her back and spoke to her as if she were a criminal. She could not understand what they could mean. She had never heard of those laws and rules. She vaguely comprehended that she must not enter France, and stunned and heart broken, she dropped down under a tree, and for the first time sobbed as if her very life would weep itself away.

She could see nothing, understand nothing. There were the same road, the same hedges, the same fields, the same white cottages, and peasants in blue shirts and dun hued oxen in the wagons. She saw no mark, no difference, ere they told her where she stood was Belgium, and where they stood was France, and that she must not pass from one into the other.

The men took no notice of her. They went back into the guard house, and smoked and drank. A cat sunned herself under a scarlet bean. The white clouds sailed on before a southerly sky. She might die here—he there—and nothing seemed to care.

After awhile an old hawker came up; he was traveling with wooden clocks from the Black Forest. He stopped and looked at her, and asked her what she ailed.

She knelt down at his feet in the dust.

"Oh, help me!" she cried to him. "Oh, pray, help me! I have walked all the way from Brussels—that is my country, and now they will not let me pass that house where the soldiers are. They say I have no papers. What papers should I have? I do not know. When one has done no harm, and does not owe a sou anywhere, and has walked all the way—Is it money that they want? I have none; and they stole my silver clasps in Brussels, and if I do not get to Paris I must die—die without seeing him again—over again, dear God!"

She dropped her head upon the dust and crouched and sobbed there, her courage broken by this new barrier that she had never dreamed would have come between herself and Paris.

The old hawker looked at her thoughtfully. He had seen much of men and women, and knew truth from counterfeit, and he was moved by the child's agony.

He stooped and whispered in her ear:

"Get up quick, and I will pass you. It is against the law, and I may go to prison for it. Never mind; one must risk something in this world, or else be a cur. My daughter has stayed behind in Marbais sweethearting; her name is on my passport, and her age and face will do for yours. Get up and follow me close, and I will get you through. Poor little soul! whatever your woe is it is real enough, and you are such a young and pretty thing. Get up, the guards are in their house, they have not seen, follow me, and you must not speak a word, they must take you for a German, dumb as wood."

She got up and obeyed him, not comprehending, but only vaguely seeing that he was friendly to her, and would pass her over into France.

The old man made a little comedy at the barrier, and scolded her as though she were his daughter for losing her way as she came to meet him, and then crying like a baby.

The guards looked at her carelessly, joked the hawker on her pretty face, looked the papers over, and let her through, believing her the child of the clockmaker of the Harts. Some lies are blessed as truth.

"I have done wrong in the law, but not before God, I think, little one," said the peddler. "Nay, do not thank me, or go on like that; we are in sight of the customs men still, and if they suspected, it would be the four walls of a cell only that you and I should see to-night. And now tell me your story, poor maiden—why are you on foot through a strange country?"

She knelt down at his feet in the dust.

But Bebee would not tell him her story; she was confused and dazed still. She did not know rightly what had happened to her, but she could not talk of herself, nor of why she traveled thus to Paris.

The old hawker got cross at her silence and called her an unthankful jade, and wished he had left her to her fate, and parted company with her at two cross roads, saying his path did not lie with hers, and then, when he had done that, was sorry, and being a tender hearted soul, hobbled back and would fain press a five franc piece on her; and Bebee, refusing it all the while, kissed his old brown hands and blessed him, and broke away from him, and so went on again solitary toward St. Quentin.

The country was very flat and poor, and yet the plains had a likeness in them to her own wide Brabant downs, where the tall green wheat was blowing and the barges dropping down the sluggish streams.

She was very footsore, very weary; very hungry so often; but she was in France—in his country—and her spirit rose with the sense of that nearness to him.

After all God was so good to her; there were fine bright days and nights; a few showers had fallen, but merely passing ones, the air was so cool and so balmy that it served her almost as food, and she seldom found people so unkind that they refused for her single little son to give her a crust of bread and let her lie in an outhouse.

After all God was very good; and by the sixteenth or seventeenth day she would be in the city of Paris.

She was a little light headed at times from insufficient nourishment; especially after waking from strange dreams in unfamiliar places; sometimes the soil felt tremulous under her and the sky spun round; but she struggled against the feeling and kept a brave heart and tried to be afraid of nothing.

Sometimes at night she thought she saw old Annemie. "But what if I do?" she said to herself; "Annemie never will hurt me."

And now, as she grew nearer her goal, her natural buoyancy of spirit returned as it had never done to her since the evening that he had kissed and left her. As her body grew lighter and more exhausted, her fancy grew keener and more dominant. All things of the earth and air spoke to her as she went along as they had used to do. All that she had learned from the books in the long cold months came to her clear and wonderful. She was not so very ignorant now—ignorant, indeed, beside him—but still knowing something that would make her able to read to him if he liked it, and to understand if he talked of great things.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

WASHINGTON CLAIM AGENTS.

The San Francisco "Examiner" Establishes a Claim Agency in Washington.

All parties who have claims against the Government will hail the establishment of the "Examiner's" Claim Agency with delight.—[Editorial from S. F. Examiner, March 15, '91.

The San Francisco Examiner is frequently in receipt of complaints from its subscribers in all parts of the Coast States and Territories that legitimate claims against the Government for Indian depredations and land, postal and pension claims intrusted to the care of various attorneys and claim agents have not been properly prosecuted, or, if so, that the charges of the agents or attorneys for fees and alleged expenses have been so great as to leave little or nothing for the claimants. We have been frequently urged to make war upon these rapacious attorneys, but for many reasons it is almost impossible to do so in such a manner as to benefit our subscribers. We might possibly succeed in driving a dishonest or overgreedy attorney out of the field, but his place would be immediately taken by another, and the fight would be endless and its results practically useless. We have therefore decided, as the best means of curing the evil, to establish in Washington a Bureau of Claims, which will take charge of all such matters and push them to a speedy and, in all cases where it is possible, successful issue. Mr. John Wedderburn, our Washington correspondent, and up to the time of his death Secretary to the late Senator Hearst, in which position he has had much experience in presenting and pushing such claims, will have charge of this bureau and will employ all necessary legal and clerical assistance of the first grade, making only such charge for their services as will cover the actual cost and pay him a reasonable price for the time devoted to the work. Mr. Wedderburn is known to every member of the Pacific Coast Congressional delegation, to whom inquiries as to his standing and reliability can be addressed. The necessity for the establishment of such a bureau is well shown by the following petition, which has been extensively circulated in northern California.

To the Hon. the Senate of the United States, in Congress Assembled—GENTLEMAN: The undersigned petitioners would most respectfully represent that we are claimants against the Government for losses sustained by Indian depredations committed in Humboldt county, California, at different times since 1850; that we were induced to employ an attorney here to properly prepare said claims, and another at Washington by power of attorney to prosecute them there; that we have paid our attorney here for making out all papers in said claims, besides being at considerable expense in attending with witnesses the Government commission here that examined our claims; that now our attorneys at Washington (Messrs.——) are asking us to sign a contract giving them one-third of whatever may be recovered from the Government as their fee, besides requiring us to pay all accruing costs for prosecuting said claims. This we consider an extravagant and unreasonable charge. Therefore we pray your honorable body to so amend the bill now pending before you for settling these claims that it will embody a clause allowing attorneys such fees and commissions for attending to said claims as shall be deemed just and equitable, and your petitioners will ever be most thankful.

Parties having claims of any kind against the Government, will address all letters to The Examiner Bureau of Claims, 79 Corcoran Building, Washington, D. C., where Mr. Wedderburn may also be consulted in person.

The establishment of an honest Bureau of Claims comes at a very opportune time, as the late act of Congress nullified all contracts between claimants and their attorneys which gives every claimant a chance to transfer their claims to the Examiner Bureau.

A CONCLUSIVE PROOF.

A Bank with a capital and surplus of $1,800,000, and with average resources of upwards of $5,000,000, must certainly be in a very flourishing condition. The uniformly safe and legitimate character of its transactions, for a long series of years, has won for it the entire confidence of our best business men.

Of the 4,559 books that were published in this country in 1890, nearly 1,000 were novels. Never before in one year were so many new novels sprung upon an enduring public.

A vigorous effort is to be made in South Dakota to raise funds for an exhibit at the World's Fair, the Legislature having refused to make an appropriation.

The Nebraska Legislature refused to have night sessions, but instead have fixed the hour of meeting at 6:30 in the morning. The session will end in a few days.

They have become so virtuous in Washington that they cover bill-boards which contain pictures regarded by the police as objectionable, with concealing-plasters.

The Pennsylvania Legislature has appointed a committee to look into charges that the Soldiers' Orphan School has been robbed of $1,000,000 by the management.

The Pennsylvania Legislature is being urged to pass a good law, but with their pockets filled with railroad passes, the members do not take much interest in the subject.

The Boston City Council has passed an order requesting the Mayor to petition the Legislature to pass a law permitting the city to construct and maintain an elevated road.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding, and Itching Piles when all other Ointments have failed. It absorbs the tumors, allays the itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and Itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted. Sold by Druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price, 50c. and $1.00 per box. WILLIAMS M'F'G CO., Props., Cleveland, O.

A man will receive more sympathy from the neighbors for his wife's one little fault than she will receive for her husband's ten big ones.

SPREADING FOR LEAGUES AROUND

The marshy, overflowed lands, sunken lots and half submerged river banks, which give them birth, the seeds of malaria impregnate the air, and are inhaled at every breath by thousands unprovided with any adequate safeguard against the baneful influence. Yet such exist—potent alike to remedy or to prevent, pure in its constituents, and the professionally recognized substitute for the hateful drug, quinine. Its name is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a family specific and safeguard, foremost not only as an antidote to malaria, but also as a means of permanently removing dyspepsia, and relieving constipation, liver complaint, rheumatism, kidney and bladder ailments, and nervousness. Among invigorants it takes the first place, and is also a superb appetizer. Use it systematically.

My father is the queerest freak
I've seen in my short life.
He smears with soapsuds all his cheek
And wipes it with a knife.

DEAFNESS CAN'T BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

☞ Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Chicago Sunday School Teacher—Why should we not cast pearls before swine, Johnny Livewaite? Johnny—I'll ask papa. He's in the pork business.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE BLIND.

Dr. La Grange wishes to make known his New Treatment for the cure of all diseases of the Eye: —Cataract, Defective Vision, Inflammation, etc., etc., without Operation or Pain. The remedy can be applied by the patient, and is simple, safe and sure in its effects, strengthening the muscles and nerves of the eye, removing pain almost instantaneously. It is a marvelous discovery and a blessing to the sufferer.

For further particulars address with stamped envelope, R. J. LA GRANGE, M. D., 215 Powell St., fourth door from Geary, San Francisco, Cal. Office Hours, 11 till 3.

Here's a remarkable case. The other day a wagonmaker who had been dumb for years picked up a hub and spoke.

GET RID OF THAT BAD TASTE.

When you wake up in the morning with a bad taste in your mouth, with your throat and tongue dry and a yellow coating on your teeth and gums, don't imagine it was all caused by what you ate the night before. Of course everybody does that and everybody "swears off" from again eating such food. The trouble is that your liver is clogged, your kidneys are overworked and your bowels are not doing their duty. Take from three to ten of BRANDRETH'S PILLS and note the sudden and wonderful change in your system.

"Thank fortune!" as the man said when his money opened to him the doors of society.

For Throat Diseases and Coughs, use "Brown's Bronchial Troches." Price 25 cts. Sold only in boxes.

The devil would learn the meaning of despair if people tried half as hard to get into Heaven as they do to get into society.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.

No other baking powder does such work.

"German Syrup"

J. C. Davis, Rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, Eufaula, Ala.: "My son has been badly afflicted with a fearful and threatening cough for several months, and after trying several prescriptions from physicians which failed to relieve him, he has been perfectly restored by the use of two bottles of Boschee's German Syrup. I can recommend it without hesitation." Chronic severe, deep-seated coughs like this are as severe tests as a remedy can be subjected to. It is for these long-standing cases that Boschee's German Syrup is made a specialty. Many others afflicted as this lad was, will do well to make a note of this.

An Episcopal Rector.

J. F. Arnold, Montevideo, Minn., writes: I always use German Syrup for a Cold on the Lungs. I have never found an equal to it—far less a superior.

G. G. GREEN, Sole Man'fr, Woodbury, N.J.

FOR MEN ONLY!

VIGOR AND STRENGTH For LOST or FAILING MANHOOD, General and NERVOUS DEBILITY; Weakness of Body and Mind, Effects of Errors or Excesses in Old or Young. Robust, Noble MANHOOD fully Restored. How to enlarge and Strengthen WEAK, UNDEVELOPED ORGANS & PARTS OF BODY. Absolutely unfailing HOME TREATMENT—Benefits in a day. Men testify from 50 States, and Foreign Countries. Write them. Descriptive book, explanation and proofs sealed (sealed) free. Address ERIE MEDICAL CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

DO YOU WANT A PARTNER?
YOU WANT TO BUY A BUSINESS?
YOU WISH TO SELL YOUR BUSINESS?

We are incorporated Agents and propose giving our special attention to the forming of partnerships and the selling of business interests of every description. Investment Securities and City and County Real Estate for sale. Loans Negotiated. Call or address The Mercantile Agency & Investment Co., No. 16 Post street, San Francisco. Will E. Fisher, Pres. Eugene G. Davis, V. Pres. Wm. S. Tevis, Treas. Alfred D. Hall, Sec'y.

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation permanently. For sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all druggists.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

ASK SCHMITHS' 818 FRONT ST. STORE to send you their catalogue of cash prices to consumers the

HOME CIRCLE.

Address as above. Mention this paper.

"THE SPECIFIC A NO. 1."

YOUNG MEN! Cures all unnatural discharges of men, no matter of how long standing. Prevents stricture, it being an internal remedy. Cures when everything else has failed. Price, $3.00. Circular on application. Sold by Druggists or sent on receipt of price by The A. Schoenheit Medicine Co., San Jose, Cal.

BIG G Cures in 1 to 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Big G is the acknowledged leading remedy for all the unnatural discharges and private diseases of men. A certain cure for the debilitating weakness peculiar to women. I prescribe it and feel safe in recommending it to all sufferers. Mfd only by THE EVANS CHEMICAL CO. CINCINNATI, O. U. S. A. A. J. STONER, M. D., DECATUR, ILL. Sold by Druggists. PRICE $1.00.

Trade Mark.

CAST YOUR SICK OVER THIS.

PEOPLE write for free illustrated family paper on surgical operations tumors, fistula, piles, varicocele, hydrocele; braces, appliances for deformities, female complaints; also, confidential book for men explaining why thousands cannot get cured of special, private, chronic diseases, eyes, ears, lungs, seminal weakness, loss of manhood, gleet, syphilis, unnatural losses, results of abuse or excesses, which unfit all for marriage, happiness, or life's duties. DR. LIEBIG'S WONDERFUL GERMAN INVIGORATOR, the greatest remedy for above complaints. To prove its merits, $1 trial bottle sent free. Address DR. LIEBIG & CO. 400 Geary St., San Francisco, Cal., or 301 W. 9th St., Kansas City, Mo.

S. F. N. U. No. 458. New Series No. 13

Deposits Received from $1 and Upwards.

MONEY SAVED IS MONEY EARNED — DEPOSIT IN A GOOD SAVINGS BANK

PEOPLE'S HOME SAVINGS BANK
805 Market St. cor. 4th St.
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Guarantee Capital, $1,000,000.00

Paid up in Cash	$333,333.33
Subject to Call	666,666.67

PAYS INTEREST FROM DATE OF DEPOSIT.

Highest Rates Paid Consistent with Prudent Banking.

RATES PAID LAST TWO TERMS:

On Term Deposits	5.52%
On Ordinary Deposits	4.60%

In connection with the Bank are the

SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS,

on the street floor with the Bank.

THE STRONGEST, WITHOUT EXCEPTION, ON THE COAST.

Steel Safes, under the Renter's Individual Control, from $4.00 to $50.00 per Year.

Trunks and Valuable Packages, taken on storage at reasonable rates.

Burglar-Proof, Fire-Proof, centrally located and easy of access.

Handsome, well-lighted, secluded and separate rooms for the use of safe renters.

(B) IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The People's Home Savings Bank announces its new system of

5-CENT DEPOSIT STAMPS

This Deposit Stamp System has proved a marked success in England and Germany, and has done wonders in encouraging small savings and in pleasantly inculcating in youthful minds valuable lessons of thrift and economy.

The stamps will be supplied at the Bank and through our Agents, a list of whom may be had on application.

B. O. Carr, Manager and Sect'y. Columbus Waterhouse, President.
Pacific Bank, Treasurer.

San Francisco, California, Jan'y 1, 1891.

Statement, Jan. 1st, 1891.

R. H. McDonald, PRES'T. F. W. McDonald, CASHIER.

ESTABLISHED 1863. Oldest Chartered Bank on the Pacific Coast.

PACIFIC BANK

Capital Stock $1,000,000.00
Surplus $ 800,000.00
Av. Resources, $4,704,700.00

Yearly Volume of Business, $230,000,000.00

ASSETS.

Solvent Bills Receivable	$2,052,318.54
Banking House and other Real Estate	277,061.83
Sundry Stocks and Bonds	308,182.84
Due from Solvent Banks and Bankers	616,026.39
Money on Hand	381,438.18
Total,	$3,035,027.28

(B) LIABILITIES.

Capital Stock	$1,000,000.00
Surplus Fund	800,000.00
Undivided Profits	3,824.10
Due Depositors	2,129,277.00
Due Banks and Bankers	1,060,702.18
Due Dividends	41,224.00
Total,	$3,035,027.28

San Francisco, California, } R. H. McDONALD, Pres't.

This Picture, Panel size, mailed for 4 cents.

J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans,"
255 & 257 Greenwich St., N. Y. City.

CURE Biliousness, Sick Headache, Malaria. BILE BEANS.

SALZER'S NORTHERN CROWN SEEDS

ARE THE BEST FOR ALL SOILS AND CLIMES.

They will yield for you, OATS 155 bu., WHEAT 40 bu., BARLEY 60 bu., CORN 100 bu. POTATOES 500 bu. per a. 10 cents for sample farm seeds and catalogue. 25 cents for pkg. "Acme Radish" and elegant catlg. Our Catalog is the finest ever published in America. On Trial—25 pkgs. Earliest Vegetable Seeds, post pd. $1. 12 pkgs. Elegant Flower Seeds, post paid, 50 cents. Weight to Pacific Coast States.

"ACME" the new 17 day Radish

JOHN A. SALZER, LA CROSSE, WISCONSIN.

"The best is aye the cheapest."

Void imitations of and substitutes for SAPOLIO.—It is a solid cake of scouring soap. Try it in your next house-cleaning.

REAL ECONOMY.

It is worse than nonsense to buy a cheap article with which to damage more valuable property. Scouring soap is at best only a trifling expense, but with a poor and cheap article it is likely to do considerable damage to fine marble or other property.

Shoot the Spy

A cough or cold is a spy which has stealthily come inside the lines of health and is there to discover some vulnerable point in the fortification of the constitution which is guarding your well-being. That point discovered the spy reports it to the enemy on the outside. The enemy is the changeable winter climate. If the cold gets in, look out for an attack at the weak point. To avoid this, shoot the spy, kill the cold, using SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda as the weapon. It is an expert cold slayer, and fortifies the system against Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases (specially in Children). Especially helpful for children to prevent their taking cold. Palatable as Milk.

SPECIAL.—Scott's Emulsion is non-secret, and is prescribed by the Medical Profession all over the world, because its ingredients are scientifically combined in such a manner as to greatly increase their remedial value.

CAUTION.—Scott's Emulsion is put up in salmon-colored wrappers. Be sure and get the genuine. Prepared only by Scott & Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, New York. Sold by all Druggists.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor.

Independence, Cal.,

FRIDAY, MAY 8, 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXII. NO. 47. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., MAY 8, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1071.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$1.00
Six Months	2.25
Three Months	1.00
One Month	50
Single Copies

WOMAN'S WORLD.

Revolution in the Ornaments of Women.

GOWNS FOR THE PRINCESSES OF WALES.

Women as Church Delegates.—Music at Weddings.

The fashionable woman has renounced one of the pomps and vanities of the world in consigning her jewels to the seclusion of their caskets. But there never was a time when they entered so much into the construction of the pretty, useful trifles with which she equips herself.

First in rank are her hairpins, which display the most exquisite workmanship of the jeweler's art, and are studded with valuable jewels. For dressy occasions jeweled combs set with five or six precious stones of different kinds are worn. Buckles assume special importance just now, and French women have exhumed from their cases the long neglected cameos, and had them mounted for clasps to the various Tunic and Grecian drapery effects now popular, or for fastening loose robes at the waist. Large rings of gold, studded with diamonds, are used for the same purpose on full dress occasions.

All the miscellaneous articles used about the person pass through the hands of the jeweler. The portemonnaie and card case are embellished with gold or silver ornaments—not monograms, since these are out of fashion—but a crest or coronet, a little flower, fly or fancy scroll. Purses of chain gold are quite the latest choice. Some of the handsomest have small diamonds set here and there, others have a tiny watch on top, and still others are fringed with emerald or garnet drops. The most novel form of the gold chain purse is the old knitted silk purse, reproduced in finely wrought gold and girt by a couple of loops, diamond set.

The pocket mirror is another elegant trinket, of gold, with a single large diamond in its sliding cover; the vinaigrette is sylindrical in form, with a cabohon top in polished stone; a gold walnut shell for the pocket contains a powder puff in one side and a tiny vinaigrette, surrounded by a rack for pins, in the other. Rings are worn in more generous display than ever before, on the third and fourth fingers of each hand, crowding their brilliant stones to the very knuckles. Turquoises are quite the rage in Paris now on account of Bernhardt's display of them in "Cleopatra."—New York Sun.

Gowns for the Princesses of Wales.

The young princesses of Wales are getting new shooting dresses, walking gowns, coats and other things. They buy all their own clothes now. Until quite recently everything had to be submitted to the princess herself. The young ladies have a nice, quiet taste in dress, and in the matter of fashions they appear to follow their own bent, ignoring altogether many of the latest vagaries. They don't like the three-quarter length coats, and they are not going to wear them. Their new coats are to be cut only a trifle longer than those they wore last winter. Two of these are in tan colored cloth, tight fitting and double breasted. They are lightly trimmed with otter and have high fur collars.

The shooting dresses are the prettiest I have seen this season. They are made of a thick fawn cloth striped with faint lines of light blue. The jaunty jackets are open fronted, and have revers of leather the same shade as the stripe in the stuff. These are worn over white kerseymere waistcoats, also striped with lines of blue. Princess Victoria has a fine figure, long and slight. Two plain walking dresses made of the Mar tartan will be worn by the princesses when they visit the Duchess of Fife. The jackets of these were neat and of quite a simple cut and fastened with two buttons. Several silk blouses in pretty colors had been made for wearing at different times with these. A silk front looks nicer under an open jacket than a stiff, mannish, white one.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Women as Church Delegates.

What would become of churches without women? They are the keystone of every creed in the civilized world: yet, when it comes to officeholding and representation in conferences, they are not deemed worthy of the slightest recognition!

At last there is light in one direction. Six hundred and ninety-nine Methodist churches in this country have decided by a majority of 62 per cent. that women ought to be admitted as delegates to the general conference, and it is thought that this popular vote will have great weight in shaping future legislation. It certainly ought.

Miss Frances E. Willard is not alone in beheving that the union of man and woman in the administration of church and state would redound to the benefit of humanity. To leave women out of the church is especially ungrateful, and if the Methodists experience a change of heart they will not only do right, but double their power and efficiency.—Kate Field.

Mrs. Beere's Artistic Dressing.

Mrs. Bernard Beere is considered the most artistic dresser in all England. She is taller than Bernhardt, very thin, and has glorious brown hair, which she powders with amber, gold or copper dust to match the color of her dress. She affects golden hued brocade, which she elaborates with gold embroidery or gold passementerie. Her neck is very long, and she delights in wearing an extremely high spreading collar of woven gold and mock jewels, which necessitates the arrangement of her beautiful hair on the very top of her head. So deft is she in treating her hair that you would declare it was a dozen colors instead of one. The effect is in no way the result of dye or bleach.

Mrs. Beere is an artistically beautiful woman. One feels and sees the artist the moment she enters a room. Instead of mixing colors she blends them, and with a red gown she will carry red flowers, wear red shoes and red jewels and throw all the different tints into her hair. She is not only an imitator but a warm friend of Mme. Bernhardt, whose plays she does in English, often with the gifted Frenchwoman for an adviser and critic. Mrs. Beere it was who, at a drawing room last season, appeared in red, carrying a great bunch of wall flowers in her hand. The next day all London was clamoring for wall flowers. Like the willowy Sara, she is perfectly independent of corsets and never wears them.—London Letter.

Music at Weddings.

It is to be wondered at that the music of fashionable weddings is not made more of a feature than it is. A man at the organ, with Mendelssohn to go in and Wagner to come out by, or vice versa, seems to be the Alpha and Omega of the musical ambition of most brides. Yet there is no moment in a woman's life, or a man's either, when music is more suitable and effective than at the ceremony which sees the public plighting of her troth. At Miss Coudert's wedding in this city recently the music was rendered by a stringed orchestra and the organ, and was a most attractive feature of the event. People listened delightedly as the almost human voices of the violins swept through the great church, and fairly forgot to crane their necks for the bridal party under the magic influence.

At Miss Telfair's wedding in Staten Island the same week a most pleasing novelty was introduced. Just before the arrival of the bride, her aunt, Mrs. C. C. Burr, sang with charming effect Ricci's "My Heart with Joy Is Brimming O'er." Nothing could have been more in keeping with the occasion.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Cheap Mittens.

If a lady wants to make a good many presents to poor people she cannot have $5 go farther than by buying cheap, heavy flannel or other cloth and making it up in mittens. Cut the piece for the hand whole on one side, and cut a slit to let the thumb piece in. It is easy to make the patterns by marking around hands of different sizes and allowing for seams Line the mittens or not as you choose. Hem at the wrist, and be sure to leave the wrist wide enough to go over the hand, or leave them open and button up close. They may be ornamented a little if desired by the giver, but will be thankfully received by the barehanded child or washerwoman without it. They are good to hang out clothes in. An apron with pockets for clothes pins goes well with them. Pieces of cloth somewhat worn make good mittens. Odd pieces of cloth, velvet and flannel are serviceable, and often ready at hand to use.—Cor. Housekeepers' Weekly.

Home Made Neck Wear.

Some young women of my acquaintance are deeply shocked at the extravagant prices paid by young men for ordinary silk ties. They affirm that excellent ties of first class silk can be made up in the four-in-hand style, or, for that matter, in any other fashion, and sold at a profit for fifty cents each. They propose to have the girls of a free sewing school go into the business, and I doubt not that all the men of their acquaintance will presently be buying and wearing these ties. I have noted one dangerous symptom, however, and that is a disposition on the part of young women advising men upon this subject to give riotous freedom to a somewhat gay taste in colors. In the scarf alone, they argue, is the American man permitted to be gay, and the consequence is this lamentable tendency to deck out the docile victim in crimson and gold.—New York Star.

The Sheriff's Nervy Wife.

W. D. Blanton, of Stephenville, Tex., convicted of horse theft and granted a new trial, was remanded to jail. One day while Perkins, acting jailer in the absence of Sheriff Shands, was feeding the prisoners, Blanton, who had concealed himself in the run around and provided himself with a loose stove leg, made a break for liberty, running Perkins down stairs. Perkins fell as he ran, and yelled out, "Look out! Blanton is coming!"

Mrs. Shands, wife of the sheriff, who resides below, called to her daughters to run and lock the doors, while she gathered the Winchester, threw a cartridge in it and drew it upon the prisoner, who cried out, "Mrs. Shands, don't be excited." She replied, "You are the only one excited. Hold up!" and he held up and was marched back.—Cor. Fort Worth Gazette.

Undulated Hair.

"Undulated hair" is about the latest thing out. It will be much in vogue for balls and special occasions, but it is even more likely to spoil the hair than curling. The undulator is an iron similar to that used for gentlemen's mustaches; it takes about three-quarters of an hour to do, and hard or limp hair takes a much longer time to operate on successfully than light, naturally curly hair. With the latter style of hair the undulation will last fifteen to twenty days. Limp hair requires the operation renewed more constantly. But this style only suits certain faces with irregular features, and is ridiculous when adopted by others. All the first class hairdressers now possess an undulator or hair weaver, and some of them use with it a curling wash or lotion.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Draughts Not Dangerous.

Now is the time of year when windows are closed up to keep out draughts. Just the contrary should be adopted. When the body is not overheated the draught caused by the ordinary incoming of air will do infinitely less harm than the impure air caused by closed windows. The way to enjoy pure air in cold weather is to turn on the heat when the room gets cold, not shut up the windows. Heat was invented for use. If the room becomes too warm don't turn off the heat, but open the windows. By that means a person who knows anything about ventilation can have an equable, summer-like atmosphere about him all winter long. The necessity of open windows is doubly apparent where tobacco smoking is indulged in, as the smoke is dangerous to the breathing apparatus and makes it liable to pulmonic troubles.—London Lancet.

The Growth of a New Project.

The Ladies' Guide and Chaperon bureau, opened in New York last winter, has found so much work on its hands that it is now on the brink of resolving itself into a stock company, and using its capital to fit a house and add to its functions some of those originated by the Ladies' Guide association in London, such as opening dressing rooms to women from out of town who wish to array themselves for reception or theatre, and lodgings to women traveling alone, who are refused accommodation under the mediæval regulations in vogue at some of the hotels. The bureau finds one of its most successful features the sending out women to assist timid entertainers in dinner serving.—New York Letter.

Unpopular Empress Frederick.

The Empress Frederick has excited the clamorous protests of her son's subjects by commissioning a London firm of upholsterers to decorate and partly furnish the future residence of Princess Victoria at Bonn. It is certainly a strange belise on the part of the empress, who did exactly the same thing when the Schloss of Charlottenburg was redecorated during her husband's brief reign. What a general roar of execration would have been excited in England if the Prince Consort had sent for Germans to decorate any of the royal palaces.—London Truth.

A Wealthy School Ma'am.

One of the queer things noticed in this metropolitan town is the sight of a young lady teacher in a public school who is driven to the school door daily in her own victoria, with blooded horses and a liveried coachman. The young lady, too, is an excellent, faithful teacher, and earns her salary as fully as do any of those dependent upon it for bread. She is the daughter of Lawson N. Fuller, and teaches in the new grammar school at One Hundred and Thirty-fourth street and Lenox avenue.—New York World.

Women's Work in San Francisco.

Mrs. Sarah B. Cooper is the inspiration of the Golden Gate Kindergarten association. In the last report she states that 6,000 little children have been enrolled in San Francisco since 1880, and $100,000 spent on the little ones in whom lies the hope of the world. One of the schools is controlled by Miss Marwedel, whose classes are made up entirely of the stray children and waifs, between 2 and 10 years, picked out of the gutters and alleys of San Francisco.—San Francisco Letter.

Women in the Synagogue.

Miss Ray Frank is one of the first Jewesses to preach in the synagogue in modern times, for, notwithstanding the fact that Miriam and Deborah preached to women, and Huldah preached to men as well, the prejudice against women preachers is greater among the Jews than in any other congregation. Even female choristers are not allowed in the orthodox synagogue.—Boston Transcript.

Mrs. Vicken, a member of an English woman's bicycle club, has won a road race against a team of men riders in a race of nineteen miles, which she accomplished in one hour and forty minutes. Another wonderful English rider, Miss Fordham, has ridden a safety 1,900 miles, at a rate of seventy-six miles a day, during the season, and hopes to accomplish 2,000 miles before the season closes.

Gloves for evening wear again match in tone the prevailing color of the gown. They are very long, in most cases covering the entire arm, and are embroidered on the back of the hand and about the wrist with beads and silk. Stockings also harmonize with the rest of the costume. Gloves and stockings are bought in sets in all the desirable evening shades.

Here is a list of the brilliant English women who are announced to lecture on female suffrage during the winter: Mrs. Ormiston Chant, Dr. Kate Mitchell, Mrs. L. Wynford Phillips, Mrs. Benjamin Clarke, Mrs. Ashton Dilke, Mrs. Massingberd, Mrs. Stanton Blatch, Miss G. Rose Armstrong, Miss Ellen Chapman and Miss Caroline Fothergill.

Dr. Caroline Dodson has been elected president of the American National Health society for the purpose of enlisting the interest of the medical profession in public health, with particular reference to filthy streets and nuisances in the shape of unkept smoke stacks, stables and slaughter houses.

Miss Carrie L. Horton, a pretty apple cheeked English girl, won the first prize for a butter study of Marechal Neil roses at the Cheshire dairy show, and now the museum men want to engage her to make butter roses by the year at a salary of ever so many thousand pounds sterling.

Mrs. J. C. Ayer is negotiating for the purchase of one of the most magnificent hotels on the Champs Elysees in Paris. The price demanded is $600,000, which is not considered excessive, in view of the fact that the house is one of the most superb in Paris.

The Working Girls' club of Baltimore has decided to take up the study of woman suffrage, and intends to have lectures given upon the subject. The club is flourishing, and will probably have a club house of its own next year.

There is nothing more certain than the fact that the World's fair will bring into prominence hundreds of gifted women in the west about whom the world would otherwise be ignorant.

A scholarship of $200 is offered by the Vassar Students' Aid society for a student who passes all the requirements for admission to the freshman class at the examination to be held in June, 1891.

CONQUERING AN OBSTACLE.

How One Boy Succeeded in Life.

THE OLD PROFESSOR'S KINDLY ADVICE.

His Services at the Great Johnstown Disaster.

Tom Pippet was always a little fellow; so small that when he was in the senior class in college the smallest boy in the preparatory school "looked down" upon him in a literal sense.

Every boy who has himself a physical defect can understand how mighty a matter this lack of size had seemed to Tom. For some years of his life it was to him the most important thing in the world. There were such great deeds to be done, and he felt that he could do them, only—he stood but five feet in his boots!

It was hopeless to try to be a hero! His name, too, was unfortunate. The boys changed it to Poppet, to Pipes, to Pipkin, to Pint. It was easy to be witty at the expense of the little fellow.

One day an old professor, seeing him shrink at some gibe, said to him: "Tom, there is a something within you with which your little body has nothing to do. Show that to the world. Ignore and disregard your size and you will teach others to ignore and disregard it."

This kindly word was the pebble which turned the stream of Tom's life into a new channel. He had thus far failed from very despair to try to make something of himself; he now began to study vigorously. He was a born orator and his voice was fine. The class soon began to be proud of him and to boast of his size as another reason for their approval of him. When his small figure appeared upon the platform on commencement day, the storm of approval which greeted him was due as much to his triumph over this physical defect as to the actual work which he had done.

At the bar in the town in which Tom practised as a lawyer he was known as "Little Webster," so accurate was his knowledge and so effective his eloquence.

The civil war began, and Tom, with thousands of other sincere men north and south, rushed to the battlefield. His men followed their little captain as confidently as though he had been seven feet high. He was badly wounded at Chancellorsville and sent to a hospital, whence he was discharged minus a part of two limbs. He had been engaged to a woman whom he had loved for years.

"Tell her that she is free," he said to her father, who came to see him, adding, with a sad smile, "There never was much of me, but now I am only the wreck of a man."

She wrote back, "If there is enough body left to hold his soul I will marry him."

They were married, and Tom became a useful citizen in the community in which he lived. He acquired influence and property, and used both to noble purpose. When the great disaster at Johnstown occurred, he hastened to the place and worked among the homeless, starving people, surrounded by thousands of unburied dead. He went home worn out by labor, and died, strong, bright, cheery to the last.

Is there nothing in this true story of a true life to help those who have some bodily defect which seems a hopeless obstacle in their path?—Youth's Companion.

A Feat in Conjuring.

The most remarkable conjuring trick I ever saw was done in Calcutta by an Arabian. Spreading a white cloth on the floor he sat down with his back to the wall, and, turning to a member of the party, he asked for the loan of a rupee, which he requested should be given to one of the ladies present. This done, the conjurer told the lady to hand it back to the gentleman from whom she had taken it. The gentleman took it, and then the conjurer said to him, "Are you sure that it is a rupee?"

"Yes," replied the gentleman.

"Now close your hand upon it," said the Arabian, "and think without speaking of some country in America. Now open your hand and tell me if the coin is not one of the country you thought of." The gentleman opened his hand and found a Mexican dollar. He said that he had been thinking of Mexico.

He was about to give the coin to the conjurer when the latter declined it, requesting him to give it to another one of the party. He gave it to me. I looked at it closely, shut my hand tight, thought of France, and found it had turned into a five franc piece.

"How do you suppose that was done?"

"I really can't tell," was the reply.

"I wish I knew."—Interview in New York Times.

Willed $10,000 to a Polite Bartender.

A respectable looking man, who said he was a lawyer from Allegheny City and administrator of the estate of Mr. Hughes, a millionaire, who recently died there, called at Green's hotel, Eighth and Chestnut streets, recently, and said that he had come to hunt up a bartender who waited on Mr. Hughes last summer. Mr. Hughes in his will bequeathed to the young man $10,000. Mr. Hughes on dying did not know the bartender's name, but gave a full description of his appearance.

The visitor questioned all the bartenders about the length of time they had been at Green's, and if they had known Mr. Hughes. James Cleary, the head bartender, gave him the names and description of all those who worked there during the past year.—Philadelphia Times.

Jenny Lind at Mount Vernon.

What old timer does not recollect the coming of Jenny Lind to our shores in 1850 and the extraordinary furore created by her singing? Of course I only know what I've read about it, but I remember one incident in particular—her visit to Mount Vernon. The great songstress had been deeply touched by stories of the illustrious patriot, and upon reaching Washington the first request was to be taken to Mount Vernon. When Col. Washington, the then proprietor of the estate, heard of her wish, he chartered a steamboat and made up a party, which, beside Mr. Barnum and Miss Lind, included Mr. Seaton, the mayor of Washington, and other notable citizens. The boat landed near the tomb and the party proceeded thither. The Swedish woman's big heart ran over as she drew near this sacred spot. From this point she was conducted to the mansion, where a fine collation was served. With child-like enthusiasm she gazed upon every relic of the great leader.

When the party had reached the library Col. Washington took a book from one of the shelves and presented it to her. Not only had it been Washington's, but it contained his book plate and his name written with his own hand. Miss Lind was greatly moved. She drew Mr. Barnum aside and insisted upon making some suitable return for the gift then and there, and although her watch and chain was a costly one and had been a present from a friend, Mr. Barnum had great difficulty in restraining her from at once bestowing it upon Col. Washington. "The expense is nothing," she exclaimed, "compared to the value of this book!" Dear, good soul! I wonder where the book is now! No doubt in possession of her family and properly cared for as a priceless memento of Mme. Lind Goldschmidt's visit to the New World.—Book Lover.

Making Glass for Mosaic Windows.

But the glass worker has only begun his work when he has the molten "metal" simmering in his crucibles. It must undergo many subsequent manipulations before it is available for the purpose of art. Some of these, from a technical point of view, seem retrogressional. It has been found that the rich color effects in glass in the middle ages are largely due to the imperfections in the material. Its lack of homogeneousness, its unequal thickness, and uneven surfaces contribute largely to its beauty. The modern product is too uniform to be brilliant; it transmits the light with too great regularity. Intentional imperfections are, therefore, introduced into the process; and the products, in consequence, are much more satisfactory to the artist. This work of individualizing the product has now been so far systematized that several special brands of art glass are recognized in the markets.

The so called antique glass, in both white and colors, is made precisely like the ordinary sheet window glass, except that the surface of the glass is made full of minute blow holes, which produce almost an aventurine effect, and add greatly to its brilliancy. In the cathedral glass the surface is rendered wavy and uneven, so that the transmission of light shall be correspondingly irregular. In the flash glass ordinary sheets are covered with a thin plating of colored glass, a process which permits a very delicate color tone, and materially decreases the expense, where a costly glass, such as ruby, is needed to give the color. But in mosaic work it is now generally preferred that the glass shall not be at all transparent, since the effect is much richer. The most of the glass is therefore cast, the process being a repetition in miniature of the casting of rough plate.—Professor C. H. Henderson in Popular Science Monthly.

Stealing Letters.

I have never heard of a porcelain letter thief being arrested, and yet the offense is very common. The letters make the prettiest and most prominent window sign known, and have an advantage in being easily removed and replaced on another window. But they are expensive on the original purchase, and somewhat luxurious in keeping up. You frequently see signs with prominent letters missing, and you immediately condemn the sign on the theory that the letters have been broken or have fallen off. This is a mistake, and if you notice you will see that all the missing letters are those in common use. They are simply stolen. The stealing business is one in itself. A couple of men go around at night, stand in front of a door or window, and while one watches the other quickly removes the letters he desires. There is some special process by which this is done quickly and easily. These letters may be used in other signs, or the thief may come around a few days later, notice the missing letters, offer to replace them, and actually put on your own letters. Of course you can't swear to this and he is safe, and you have simply paid him for robbing you.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Afraid of Spooks.

The Piegans, as a class—and we learned the same is true of Indians everywhere in the northwest—are exceedingly superstitious. Their bete noir is the evil spirit, and somehow the idea prevails in the mind of the average Indian that this same dreaded evil spirit roams about after dark and is liable to pounce down upon his victim at any time. For this reason the Indian will not travel alone at night. He is in dread of the wicked personage referred to and does not care to cope with him single handed. He is willing to travel at night if accompanied by others, and take his chances, but alone, never. When darkness overtakes him and he is on the tramp he stops, lights a fire and camps where he is until daylight. With the Indian misfortune and disease are regarded as the result of the displeasure of their deity. Death in some of the tribes in the great northwest is believed to be an unhappy, an undesirable change, and when it occurs they still live, although they take the form of some creature among wild animals. And so when this body puts off things mortal it enters immortality in the form of some lower animal.—Troy Times.

VERY TOOTHSOME.

How Beasts, Birds and Fishes Eat Their Food.

THE MOSQUITO'S QUEER OUTFIT.

A Fish With 222 Teeth.—The Toothless Sturgeon.

Man is the only animal that has teeth—incisors, canines and molars—of an equal height. Man, the ape, and nearly all ruminants, have thirty-two teeth. The hog, however, is better off than this, and has forty-four. So has the opossum and mole. The river dolphin of South America lays far beyond this, however, having no less than 222 teeth. Teeth are no part of the skeleton, but belong to the appendages, like skin and hair.

The sturgeon is toothless and draws in its food by suction, but the shark has hundreds of teeth sets in rows that sometimes number ten.

Lobsters and crabs masticate their food with their horny jaws, but they have also sets of teeth in their stomachs, where they complete the work of chewing. But there is one peculiar kind of crab, called the king or horseshoe crab, which chews its food with its legs. This is an actual fact, the little animal grinding its morsels between its thighs before it passes them over to its mouth.

The jelly fish absorbs its food by wrapping itself around the object which it seeks to make its own. The starfish is even more accommodating. Fastening itself to the body it wishes to feed on, it turns its stomach inside out and enwraps its prey with this useful organ.

Dogs seize their food with their jaws, cats with their feet, and so do monkeys, some of them pressing their prehensile tails into service. The squirrel uses its paws to carry its food to its mouth, the elephant its trunk, the giraffe, ant eater and toad their tongues.

Spiders chew their food with horny jaws, which are sharp enough to give quite a nip.

Grasshoppers and lobusts are very well provided with the necessary machinery for eating much and often. They have saw like jaws and gizzards, too, the latter being fitted out with horny teeth.

The caterpillar feeds with two saw edged jaws, working tranversely, and uses them to such good advantage that he eats three or four times his own weight every day.

Toads, tortoises, turtles, and most lizards have no teeth. Frogs have teeth in their upper jaw only. Ant eaters, sloths and armadillos have no teeth.

The lion and the tiger, and, indeed, most of the carnivora, do not grind their food, using their jaws only up and down, the molars acting like chopping knives, or, rather, scissors. Their mouths, in fact, are a veritable hash mill.

The butterfly pumps nectar into itself through a tube, and bees and flies suck up their food with a long tongue or proboscis.

The spider's mouth is quite a complicated affair. It has fangs for holding its prey, masticatory organs for bruising its solid food, and a sucking apparatus for taking up the fluids. Quite as complicated is the mouth of the mosquito, which consists of the lances, the saws, and the pumping tubes.

The leech has three saws, with which it does good service in the phlebotomy line.

The woodpecker has a three barbed tongue, like a Fijian's spear, with which it draws out the worm which it has excited by its tapping.

The clam feeds with a siphon and the oyster with its beard.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Traveling Stones.

Much has been written about the traving stones of Australia, but it is not generally known that in Nevada similar curiosities are found. The stones are perfectly round, the majority of them being as large as a walnut and of an irony nature. When distributed about the floor, table or level surface, within two or three feet of each other, they immediately begin traveling toward a common center, and there lie huddled up in a bunch like a lot of eggs in a nest. Scattered over the barren region in which they are found are little basins from a few feet to a rod or two in diameter, and it is in the bottom of these that the rolling stones are found.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Japanese Decoration.

A new decoration is announced by the emperor of Japan in celebration of Emperor Jimmu's coronation 2,550 years ago, the distinguishing feature of which is the kinshi, or golden fish hawk or kite device. The legend is to the effect that during Emperor Jimmu's conquest of eastern Japan, when his fortunes were at a low ebb and he had sustained several successive defeats, the sky one day became suddenly darkened, hail fell and a tobi of a golden hue settled on the emperor's crossbow. The bird threw off a brilliant light, the soldiers of the opposing army were struck blind with the glare, and the emperor was victorious.—Chicago Herald.

The Matter with Hannah.

A rather overcultured and overstrained literary and critical view which fell into our hands the other day was relieved at one point by the statement that "Hannah Moore was never kissed in her life." We suggest to the Browning club that in this fact may possibly be found a clew to the origin of that familiar classical saying: "And that's what's the matter with Hannah."—Boston Globe.

An Atmospheric Railway.

There is a proposition to construct an atmospheric railway 3¼ miles long up the Jungfrau. According to the plans there will be two parallel tunnels nearly ten feet in diameter, finished cylindrically and provided with rails for the cars; the cars will be cylindrical, and will be forced up the incline by compressed air operating against their ends.—New Orleans Picayune.

An Engineering Feat in India.

The attention of the engineering world is said to be just now fixed upon the Bombay presidency in India, where is being constructed one of the greatest pieces of solid masonry the world has seen in modern times. As the present water supply of Bombay depends upon defective works, a huge dam has been designed to inclose the watershed of the valley which drains into the sea south of Bombay. Solely with the aid of native labor Engineer Glover, a Scotchman by birth, began this gigantic structure, which, it is expected, will be completed in March next. It is 2 miles long, 118 feet in height and 103 feet wide at the base. The roadway on the top is to be 24 feet in width, and the stone work will cost half a million sterling.

The lake of water which this dam will imprison will be eight square miles in area, so that Bombay need be under no apprehension once the viceroy has officially declared the sluices open and the pipes of sixty miles long are in working order. Mr. Glover has 12,000 Hindoos, all of whom he has trained to this special work, employed on the dam. To his thirty years' labor among the natives is due the fact that there are in India today 500,000 men, all capable stonemasons, carpenters and navvies, who have been employed on his contracts for great public works.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Cool Work by a Robber.

A man of commanding appearance, about 23 years of age and nicely dressed, stopped at the residence of George Hottel, a farmer, who lives south of Mascoutah, Friday morning, and asked for a breakfast, which he said he was willing to pay for. While the farmer was preparing breakfast the stranger pocketed a gold watch and a small amount in money which were lying on a bureau in an adjoining bedroom. Mr. Hottel subsequently went to the room and discovered the theft. He charged the gentlemanly stranger with having them, and the latter promptly covered him with his revolver and ordered him to keep his mouth shut on penalty of being shot.

The farmer's wife then attempted to assist her husband out of his predicament, but was promptly knocked down by the stranger, who made Hottel and his wife sit opposite him at the table, with their hands behind them, while he quietly enjoyed his breakfast. Having appeased his appetite he coolly shook hands with the farmer and his wife, bade them an affectionate farewell, took to the woods with his plunder and has not been heard from.—St. Louis Republic.

Deserting Iceland.

They have been taking a census in Iceland recently, and they are in trouble there, too; but their trouble is not about the congressional representation. It is something even more serious. It appears that so great has been the hegira to Canada and the United States it has taken away from the island fully 20,000 people. This does not seem such a very large number, except when one considers that the original population was only about 80,000. One-fourth of the entire population then has emigrated! The result is disastrous. Taxes have been greatly increased, while properties have become reduced in values. The harvests, too, have been greatly lessened. There seems to be but one way out for the Icelanders They must all follow the vanguard and abandon their island to the walrus and bear. Perhaps a few centuries hence some Professor Horsford will discover evidence of human habitation at some pre-historic age in Iceland.—Boston Advertiser.

Electric Plowing.

An installation for the purpose of plowing the land by electric motors has been set up on the property belonging to the Marquis de la Laguna. The power of a waterwheel of some twenty horse power will be employed, and the implement for working the land is expected to work at a distance of three miles from the generating dynamo. So far as the electrical plant is concerned all is right, but a deficiency of mechanical and agricultural knowledge on the part of those intrusted with the work seems likely to make this trial a failure. This is much to be regretted, as the promoters of the experiment have been fortunate in finding a landowner who is disposed to make a trial of such an important application of electricity.—Industries.

A Military Bear Forages.

The regimental bear of the Seventeenth lancers, which has recently come to England with his regiment, took furlough without permission and started out to inspect Shorncliffe, much to the alarm of the inhabitants. Bruin first supped off two chickens, and then walked over some cottage roofs, refusing flatly to return home for all the coaxing of his military keepers. The animal next made off across country, and while a search party were looking for him everywhere in despair he quietly returned to camp of his own accord.—London Letter.

Why the Red Flag Flew.

A red flag, flying from the rigging of the steamship Knutsford, which arrived at New York a few days ago from Liverpool, was an object of interest to all vessels that passed near her moorings in Gravesend bay. There were 14,000 pounds of dynamite stored in the hold of the Knutsford, and the least jar might have exploded the dangerous cargo and blown the vessel to pieces.—New York Letter.

A Serious Laughing Matter.

While laughing heartily Mrs. John Patterson, a colored woman of Brazil, Ind., ruptured the optic nerve of one eye, producing instant blindness in that organ. Physicians say that not a similar case is recorded in medical annals.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Apples That Cost $25 a Barrel.

Newtown pippin apples are now in market for shipping to England, and cost $25 a barrel. They are all selected and each apple is rolled in paper.—New York Evening Sun.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

C. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY MAY 8 ..... 1891.

It is said that Mr. Estee will be the Secretary of War in case Mr. Procter is sent to the Senate from Vermont.

The Indians are rather slow in accepting Uncle Sam's proposition for them to don the soldier's uniform. At Rosebud about thirty have enlisted, and at Cheyenne fifty-five have decided to cut away from tribal influences.

Hon. C. N. Felton, the newly elected senator from California, will shortly pay Los Angeles a visit with the view to discovering the needs of that section. There is every reason to believe that we shall find in Mr. Felton a really impartial and energetic representative in the Senate of the United States, and that if he is impressed with the needs of improvements in the line of public buildings and harbors he will labor to secure them. Here is a hint to public bodies and enterprising citizens.

Efforts are being made in England to secure legislation to prevent the immigration of destitute aliens. A society organized with this object in view has its origin in the growing feeling that the influx of continental paupers was a menace to the continued prosperity of English workingmen. But for the intervention of machine politics, principally in New York, this effect would have been brought about in the United States several years ago. The late great labor riots in Pennsylvania, instigated and carried on by foreigners, will be sure to enforce the passage of strict immigration laws in the next Congress.

The First of May was stormy in Europe. The labor organizations and socialists could, of course, make no headway against the armies of the kings and emperors, but they made a showing that will keep May First in the memories of Ministers of State and capitalists too during the year; and the events of the next First of May will be awaited with keen interest and perhaps lively apprehension. Now that May First has been, by a sort of common consent, made the day for labor demonstrations, not to say risings, we may expect the agitation to increase on every successive May 1st, until the opposing forces come at last to a trial of strength, and then the news from Europe will be exciting.

The President has left California, where he was entertained with lavish hospitality for nearly a fortnight. While much interest centered in the President, the people were gratified especially with the chance to meet Post master General Wanamaker and Secretary Rusk as members of the Cabinet. There is nothing but praise for the address, demeanor and tact of these gentlemen Mr. Wanamaker, especially, made an excellent impression as a business man and his patience, endurance and politeness never gave out during all the trials and fatigues of receptions, crowds and crushes. It is well that the people have seen the President, and that some of them saw him closely, face to face. In parts of the country, far from its political centre illusions grow up in respect to those in high office, which are dispelled by contact. These illusions are not compatible with the conditions of equality which are amongst the most of our traditions.

The San Diego Sun of Friday has an article recommending Gen. Vandever for register of the treasury, and suggesting the retirement of Gen. Rosecrans from that position to make way for its favorite. It would indeed be a noble thing on the part of the administration to displace a union soldier whose services during the war, in purity of purpose and heroism, were second to none, to make way for a gentleman whose signal incompetence and lack of attention to the interests of Southern California are a by-word throughout this section. The venerable Vandever may well be allowed to retire to his Ventura home to spend the remainder of his days in peace. His period of public usefulness is over, and with him the private station is the post of honor. The Sun's twaddle about his usefulness to his constituents and his services to the Republican party is calculated to provoke a smile from those acquainted with the facts. No district was ever worse represented in congress than the late Sixth district. Our people would have gotten along much better if the seat had been in name, as in effect, unfilled altogether.

HIS ASHES TO THE WIND.

STRANGE FUNERAL RITES OVER HENRY MEYER'S REMAINS.

He Was Incinerated to the Music of a Band—His Ashes Were Cast Into the Air from the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor—All as He Directed.

A little white cloud floated out from the head of the Statue of Liberty at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and in it disappeared in the four winds of heaven the remains of Henry Meyer, hotel keeper, of Staten Island.

To be buried in this singular, half cynical fashion in midair, as it were, was exactly as the dead man had often directed while he lived. As he had wished, his body was cremated, his handful of ashes was preserved in a box until the next Sunday should come, and then, with the popping of champagne bottles and expressions of good will, but no grief, was cast from the top of Liberty whenever it would go. In the clear sunshine of the beautiful day, looking no bigger and of no more importance than a puff of cigar smoke, the cloud hung for a moment under the lee of the statue. Then the sharp northwest wind caught it, whirled it instantly out of sight in the direction of the dead man's old home, and that was the last of the body of Henry Meyer.

A jovial though an odd soul, and a hotel keeper for thirty years at Port Richmond, Mr. Meyer was well known to every Staten Islander and a good many other people, too. From the name of his hotel he got to be called "Puck" Meyer, so that his real first name was generally forgotten. He was a skeptic, a socialist, a strenuous advocate of cremation, a pretty good liver and a man of great popularity in spite of a thousand peculiarities which will be Staten Island folk lore for generations.

No one saw "Puck" die. He was found dead in his bed in the hotel on the morning of Feb. 14. His wife was the first to discover his death. As his will, made many years ago, directed, the body was taken to the Fresh Pond crematory, on Long Island, two days later and incinerated. A committee from the Staten Island Schuetzen corps, of which Meyers had been a member, accompanied the remains in three carriages, with a brass band.

The body was dressed in the blue uniform of the Schuetzen corps, and after it had been consumed the brass buttons and other pieces of metal which the fire had not destroyed were preserved as souvenirs. The ashes, weighing little more than three pounds, were of a whitish color and as feathery as cigar ashes. They were carefully placed in a round tin box and put in charge of First Lieut. Moritz Wegerle. Then, with the band playing a lively air, the party returned to Staten Island.

The special committee took the steamer Bay Ridge for Bedloe's Island.

To avoid curiosity Lieut. Wegerle had the tin box in a brown Gladstone bag. He swung this carelessly in his hand as the party climbed to the top of the pedestal. Then they went outside the statue on the stone platform surrounding it, and there the bag was opened and the master of ceremonies disclosed four brown paper bags, each containing an equal amount of Meyer's ashes. There was a spoonful or two left in the bottom of the case, which were saved for "Puck's" married sister on Staten Island at her request.

As he handed around the bags Mr. Rinschler made this speech:

"Here are the ashes of old 'Puck' Meyer. He was a good man, beloved by all. I never knew of any wrong thing he ever did."

Each man that got a bag stuck it into his pocket. Then the party proceeded to climb the winding stairs to Liberty's head. Their movements, however, had been observed by Watchman Horn, and as they began the ascent he called out: "What have you got there? 'Puck' Meyer?"

Consternation was depicted on every face until Horn shouted again: "It's all right. Go ahead. You can come up!" Up they went accordingly, but in one of the sharp turns Capt. Fink who is a portly man, got hopelessly stuck. He handed his bag of ashes to Mr. Boehe and went back to the pedestal. It had been intended to throw the ashes from the torch, but that was impossible. They had forgotten the necessary formality of the special permit.

Each man took his station therefore in the head corresponding to the points of the compass, and as each bag was emptied the members cried, "Here goes the ashes of 'Puck' Meyer. Happy days!"

"Happy days to old 'Puck' Meyer," said Mr. Rinschler.

"He was a good fellow," remarked Lieut. Wegerle.

"You're right he was," said the others altogether, according to the prearranged formula.

"Do you believe in the resurrection?" asked one of the committee of a brother member as they boarded the 5 o'clock boat.

"Well, I guess there's something in it," said the brother laconically.

"Then all I've got to say is that 'Puck' Meyer will find a hard job pulling himself together when that day comes."

Meyer was 56 years old and came to this country from Hamburg about thirty-five years ago. He was one of the first volunteers from Staten Island on the northern side during the rebellion. He served through the war and got a wound in his left leg in a skirmish in Tennessee. He refused to let the surgeons amputate his limb, although they said he couldn't live unless he did, and brought the leg and the rest of his body home safe and sound at the end of the war. He never wore an overcoat, always wore a silk hat the year round and always carried a cane. The Staten Island children almost worshiped him.

Meyer provided in his will that his friends should have a champagne supper after scattering his ashes, but it was found that no money remained for this. In fact, the man died a bankrupt. His place at Port Richmond was sold under foreclosure the day after he died. He left one child, a son 3 years old, by his present wife. His life was a fast and a merry one, and his friends hardly knew whether to laugh or cry over his memory. —New York Herald.

Spiders Are Industrious.

No small insect ever escapes from the web of a spider, a fact which is not to be wondered at when it is considered that an ordinary sized snare may contain as many as 120,000 viscid globules. The spinner is constantly engaged in repairing injuries to the web inflicted by wind, stray leaves or captured insects. Once a day the whole snare is subjected to rigorous examination, and any broken or loosened threads are adjusted.—Corn-

Before the Camera.

If you are short and stout don't ask the poor artist to make a picture of you full length. He will, if you insist; but he knows he is doing a great wrong thereby. Nothing is so graceful and pleasing in a picture of a stout lady as a sitting half length, the figure so turned as to hide the too too stoutness. Again, if you are slim and angular, do not for an instant forget that a full length figure will make you appear more slim and angular. Then the pretty bust picture is your only hope and you should insist on having no other.

If a gentleman has a very long neck—no matter how nicely he looks in a high collar—his picture if taken in such a high affair would look grotesque. A short neck and high collar, a long neck and low turned down collar by all means. No loud stripes, no great checks, no striking figures should be worn in a photograph. One thing bear in mind when you visit the studio—bring along your home expression. Don't spend two days before you come to the studio practicing poses and different expressions before your mirror, and, lastly, give the photographer the benefit of exercising his artistic and professional ability.—Photographer in Ladies' Home Journal.

Mrs. Stuart's Good Work.

It is not a wonder that men should look with astonishment on a woman who undertakes to build an institution. Many a woman of advanced ideas would be dumfounded to find a member of her sex so far ahead of her age. Women are feeling their way slowly and secretly but successfully. The female benefactors of New York city are many, but unknown. Of wealthy families, they dislike notoriety, and so long as they see their pet project blossom into success and flourish they sink their own individuality into the abyss of humanity and rest content.

A new asylum for destitute children is to be built near Central park. Few people know that the land and every stick of timber that constitutes its frame was purchased by a woman. Yet it was. And that woman was Mrs. Robert Stuart. She is bordering on the silver age of sixty, yet she is full of geniality and sociability.

"My husband was a benevolent man, and when he died I made it my life's motto to carry out his intentions," said she. "Money is of no avail to me if I cannot make some poor people happy." —New York Recorder.

Poisoned by His Easy Chair.

A distinguished citizen passed away recently under circumstances which will arouse a feeling of sorrow in those who realize how life might have been preserved. Ex-Mayor Samuel C. Cobb was one of the sturdiest of Bostonians. But gradually he began to fail in health, with such slowness that the decline was not noticed until it had gone far, very far, but with a fatal sureness that no medical skill could at the last avert. It was all a mystery. The physicians doctored him for this and for that, surmising now one disease and another, until at the last moment, just a few weeks before his death, they discovered the real trouble.

Arsenical poisoning was at the root, and that poisoning had been steadily going on for years. His curtains, his wall paper, and, more particularly, his favorite easy chair, were made of material that contained the deadly arsenic, and the poor man had unknowingly been breathing in the poison while supposing he was resting and gaining strength. It was very sad.—Boston Cor. New York Commercial Advertiser.

Dates for Easter.

In 1883 Easter fell on March 25, and it will only once again in this century, namely, in 1894, fall on so early a date. In the three following centuries it will occur only eight times on the same date —namely, in 1951, 2035, 2046, 2057, 2103, 2114, 2125 and 2198. The earliest date on which Easter can fall is on March 22, and this only in case the moon is full on March 21, when this date happens to fall on Saturday. This combination of circumstances is extremely rare. It occurred in 1390, 1761 and 1817, and will happen again in 1990, 2076 and 2144, while during the three following centuries it is not once "on the books" at this early date. On the other hand, Easter never falls later than April 25; this was the case in 1666, 1734 and 1886, and will only happen once in the next century—namely in 1943.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A Stimulant to the Gas Industry.

Many of those who were interested in the manufacture and sale of gas in this country have been much exercised by the threatened supersession by the electric light of the older illuminant; but there is now every reason to believe that instead of injuring the gas industry, the introduction of electricity for illuminating purposes will stimulate it to an unlimited extent.

Not only has the fact been established that the superior brilliance of electric light in streets and stores where it is used calls for more light in competitive situations, where gas alone is employed, but it has been demonstrated that the use of gas in engines as a motive power to drive electric light machinery will produce from five to six times the light that could be obtained by burning the same amount of gas in the ordinary way through a burner. A new field has thus been opened up for gas companies to work, in which the electric light will be their ally instead of their competitor.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

No One Responsible.

The gallows now used in Colorado is so arranged that a spring is set loose by the weight of the victim on the trap, and he acts as his own executioner. This saves the sheriff or any one else acting as hangman, and no one's conscience is troubled if there is any bungling.—Detroit Free Press.

A Queer Idea.

For many years it was believed that the atmosphere had a great deal to do with thread making, and that good thread could only be made in Scotland. It is now known that it is all in the twist and nothing in the atmosphere.—Detroit Free Press.

Jumped the Rails and Jumped Back Again

A peculiar accident happened recently on the local Omaha line. In going to the junction, and before reaching Hersey & Bean's mill, the passenger and smoking cars left the track, owing to a broken rail, ran some distance on the ties, struck a switch and regained the rails. The engine and tender had not left the rails.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

Cured Himself of Consumption.

Dr. Wilson, a former officer in the navy, who served with Admiral Farragut during the war, is in Washington. Dr. Wilson found soon after the war that he was troubled with consumption. He sought medical advice, and he was told that he could not at best live more than six months if he should remain in this country. Dr. Wilson, who is today tall, broad shouldered, with the ruddy appearance of a man who has never known a day of sickness, says that he cured himself absolutely by what is known as the out-of-door treatment. He went first to the Cape of Good Hope and wandered about through the south of Africa. He engaged in agriculture and hunting.

He spent a good many years in the Transvaal. He would not live in a house until his lungs became thoroughly healed. He now owns the half of the Island of Johanna, one of the Camore group. It is an island perhaps twenty-five miles in circumference. He has a large sugar plantation on this island, which is 900 feet above the sea level. The only other white man on the island is an Englishman, also a sugar planter. Dr. Wilson is a bachelor. He has built up a comfortable place for himself on this island. The climate is perfect and his business good. There is no place in the world so enchanting to him as this island in the south Atlantic. The climate is equable and not subject to sudden changes. His pleasure and recreation are found in hunting in the Transvaal.—Chicago Tribune.

She Caught a Burglar.

An amusing story is told of an encounter which recently took place between Mrs. George Bittlemorgan, of Liberty, Va., and a burglar. Her husband had been called away during the evening and she was left in the house alone with her two little children. Some errand called her upstairs for a few minutes, and while there she fancied she heard a slight noise in the hall below, but, it ceasing in a moment, nothing more was thought of it. When she returned to her sitting room, however, she soon noticed that the clock had stopped running.

It was an old fashioned eight day piece nearly nine feet high and very massive. Mrs. Bittlemorgan, thinking it had run down and needed winding, started toward it with the intention of getting it going again, and had nearly reached it when she saw a man about to dart out of it. As he made the movement, however, he brought the clock down on its face and upon himself as well. In trying to get out of the way he tripped and fell over a rug.

Before he could scramble from under its very considerable weight the quick-witted lady seated herself on the clock, calling at the same time to the children to run out of the house and scream for help. This speedily came, and the man, who confessed to having secreted himself in the clock for the purpose of burglarizing the house, was carried to jail, and Mrs. Bittlemorgan much complimented on her bravery and presence of mind.—Philadelphia Times.

Two Names and One Person.

A Chicago railroad man had a queer request from a conductor for a pass the other day. He asked for a pass to one point for a young lady whom he designated as Miss ——, and from there to Chicago for the same young lady as Mrs. ——, his own name. I inquired how this was, and when I received the explanation I allowed the passes. He was on his regular run, and did not care to lose a day, even though he was to be married. He had his home all nicely furnished in Chicago, and the young lady was to meet him at the station where her parents lived.

A minister was to board the train there, also, and they were to be married on board his train. Everything went off all right, and they were married according to the programme. Several presents were received by the young couple, and the passengers took up a purse, which they gave to the bride.—Exchange.

All in One Day.

George Tolbert, a young herder employed by Durnel & Spencer, rode into Mojave recently to have a tooth pulled, and on his return his horse threw him and, becoming frightened, kicked him into insensibility. When he gained consciousness he found that matches carried in his pocket had become lighted, setting fire to his clothing and severely burning one foot. Being unable to walk, it is said he crawled on his hands and knees ten miles to reach assistance. He was brought from Mojave to Tehachapi for medical treatment. It is thought amputation of the foot will be necessary.—Tehachapi Summit Sun.

One Maine Boy.

The son of Mr. Alvin Howes, of Palmyra, is considered about the smartest boy in this section. He is 9 years old and is master of Greenleaf's Complete Arithmetic, having interest, equation of payments, mensuration, square root, cube root, etc., at his tongue's end. He will perform calculations with large numbers readily without slate or pencil, and rarely, if ever, make a mistake. With him a thing once learned is never forgotten. He began to learn geography when he was 3 years old by hearing his brother reciting his lessons to his mother, and now it is next to an impossibility to ask him a question in that study that he cannot readily answer.

He has a better knowledge of physiology than most teachers possess, and withal is quite a politician, being better posted on the events of the day than many who go to the polls and vote. He has not been drilled at home to show off; he has only been assisted when he called for help. He is a well developed, healthy looking child of modest and pleasing manners.—Hartland Cor. Pittsfield (Me.) Advertiser.

Wall-Leveling Rifles.

The new rifle with which the German army and navy have been armed during the last few months is a terror in the way of small weapons. The gun has a bore .31 inch, and throws a projectile of lead coated with nickel steel weighing 14.5 grains, or about half an ounce. The cartridge used weighs nearly an ounce, and is 3.25 inches in length. The magazine of the rifle carries five cartridges. The speed of the bullet on leaving the muzzle of the gun is about 2,200 feet per second, and the limit of its effective range is a little under two miles.

Brick walls of small thickness are not absolute proof against this gun, as several shots striking the same spot will make a breach.—New York Journal.

An Accomplished East Indian Girl.

One of the most interesting and striking figures among the Oxford students is Cornelia Sorabji, a tall, olive skinned girl, as slender as the traditional Indian princess who weighed only one rose leaf. Clothed in her native dress of pale blue crape, embroidered with gold, with its mantle draped over her head like a veil, and shadowing her astonishingly large and brilliant eyes, she makes a strange picture among the rosy blonde English women in their tailor gowns.

At 18, and professor of literature in the university at Bombay, she still thirsted for broader opportunities, and found her way to Somerville, and attracted attention by her brilliant examination papers for the history and literary schools. The government decided, however, that a woman with knowledge of law was needed to collect evidence in the Zenanas, and she immediately entered upon a legal course. After six months' study her papers on Roman law were held by the examiners to be the most remarkable and able ever presented by any student of either sex in the university.

Prince Dhuleep Singh's two daughters are also members of Somerville, and on its rolls stand very many of the most noted and noble names of England. The outside world hears less of the work done by women at Oxford than of those at Cambridge, because of a different system of conferring honors; but here is really found the best example of women freely sharing in university life, and the best proof that neither young men nor young women are the worse for that community of study.—Elizabeth Bisland in Harper's Bazar.

Her Foot or Her Life.

With her foot wedged between the guard rails at the Short Line yards, Miss Katie Wills, a young woman of the East End, was run down by a train of freight cars. Her foot was ground off, but by the rarest presence of mind she was saved from death.

Miss Wills was out walking with a girl friend. While walking through the network of tracks in the yards Miss Wills stepped upon one of the rails. Her foot slipped, and in some way was caught between the track and a guard rail. At the same time her friend noticed a train of freight cars backing toward them, and only a short distance off. Seeing the impending danger she ran to the assistance of the captive, and together they used all their strength in trying to extricate her foot. But it was caught as in a vise. On account of a slight curve in the track at that point the engineer did not see the young woman until it was too late.

In a last effort to save her life, Miss Wills threw her body from the track, but her left foot was still held firmly, and through her agony of mind she saw the wheels roll over her leg midway between the knee and ankle, severing the member completely. The shoe which had been cut off with the foot could hardly be drawn from the track, so tightly had it been wedged in.

Miss Wills is 18 years of age and is an unusually pretty girl. The terrible strain of the few seconds she was held between the rails and the physical pain suffered threw her into such a condition that it is feared her death will result.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Given Away by His Daughter.

A somewhat unusual scene in an Episcopal church in Cardiff occurred not long since. It appears that the pastor took what he thought was a seasonable opportunity to reprove the members of his church for their non-attendance at Sunday morning worship. He impartiality included his own family. As soon as he had concluded his own daughter rose up and said that her father, when he first awoke, could not rise unless his hot water was brought up and the towel was placed under his nose.

She related how boots had to be cleaned, fires lighted and the breakfast prepared, and then went on to describe how the worthy clergyman required his book and his coat, and his gloves, and his hat, and his stick, and—his cake and his wine, before he was ready to start to his work.

This was all detailed with minuteness and volubility. The reverend father kept no servant, and there was the household work to be done, and, besides, he insisted upon a hot dinner served with punctuality. Under these circumstances, the lady pleaded, was it possible for her to get to worship on a Sunday morning? The sympathies of the audience were with the daughter. It is not likely that the good parson will soon repeat his complaint of non-attendance.—South Wales News.

He First Opposed Mrs. Custer's Pension.

The principal opposition in the house to the recent bill to increase Mrs. General Custer's pension came from a member from Indiana, who seemed to think that army officers' widows lived lives of ease and luxury, and did nothing to support themselves. When he learned, however, that Mrs. Custer was one of the busiest women in the country, and had been hard at work for fourteen years, he turned about and made a speech in her favor, and the bill went through. Mrs. Custer is now preparing a series of talks on "Plains Life" for delivery before school girls and boys and before women's clubs. With her husband's sister, Mrs. Calhoun, who is also a busy woman, she has gone into temporary retirement at Atlantic City to recruit her strength for future work.—Harper's Weekly.

Apple Blossoms in Winter.

We all love the beautiful, deliciously fragrant apple blossoms that charm us for a short season in the spring, and note sadly the last shower of white petals over the emerald green carpet beneath the trees. All persons do not know, however, how easily these lovely flowers may be caused to bloom indoors in winter.

If large branches are broken from the trees and placed in water in a warm, sunny window, they will soon flower, and many of the blossoms will be as beautiful and fragrant as those that bloom on the trees in the spring.

Care must be taken to select such branches as have an abundance of plump blooming buds, and some of these should be removed, as well as some of the more pointed leaf buds.

Wild pear and wild cherry branches may be flowered in a similar manner, but not so satisfactorily as apple tree limbs. No doubt many other kinds of early blooming shrubs and trees could be made to blossom in this way.

Here is an interesting field for experiment for flower lovers, particularly for invalids and children. The satisfaction of sending to a sick neighbor or presenting to a friend a bunch of fresh apple blossoms in winter amply repays the trifling labor required to produce them.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and
Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
Obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "Independent" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

A. R. CONKLIN,
Attorney-at-Law
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State of California and Nevada.

J. W. P. LAIRD. P. H. MACK.
MACK & LAIRD.
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M. D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(County Physician)
Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED.
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday ..... January 24th
" ..... February 21st
" ..... March 21st
" ..... April 18th
" ..... May 23rd
" ..... June 20th
" ..... July 18th
" ..... August 15th
" ..... September 12th
" ..... October 17th
" ..... November 14th
" ..... December 12th

JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

J. W. Murphy.
BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work.
Wagons and Carriages Repaired.
HORSESHOEING, $2.00 for CASH
Shop on Edwards St., opposite the Court House, Independence.

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROPRIETOR.
Horseshoeing ..... $2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

Snug little FORTUNES have been made at work for us, by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Bonn, Toledo, Ohio. See cut. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Can work in spare time or all the time. Big money for workers. Failure unknown among them. NEW and WONDERFUL. Full particulars FREE. H. Hallett & Co., Box 560 PORTLAND, MAINE.

OFFICIAL.

Notice of Election.

STEVENS DITCH COMPANY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Stevens Ditch Company will be held at the office of the Company, in the town of Independence, Inyo county, Cal., on

SATURDAY, MAY 30, 1891,

At the hour of One o'clock in the afternoon of that day. That at said meeting there will be held an election to elect Five Directors of said Company for the ensuing year. And also to transact such other business as may properly come before said Annual Meeting.

P. H. MACK,
Secretary.

NOTCE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JOHN LUCAS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased to the Creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his office in the town of Lone Pine, Inyo county, Cal., the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in said Inyo county, State of California. E. H. EDWARDS,
Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased.
Dated May 5th, 1891.

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 18th day of April, 1891, in the matter of the Estate of John Mullane, deceased, the undersigned, the Executor of the Last Will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, and subject to confirmation by said Superior Court, at and after Tuesday, the 12th day of May, 1891, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Mullane at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Mullane at the time of his death, in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo, State of California and particularly described as follows, to wit: The South half of the North East quarter; and the North West quarter of the South East quarter of Section No. Seven, and the South West quarter of the North West quarter of Section No. Eight, all in Township No. Nine South, Range No. Thirty-four East, Mount Diablo Meridian, containing one hundred and sixty acres.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned, near the town of Big Pine, in the County of Inyo, State of California, and may be left at the place herein designated, or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, gold coin of the United States, ten per cent. of the the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at the expense of purchaser.

RICHARD HESSIAN.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Mullane, deceased.

NOTICE OF SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 18th day of April, 1891, in the matter of the Estate of John Mullane, deceased, the undersigned, Executor of the Last Will and Testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, on and after the sixth day of May, 1891, at the residence of the undersigned, near the town of Big Pine, County of Inyo, State of California, the following personal property to wit: Seventy head of stock cattle, more or less; One plow; One wagon; One horse; One cooking stove and utensils; One set harness; One shovel; One hay fork, and one trunk.

RICHARD HESSIAN.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Mullane, deceased.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of PETER DIECKSON, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNdersigned, Administrator of the estate of PETER DIECKSON, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his residence, in the town of Lone Pine, in the county of Inyo, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in the county of Inyo.

Dated April 18th, 1891.

JOHN F. LUBKEN,
Administrator of said Estate.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of Thomas Parker, deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Executors of the last Will and Testament of Thos. Parker, deceased, to the Creditors of and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Executors, at the office of P. H. Mack, in the town of Independence, Inyo Co., Cal., the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate, in the County of Inyo, State of California.

JOHN SHEPHERD,
S. G. CREGG.
Executor of the last Will and Testament of Thomas Parker, deceased.
Dated at Independence, Cal. April 4, 1891.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, San Francisco, California. Location of works, Inyo county, Cal.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AT A meeting of the Board of Directors, held the 30th day of March 1891, an assessment (No. 12) of Ten Cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, No. 132 California street, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 12th day of May 1891, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on FRIDAY, the 29th day of May, 1891, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

G. W. LUCE, Secretary.
Office, 135 California St., San Francisco, California.

CROCKERS' HOTEL.
BIG PINE - CAL.
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in act, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
W. H. UHLEMEYER, Lessee.
sep1-tf

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, MAY 8.....1891.

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 98¼
Lead, 4 35
Copper, 13.70
Tin, 20.40
Sugar, .06
Coffee, 20 @ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 13 @ 19.

Rev. H. J. Winsor will breach in Lone Pine at 11 a. m.; George Creek 2:30; Independence, 7:30 p. m. Sunday school at Lone Pine and Independence at 2 p. m.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

FRIDAY, May 1, 1891.

Manuella Diaz vs. A. Diaz et al.—Filed Summons.

Estate of John R. Hughes, deceased—Filed account and resignation of Executor.

SATURDAY May 2, 1891

Estate and Guardianship of John Morton—Filed Inventory and Appraisement.

MONDAY, May 4, 1891

Estate and Guardianship John James Lucas—Filed Citation

Estates of B. F. Theban and C. D. Begole—Wm. F. Matlack appointee Administrator.

TUESDAY, May 5, 1891

Estate of C. D. Begole, deceased—Order to show cause why property should not be sold.

WEDNESDAY, May 6, 1891.

Estate of James Ward, deceased—Wm. F. Matlack appointed Administrator.

Estate of John Lucas, deceased—E. H. Elwards appointed Administrator.

Estate of Eliza Ann Smith, deceased—Final account and discharge.

Estate of John C. Eddy, deceased—Filed certified copies of letters.

THURSDAY, May 7, 1891.

Estate of James Ward, deceased—Filed proof of publication.

F. E. Densmore is expected home on today's train.

See the notice of election of officers of the Stevens Ditch Company.

Mrs. John Lucas and Miss Maggie Zinn were up from Lone Pine on Tuesday.

The April crop of winds were a little delayed, but they are getting their work in now.

E. H. Elwards has been appointed administrator of the estate of John Lucas deceased.

To make paper stick to a wall that has been whitewashed, wash the wall with vinegar water.

John W. P. Laird and P. H. Mack have formed a law partnership. Their office is located in the Masonic building.

Charley Summers expects to be down from Bishop in a day or two to make arrangements for taking cattle to Long Valley.

The market price of silver and lead has increased during the past week. Pig lead is quoted in San Francisco at 4¾ and silver at 98¼.

The Piutes of Mason and Saline valleys, Nev., are attacked by la grippe, and there is scarcely a buck, squaw or papoose that is not down with it.

It is hard for the unprejudiced observer to tell which talks the loudest, a party of men playing draw pedro or a party of young women playing whist.

Messrs. Rathbun and Berliner of Lone Pine visited this office last Saturday. A letter from Lone Pine states that the latter expects to remove to Bishop soon.

P. W. Forbes Esq., went to Bishop on Tuesday's train. He will go from there direct to San Francisco to attend the meeting of the Odd Fellows Grand Lodge.

In the great match race at San Francisco between Geraldine and Rinfax the latter won in record breaking time. His owner, Tom Williams, is said to have won $8,000.

E. Chenot has a fine assortment of boots and shoes which he will sell at a reduced price. If you want a good article, and buy it cheap, give him a call.

The Call says that Bert Rhine of Sacramento has been elected Grand Inside Sentinel of the Native Sons. Well, Sacramento is a bigger place than Independence anyway.

Mr. J. N. Evans of Reno has sent men down to gather up his cattle here and move them out. They are now hard at work and will probably be rounded up by the middle of the month.

The closing of Yosemite Valley, and the fact of its being guarded by troops, will probably have the effect of sending a greater number of sheep into this country than on previous years.

Hon. A. J. Gould has very much improved in health and returns to Darwin today. He expresses deep gratitude to the people of Independence for the care tendered him during his illness.

Professor John Le Conte, the well-known Professor of Physics in the University of California, died last week at his residence in Berkely. He had been in feeble health for some time, and his extreme age hastened the end.

A meeting of the Directors of the Independence Water Company was held on Wednesday and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year. John A. Lank, President; John C. Irwin, Secretary; E. Robinson, Treasurer.

John W. P. Laird Esq. for many years a prominent attorney of this county, has removed to Bakersfield. He has formed a partnership with J. W. Mahon of that place. Mr. Laird leaves many friends in Inyo who wish him success in his new home.

A. L. Conklin met with a very painful accident last Saturday. He was running horses on the Tibbetts' ranch when his saddle horse stumbled and fell upon him. He was badly bruised, and the cartilege was torn on the right ribs. Drs. Woodin waited upon him immediately, and he is now getting along all right.

Weather Review for April.

During the month of April all storm areas have passed eastward north of Washington. There were seven of these disturbances which was rather an unusual number for this month of the year. As the result of this frequency the area of precipitation extended well southward into California and gave rise to frequent rains, occasionally heavy, in California, Nevada, Oregon and Washington. Such conditions have been essentially beneficial to agricultural and horticultural interests throughout California. The threatened drought of the early winter has been completely overcome by the copious and well distributed rains of February, March and April. Encouraging reports are general from all parts of the Pacific Coast as to the prospects of both grain and fruit crops. The month of April has not been marked by abnormal conditions but on the contrary the changes have been gradual and uniform, and thus favorable to the growth of vegetation.

Owing to the frequency of storm movements in the vicinity of Washington the rainfall has been in excess of the normal in northern California, western Oregon and Western Washington. Elsewhere there has been a deficiency. The excess varies from from 0.05 inches at Sacramento to 3.22 at Fort Canby and 3.31 at Eureka. The deficiency ranges rom 0.04 inches at Los Angeles to 1.14 at Fresno and 2.40 at Roseburg. The heaviest monthly rainfall was 7.80 inches at Fort Canby and the the smallest 0.10 at Keeler. No rain fell at Yuma or Fort Grant, which fact marks an unusual deficiency for Arizona. The rainfall at San Francisco was 2.44 inches, or 0.40 inches above the normal. This is one of the heaviest rainfalls at San Francisco for a number of years during April. The seasonal rainfall to date at San Francisco is 16.22 inches against 44.68 inches for the season of 1889-00. Rain fell on 22 days in California; on 17 days in Nevada; on 28 days in Oregon; on 27 days in Washington. No rain was reported from Arizona. The greatest rainfall in 24 hours occurred at Eureka, 2.04 inches, on the 9th and 10th; 1.34 inches on 7th at Carson City; 1.28 inches at Fort Canby on 6th; 1.22 inches at Olympia on 22d.

Thunder storms, Sacramento 13th, lightning struck trees. Hail, San Francisco, on 6th. Quincy, 11th, high winds destroyed outbuildings. Sand storms; Fresno, 6th; Calico, 6th. The highest wind velocity of the month occurred at Fort Canby on 22d, 72 miles per hour. Winds of over 25 miles per hour were reported from Fort Canby on 10 days; San Francisco, 10 days; Winnemucca, 16 days; Walla Walla, Red Bluff, Portland and Fort Grant, 1 day; Keeler, 8 days; Yuma, 3 days; Eureka, 4 days. Damage was caused to shipping on the north Pacific Coast during the high winds of the 9th, 10th, 21st and 26th.

The temperature has been in excess of the normal in all districts except the central portion of California, where the temperature ranges from 3 degrees at Keeler to 4 degrees at Sacramento. It remained normal at San Francisco and Eureka. The excess ranges from 8 degrees at Roseburg and 6 degrees at Yuma to 1 degree at San Diego, Fort Canby and Olympia. The highest temperature, 102 degrees, occurred at Yuma on the 28th. The lowest temperature, 20 degrees, occurred at Baker City on the 2d. Light frosts occurred in northern California on the 8th, 11th and 26th.

JOHN P. FINLEY.
Lieut. 19th Inf., A. S. O., In Charge.

Meteorological Summary.

Following is the report of the Signal Service Station at Keeler for the month of April, 1891.

Mean barometer.....29.864
Highest barometer.....30.155
Lowest barometer.....29.584
Mean temperature.....57.4
Highest temperature, 30th.....84.
Lowest temperature, 8th.....32
Greatest daily range temp'ture, 30th, 29.
Least daily range temperature, 17th, 8.
Prevailing direction of wind, South.
Total movemement of wind, 5104 miles.
Extreme velocity of wind, direction and date, 36 miles S. on 6th.
Total precipitation, 0.19 inches.
Number of days on which .01 inch or more of precipitation fell, 3.
Number of cloudless days.....14
Partly cloudy days.....11
Cloudy days.....5

H. E. WILKINSON,
Sergt., Signal Corps, Observer.

California Marble.

The marble industry of this State is one which now shows great promise. The resources in the matter of building stone in California are not equal to those of other localities, though there are many places where quarries might be opened. There are many more being worked now however, than ever before, and the number is sure to increase as our cities grow. In the line of marble there are only a few quarries but they are being properly opened and developed and are gradually increasing their output. The quarry in Inyo County is making shipments steadily and developments are such as to justify belief that railroad communication with Mojave must soon be made, as it seems certain that the present railroad facilities cannot much longer handle the shipments of this one industry.—Mining and Scientific Press.

Blockade Broken.

The snow blockade between Bridgeport and Bodie, and which has existed since the big snow storm of Washington's Birthday, has at last been broken. On Sunday last Mail Contractor Hogan sallied out of Bodie at the head of a battalion of Piutes and attacked the snow works which impeded navigation so long. The heavy drifts were soon mastered by the muscular Piutes, and on Monday Hogan's ablest Seaman piloted his craft through all right and landed all back mails at our Postoffice at an early hour that evening, and the mail has come through daily since.—Chronicle Union.

A Cure For Diptheria.

The following remedy was discovered in Germany and is said to be the best known. At the first indication of diptheria in the throat of a child, make the room close; then take a tin cup and pour into it a quantity of tar and turpentine, equal parts. Then hold the cup over a fire so as to fill the room with fumes. The little patient, on inhaling the fumes, will cough up and spit out all the membranous matter, and the diphtheria will pass off. The fumes of the tar and turpentine loosen the matter in the throat, thus affording the relief that has baffled the skill of physicians.

A Road To Pahrump

The Walker Lake Bulletin of last week says: R. J. Laws, John Forbes, Mr. Suman and J. E. Hart will leave on to-morrow's train for Pahrump Valley, the scene of the latest mining excitement. The new diggings are in Ney county, about 200 miles south from Candelaria. The Hawthorne party will go from Candelaria by wagon. It is understood that the object of Mr. Laws' trip will be to ascertain the feasibility of establishing a stage line to the mines and determining which will be the most practicable route.

The Life Is A Hard One.

If anybody thinks it is fun to get up an interesting paper every day with general news as scarce as hens' teeth in town and not an item to be clipped from any State exchanges let him try it. A fresh man with a lot of adjectives at his command can draw on his imagination for a month or two, but finally tired nature gives way and leaves him a helpless mass of humanity, racking his brain for an interesting item that does not come to the surface.—Reno Gazette.

Passed Successfully.

Frank E. Densmore, Esq. went to Santa Rosa last week to attend the Grand Parlor of Native Sons. While on the trip he took occasion to present himself for examination before the Supreme Court, and passed very creditably. Frank was born and raised in Inyo County, this being his first trip on the other side. He graduated from the Bishop Academy two years ago and since that time has been reading law in the District Attorney's office. He has not yet passed his 22d birthday, and by hard work and close application he has won an enviable position of which he may feel justly proud.

Hotspur and Rinfax won the two greatest races run in California for years at the Bay District track last week, both of them beating the record. Hotspur is by Joe Daniels and the dam of Rinfax is a sister to that horse. This fact should surely serve to bring about an appreciation of Pickpocket as a sire, he being by Joe Daniels, his dam, Mattie C., a descendant of old Lexington.

The Virginia City Chronicle reports that several hundred Indians were holding a ghost dance for five days last week at Rhodes Marsh with no hostile purpose, but simply to keep themselves in practice in case they would be called upon by Uncle Sam to go over to Italy and make a stand off with the brigands.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For Sale!

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE

Eastside Canal.

There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,

C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

MARY A. BALL, Plaintiff, vs. ROBERT BALL, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Robert Ball, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant and for costs of suit, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 28th day of February, A. D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

FORBES & TOBEY,

HAWTHORNE, NEV.,

—DEALERS IN—

LUMBER

OF ALL KINDS.

DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS,
LATH,
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.

Matched and Dressed Flooring.

nov 11-1

P. W. FORBES. P. H. MACK.

MACK & FORBES.
Real Estate Agents,

Address,
P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal.
P. W. FORBES, Bishop, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL.

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $25 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. Can work in spare time, or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EDWARD CHENOT
Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDIS

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.
PROVISIONS
Tobacco, Cigars,
WINES AND LIQUORS
FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

☞Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere.

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
n47tf

Lake View Hotel
Keeler, Cal.
John Barnes, Prop'r.

☞First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—

Wines,
Liquors,
& Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

☞ All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.

DENTISTS.

OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSfield, opposite the Southern Hotel. Prompt and careful treatment given and the east possible pain inflicted. Address

WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.

Bee Keeper.

Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.

Independence, Inyo Co. Cal

FOR SALE CHEAP.

Two span first class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
Bishop Creek, Cal.,

Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING SALOON.

Shaving, Hair-Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.

WM. H. HUFF, Prop'r

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.

Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated. Satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.

☞All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine.

FRED BURKHARDT.

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

IRWINS' SALOON

Edwards and Market Streets,

Independence . Cal.

THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt and furnished in a style second to none on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.

THE BAR

Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.

JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, - Cal.

New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates.

☞Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.

O. I. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

BOOTS AND SHOES

MADE AND REPAIRED.

THE BEST MATERIAL.

FIRST-CLASS WORK.

Repairs done Promptly.

Prices Reasonable.

A. J. DAVIS,
nov 30-tf Independence,

BIG BISHOP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE
BISHOP.

Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St

In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable

S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,

L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.

All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.

☞ Customers supplied on all points ☜
☞ Of the C. & C. Railroad. ☜

Send orders to

L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Pioneer
Livery & Feed Stables.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, patrons can be assured of finding there the best of Buggy Teams, Saddle Horses, and

Livery Accommodations

in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor.

A NEW DEAL!

LONE PINE

Livery. Feed & Sale Stable.

A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.

OPPOSITE SEWART HOUSE.

Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,
—DEALER IN—
General Merchandise,
LONE PINE,
INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.

PROVISIONS,
&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, GEORGE STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R R

TAKING EFFECT

Sunday, November 16, '90

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1		To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—		Arrives—
Mound House.....		11:30 p. m.	5.50 p. m.
Dayton.....		12:00 p. m.	5:10 p. m.
Wabuska.....		2:05 p. m.	2.50 p. m
Hawthorne.....		5.50 p. m.	11:10 a. m.
Luning.....		7:05 p. m.	9:55 a. m.
Soda Springs.....		8:05 p. m.	9:15 a. m
Belleville.....		9:15 p. m.	7:55a. m
Candelaria.....	Ar.	10.00 p. m.	Lv. 7:20 a. m.
	No. 3.		No. 4.
	Leave—		Arrives—
Belleville.....		8 20 a. m.	5:25 p m.
Benton.....		11:50 a. m.	1:35 a m.
Bishop Creek.....		2:00p. m.	11:00 a. m
Alvord.....		2.45 p. m.	10:00 a. m
Independence.....		4:20 p. m.	8:30 a. m
Lone Pine.....		5:10 p. m.	7:40 a. m
Keeler.....	Ar	6:50 p. m.	Lv. 7:00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

At HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (37 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

At LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's. tri weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville Grantsville and Belmont.

At CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stages for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma, Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON.
General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.

D A BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles

OF

Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOLF'S

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries a canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

THE CASH STORE
Is Where You Get
WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE
Blacksmith Shop.
R. C. Spear, Prop'r
—ALL WORK ON—
MINING TOOLS,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS
& FREIGHTING OUTFITS
—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—
HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING

☞All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON
KEELER, CAL.
In Lake View Hotel

BEER, WINES.
LIQUORS and CIGARS

All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.

JOHN C. ANTON, Prop

Palace Saloon.
J. C. MILLER, Lessee.
—THE BAR—
Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of
WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS

☞The most careful attention given to the the amusement and comfort of patrons.

A FINE BILLIARD TABLE!

Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon. sept-12 td

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the world-famed remedy for all chronic weaknesses and distressing derangements so common to American women. It is a potent, invigorating, restorative tonic, or strength-giver, imparting tone and vigor to the whole system. For feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon. Guaranteed to give satisfaction in every case, or money refunded. See guarantee printed on bottle-wrapper.

A Book of 160 pages, on "Woman: Her Diseases, and How to Cure them," sent sealed, in plain envelope, on receipt of ten cents, in stamps. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Life, like every other blessings,
Derives its value from its use alone.

Dr. Wallace Ely has removed his offices to 215 Powell St., San Francisco, Cal., where he continues to give special attention to Kidneys, Bladder, Prostate Gland and all diseases arising therefrom. Diabetes and Bright's Disease treated according to the latest approved method. Most cases can be treated successfully by correspondence. Consultations daily from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. WALLACE ELY, M. D., 215 Powell St., 4 doors from Geary st., San Francisco, Cal.

Too True—"Do you think that tailors are on the whole a deserving class of men?" "Well, it can't be denied that we owe them a great deal."

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Porterfield & Losey, 838 Market street, San Francisco.

He—Tell me what you think of my last poem. I want to finish it, as I have other irons in the fire. She—I should withdraw the irons and insert the poem.

WHY!

WHEREFORE. The virtues or merits of a remedy for pain do not consist in its being as good for relief as other remedies, but in the fact that it is better, in being more prompt and sure, and therefore the best for the specific purpose. It is not an idle catchline that strikes the eye thus:

ST. JACOBS OIL
THE GREAT REMEDY FOR PAIN,
IS THE BEST.

It is the best cure for all aches and pains, and it holds

THE TRUE PROOF.

To this specific fact Archbishops, Bishops, Clergymen, Lawyers, Doctors, Governors, Generals, Senators, Members of Congress and Legislatures, U. S. Consuls, Army and Navy Officers Mayors and Officials, testify and unite in saying: "We suffered pain;

OTHER REMEDIES FAILED,

and St. Jacobs Oil cured promptly and permanently." For the same reason finds what he seeks and needs, is not deceived and will have it at any price.

THE POOR MAN

If you have a
COLD or COUGH, acute or leading to
CONSUMPTION,
SCOTT'S EMULSION
OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND HYPOPHOSPHITES
OF LIME AND SODA
IS SURE CURE FOR IT.

This preparation contains the stimulating properties of the Hypophosphites and fine Norwegian Cod Liver Oil. Used by physicians all the world over. It is as palatable as milk. Three times as efficacious as plain Cod Liver Oil. A perfect Emulsion, better than all others made. For all forms of Wasting Diseases, Bronchitis,
CONSUMPTION,
Scrofula, and as a Flesh Producer there is nothing like SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is sold by all Druggists. Let no one by profuse explanation or impudent entreaty induce you to accept a substitute.

MONEY Can be made easy by raising Chickens. Our large 32 page Illustrated Catalogue tells all about

INCUBATORS

Brooders, what to feed, chickens, in fact all the secrets of the chicken business. If you only keep half a dozen hens you need this book. It gives more information than many of the books sold at 25 cents. We send it free on receipt of 4 cents in stamps to pay postage.

PETALUMA INCUBATOR CO., Petaluma, Cal.

DEPUE & AYDELOTTE'S

BUSINESS COLLEGE,
OAKLAND, CAL.
Bookkeeping, 6 mos., $50; Shorthand, 6 mos., $50; Telegraphy, 6 mos., $50.
NO VACATIONS. SEND FOR CIRCULARS, ETC.

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER CURED TO STAY CURED. WRITE TO P. HAROLD HAYES, M.D. A NEW DEPARTURE BUFFALO, N.Y.

S. F. N. U. No. 459. New Series No. 14

BEBEE;

or,

TWO LITTLE WOODEN SHOES.

By "OUIDA."

She had no fixed thought of what she would be to him when she reached him.

She fancied she would wait on him, and tend him, and make him well, and be caressed by him, and get all gracious pretty things of leaf and blossom about him, and kneel at his feet, and be quite happy if he only touched her now and then with his lips—her thoughts went no further than that—her love for him was of that intensity and absorption in which nothing but itself is remembered.

When a creature loves much, even when it is as little and as simple a soul as Bebee, the world and all its people and all its laws and ways are as naught. They cease to exist, they are as though they had never been.

Whoever recollects an outside world may play with passion, or may idle with sentiment, but does not love.

She did not hear what the villagers said to her. She did not see the streets of the towns she passed them. She kept herself clean always, and broke fast now and then by sheer instinct of habit, nothing more. She had no perception what she did, except of walking—walking—walking always, and seeing the white road go by like pale ribbons unrolled.

She got a dreamy, intense sleepless light in her blue eyes that frightened some of those she passed. They thought she had been lover stricken and was not in her senses.

So she went across the dreary lowlands, wearing out her little sabots, but not wearing out her patience and her courage.

She was very dusty and jaded. Her woolen skirt was stained with weather and torn with briers. But she had managed always to wash her cap white in brook water, and she had managed always to keep her pretty bright curls soft and silken—for he had liked them so much, and he would soon draw them through his hand again. So she told herself a thousand times to give her strength when the priest would come over her sight, and the [illegible] would seem to tremble as she went. On the fifteenth day from the night when she had left her hut by the swans' water Bebee saw Paris.

Shining away in the sun; white and gold; among woods and gardens she saw Paris.

She was so tired—oh, so tired—but she could not rest now. There were bells ringing always in her ears, and a heavy pain always in her head. But what of that?—she was so near to him.

"Are you ill, you little thing?" a woman asked her who was gathering early cherries in the outskirts of the great city.

Bebee looked at her and smiled: "I do not know—I am happy."

And she went onward.

It was evening. The sun had set. She had not eaten for twenty-four hours. But she could not pause for anything now. She crossed the gleaming river and she heard the cathedral chimes. Paris in all its glory was about her, but she took no more note of it than a pigeon that flies through it intent on reaching home.

No one looked at or stopped her; a little dusty peasant with a bundle on a stick over her shoulder.

The click-clack of her wooden shoes on the hot pavements made none look up; little rustles came up every day like this to make their fortunes in Paris. Some grew into golden painted silken flowers, the convolvuli of their brief summer days, and some drifted into the Seine water, rusted, wind tossed, fallen leaves that were wanted of no man. Anyhow, it was so common to see them, pretty but homely things, with their noisy shoes and their little all in a bundle, that no one even looked once at Bebee.

She was not bewildered. As she had gone through her own city, only thinking of the roses in her basket and of old Annemie in her garret, so she went through Paris, only thinking of him for whose sake she had come thither.

Now that she was really in his home she was happy, happy though her head ached with that dull odd pain, and all the sunny glare went round and round like a great gilded humming top, such as the babies clapped their hands at at the Kermesse.

She was happy; she felt sure now that God would not let him die till she got to him. She was quite glad that he had left her all that long, terrible winter, for she had learned so much and was so much more fitted to be with him.

Weary as she was, and strange as the pain in her head made her feel, she was happy, very happy; a warm flush came on her little pale cheeks as she thought how soon he would kiss them, her whole body thrilled with the old sweet nameless joy that she had sickened for in vain so long.

Though she saw nothing else that was around her, she saw some little knots of moss roses that a girl was selling on the quay, as she used to sell them in front of the Maison du Roi. She had only two sous left, but she stopped and bought two little rosebuds to take to him. He had used to care for them so much in the summer at Brabant.

The girl who sold them told her the way to the street he lived in, it was not very far off the quay. She seemed to float on air, to have wings like the swallows, to hear beautiful music all around. She felt for her beads, and said aves of praise. God was so good.

It was quite night when she reached the street and sought the number of his house. She spoke his name softly, and trembling very much with joy, not with any fear, but it seemed to her too sacred a thing ever to utter aloud.

An old man looked out of a den by the door, and told her to go straight up the stairs to the third floor, and then turn to the right.

The old man chuckled as he glanced after her, and listened to the wooden shoes pattering wearily up the broad stone steps.

Bebee climbed them—ten, twenty, thirty, forty. "He must be very poor!" she thought, "to live so high," and yet the place was wide and handsome, and had a look of riches. Her heart beat so fast, she felt suffocated, her limbs shook, her eyes had a red blood like mist floating before them; but she thanked God each step she climbed—a moment and she would look upon the only face she loved.

"He will be glad—oh, I am sure he will be glad!" she said to herself, as a fear that had never before come near her touched her for a moment—if he should not care!

But even then, what did it matter? Since he was ill she should be there to watch him night and day; and when he was well again, if he should wish her to go away—one could always die.

"But he will be glad—oh, I know he will be glad!" she said to the rosebuds that she carried to him. "And if God will only let me save his life, what else do I want more?"

His name was written on a door before her. The handle of a bell hung down; she pulled it timidly. The door unclosed; she saw no one, and went through. There were low lights burning. There were heavy scents that were strange to her. There was a fantastic gloom from old armor, and old weapons, and old pictures in the dull rich chambers. The sound of her wooden shoes was lost in the softness and thickness of the carpets.

It was not the home of a poor man. A great terror froze her heart—if she were not wanted here!

She went quickly through three rooms, seeing no one, and at the end of the third there were folding doors.

"It is I—Bebee," she said softly, as she pushed them gently apart; and she held out the two moss rosebuds.

Then the words died on her lips, and a great horror froze her, still and silent, there.

She saw the dusky room as in a dream. She saw him stretched on the bed, leaning on his elbow, laughing and playing cards upon the lace coverlet. She saw women with loose, shining hair and bare limbs, and rubies and diamonds glimmering red and white. She saw men lying about upon the couch, throwing dice and drinking and laughing with one another.

Beyond all she saw against the pillows of his bed a beautiful, brown, wicked looking thing, like some velvet snake, who leaned over him as he threw down the painted cards upon the lace, and who had cast about his throat her curved, bare arm with the great coils of dead gold all a-glitter on it.

And above it all there were odors of wines and flowers, clouds of smoke, shouts of laughter, music of shrill, gay voices.

She stood like a frozen creature and saw—the rosebuds in her hand. Then with a great piercing cry she let the roses fall, and turned and fled. At the sound he looked up and saw her, and shook his beautiful brown harlot off him with an oath.

But Bebee flew down through the empty chambers and the long stairway as a hare flies from the hounds; her tired feet never paused, her aching limbs never slackened; she ran on, and on, and on into the lighted streets, into the fresh night air; on, and on, and on, straight to the river.

From its brink some man's strength caught and held her. She struggled with it.

"Let me die! let me die!" she shrieked to him, and strained from him to get at the cool gray silent water that waited for her there.

Then she lost all consciousness and saw the stars no more.

When she came back to any sense of life, the stars were shining still, and the face of Jeannot was bending over her, wet with tears.

He had followed her to Paris when they had missed her first, and had come straight by train to the city, making sure it was thither she had come, and there had sought her many days, watching for her by the house of Flamen.

She shuddered away from him as he held her, and looked at him with blank, tearless eyes.

"Do not touch me! Take me home."

That was all she ever said to him. She never asked him or told him anything. She never noticed that it was strange that he should have been here upon the river bank. He let her be, and took her silently in the cool night back by the iron ways to Brabant.

CHAPTER XXIV.

She sat quite still and upright in the wagon, with the dark lands rushing by her. She never spoke at all. She had a look that frightened him upon her face. When he tried to touch her hand she shivered away from him.

The charcoal burner, hardy and strong among forest reared men, covered like a child in a corner and covered his eyes and wept.

So the night wore away.

She had no perception of anything that happened to her until she was led through her own little garden in the early day, and her starling cried to her "Bonjour, Bonjour!" Even then she only look[ed] about her in a bewildered way, and never spoke.

Were the sixteen days a dream?

She did not know.

The women whom Je[anno]t summoned, his mother and sisters and [Mad]ame Krebs, and one or two others, weeping [for] the hardness of their he[art a]gainst her, undressed her, and laid her down on her little bed, and opened the shutters to the radiance of the sun.

She let them do as they liked, only she seemed neither to hear nor speak, and she never spoke.

All that Jeannot could tell was that he had found her in Paris, and had saved her from the river.

The women were sorrowful, and reproached themselves. Perhaps she had done wrong, but they had been harsh, and she was so young.

The two little sabots with the holes worn through the soles touched them, and they blamed themselves for having shut their hearts and their doors against her as they saw the fixed blue eyes, without any light in them, and the pretty mouth closed close against either sob or smile.

After all she was Bebee—the little bright blithe thing that had danced with their children, and sung to their singing, and brought them always the first roses of the year. If she had been led astray they should have been gentler with her.

So they told themselves and each other.

What had she seen in that terrible Paris to change her like this?—they could not tell. She never spoke.

The cock crowed gayly to the sun. The lamb bleated in the meadow. The bees boomed among the pear tree blossoms. The gray lavender blew in the open house door. The green leaves threw shifting shadows on the floor.

All things were just the same as they had been the year before, when she had woke to the joy of being a girl of 16.

But Bebee now lay quite still and silent on her little bed, as quiet as the waxen Gesu that they laid in the manger at the Nativity.

"If she would only speak!" the women and the children wailed, weeping sorely.

But she never spoke; nor did she seem to know any one of them. Not even the starling, as he flew on her pillow and called her:

"Give her rest," they all said; and one by one moved away, being poor folk and hard working, and unable to lose a whole day.

Mere Krebs stayed with her, and Jeannot sat in the porch where her little spinning wheel stood, and rocked himself to and fro in vain agony, powerless.

He had done all he could, and it was of no avail.

Then people who had loved her, hearing, came up the green lanes from the city—the cobbler and the tinman, and the old woman who sold saints' pictures by the Broodhuis. The Varnhart children hung about the garden wicket, frightened and sobbing. Old Jehan beat his knees with his hands, and said only over and over again, "Another dead—another dead!—the red mill and I see them all dead!"

The long golden day drifted away, and the swans swayed to and fro, and the willows grew silver in the sunshine.

Bebee, only, lay quite still and never spoke. The starling sat above her head; his wings drooped and he was silent too.

Towards sunset Bebee raised herself and called aloud: they ran to her.

"Get me a rosebud—one with the moss round it," she said to them.

They went out into the garden and brought her one wet with dew.

She kissed it and laid it in one of her little wooden shoes that stood upon the bed.

She kissed it and laid it in one of her little wooden shoes.

"Send them to him," she said wearily; "tell him I walked all the way."

Then her head dropped; then momentary consciousness died out, the old dull, lifeless look crept over her face again like the shadow of death.

The starling spread his broad black wings above her head. She lay quite still once more. The women left the rosebud in the wooden shoe, not knowing what she meant.

Night fell. Mere Krebs watched beside her. Jeannot went down to the old church to beseech Heaven with all his simple, ignorant, tortured soul. The villagers hovered about, talking in low, sad voices, and wondering, and dropping one by one into their homes. They were sorry, very sorry; but what could they do?

It was quite night. The lights were put out in the lane. Jeannot, with Father Francis, prayed before the shrine of the Seven Sorrows. Mere Krebs slumbered in her rush bottomed chair; she was old and worked hard. The starling was awake.

Bebee rose in her bed and looked around, as she had done when she asked for the moss rosebud.

A sense of unutterable universal pain ached over all her body.

She did not see her little home, its four white walls, its lattice shining in the moon, its wooden bowls and plates, its oaken shelf and presses, its plain familiar things that once had been so dear—she did not see them—she only saw the brown woman with her arm about his throat.

She sat up in her bed and slipped her feet on to the floor; the pretty little rosy feet that he had used to want to clothe in silken stockings.

Poor little feet! she felt a curious compassion for them; they had served her so well, and they were so tired.

She sat up a moment with that curious dull agony, aching everywhere in body and in brain. She kissed the rosebud once more and laid it gently down in the wooden shoe. She did not see anything that was around her. She felt a great dullness that closed in on her, a great weight that was like iron on her head.

She thought she was in the strange, noisy, cruel city, with the river close to her, and all her dead dreams drifting down it like murdered children, whilst that woman kissed him.

She slipped her feet on to the floor, and rose and stood upright. There was a door open to the moonlight—the door where she had sat spinning and singing in a thousand happy days; the lavender blew; the tall, unbudded green lilies swayed in the wind; she looked at them and knew none of them.

The night air drifted through her linen dress, and played on her bare arms and lifted the curls of her hair; the same air that had played with her so many times out of mind when she had been a little tottering thing that measured its height by the red rosebush. But it brought her no sense of where she was.

All she saw was the woman who kissed him.

There was the water beyond; the kindly calm water, all green with the moss and the nests of the ouzels and the boughs of the hazels and willows, where the swans were asleep in the reeds, and the broad lilies spread wide and cool.

But she did not see any memory in it. She thought it was the cruel gray river in the strange white city; and she cried to it; and went out into the old familar ways, and knew none of them; and ran feebly yet fleetly through the bushes and flowers, looking up once at the stars with a helpless broken blind look, like a thing that is dying.

"He does not want me!" she said to them. "He does not want me—other women kiss him there!"

Then with a low fluttering sound like a bird's when its wings are shot, and yet it tries to rise, she hovered a moment over the water, and stretched her arms out to it.

"He does not want me!" she murmured. "he does not want me—and I am so tired. Dear God!"

Then she crept down, as a weary child creeps to its mother, and threw herself forward, and let the green dark waters take her where they had found her amidst the lilies, a little laughing yearling thing.

There she soon lay, quite quiet, with her face turned to the stars, and the starling poised above to watch her as she slept.

She had been only Bebee—the ways of God and man had been too hard for her.

When the messengers of Flamen came that day, they took him back a dead moss rose and a pair of little wooden shoes worn through with walking.

"One creature loved me once," he says to women who wonder why the wooden shoes are there.

THE END.

A Tree That Emits Smoke.

Newton, a vigorous mountain town, west of Charlotte, N. C., has a curiosity that beats by a large majority the rain tree which gained such notoriety in Charlotte in 1886. It is a smoking tree, and baffles all efforts at explanation. It is a white mulberry tree, and stands on the sidewalk in front of the residence of Mr. Levi Yoder.

It was brought from Illinois a year or two ago, and is now about twelve feet high, with a bushy top and many lateral branches. Sunday one of the family noticed a puff of smoke proceed from one of the limbs, and by watching it closely, puffs identical in appearance to cigarette smoke were seen starting every now and then from all over the tree; sometimes from the leaves, sometimes from the bloom, sometimes from the bark of the limbs or trunk of the tree. The puffs are at irregular intervals; sometimes two or three at once from various parts of the tree, and sometimes they are several seconds or a half minute apart. They just seem to come at haphazard, from any part of the tree, and, as they ascend in the air, look exactly like the smoke from a cigarette.

Since the curiosity first became generally known, large crowds, both of town and country people, can be seen there at any time in the day. All doubting Thomases are soon convinced on the first visit that the tree "do smoke." Among the white people it is only looked upon as a curiosity, and many of course make explanations of the phenomenon, which, perhaps, are plausible enough to their authors, but which carry very little in conviction to the minds of others.

But the negroes don't like the thing at all. One negro woman, after intently watching the puffs a few minutes, started off in a run, saying: "I wouldn't lib dar fur nothin'; people better go to doin better 'bout dis town." A negro man said: "I'm gwine stay way from dat thing. I can smell de brimstone clear down to de libery stable."—Richmond Times.

Finished His Story Himself.

"Depew is right," said Senator Watson C. Squires, of Washington. "North Carolina has a corner on atmosphere. Up around Asheville the air is loaded with balsamic elements, almost a specific for lung troubles. I went there twenty years ago far gone with consumption. I had been given up by the doctors as a hopeless case. In less than three months I"—

"You were a well man?"

"No. I died and was buried on the spot."—Washington Post.

A SUCCESSFUL INSTITUTION.

The PACIFIC BANK, of San Francisco, is one of the few successful institutions. It owes its splendid reputation to the fact that Dr. R. H. McDonald, as its President, has never entered into any speculations. He has never swerved from the straightforward cause, which gives the public that confidence which all banks should inspire.

When you visit San Jose, stop at the St. James Hotel. It is first-class in every way; good table; elegantly furnished rooms. Rates $2.00 and $2.50 per day. Tyler Beach, proprietor.

There is a demand for base-ball players in Chicago. Reliable men who will not go out on strikes are wanted.

PROTECT YOUR HEALTH.

Cold and moisture combined have a torporising effect upon the bodily organs, and the digestive and secretive processes are apt to be more tardily performed in winter than in the fall. The same is true, also, of the excretory functions. The bowels are often sluggish, and the pores of the skin throw off but little waste matter at this season. The system, therefore, requires opening up a little, and also purifying and regulating, and the safest, surest and most thorough tonic and alterative that can be used for these purposes is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Persons who wish to escape the rheumatic twinges, the dyspeptic agonies, the painful disturbances of the bowels, the bilious attacks, and the nervous visitations, so common at this time of the year, will do well to reinforce their systems with this renowned vegetable stomachic and invigorant. It improves the appetite, strengthens the stomach, cheers the spirits, and renovates the whole physique.

"Are times so very hard?" asked the customer. "Dey are," answered Isaactein. "Vhy, it vouldn't pay me to fail."

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE BLIND.

Dr. La Grange wishes to make known his New Treatment for the cure of all diseases of the Eye: —Cataract, Defective Vision, Inflammation, etc., etc., without Operation or Pain. The remedy can be applied by the patient, and is simple, safe and sure in its effects, strengthening the muscles and nerves of the eye, removing pain almost instantaneously. It is a marvelous discovery and a blessing to the sufferer.

For further particulars address with stamped envelope, R. J. LA GRANGE, M. D., 215 Powell St., fourth door from Geary, San Francisco, Cal.

Office Hours, 11 till 3.

"This" said the poor victim of strong drink, as he looked about him at the Inebriates' Home, "is the house that jag built."

REMEMBER.

ALLCOCK'S are the only genuine POROUS PLASTERS. They act quickly and with certainty, and can be worn for weeks without causing pain or inconvenience. They are invaluable in cases of Spinal Weakness, Kidney and Pulmonary Difficulties, Malaria, Ague Cake, Strains, Rheumatism, and all Local pains.

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask for ALLCOCK'S, and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

McCorkle—Noah's family was not an aristocratic one. McCrackle (tentatively)—No? McCorkle—No; they were not in the swim.

Dobbins' Electric Soap is cheaper for you to use, if you follow directions, than any other soaps would be if given to you, for by its use clothes are saved. Clothes cost more than soap. Ask your grocer for Dobbins'. Take no other.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.

No other baking powder does such work.

THE SMOKER
Will have no other Tobacco
Who once tries
'SEAL OF NORTH CAROLINA'
Plug Cut.
This is the secret of its
Immense sale.

VASELINE.

FOR ONE DOLLAR sent us by mail, we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all the following articles carefully packed in a neat box:

One two-ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline	10 cts.
One two-ounce bottle Vaseline Pomade	15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream	15 "
One cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, scented	25 "
One two-ounce bottle of White Vaseline	25 "
	—$1.10

Or for stamps any single article at the price named. If you have occasion to use Vaseline in any form be careful to accept only genuine goods put up by us in original packages. A great many druggists are trying to persuade buyers to take VASELINE put up by them. Never yield to such persuasion, as the article is an imitation without value, and will not give you the result you expect. A bottle of Blue Seal Vaseline is sold by all druggists at ten cents.

Chesebrough M'f'g. Co., 24 State St., New York.

ACENTS WANTED FOR THE CALIFORNIA ENDOWMENT UNION

A Co-operative Mutual Association, organized for the purpose of paying to its Certificate-Holders the sum of $500.00 at different times, according to the class they are in, accepting persons over 15 years of age. Address CHAS. D. COON, Sec'y, Flood Building, San Francisco, Cal.

Old Gold and Silver Bought; send your old Gold and Silver by mail to the old and reliable house of A. Coleman, 41 Third street, San Francisco; I will send by return mail the cash, according to assay; if the amount is not satisfactory will return gold.

DR. R. W. PAYNE,
Specialist for Nose, Throat and Lungs.
Academy of Sciences, San Francisco, Cal.

STEINWAY, Gabler and Pease Pianos
Meaning the BEST PIANO MADE, and the favorite cheaper Pianos; all Musical Instruments; Bands Supplied; large stock of Sheet Music. STEINWAY HALL, 206 & 208 Post Street, MATTHIAS GRAY CO. Call and see our new rooms and new stock.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St. New York.

Cultivate not only the corn-fields of your mind, but the pleasure-grounds also.

DEAFNESS CAN'T BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.

No man is so worthy of envy as he that can be cheerful in want.

Beware of imitations of the genuine Seal of North Carolina Plug Cut Tobacco.

Use Enameline Stove Polish; no dust, no smell.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation permanently. For sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all druggists.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

INDISPENSIBLE TO HOUSEKEEPERS. Ask Your Dealer for it. Write for Circular. AMERICAN OIL CO., Agts. 11 to 15 Main St. San Francisco, California.

BAD COMPLEXIONS, WITH PIMPLY, blotchy, oily skin, Red, Rough Hands, with chaps, painful finger ends and shapeless nails, and simple Baby Humors prevented and cured by CUTICURA SOAP. A marvelous beautifier of world-wide celebrity, it is simply incomparable as a Skin Purifying Soap, unequalled for the Toilet and without a rival for the Nursery. Absolutely pure, delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed. CUTICURA SOAP produces the whitest, clearest skin, and softest hands and prevents inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, and most complexional disfigurations, while it admits of no comparison with the best of other skin soaps, and rivals in delicacy the most noted and expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. Sale greater than the combined sales of all other skin soaps.

Sold throughout the world. Price, 25c. Send for "How to Cure Skin and Blood Diseases." Address POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Proprietors, Boston, Mass.

Aching sides and back, weak kidneys, and rheumatism relieved in one minute by the celebrated CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER, 25c.

ASK SCASHTHS' 418 FRONT ST. STORE to send you their catalogue of cash prices, to consumers the
HOME CIRCLE.
Address as above.
Mention this paper.

BROOKLYN HOTEL Bush St., bet. Montgomery & Sansome, S. F.; conducted on both the European and American plan. This Hotel is under the management of Charles Montgomery, and is the best Family and Business Men's Hotel in San Francisco. Home comforts, cuisine unexcelled, first class service, highest standard of respectability guaranted. Board and room, per day, $1.25 to $2.00; single room, 50 cts. to $1.00 per night. Free coach to and from the Hotel.

DO YOU WANT A PARTNER? YOU WANT TO BUY A BUSINESS? YOU WISH TO SELL YOUR BUSINESS?
We are incorporated Agents and propose giving our special attention to the forming of partnerships and the selling of business interests of every description. Investment Securities and City and County Real Estate for sale. Loans Negotiated. Call or address The Mercantile Agency & Investment Co., No. 16 Post Street, San Francisco.
Will E. Fisher, Pres. Eugene G. Davis, V. Pres.
Wm. S. Tevis, Treas. Alfred D. Hall, Sec'y.

WOOL.
HULME & HART,
Commission Merchants
—IN—
Wool, Grain and General Produce
8 & 10 DAVIS STREET,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Liberal Advances made on Consignments. Personal Attention given to all Sales.
GRAIN.

CANNON'S

DIP.

The Advantages Claimed for this Dip are:

It is Non-Poisonous, and can be used with perfect safety at all times and in all circumstances.

It saves time and trouble, no precautions being required as in the case of poisonous Dips.

It does not stain the wool, but promotes and improves its growth, improves the appearance and increases the value of the wool.

It is composed of the very best materials, and never varies in strength and quality.

It never fails to produce the desired effect.

Its effects are lasting.

It is easy to use and does not require heating.

Its use may be repeated on the same Sheep as often as desired without the slightest risk of injury.

Non-Poisonous, Easy to Use, and Always Effective.
LIBERAL DISCOUNTS TO THE TRADE.

J. W. GRACE & CO.,
430 CALIFORNIA STREET, San Francisco, Cal., Agents for the Pacific Coast.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH, RED CROSS PENNYROYAL PILLS DIAMOND BRAND
THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE. The only Safe, Sure, and reliable Pill for sale. Ladies, ask Druggist for Chichester's English Diamond Brand in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other kind. Refuse Substitutions and Imitations. All pills in pasteboard boxes, pink wrappers are dangerous counterfeits. At Druggists, or send 4c. in stamps for particulars, testimonials, and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Name Paper. CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO. Madison Square, Sold by all Local Druggists. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION
25 CTS. Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Pleasant and agreeable to the taste. Children take it without objection. By druggists. 25 CTS.

This Picture, Panel size, mailed for 4 cents.
J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans,"
255 & 257 Greenwich St., N. Y. City.
CURE Billousness, Sick Headache, Malaria.
BILE BEANS.

SALZER'S NORTHERN CROWN SEEDS
ARE THE BEST FOR ALL SOILS AND CLIMES.
They will yield for you, OATS 135 bu., WHEAT 40 bu., BARLEY 60 bu., CORN 100 bu., POTATOES 500 bu. per a.
Send 8 cents for sample farm seeds and catalogue.
Send 6c. for pkg. "Acme Radish" and elegant catlg.
Our Catalog is the finest ever published in America.
On Trial—35 pkgs. Earliest Vegetable Seeds, post pd. $1.
15 pkgs. Elegant Flower Seeds, post paid, 50 cents.
Low Freight to Pacific Coast States. "ACME" the new 17 day Radish
JOHN A. SALZER, LA CROSSE, WISCONSIN.

"When slovens get tidy they polish the bottoms of the pans:"—When

Two servants in two neighboring houses dwelt,
But differently their daily labor felt;
Jaded and weary of her life was one,
Always at work, and yet 'twas never done.
The other walked out nightly with her beau,
But then she cleaned house with SAPOLIO.

JAMES LEFFEL WATER WHEELS
THE JAMES LEFFEL & CO. We send FREE to those desiring information, the Finest Pamphlet Published.
SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, or Liberty St., NEW YORK CITY.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor.

Independence, Cal.,

FRIDAY, MAY 15, 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXII. NO. 48. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., MAY 15, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1072.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.25
Three Months	1.50
One Month	50
Single Copies

THE HOT WATER CURE.

A Very Simple Remedy for Dyspepsia.

VARIOUS OPINIONS ON THE SUBJECT.

How and When Hot Water Should be Used.

A "constant reader" writes that he is in a fog as to the effects of hot water in the treatment of dyspepsia. He has seen it advocated in these columns and condemned by an esteemed contemporary, who maintains that hot water brings on the disease for which it was recommended. He now writes to know which statement is correct. Hot water, hot tea or coffee, in fact, hot food, whether liquid or solid, if used persistently, will in time irritate the stomach and so impair its power to digest. Practically, it will bring on dyspepsia.

NOT ALWAYS DYSPEPSIA.

Now as to the efficacy of hot water in the treatment of that disease. As a remedy it doubtless appears of the "hair of the dog" sort. It must be remembered that there is a decided difference between a healthy stomach and one in disease. In health, nothing ought to be habitually put into that organ which is much more than "blood warm." But in disease the condition of things is very different. What is known as dyspepsia springs from variable conditions, too many, in fact, to discuss here. But in nearly all of them the stomach is less active than it ought to be, or it works to a disadvantage, and needs a spur or corrective.

Hot water acts in several ways. When taken into the stomach it not only stimulates it and quickens its action, but it tends—as do all hot applications—to allay irritation. Beside that, it acts mechanically, and washes out that organ, hurrying its contents down into the intestine, when without it the same would be retained longer than there is any need of. Let a person who four or five hours after a hearty meal still feels uncomfortable sip a cup of very hot water, and it will bring him great relief, stimulating the stomach and washing out of it much of its contents which would have been sent on into the intestines had not that organ been fatigued by overwork.

Now, in what passes under the head of dyspepsia there is often a catarrhal trouble of the stomach, and the same sort of affection, also, frequently exists in the intestine. The lining is more or less irritated, and, in consequence of it, not only is the secretion of mucus greater than in health, but the same is changed in character, is thicker, more adhesive, etc. While the stomach is empty this mucus pours out of its walls and glues them over, as it were. With such a deposit upon them, let food be taken into it and soon the same is coated with mucus, and so rendered less susceptible to the digestive fluids. Not only that, but the mucus in question, while on the walls, keeps back to a certain extent the gastric juice, and prevents its free entrance into the stomach. For such a condition of things as this hot water is the simplest, most grateful and effective remedy known.

A PHYSICIAN'S TESTIMONY.

But by hot water is not, by any means, meant water "scalding hot." Water too hot may injure the lining of the stomach and cause other ill effects. Hot water to be taken internally as a medicine should be at a temperature of from 110 to 120 degs., or about as hot as the coffee one indulges in after dinner. It should be taken before meals—from one-half to an hour and a half—and be slowly sipped. If one is even fifteen or twenty minutes in drinking a glassful all the better. There are some precautions to be used in taking hot water.

A person who is liable to hemorrhages should only take it "blood warm." One with heart trouble—who has a weak heart—must sip it more slowly than others need to do, occupying the longest time advised. While this remedy is one of the simplest and most effective in suitable cases, it must not be forgotten that its indiscriminate use is strongly discouraged. Before applying it habitually, the safe way is to consult a physician, as in some instances where it would seem advisable to take it, it might be contra-indicated. To settle this question regarding the value of hot water and the possible dangers of using it, the following testimony of a physician is offered:

"We often hear it said that the free and prolonged use of hot water tends to injure the system. Some say that it is weakening, that it weakens the nerves of the stomach, that it causes anæmia of the stomach, that it interferes with digestion, that it tends to produce a flushed face and cerebral hyperæmia, that it debilitates the alimentary tract, and that it causes a host more of most direful evils. As a rule, all these objections are theoretical, and come from those who never used it intelligently and systematically, and hence are ignorant of the facts. In reply to such objections, all I can say is that I have used hot water daily for six years without the slightest perceptible injury, and have seen only uniformly good results in persons for whom I have prescribed its daily and long continued use."—Boston Herald.

Grew Over 100 Feet in Nineteen Years.

Monday morning the tall blue gum tree standing at the northeast corner of German Senter's house was cut down. A careful measurement of the tree showed it to be about 115 feet high from the ground to the topmost branch. It was 4 feet in diameter and about 12 feet in circumference at the ground. We are informed by a Portuguese that he set the tree out nineteen years ago. Think of it! A tree only nineteen years old, 115 feet high and showing a diameter in proportion. The residents of that quarter watched the fall of the monarch with genuine regret, but its great height made the cutting of it down a necessity, as it was liable to break and fall on some of the residences around.—Santa Clara (Cal.) Journal.

A City at the Bottom of the Sea.

The city authorities of Rovigno, on the peninsula of Istria, in the Adriatic sea, have discovered a little south of the peninsula the ruins of a large town at the bottom of the sea. It has been observed for some years that fishermen's nets were sometimes entangled in what appeared to be masses of masonry, of which fragments were brought up from the sea bed. A year or two ago a diver declared that he had seen walls and streets below the water.

The city authorities recently decided to investigate. They sent down a diver who, at the depth of eighty-five feet, found himself surrounded at the bottom of the sea by ruined walls. He says he knows they were the work of man. He is a builder by trade, and he recognized the layers of mortar.

Continuing his explorations he traced the line of walls, and was able to distinguish how the streets were laid out. He did not see any doors or window openings, for they were hidden by masses of seaweed and incrustations. He traced the masonry for a distance of 100 feet, where he had to stop, as his diving cord did not permit him to go farther. He had proved beyond a doubt that he had found the ruins of a once inhabited town which, through some catastrophe, had been sunk to the bottom of the sea.

Some people think that they identify this lost town with the island mentioned by Pliny the Elder under the name of Cissa, near Istria. This island cannot be found now, and it is thought that the submerged town may have been a settlement on the island that so mysteriously disappeared.—London Letter.

Nebraska Beet Sugar.

A sample of the first run of sugar from a beet sugar factory situated at Grand Island, Neb., which has been received at this office shows this new product to be as fine as any sugar sold in the market. It is of clear white, sparkling crystals, and sweet and pleasant to the taste. It cannot be told from the best quality of cane sugar. A circular accompanying it says that the factory has a capacity of 350 tons of beets, or 275 barrels of granulated sugar of the finest quality, over 99 per cent. pure, each twenty-four hours.

The factory is fitted with machinery from France, where this industry had its first development. Its success has been so great that its capacity will be immediately doubled, and numerous factories will be erected in the vicinity to produce raw sugar for the refiners. The circular further says: "Unfortunately our season proved to be the dryest known for seventeen years, and some farmers failed to raise not only corn and small grains in paying quantities, but beets as well. Many, however, have raised crops which show a profit of from $20 to $60 per acre, and it may be truthfully asserted that our farmers are jubilant and that the industry has come "to stay."—Watertown Times.

A Non-Bursting Fly Wheel.

In the works of the Mannesmann Tube company, in England, there is a heavy fly wheel ingeniously designed to be absolutely free from any danger of bursting. As this wheel is about twenty feet in diameter, weighs over seventy tons and runs at 240 turns per minute, it was feared that a cast iron wheel would be unable to stand such a centrifugal force. The wheel consists of a cast iron hub, to which are securely bolted two circular plates or disks of steel about twenty feet in diameter. Round the periphery of the wheel thus formed about seventy tons of No. 5 wire was tightly wound, thus binding the whole securely together and making a wheel that is practically beyond possibility of breakage by centrifugal power. The circumference of this great wheel travels at the rate of 2.85 miles per minute, about three times as fast as the most speedy express trains.—Philadelphia Record.

The Economy of Electric Traction.

Mr. Cox, the borough surveyor of Bradford, England, having been deputed by that city to make investigations with a view of ascertaining the best system of street car traction, has made a valuable report on the subject. He speaks in the highest terms of the work of the accumulators on the Birmingham electric line, and states that the receipts there are twopence per car mile, as against tenpence with horse traction, a difference which is likely to have considerable weight with the corporation of the city of Bradford, to which his report has been submitted.—London Letter.

Nine Years' Journey of a Letter.

Nine years ago a woman in Germany wrote a letter to her husband, a sailor, who had gone out to Brazil. His vessel had left when the mail reached there; ever since this letter has been rambling through numerous postoffices in different parts of the world, always arriving in the wake of the husband's ship's departure. It was recently returned to the German dead letter office, which has restored it with scrupulous care to the sender. The letter was dated Oct. 16, 1881.—London Tit-Bits.

Invited the Crowd to Eat Oranges.

T. A. Melter purchased 5,000 sweet oranges and placed them on Concord's wharf, foot of Ocean street, for free distribution. The only proviso was that the eater should peel the fruit and place the peel in a barrel of alcohol standing near. About 4,000 of the oranges were eaten by the surrounding crowd, and Mr. Melter got a goodly amount of work done for nothing. The peeling will be shipped to England to be used for medicinal purposes.—Florida Times-Union.

Costly Buildings in Boston.

The following will give an idea of what Boston is spending upon some of its principal buildings: The new court house will cost perhaps from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000; the state house extension, $3,000,000; the public library, $2,500,000; the syndicate building, on State street, $2,000,000 or $3,000,000; the Ames building, at the foot of Court street, $700,000, and the Sears building repairs and alterations, $200,000.—Boston Letter.

A MAGNIFICENT SIGHT.

Stars of Heaven Fall in Showers.

THEORIES AS TO THE CAUSE AND EFFECT

A Child's Wonderment at the Scene.—A Word of Prayer.

One of the earliest and most vivid of my personal recollections is of the grand meteoric shower of Nov. 13, 1833. A similar occurrence is recorded as happening in northern Europe near the close of the last century. But no meteorological display has equaled that of 1833 in extent and duration from the beginning of the historic period.

VEXED QUESTIONS.

With reference to the origin of these meteors there have been divers conjectures, most of which are at best haphazard speculations. A number of astronomers have regarded them as fragments of an exploded planet small in size, but of a like sort with the hundred and odd asteroids that have been discovered between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. Kepler himself thought that a large planet was needed in this vast interplanetary space to perfect the rhythm of the skies and the fabled music of the spheres. The subsequent discoveries of Piazzi and Olbers and their successors have fully justified this opinion. This old astronomical fancy of a lost Pleiad likewise finds its vindication, it may be in these asteroids and in the far more numerous meteoroids which have since been seen in all parts of the world. Whether they be, as suggested, the disjecta membra of some errant and wrecked orb doomed and damned for some earlier Adamic transgression, they certainly occupy a definite place in our system.

Their periodical occurrence with greater or lesser brilliancy in May and November and likewise in August and December, establish the facts that at these dates our earth in its annual travel comes in frequent contact with a meteoric zone. It may require another century of investigation with the aid of mightier instruments than that of the Lick observatory to determine whether, as is probable, these meteoric exhibitions result from a vast volume of nebulous matter revolving around the sun, and itself the nursery of embryonic planets.

Whatever our conclusion on these vexed questions, it was certainly not only the privilege of a lifetime, but a millennium, to be an eye witness of such a stupendous and resplendent spectacle. I distinctly remember being aroused about 4 o'clock in the morning by the weird outcries of the domestic servants. They seemed possessed with the idea that the day of judgment was at hand, and I readily recall the efforts of my father to quiet the uproar by assuring them that there was no cause of alarm.

Of course, I knew nothing of scientific import. My impressions were those of elation rather than fright. To me the whole scene was about what I have since conceived of the pyrotechnic displays of the Vauxhall garden or a full fledged Chinese feast of lanterns. A boy reader will best understand the aspect of things when I add that aside from the fizz and the pop it was like a thousand Christmases condensed into one.

Scientific observers have since told us that these meteoroids all seemed to proceed from a point in the constellation Leo. For this reason they have been since called Leonids. My boyish remembrance accords with this statement of the scientists. Usually they issued singly, but at times they had the appearance of a stream of fire. A few that I observed were very large, one or more not unlike the nucleus of Halley's comet in 1835, when it was receding from the sun.

They nearly all seemed falling directly to the earth, and it was a matter of childish wonderment to me that they did not cover the ground as I had seen falling snow flakes do at other times. The splendor of these celestial fireworks gradually waned as the dawn approached, very much to my personal regret.

A great many stories are still current in regard to the general consternation produced by this marvelous phenomenon.

In some instances persons were frightened into convulsions, and several deaths were reported from different parts of the country.

In my boyhood there was a story current of a wealthy slaveholder in western Georgia, who was besides something of a philosopher. He resided in the center of a large negro quarter, and being awakened by the shrieks and yells of nearly one hundred slaves, he hurriedly equipped himself in pants and slippers and stepped out on his front piazza. He was soon surrounded with a large number of slaves who were frantic with terror. For a time he surveyed the heavens with a decree of painful apprehension. Noticing in the crowd an old negro preacher, in whose piety he had much confidence, he addressed him in this wise: "Uncle Joe, do you watch the 'seven stars' and 'the ell and yard,' and when you see them start come into the 'big house' and we will have a word of prayer."

Of course the Pleiades were immovable, nor did the empyreal suns that blaze in the belt of Orion "shoot madly from their spheres." As a consequence the hypothetical "word of prayer" was unspoken. The return of daylight blotted out the meteors and calmed the superstitious fears of master and slave.

Most astronomers tell us that another such spectacle will probably never be witnessed again through all the generations of men. St. John, who was a prisoner in Patmos, says: "I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal" that "the sun became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs when she is shaken of a mighty wind."—Rev. J. W. Scott.

A Vast Gulf Separates Them.

Some men "live and learn." Others devote their time exclusively to forgetting all that they ever knew.

Two Little Travelers.

Among the passengers on the north bound train over the California and Oregon line were two very small travelers, small in stature, but feeling wonderfully big and independent over a feat which they have just accomplished—that of crossing the great American continent unaccompanied by parent or guardian. Flora and Arthur Wertheim, the travelers in question, are aged respectively 6 and 9 years, and they are all the way from New York, where they have lived ever since they first saw the light.

"I hain't got no mother," said Arthur to a Chronicle reporter who saw the youngsters at the Oakland pier, and father's up in Porkland, where's he's been for 'bout two years."

"You mean Portland," suggested the reporter.

"That's what I said—Porkland," said the little fellow. "Sister an' I came out in a tourist car. No, we didn't have anybody looking after us," this rather disdainfully. "I was the boss o' the trip, bought the tickets an' carried the lunch basket, an' did everything."

The children had cleaner faces than generally come from a New York tenement house, and their clothes, though rather worn and patched, here and there, were also clean, or as nearly clean as they might be expected to be after a 3,000 mile trip.

"We came in a tourist car," the boy went on, not omitting to emphasize the "tourist." "These tourist cars ain't very high toned, but they'll do for poor folks. Immigrants like me an' sis can't have everything we want."

"I want some peanuts," chirped the little maiden.

"She's all the time wanting me to spend money on nonsense," said the boy, ignoring the remark so far as a direct reply was concerned, "but it takes coin to travel, and you can't fool it away and have 'nuff to take you through when haven't got only just 'nuff to buy grub."

When this chunk of philosophy had been delivered the little fellow went on to say that his father had gone from New York to work at his carpentry in Oregon, that he was going to be a carpenter himself, and knew how to build houses pretty well already. He had had no trouble in getting over the road without assistance, and thought he could easily make a trip around the world.

"I will get to Porkland Monday morning," said he. "Father will meet us at the depot, and then we'll be all right."—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Austrian Journalist.

The Austrian journalist has the same literary methods as his German relative, but he must supply a livelier and larger paper to his readers, who are a rather frivolous lot, and he has not such amusing advertisement columns. Frequently the Austrian editor makes extensive use of his imagination, and he can invent thoroughly. Some time ago one of the best known Vienna papers published a long paragraph purporting to be a telegram from London. It was very interesting. It told how the three daughters of the Prince of Wales were walking down Whitehall when they observed that a wretched looking woman selling flowers was doing no business. They therefore took her basket and sold flowers for about three hours, making a great deal of money, which they gave to the poor woman. The story did not have the least foundation in fact, of course, and the princesses were not in London anywhere near the time the incident was said to have occurred.—Washington Star.

"Never Be Caution."

The old Jews and the old Scotch Highlanders had one feeling in common—a dread of suretyship. The book of Proverbs contains several warnings of the danger that lurks in a surety bond, but none are more admonishing than one uttered by a Highlander.

Donald had been tried for his life, and narrowly escaped conviction. In discharging him, the judge thought it proper to say:

"Prisoner, before you leave the bar, I'll give you a piece of advice. You have got off this time, but if you ever come before me again, I'll be caution (surety) you'll be hanged."

"Thank you, my lord," said Donald, "for your good advice, and as I'm na ungrateful, I beg to gie your lordship a piece of advice in turn. Never be caution for onybody, for the cautioner has often to pay the penalty."—Youth's Companion.

A Dog's Way of Asking for Soda Water.

While The Spy man was standing in a drug store a long haired pet dog came in and began to sneeze and cavort around the soda fountain. The genial proprietor came out and said: "Ah, there, you rascal, you after a drink of soda again?" The dog at once began to sneeze, sit up on his haunches, bark and show that soda was what he wanted.

The proprietor took a mug, and, naming syrups of several flavors, asked the dog what he would have, but it was not until vanilla was named that the dog said, as well as he could, "You bet, that's the stuff." He sat up and went through all his best tricks until the foaming beverage was placed before him on the floor, and then he emptied the cup. The dog, having done this, was happy. "Does he drink that stuff often?" said the reporter. "Yes," said the druggist, "he comes around about three times a day and he never puts a nickel in the slot."—Worcester Spy.

Proof.

It is a very sharp emergency that can catch Pat, even when he is ignorant and ragged. An Irishman, whose garments were in tatters, was brought before a magistrate on a charge that he was a vagrant.

"What have you to say to the charge that you have no visible means of support?" asked the justice.

Pat drew from the pocket of his torn coat a loaf of bread, the half of a dried codfish, and several cold potatoes. These he spread upon the stand before him, and coolly asked:

"What do you think of thim, yer honor—shure, an' isn't thim visible manes of support?"—Youth's Companion.

THE PRETTY WOMAN.

How do They Regard Public Admiration?

WHAT THE OBSERVING MAN SAW.

They are Quite a Mystery to the Sterner Sex.

"I have many times wondered," said the observing man, "what the feelings of the ordinarily attractive woman are upon finding herself the center of the respectful but evidently admiring gaze of a number of men unknown to her. During several years of daily travel in the surface and elevated cars and the ferryboats of this metropolis I have struggled with this problem in vain. I have studied the faces of women under these circumstances, and have even cautiously led up to the subject or asked it fair and square of those of my charming women friends with whom I have been on terms of sufficient freedom. But I know practically no more now upon the question than I did five years ago, when it first appealed to me as an interesting subject of study. I can explain myself better by a practical example. This morning I was riding on a cable car on Washington Heights. There were seven men in the car and two women. The men happened to be all well dressed and very gentlemanly in appearance and bearing. The women were exceedingly plain and poorly dressed, and one was positively homely. The men all kept their faces studiously buried in their papers. At One Hundred and Fifty-fifth street a woman of about 25 got aboard in company with an elderly woman. She was neither a blonde nor a brunette, and was in no respect prettier or handsomer than fifty young women you might see any afternoon in upper Broadway. She was attractive chiefly because of her mobile, womanly face, her pretty, vivacious manner, and her dainty way of handling herself. She was tastefully and neatly dressed, and looked every inch a refined woman. She was instantly attractive to a refined man, but no more so than hundreds of women in the streets daily.

"But her entrance was the signal for every man in the car to lay down his paper. The next moment every man looked guilty for this breach of manners and picked up his paper again. A block or two was traversed, and I noticed that all the men began casting covert glances at her over their papers. You see I was primed to observe these things. I was expecting them. As I said, the men were all gentlemanly, and as a consequence their glances were eminently respectful. They would wait till the pretty woman was looking another way, and then allow their gaze to rest full upon her. In every instance these glances expressed both admiration and fearfulness. The admiration was of the sort that would be complimentary to any woman. The fearfulness was evidently twofold. In the first place, it indicated that the men were afraid that the young woman would notice their glances and be offended. Second, it showed that they were fearful that their fellow passengers would notice their weakness. To a perfectly impassive observer, as I tried to make myself, the situation was amusing. I was sitting on the same side of the car as the young woman, so presently I got up and sat down opposite, so I could observe how she took all this implied adoration. She apparently did not notice it. She did not allow her eyes to fall once upon a single man in the car. She talked to the older woman, who may have been her mother, constantly. Her color heightened, and she became more vivacious and more charming every minute. I could not help thinking that this may have been due to her consciousness of the general admiration she was provoking. But who could tell? At Eighth avenue both women got out. The younger one looked at no one as she walked out in a dignified manner.

"This is only a single example of what you can see a dozen times daily. Do pretty women, or do they not, recognize the admiration they arouse everywhere they go? If they do, how does it affect them? No pretty woman will confess to her dearest masculine friend that she notices the sensation she makes daily any more than she will show her unknown admirers in the streets by glance or smile that she is aware even of their existence.—New York Sun.

Suspended by a Finger.

One of the most singular accidents on record befell Mrs. S. Hardy, of Madison, one day recently. She went into the stable to see about her hens, and stepping upon the feed trough in one of the stalls, reached up with her right hand and drew herself up. An iron garden rake hung there, and she placed her hand on that. In doing so her foot slipped from under her and she fell, catching one of the teeth of the rake into the flesh of the second finger, above the joint, and there she hung, just high enough for her feet to rest on the floor. In this trying position she concluded she might die before any one could come to her assistance, but with rare presence of mind she caught the handle of a hoe which hung beside the rake with her left hand, drew herself up so as to unhook her finger and fell unconscious to the floor. After a time she recovered and went into the house.—Bangor News.

A Bright Copper.

Policeman (to pedestrian)—Stop where you are!

Pedestrian (frightened)—W—what's the matter?

Policeman—It's all right now. I just wanted to see if you could talk. A deaf and dumb bloke escaped from the asylum last night.—Smith, Gray & Co.'s Monthly.

A Hint for Him.

"Do you think your father likes me, Mamie?"

"I am sure he does."

"What makes you sure?"

"Because it was only yesterday he asked me when you and I were going to be married."—Boston Courier.

Lured by an Ostrich.

Every boy who is fond of shooting knows that there are several species of birds which, when surprised on the nest, feign lameness or some other injury. The object is to produce the impression on the verdant hunter that his prey cannot escape him, and thereby to beguile him away from its nest. An English hunter discovered one day that the African ostrich was up to this trick.

While riding along, an ostrich jumped up so close before his horse that the rider thought the animal had stepped upon the bird. It seemed to be an easy thing to knock the bird upon the head, for it apparently could do nothing more than keep a few feet in front.

But somehow, just at the moment the hunter expected to overtake the ostrich, it seemed to be gifted with fresh vitality. The hunted and the hunter doubled backward and forward, to and fro. He dared not jump off and use his rifle lest he should lose sight of the game in the thick bush.

At last he determined to make a dash and clapped his spurs into the horse. The beast sprang forward, put his foot into a hole and sent the rider spinning over his head. For several minutes the man sat looking at the horse, who stood looking at the hunter. When, however, the man rose and advanced, the brute turned and, with a neigh of derision, started for the camp, three miles off, leaving his rider to follow. The ostrich had led him step by step till a safe distance had been placed between him and its nest.—Youth's Companion.

Raising Huge Masses of Masonry.

At one of the meetings of the British association a paper was read on a plan of raising large stones for the purpose of building huge masses of masonry, and which was supposed to be the means employed in building the Pyramids, although the precise method adopted by the mighty builders of the valley of the Nile was admitted to be a vexed question. The supposition is that the lifting power was applied from below, the stone being raised by a tilting process. One end of the stone would first of all be raised from the ground by means of powerful levers, which might be of considerable length and worked by a large number of men.

After getting the stone to the proper height a slab of stone or metal could be inserted and a similar process adopted with the other end of the stone. So, by alternately working at either end, a certain height might be attained. Then, by the use of wedges and rollers, the stone might be got into position. Another method suggested was by means of slightly inclined planes formed of strong timber work or even masonry, working the stones up on rollers by leverage applied behind. There does not seem to be any suggestion of any direct lifting power applied from the above. The question is certainly one involved in considerable obscurity.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Parson Didn't Reply.

Old Parson Ripley was settled for life over a poor Maine parish, and made a scanty living out of a small, rough farm. One day a neighbor came to help the parson plow, and they started to break up a new piece of land, full of stumps and stones. The neighbor held the plow and the parson drove. Soon the brother began to swear at the numerous interruptions. The parson told him that such language was wicked and unnecessary, and, said he, "If you will drive the team I will convince you that your work can be done without swearing." So the parson took the plow and they started on. Very soon some expressions were heard coming from the parson, such as "That beats all natur," "I never saw the like before." When the parson thought the driver had become convinced, he said: "There, you see I have held the plow several bouts and have not sworn at all." "Well, I own you have not sworn, but you have lied, and I think lying is worse than swearing any time, don't you, parson?" The Norway Advertiser, which tells this story, does not give the parson's answer.—Lewiston Journal.

Slips of Speech.

"Why," said a counsel to a witness, "are you so very precise in your statement? Are you afraid of telling an untruth?" Witness (promptly)—"No, sir." At a recent inquiry into the sanity of a young man of large property, witnesses were being called to prove that he was unfit to manage his affairs. A curious slip was made by a schoolmaster when asked if he had formed any opinion as to the state of mind of the alleged lunatic. "Oh, yes," he replied; "I can certify he is an idiot. He was one of my favorite pupils." "I have met this man," said a lawyer with extreme severity, "in a great many places where I would be ashamed to be seen myself;" and then he paused and looked with astonishment at the smiling court and jury.—Chambers' Journal.

Secret of Health in China.

The Chinese live in houses where the supply of air is so limited that no European could endure the vitiated atmosphere; yet they are a very healthy nation. This is due probably to the fact that their food is invariably simple and clean and thoroughly well cooked. Meat, potatoes and rice are all boiled together. When cooked the mixture is put into small bowls, and as it is eaten with tiny chopsticks, it is impossible to try the mouth or stomach by scalding them with a quantity of very hot food. Moreover, they rarely drink water if they can get tea, either hot or cold.—New York Telegram.

A $50,000 Organ.

The gorgeous mansion in Hopkinton, Mass., which Mrs. Searle, formerly Mrs. Hopkins, has had built, boasts of an organ costing $50,000. Its case is of English ash to correspond with the finish of the room, exquisitely carved with gold molding, is over thirty feet high, and is probably the most costly organ in any private dwelling in America. The music room is large, over forty feet high, with paneled ceiling of terra cotta.—Detroit Free Press.

TOLD OF THE MARINES.

A Much Abused Factor in the Navy.

THE TAR'S PREJUDICE AGAINST THEM.

The Admirals and Captains, However, Praise the Marines.

There is, perhaps, no body of men in the service of the United States government who have come in for a greater share of contumely and received less praise for actual service rendered than have the marines of the United States navy. From time immemorial it has been Jack's saying in response to all doubtful stories, "Tell that to the marines," for the tars as a set are the most incredulous fellows, and the hearty contempt in which they hold the marines is sufficient to incite the firing of a volley of epithets at the latter on the slightest provocation.

It is amusing, too, to see with what avidity the young apprentices seize hold of the prejudices of the able seamen, and a person only need go aboard one of the cruising training ships to hear the youngsters bawl out with all the zest of an old shell back, "Oh! you Hottentot marine!"

The duty of a marine aboard ship is essentially that of a policeman, and by reason of this very duty no fraternizing can be safely permitted between "the guard" and the men forward. As to the tar, any one acquainted with his devil-me-care spirit and wild, fun loving nature must know how he looks upon any one put over him as a check. The tar looks up to and respects his officers, for he fears them; but the marine he hates, for it is the marine who gets him in trouble. But if marines were not a feature of a man-of-war it is doubtful whether the discipline required of a crew of 500 men would be of that efficient nature now in force. Our navy is peculiarly distinctive in its method of mobilization when compared with similar institutions abroad. In the first place, our service offers better pay, better duty and greater emoluments than does any other service in the world.

All United States war vessels carry a marine guard, ranging in size, however, from a captain's command of fifty to sixty men on a flagship to a corporal's squad on a monitor. When a ship is about to go in commission her marine guard, which has been previously detailed, is marched aboard and stands in readiness to salute the ensign as it floats out from the peak. From this moment until the expiration of the three years' cruise the guard watches that "element forward" with a constancy that allows of no relaxation. When the three years' cruise is at an end, when the seamen who have been shipmates through every trial and hardship are about to march ashore and sever their associations, that stern and implacable marine guard may be seen in line on deck and under arms—the last to leave the vessel—and as the flag is hauled down they give the last salute to the colors they have defended.

SHOOTING FROM THE RIGGING.

The marines have warm admirers in those persons who are acquainted with their sterling worth and necessity. Says Admiral Wilkes: "The marines constitute the great—I had almost said the only—difference between a man-of-war and a privateer." "They are," adds another writer, "the bulwark between the cabin and the forecastle," while Rear Admiral Stewart remarked, "the support afforded by a steady column of bayonets has rendered mutinies scarce." The marine is peculiarly a soldier. He is dressed, equipped and handled as a soldier, and his whole life is the very opposite to that of a sailor.

In time of action aboard ship the marines are either stationed at one of the heavy pivot guns, or else disposed about decks and in the tops to act as sharpshooters. It was a marine who from the top of the Frenchman alongside the Victory at Trafalgar, shot down the brave Nelson as he stood on the deck of the latter ship. The guard messes, eats and sleeps in a body, always apart and distinct from the crew.

Let the reader imagine himself at midnight on the gun deck of a large vessel of war lying quietly at anchor. A dim light is burning forward, throwing a heavy glare among the crowded hammocks where 500 men are sleeping. Not a sound is to be heard save the steady tread of the marine sentry overhead, while the swish of the black water against the sides breaks the ominous silence. As the bell strikes "eight," the hour of midnight, a solitary figure in full uniform, with sword and pistols, steps noiselessly from the cabin door. He stops and listens for a moment, as the turning of some restless sleeper in his hammock attracts his attention. He is the commanding officer. Walking forward, he bends over the hammock of a drummer boy and whispers a word in his ear; the only reply is a bound to the deck, and the next instant the long roll is sounding through the ship.

As if by magic 500 men leap from their hammocks, hastily pass three lashings, and throwing them against the sides of the ship, rush half naked to the guns. In three minutes after the first sounding of that call to "general quarters," the guns are cast loose and the glare of the battle lanterns along the deck reveals the crouching forms of the tars as clustered about their pieces they wait the word to open fire. And again all is silent along that deck, the same as when a few minutes previous every man was wrapt in slumber. Not a word of warning had been given, and the sudden alarm aptly proved the excellence of the ship's discipline.—New York Times.

Any Excuse Welcome.

His Nurse—You are to be discharged to-morrow as cured.

Dorrington (who has fallen desperately in love)—My own, would it be presumptuous for me to ask you to give me an overdose of morphine or something, so that I could stay a day or two longer?—Judge.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

C. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, MAY 15..... 1891.

The San Francisco Chronicle has several editorial paragraphs in commendation of Southern California industries. It says that in three or four years we shall be able to make the American raisin market independent of the foreign supply; also that the orange grove as a money-making proposition has justified the boasts of its most sanguine advocates.

The statement of Secretary Tracy that the completion of the Nicaragua Canal would double the effectiveness of the Pacific Squadron suggests the propriety of such Government assistance as would secure the use of the canal for the passage of American war-vessels. In the absence of fortifications or powerful national control the canal would fall into the hands of any great naval power which might consider that its interest would justify such possession. If England or France should blockade the Atlantic end of the canal it would be of little use to American men-of-war. The United States should own and control any water-way between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

The Nebraska Supreme Court finds that Mr. Boyd is not a citizen of the United States, and therefore cannot hold the office of Governor of Nebraska. Boyd came to this country in his infancy, and knows no other land nor home. His father is known to have declared his intention to become a citizen, and thereby, as was the case in Wisconsin and Minnesota Territories, became a voter in the Territory of Nebraska, and his son grew up in all things, except a legal technicality, an American citizen. We call attention to the fine example set by Governor Boyd, who without unseemly contention bowed to the court and surrendered the office. Under exactly the same circumstances a member of Congress from the Fort Wayne, Ind., District, was found to be an alien, and he hugg on to his office, supported by his party, and kept his seat to the end of his term. He was a Republican. Mr. Boyd is a Democrat. Patrick Egan of Nebraska was appointed Minister to Chile on a scant five years' residence in this country, and a naturalization that was hardly free from suspicion. Which is the better American, Boyd, raised here from infancy, and knowing no other land nor home, or Egan, a fugitive from his own country, appointed to office while the ink was wet on his commission as a citizen?—Alta.

One of the most encouraging signs of the times in California is the energy with which our irrigating facilities are being developed. The Wright law gave a great impetus to projects in this line, and substituted associated efforts of neighbors for individual initiative. For a long time there was some question as to whether securities arising from the formation of irrigation districts were a safe investment, some persons going so far as to doubt the constitutionality of the Wright law itself. The supreme court having settled that question in the affirmative, it is pleasant to be able to state that the San Francisco chamber of commerce, at a late meeting, adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved: That the trustees of the chamber of commerce of San Francisco, after careful investigation of the conditions connected therewith, are of the opinion that bonds issued by irrigation districts in the state of California under the Wright Irrigation law are a safe investment and excellent security to investors, provided the two following conditions precedent are complied with:

First—A careful investigation as to the compliance with the requirements of the law prior to the issue of said bonds.

Second—An examination of the character of the lands on which it is proposed to issue said bonds, and the facilities for obtaining a water supply.

Of course these restrictions are such as any prudent business man would exact in any transaction in which he puts his money. The great point is that this important and representative San Francisco body gives its sanction to such investments. As the Chronicle points out, in its comments on the action of the chamber, such securities, where a proper inspection has been made, and the property and water rights found satisfactory, are certain to increase in reliability for the reason that the money borrowed is used in adding to the value of the district whose bonds are sold. They, therefore, make a very attractive and stable investment.

ASTOR HOUSE EXTRAVAGANCE.

The Little Old Lady Thought That Too Many Candles Were Burning.

A dear old lady from the country sat with her son, also from the country, in the big dining room of the Astor house a few evenings ago. Men who have come to New York from the country, if they had seen her, would have been reminded of their grandmothers. Her face was kindly, and there was just a little color in it. She wasn't very tall, and her figure was comfortable. She wore a shawl. Her bonnet was a little one, and in the front of it was some white lace. Her gown was of bombazine and of somewhat ancient cut.

The big, brightly lighted room interested her. So did the people at the tables. While the son was engaged in the somewhat perplexing task of selecting the supper the old lady talked audibly with the waiter. She told him that she hoped Landlord Astor and Mis' Astor were pretty well. The waiter explained that Mr. Allen was the landlord, whereat the old lady expressed polite surprise. When the waiter had gone with the order she devoted a few moments to studying the chandeliers. They represent candles.

"I wonder," she said, "how under the sun Mis' Allen ever gets up there to snuff 'em."

"Snuff what?" asked her son.

"Why, them candles; they're so high up."

The young man did not answer.

The old lady again gazed at the chandeliers reflectively. "They ain't no need of all that light," she said. "Mis' Allen is a powerful wasteful woman."

Her son was apparently a man of few words. Her criticism was unnoticed.

Presently the waiter brought the bread and the plates, and what the old lady evidently thought was a superabundance of knives and forks. She greeted him pleasantly. "Back again, hey?" she said; "you're pretty quick. But, Horace," she added to her son, "you ordered somethin' more than bread, didn't you?"

"It will be here shortly," put in the waiter, with a polite bow. The old lady gave him a sweet smile. "I'm pretty hungry," she said.

Several of the diners had overheard her observations. Some of them were hard faced business men. They didn't laugh at her. They only regarded her with lively interest. She smoothed out the tablecloth carefully, and inspected the silver, evidently with approval.

The waiter brought the meal and gave the old lady clean attention, which pleased her immensely. She smiled on him and asked after the health of his family. As she rose from the table she said to him: "Tell Mis' Allen I'd like to have her recipy for that snow puddin', but I'm in a hurry."

The waiter bowed and said gravely that he would do so. And as the old lady passed out of the door one of the diners raised a glass and exclaimed, "The old lady—God bless her!"—New York Letter.

Especial Charm of a Favorite Club.

The fact that we know each other very well is the reason of the charm of a certain American club. It gives an idea of this place to say that people find themselves neglecting their business in order to get there in time for luncheon. It is not that the company is so unusual. There are, no doubt, attractive men, full of interesting knowledge; there is plenty of good talk. But it is not enough that the talk should be good; the men must be seen and heard through an atmosphere of friendship. Some of the nicest men choose to say very little; but there are men in whom, in the course of daily acquaintance, you learn to discover very charming qualities and friendly dispositions.

Possibly everybody is not charming. Perhaps there is even a bore or two; but bores are very human, and, to my thinking, rather cozy. There is a gentleman who tells over the same story, but nobody minds it as much as he would if he knew, and he doesn't. Even the gentleman who is always talking about his health performs a beneficient office; he insinuates into the minds of his auditors an impression that life is valuable.—E. S. Nadal in Scribner's.

Bargain Counter Repartee.

An early morning customer in a big retail dry goods shop is apt to hear some quaint talk among the clerks, who amuse themselves by chaffing one another while waiting for the active trade of the day to begin. In an up town shop the other morning a customer heard the following dialogue:

"Say, fanny?" from the ribbon counter.

"What is it, ribbons?" from the fan counter.

"Why is it that you are so unpopular with the ladies?"

"Give it up."

"Because in cold weather they don't fan—see, you?"

"Say, ribbons, why is your trade like that of a granger?"

"Why is it?"

"Because so much of it is gros grain."—New York Times.

He Takes the Cake for Economy.

There is a farmer in Wrightown township who will perhaps in time get rich, as he is economy and watchfulness personified. He engaged a girl to assist in the house at stated wages per week. When they agreed to settle, nearly a year later, he had a bill against her of a little more than $3 for loss of time for "gaping" at the cars as they went to and fro. It seems that after the construction train got to running she would go every time it passed to the door, look at it, throw up her hands and apron and laugh, so pleased at the sight. This loss of time was charged against her in their settlement. Long headed man, that.—Doylestown Democrat.

Kept His Appointment.

Mrs. Blifkins (time midnight)—Horrors! Husband! husband! I hear some one burrowing through the wall.

Mr. Blifkins—Well, well! It must be that book agent. I knew we'd all be in bed by 11 o'clock, and I told him to call at half-past.—Good News.

Taking Medicine by Electricity.

A noted physician of Paris claims to have succeeded by a novel application of electrolysis and electrosynethis, analagous to the electro-deposition of metals, in conveying by the electric current to diseased internal organs of the human body the constituents of the drugs necessary for their recovery. A commission of the French Academy of Science, one of which is the learned Dr. Charcot, has been appointed to ascertain the value of the results, and to extend the investigations.—Philadelphia Record.

Self Acting Paper Cutter.

A Calcutta newspaper relates an incident which illustrates the magnificent way in which the rajahs of India—or at least those of them who remain opulent and powerful—repay a small debt. Not long ago the Rajah Holkar, of Indore, in paying a visit to the viceroy, the Marquis of Lansdowne, at Calcutta, was shown by the marquis several of the London illustrated newspapers. In cutting the leaves of these journals, Lord Lansdowne used an ivory paper cutter.

The rajah had never seen a paper cutter before and was much interested in the little instrument.

"If your excellency will make me a present of it," he said, "I will send you another in exchange."

The viceroy promptly gave his guest the paper cutter, and the rajah returned with it to his own dominions.

Lord Lansdowne had almost forgotten the incident when he received notice that the rajah's return gift was on the way, and he was presently astonished to have brought to him a young and handsome elephant, each of whose tusks had been skillfully wrought into the shape of a paper cutter.

A servant brought some illustrated newspapers, at which the elephant seized them with his trunk and proceeded very skillfully to cut the leaves with his sharply trimmed tusks. He had been trained to this accomplishment under the rajah's orders.

The living paper cutter, it is understood, is still in Lord Lansdowne's possession, but it is not one of the ordinary furnishings of the viceroy's library. For his customary opening of books and newspapers he keeps a less bulky implement.—Youth's Companion.

Why Russia Persecutes the Jews.

The principal grounds upon which the Russian justifies the persecution of his Hebrew brother are as follows. He asserts: First—That the Jews are too rapacious and too successful in getting money and property away from the surrounding Christians. Second—That they hold themselves, as a class, apart from the rest of the community. Third—That they furnish many of the leading nihilists and mischief makers. Fourth—That they evade service in the army and do not become patriotic Russians.

The first accusation may be ignored, as it amounts simply to saying that the Jew is shrewder and more intelligent than his neighbors of other races. As to the Jew's refusal to mingle more freely with his neighbors of different creeds, or, in other words, to assimilate with the population, it cannot be said that he has as yet received any very warm invitation to do anything of the kind. He has been chased like a beast of prey for centuries, and now he is asked why he does not like his persecutors.

The charge of nihilism is perfectly true, to the extent that the Jews naturally furnish their proportionate quota to the malcontents who have the courage to act. But that the Jews among the nihilists exceed their proper proportion to the whole population is denied by many trustworthy writers. The charge that the Jew evades army service is disproved by official statistics.—P. G. Hubert, Jr., in Forum.

Her Royal Sweetness.

To be called Her Royal Highness is the destiny of every woman born to wear a crown, but it remains for one woman among all the royal families to have the endearing title of Her Royal Sweetness given to her, and that honor belongs to Alexandra, Princess of Wales. She has that marvelous art of making goodness seem attractive; of making the right act the pleasant one and of impressing upon all who know her the knowledge that to do good is to have a pleasant time, and not to do it is to miss some of the pleasure of life.

Many princesses have been written about as having been beautiful, as having caused great wars, as having done great deeds of valor, of having made men die for them and kingdoms quarrel over them, but of none of them can it be said, as it is of this gracious lady, that the whole world bows down before sweetness and goodness, that peace has been the watchword of her life; and not only does she value peace, but those loving sisters, Faith, Hope and Charity, abide with her.—Lady Elizabeth Hilary in Ladies' Home Journal.

Easter Eggs.

The egg is the sign of the resurrection, which the Easter festival commemorates. The Jews place it on the Passover table, thereby indicating that their race is to be resurrected. The Persians and Druids both used it in their religious ceremonies, and not only the Russian, but the Mohammedan, on the early Easter morning gives the greeting, "Christ is risen," and the reply, "Christ is risen indeed," is followed by an exchange of eggs, and the egg is as well a feature in all the old Eastern legends, many of which are too improbable to even bear the semblance of truth; others might be true, inasmuch as truth is oftentimes stranger than fiction.—Emma J. Gray in Good Housekeeping.

Just Like a Girl.

Agnes, aged 4, called at an uptown grocery store the other day. "I want a tick of gum," she announced. After getting the desired article she remarked that she hadn't "any penny." "How do you expect to pay for your gum?" queried the vender of delicacies. "Well," announced the youthful philosopher, "I will give you a kiss." The kiss was taken, but Agnes staid, and finally, flushed with success, she made another offer: "My cousin Ethel would like a tick, and I'll give you another kiss for it." Both girls chewed that afternoon.—Burlington (Vt.) Independent.

Strange and Fatal Accident.

A peculiar and fatal accident happened recently to a man named Dunham who lived in Kechi township, Sedgwick county, Kan. A farmer named Martin had killed a number of hogs, which he left hanging in his yard over night. In the morning one was gone, and in looking around for some trace which might reveal the cause of its disappearance, he noticed, a short distance from his house, something strange propped against a rail fence, and on investigating found his hog hanging by the gambrel stick around the neck of Dunham.

The thief's neck was broken, and he had evidently been dead some hours. The supposition is that while climbing the fence Dunham's burden had slipped and caught his head in the noose formed by the two legs and the cross stick, and the heavy weight had instantaneously cracked his neck.—Kansas City Star.

The Leaves.

No leaf as yet! though like a wraith of snow
The white bell flowers have burst their sheathing green
And yielded to deep violets, and the sheen
Of those faint primroses that early strew
The garment of the earth. Verdure below,
But ne'er a budding leaf to come between
Our eyes and the blue ether, broadly seen
Through tracery of beeches, stretching low
From mighty rafter boughs—the sere brown caves
Of woodland palaces, where rocking high
The solemn rook in sable chorus weaves
A twig into his nest, and yet more nigh
A wild bird sings of love among the leaves—
The leaves that are to be when spring is by.
—C. A. Dawson in Chambers' Journal.

Killed by a Captive Rattlesnake.

Alfred Duc, a Frenchman who has been living in a small cabin on the Schnell ranch, two miles north of Tia Juana, had a sort of fascination for snakes, and the reptiles appeared to realize that he was their especial friend. Neighbors tell that within the past few months he has never been known to be without one or more snakes in the cabin. Blacksnakes and copperheads made their home under his house, and he would stop on the field to caress a snake of any kind.

For about a week he has had a large rattler in the house, but as the reptile was not of the trustworthy family Duc made for it a housing place in an empty oil can. Since then he has been handling the snake at odd times, endeavoring to tame it into docility.

Sunday afternoon he had the snake out as usual, displaying it to a young man named Cresswell. He had it lying on his lap, his right hand closed loosely around the body just back of the head. It writhed about and finally freed its head. Then the reptile formed itself into a curl and like a flash of lightning buried its deadly fangs in the flesh of Duc's right hand. He appeared to think little about the matter and did not even bandage the wound. On Tuesday C. N. Flattery, of the San Diego Undertaking company, received a telephone message from Tia Juana saying, "Bring coffin (giving size) and come at once." The coffin was for Duc, and he died in horrible agony from the bite of the snake.—San Diego Sun.

New Zealand's Wild Horses.

"Aboard the ship that carried me from New Zealand to San Francisco were six thoroughbred New Zealand horses," remarked T. Harding McLaurin, a wealthy sheepgrower of that British possession, soon after he arrived at the Grand Pacific hotel. "And the owner expects to accomplish wonders with these animals. It is a strange thing to many that good horses should be bred in New Zealand. I dare say that when I get to England, and when I relate various matters, my friends will answer with a stare of incredulity. As a point of fact the vast plains to the north of my place—Otago—are the homes of great herds of wild horses that roam about as fearlessly as did the mustangs or broncos of your western plains.

"Are they better horses than the mustangs? Well, they are as far above the American article as the pure blooded Arabian is above an ordinary draught horse. They are large and well built, and there is no uniformity of color. They live upon the rich tussocks and peelie grass that abound on their once volcanic fields.

"The New Zealand wild horse is a hard one to break, but once brought under control he makes a magnificent driving or carriage animal. Cheap too. I have seen beautiful fourteen hand horses sold for fifteen pounds to be used for coaches. Breeding with imported stock produces a variety such as would be well adapted to America. Just now sheep raising is the great industry of the island, but I predict a great future for the horse trade."—Chicago News.

Discovery of Natural Gas.

The first time we heard of natural gas in the state was in the year 1815, when it was found in Charlestown. Some six years later, a story is told of a woman going out one dark night to draw water at a place called Fredonia, in New York state—when she put down her lantern, much to her consternation a spring of gas by the well took fire. In 1824, when Lafayette passed through the same neighborhood, in honor of the occasion, Taylor house, where he staid, was illuminated with the gas laid on by pipes direct from the earth.

The great reservoirs of natural gas were first tapped in the process of boring artesian wells. As soon as one of the drills reached a certain depth the whole apparatus was blown high up into the air, and the gas escaped by the vent with a roar that could be heard from afar. One American gentleman boring for water met with this experience, and, having no other use for the gas, stuck a tall pipe into the hole, applied a light to the top, when the flame shot upward, and thus created a beacon fire which illuminated the country round for miles. Years afterward this light was still burning, and probably may be seen to this day.—Chambers' Journal.

Why Soldiers Break Ranks.

There are very few bridges in the world over which troops are allowed to march in regular step. In general, when coming to a bridge, particularly a suspension bridge, the drums or bands are stopped, the array is broken and the soldiers pass over without keeping step, or rather taking pains not to keep step. The reason is found in the fact that a very slight initial vibration, if continued, is imparted to the whole structure, and in a short time becomes so strong a downward strain at every recurrence as speedily to endanger the safety of the strongest bridge.

The same principle is illustrated in some houses, which can be made to tremble from roof to foundation by persistently and regularly pressing with the foot on a loose board in one of the floors. A similar curious circumstance is seen in the case of certain churches in which it is dangerous to play the heavy pedal pipes of a grand organ, for the reason that the vibration becomes so great as to shatter the panes of glass in the windows, and even to imperil the safety of the roof.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Killed Himself for a Friend.

E. C. Collins, a sewing machine agent, committed suicide at Memphis the other day. First it was supposed he was a defaulter, but that didn't pan out. Then it was assumed that he loved a girl and she wouldn't have him, but that was dispelled. Then came the announcement that he had killed himself to shield a friend, and that friend a plain man. It seems the story is true too. Collins had a friend who was charged with a serious offense. Collins was the most damaging witness in the case. His testimony would undoubtedly salt his friend, and rather than do that he committed suicide.—De-

FACE TO FACE WITH DEATH.

A Young Society Woman's Remarkable Experience Before a Mirror.

"At the ball last night," said a man talking to a companion at his club dinner, "a girl with whom I sat out one of the dances told me of a rather curious experience she had earlier in the evening. She said she was in the hands of her maid for the ball, was seated before her dressing table having her hair done; the room was warm and flooded with light; her ball gown was in her sight. She was reading during the process some light society novel, and, as she rather shamefacedly confessed, munching bonbons between times.

"All at once she grew tired of candies and fiction, and, putting both aside, sat looking in the glass while the maid worked. She was thinking of the ball and various anticipations she had concerning it, when, suddenly, without warning, and from no apparent cause, she found herself face to face with her own death.

"She put it very graphically: 'It was personal death I was struggling with,' she said, 'not the abstract death that we read of in the newspapers nor the future long-to-be-postponed mortality which we more or less indifferently accept as one common destiny. It was the actual end of my life, the finis of everything for me, and the going out from my home and friends to the darkness and horror of the unknown beyond. What religious faith I had forsook me completely.

"'I trembled and a cold dampness gathered on my forehead, I choked and started to my feet. My maid, alarmed, asked if I were ill. I said yes, and I was—ill with dread, but nothing more, for I was conscious of feeling perfectly well. She went to fetch a glass of water, and before she returned the vision, or whatever it was, had gone as quickly as it had come. The hairdressing was resumed, and I could detect no physical results of the visitation, which was terribly real and awful while it lasted, and I shall not soon forget it.'

"I reminded her of some verses of Aldrich on a similar subject, where, while the carriage waits at the door for milady's forgotten fan, the husband or lover is confronted in the same dismal way, but she had never seen or heard of them. Her experience was evidently very genuine and had made a considerable impression upon her."—New York Times.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and
Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-Officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO, CALIFORNIA.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

J. W. P. LAIRD. P. H. MACK
MACK & LAIRD.
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

A. R. CONKLIN,
Attorney-at-Law.
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the States of California and Nevada.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)
Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED.
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.
Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:
Saturday ..... January 24th
" ..... February 21st
" ..... March 21st
" ..... April 18th
" ..... May 23rd
" ..... June 20th
" ..... July 18th
" ..... August 15th
" ..... September 12th
" ..... October 17th
" ..... November 14th
" ..... December 12th
JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

OFFICIAL.

NOTICE OF

Sheriff's Sale,

ON FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES.

E. H. EDWARDS, Plaintiff,
vs.
WM. F. MATLACK, Administrator of the Estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased
Defendant.

Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure and Sale.

UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF AN ORDER of sale and decree of foreclosure, issued out of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on the 15th day of November, 1890, in an action wherein E. H. Edwards was Plaintiff and Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, was Defendant, and in which said last above mentioned action, E. H. Edwards, the above named Plaintiff, obtained a judgment and decree of foreclosure against Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, Defendant, on the 15th day of November, 1890, for the sums of $1810.02 and $4171.49, gold coin of the United States, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $5981.51, gold coin as aforesaid, which said decree was, on that 15th day of November, 1890, recorded in Judgment Book 2 of said Court at page 281, (Wm. F. Matlack, Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, the above named Defendant, was by an order of said Superior Court duly made and entered on the 14th day of May, 1891 substituted as Defendant in said action in the place and stead of said Thomas Parker, now deceased.) I am commanded to sell, to satisfy said judgment and decree for the said sum of $810.02, all those certain lots, pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Beginning at a point twenty chains East of the North-west Section corner of Section No. twenty-eight, in Township No. fifteen South of Range No. thirty-six, East, Mt. Diablo Base and Meridian, (magnetic variation fifteen degrees and fifteen minutes East) thence south thirteen and ninety one-hundredths chains to North-west corner of Josiah G. Dodge's land; thence North, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, twenty two and thirty-one one-hundredths chains to Brewery street in the town of Lone Pine; thence North, twenty-one degrees and forty minutes West, twenty-one one hundredths chains; thence South, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes West, eight and ten one-hundredths chains; thence North eight and forty-eight one-hundredths chains to North line of Section No. twenty-eight; thence West thirteen and twenty-nine one-hundredths chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing fifteen and one-half acres.

Also a lot of land lying East of the last described tract and on the Wm. L. Moore tract of land North-west of the town of Lone Pine beginning at the North east corner of said last described tract, thirty three and twenty-nine one-hundredths chains East of the North-west corner of Section twenty-eight in Township Fifteen South of Range Thirty-six East, of Mount Diablo Meridian, at an iron post set in the ground; thence, South eight and forty-eight one-hundredths chains to the lane from the last described tract of land to the town of Lone Pine; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, eight and seventy one one-hundredths chains to the East side of Brewery street in said town; thence, South twenty-one degrees and forty minutes East, fifty one-hundredths chains to the North line of Corral street in said town; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, seven and eighty-seven one-hundredths chains to the West line of Main street in said town; thence, North twenty-one degrees and forty minutes West, three and nineteen one-hundredths chains to Section line of said Section twenty-eight; thence, West fifteen chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing eight and seventy-five one hundredths acres.

Also lots Nos. two, three, and the North half of lot six, in block No. 13, upon which is a house; and the fractional part of lots Nos. six, seven and eight in block No. 1 in the town of Lone Pine, in said County and State, as the same are known and designated on the plat of said town now on file in the Recorder's office of said County.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging.

I am also commanded to sell, to satisfy said judgment and decree for the said sum of $4171.49, all that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

The East half of the South-west quarter and the West half of the South-east quarter of Section No. twenty-one, in Township No. fifteen, South, of Range No. thirty six, East, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in anywise appertaining.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on Saturday the 6th day of June, 1891, at 12 o'clock M. of that day, in front of the Court House in the County of Inyo, I will, in obedience to said order of sale and decree of foreclosure and sale, sell separately the above described property, or so much thereof, as may be necessary to satisfy said Plaintiff's judgment, with interest and costs etc., to the highest and best bidder, for cash gold coin of the United States.

Dated this 15th day of May, 1891

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff of Inyo County.
By D. HOLLAND,
Under-Sheriff

Mack & Laird, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

J. W. Murphy.
BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work.
Wagons and Carriages Repaired.
HORSESHOEING, $2.00 for CASH
Shop on Edwards St., opposite the Court House, Independence.

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK.....PROPRIETOR.
Horseshoeing .....$2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

Snug little FORTUNES have been made at work for us, by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Bonn, Toledo, Ohio. See out. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Can work in spare time or all the time. Big money for workers. Failure unknown among them. NEW and WONDERFUL. Full particulars FREE. H. Hallett & Co., Box 880 PORTLAND, MAINE.

OFFICIAL.

Notice of Election.

STEVENS DITCH COMPANY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Stevens Ditch Company will be held at the office of the Company, in the town of Independence, Inyo county, Cal., on

SATURDAY, MAY 30, 1891,

At the hour of One o'clock in the afternoon of that day. That at said meeting there will be held an election to elect Five Directors of said Company for the ensuing year. And also to transact such other business as may properly come before said Annual Meeting.

P. H. MACK,
Secretary.

NOTCE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JOHN LUCAS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased to the Creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at his office in the town of Lone Pine, Inyo county, Cal., the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in said Inyo county, State of California. E. H. EDWARDS,
Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased.

Dated May 5th, 1891.

NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 18th day of April, 1891, in the matter of the Estate of John Mullane, deceased the undersigned, the Executor of the Last Will and testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, and subject to confirmation by said Superior Court, on and after Tuesday, the 12th day of May, 1891, and within six months thereafter, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John Mullane at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to, that of the said John Mullane at the time of his death, in and to that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the said County of Inyo, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to wit: The South half of the North East quarter; and the North West quarter of the South East quarter of Section No. Seven, and the South West quarter of the North West quarter of Section No. Eight, all in Township No. Nine South, Range No. Thirty-four East, Mount Diablo Meridian, containing one hundred and sixty acres.

Bids or offers must be in writing, and will be received at the residence of the undersigned, near the town of Big Pine, in the County of Inyo, State of California, and may be left at the place herein designated, or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court, at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, gold coin of the United States, ten per cent. of the the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor when the sale shall be made, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court Deed at the expense of purchaser.

RICHARD HESSIAN.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Mullane, deceased.

NOTICE OF SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 18th day of April, 1891, in the matter of the Estate of John Mullane, deceased, the undersigned, Executor of the Last Will and Testament of said deceased, will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, on and after the sixth day of May, 1891, at the residence of the undersigned, near the town of Big Pine, County of Inyo, State of California, the following personal property to wit: Seventy head of stock cattle, more or less; One plow; One wagon; One horse; One cooking stove and utensils; One set harness; One shovel; One hay fork, and one trunk.

RICHARD HESSIAN.
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of John Mullane, deceased.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of PETER DIECKSON, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNdersigned, Administrator of the estate of PETER DIECKSON, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his residence, in the town of Lone Pine, in the county of Inyo, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in the county of Inyo.

Dated April 18th, 1891.

JOHN F. LUBKEN,
Administrator of said Estate.

P. W. FORBES. P. H. MACK.
MACK & FORBES.
Real Estate Agents,
Address, P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal.
P. W. FORBES, Bishop, Cal.

BELL'S
Flouring Mills,
A. N. BELL, Prop.
TRY BELL'S
EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.
Having added Patent Rolls and other Improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully
Equal to the Best
Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.
A. N. BELL,
Independence, Cal.

CROCKERS' HOTEL.
BIG PINE - CAL.
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in act, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
W. H. UHLEMEYER, Lessee.
sep1-tf

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, MAY 15 ..... 1891.

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 98¼
Lead, 4 35
Copper, 13.70
Tin, 20.40
Sugar, .06
Coffee, 20 @ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 13 @ 19.

Rev. H. J. Winsor will breach in Lone Pine at 11 a. m.; George Creek 2:30; Independence, 7:30 p. m. Sunday school at Lone Pine and Independence at 2 p. m.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

SATURDAY May 9, 1891

Hamill vs. Collins & Cohn—Judgment entered.

TUESDAY, May 12, 1891

Cohn and D. Levy vs. T. K. Hutchinson—Filed order dismissing action.

A. O. Collins was in town yesterday.

S. G. Gregg was in town a couple of days this week.

Over $7,000,000 in gold was shipped out of the United States last week.

R. Van Dyke came up from Lone Pine yesterday, returning the same day.

George Spratt and Vernon Smith of Big Pine were in town during the week.

There was a heavy thunder storm on Tuesday night, and considerable rain.

Jack Wilson of Darwin spent several days in town this week and returned on Wednesday.

Cattle men are very busy gathering up stock and getting ready to move out for the summer.

N. G. Fairman arrived in town from Panamint to-day. He reports all quiet in that section.

Charley Green was up from Lone Pine on Wednesday. He was accompanied by Mrs. Green.

Betting is about even on the big prize fight to take place between Jackson and Corbett on the 21st.

S. P. McKnight, C. E., with a force of men is engaged in surveying an extension of the Stevens Canal to Lone Pine.

A. V. Davidson has been suffering very much from rheumatism for three weeks past. He is able to be about, however.

The first strawberries of the season were marketed by C. A. Walter of Camp Independence yesterday. They are beauties.

The funeral obsequies of John F. Swift, late minister to Japan, took place from Trinity Church, San Francisco, last Sunday.

R. H. Williams, formerly of Hawthorne, came up from Keeler on yesterday's train. He is a witness in the Lynch—Anderson case.

J. N. Evans arrived at Independence from Reno on Wednesday evening. He will remain for several days attending to his cattle interests here.

Mrs. J. J. Gunn came up from Modock on Tuesday, and Mr. Gunn is expected in a day or two. Work has closed for the summer on the Minnietta mine.

Ed Rose got down from Big Pine on Wednesday with the thoroughbred stallion, Bronco. The horse is very sick, and it is feared that the disease is farcy.

A new railroad is being built toward Los Angeles from Salt Lake. The first objective point is the Deep Creek mines in White Pine county near the Utah line.

Judge Gould suffered a relapse when about to start for Darwin last week and was unable to go. He is now feeling much better and thinks he will return home to-morrow.

There is a large number of new buildings and business blocks being erected in Los Angeles. It does not look as though the bursted boom had affected the real prosperity of the city much.

A valuable horse was killed by lightning in John Clarke's stable at Bishop during the storm of Tuesday night. On the same night a brood-mare heavy with foal and a two-year-old colt owned by James Jones were killed at Fish Springs.

A letter from San Jose states that Miss Annie Kohler is giving excellent satisfaction as a teacher at Knight's Ferry. At Christmas the people of her district presented her with a watch and chain and increased her salary.

H. P. Cartier arrived home from San Francisco on Tuesday morning, coming by way of Mojave. While in the city he saw John Baxter whom he reports to be improving very much an expects to be thoroughly cured in about six weeks.

The Lone Pine public school will hold its closing exercises at Boland's Hall next Wednesday evening. The teachers, Mr. Rathbun and Miss Russell, have been very busy making preparations for the event, and an enjoyable affair will be had.

It is quite likely that a number of mining sales will be reported in Darwin and adjoining districts before long. There is considerable stir in Eastern mining circles, and inquiries for good properties are being constantly made. There is a large group of mines at Darwin and Coso that if owned by a corporation with means to develope them would yield enormous returns.

By request of a number of citizens a mass-meeting is called to assemble at the reading room of the Norman House tomorrow evening to discuss the question of having a Fourth of July celebration at Independence. If the people should take hold of the matter and all work together a grand affair could be had. As Bishop has the Fair that place would surely send a large delegation. Turn out and talk the matter over.

A Land and Water Transaction.

Mr. Henry Herbert of Muckross, Ireland, has arranged for the purchase from the Inyo Land Company of 15,000 inches of water and 15,000 acres of land in Owens Valley, Inyo County. The arrangement was concluded by Mr. Trenmore Coffin of Carson for the land company and William J. Sutherland, President of the Holmes mine of Candelaria, for Mr. Herbert.—S. F. Post.

FATAL AFFRAY.

A MAN NAMED JOHN LYNCH SHOOTS AND KILLS MAT. ANDERSON.

The Trouble Occurs at a Mine Near Swansea —Verdict of Coroner's Jury—Lynch In Jail Awaiting Examination —Testimony of an Eye-Witness Given.

About half past seven o'clock on Tuesday evening a telegram was received at Independence stating that a man, Lynch, had shot and killed one, Anderson, at Swansea. Soon afterward Sheriff Gorman and Coroner Matlack started for the scene of the killing. About four miles below Independence they ran into a barbed wire fence, cutting the animals so badly as to necessitate their return to town. With a fresh team they started again, but the night was so dark and murky and being blinded by flashes of lightning, they were compelled to remain at Shepherd's till daylight, when they continued their way to Keeler. Sheriff Gorman arrested Lynch and returned immediately with him to Independence, where he now is awaiting trial.

Dr. I. J. Woodin performed an autopsy under the direction of the Coroner, the body having been removed to Keeler. The bullet entered the abdomen, cutting the intestines in four places, and penetrated to the back. Death was caused almost instantly. Following is

THE VERDICT.

In the matter of the inquisition upon the body of Mat. Anderson, deceased, we, the undersigned, jurors summoned to appear before Wm. F. Matlack, the Coroner of the County of Inyo, on the 13th day of May, 1891, to inquire into the cause of death of Mat. Anderson, having been duly sworn according to law and having made such inquisition after inspecting the body and hearing the testimony adduced, upon our oaths, each and all do say, that we find the deceased was named Mat. Anderson, was a native of Norway, aged between forty-hve and fifty years, that he came to his death on the 12th day of May, 1891, in this county, by a gun shot wound, and we futher find that we believe John Lynch to be the person by whose act the death of said Mat. Anderson was occasioned.

All of which we duly certify by this inquisition in writing by us signed this thirteenth day of May, 1891.

W. C. WILKINSON,
JOHN BARNES,
JESSE THOMAS,
WM. AVERY,
JOHN FIEHMAN,
JOHN C. ANTON,
WM. F. BENNETT,
J. J. MORTON.

There were depositions taken by the Coroner. The following is a direct account of the affair and tells in a straightforward manner what was seen by an

AN EYE-WITNESS.

Richard H. Williams being duly sworn, testifies and says: After supper, at half-past five on May 12, 1891, Anderson demanded his time. Lynch asked me to make out the time for Anderson. They couldn't agree on the time; a difference of one day. Anderson said to me, "Don't make it out, Dick, I won't accept it." I handed the time to Lynch. What became of it I don't know. I went out of the cabin, Lynch called to me, "Wait, Dick, we'll all go down together." Then I walked over to where Anderson's bunk was, about one hundred feet due west of the cabin. There Clay, Lynch and myself stood for a few seconds. Lynch went back to the cabin and in about five seconds Clay followed Lynch. Anderson came to the bunk about this time and put some papers in his coat pocket. He throwed his coat over his shoulder. I says to him: "Which way are you going, Anderson?" He says, "I am going by way of the Marble Quarry.' Anderson says, "Lynch will go with me, or I will die in the road." I says to Anderson, "Come along and Lynch will overtake us." While I was talking to Anderson he turned around and saw Lynch and Clay starting for the town of Keeler. Anderson turns around and walks back to and in the cabin. In a short time, perhaps four or five seconds, I saw Anderson come back with a broken ax handle in his hand. He walked over the trail over the cabin and Anderson met Clay coming back to the cabin. Anderson continued his course right along on his way to Keeler. I heard Lynch say, "Don't come any further." Anderson says to Lynch, "Where are you going?" I couldn't understand the reply Lynch made. Anderson said, "Hold on, I'll go too," or "I'll go with you," I would not be positive. I heard Lynch say, "Don't follow me! Don't come any further!" I turned around when I heard the remark, and walked away from Anderson and Lynch. I heard a shot. I turned around to see if there was any damage done. I still saw Anderson walking toward Lynch. They were about fifty feet apart at the time. I heard Lynch say, "For God's sake don't come any closer," or "further," as the wind was blowing so that I could not hear distinctly. I turned around as I did before, with my back toward Anderson and Lynch. I heard the second shot; don't remember whether there were two or three, but at the last report I saw Anderson lying on the ground. I ran over to the cabin and from there to where Anderson was lying. I saw his shirt was pulled out of his pants. I raised his shirt to see where the wound was and then Lynch called me over to where he was. I see that Lee had Lynch's pistol and Lynch, Clay and myself had started for town, and left Anderson in Lee's charge.

RICHARD H. WILLIAMS.

The prisoner was taken before Judge Gill on Thursday, and the time set for the preliminary examination was Tuesday, May 19, at 10 o'clock a. m. He has refused to make any statement. P. H. Mack, Esq., has been retained for the defense.

Business For Sale

Mr. J. C. Roeper gives notice that he will sell his butcher business at Independence. This would be an excellent opportunity for a young man as the business is well established and yields good returns. The property includes a fine shop building in the center of town. It is well arranged and fitted up with all the necessary implements and screens and has a refrigerator attached. Not a pound of meat need be lost in the hottest weather. Also a neat dwelling on adjoining lot, with four rooms and kitchen. A garden set out with grape, currant gooseberry and other vines, and all bearing. Price set, and terms made known on application. See advertisement.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For Sale.

A well established butcher business in Independence. No opposition. A good substantial butcher shop with ice house, or refrigerator attached. All tools and implements necessary for carrying on the business. Also a comfortable dwelling on lot adjoining shop. Four large rooms and kitchen. Shop and dwelling are both new and in good condition. The entire property must be included in purchase and terms cash. Apply to

J. C. ROEPER.
Independence, Cal.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer without cost of repairs than any other machine. Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

For Sale!

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE

Eastside Canal.

There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,

C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

MARY A. BALL, Plaintiff, vs. ROBERT BALL, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Robert Ball, Defendant:

You are hereby raquired to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant and for costs of suit, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 28th day of February, A. D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

FORBES & TOBEY,

HAWTHORNE, NEV.,

—DEALERS IN—

LUMBER

OF ALL KINDS.

DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS,
LATH,
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.

Matched and Dressed Flooring.

sept 11-1

MISCELLANEOUS.

THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.
BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL.
THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $25 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. Can work in spare time, or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EDWARD CHENOT
Independence, Cal.,
INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of
GENERAL MERCHANDIS
....Consisting of....
GROCERIES.
PROVISIONS
Tobacco, Cigars,
WINES AND LIQUORS
FLOUR & GRAIN
Together with an Assortment of
DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING
ETC., ETC
Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere.
F. CHENOT.
Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
n476tf

Lake View Hotel
Keeler, Cal.
John Barnes, Prop'r.
First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.
THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
Wines,
Liquors,
& Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.

DENTISTS.

OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSfield, opposite the Southern Hotel. Prompt and careful treatment given and the least possible pain inflicted. Address

WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.
Bee Keeper.
Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.
Independence, Inyo Co. Cal

FOR SALE CHEAP.

Two span first class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
Bishop Creek, Cal.,
Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING SALOON.
Shaving, Hair-Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.
WM. H. HUFF, Prop'r

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated, satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine
FRED BURKHARDT.
nov 30-tf

NOTICE
ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.
FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

IRWINS' SALOON
Edwards and Market Streets,
Independence . Cal.
THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt an furnished in a style second to none on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.
THE BAR
Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.
JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

NORMAN HOUSE,
Independence, - Cal.
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates.
Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.
O. I. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

BOOTS AND SHOES
MADE AND REPAIRED.
THE BEST MATERIAL.
FIRST-CLASS WORK.
Repairs done Promptly.
Prices Reasonable.
A. J. DAVIS,
Independence,

BIG 10P ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.
Harness Maker.
Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.
O. H. Hill, Prop'r.
A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE
BISHOP.
Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St
In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable
S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Pioneer
Livery & Feed Stables.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, patrons can be assured of finding there the best of Buggy Teams, Saddle Horses, and
Livery Accommodations
in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.
O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor.

A NEW DEAL!
LONE PINE
Livery. Feed & Sale Stable.
A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.
OPPOSITE SEWART HOUSE.
Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,
—DEALER IN—
General Merchandise,
LONE PINE,
INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,
BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.

Dealer in
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS
Supplies
PROVISIONS,
&c., &c., &c.
A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, GEORGE STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R R

TAKING EFFECT

Sunday, November 61, '90

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1 Leave—	To Mound House. No. 2. Arrives—
Mound House	11:30 p m.	5.50 p. m
Dayton	12:00 p. m.	5:10 p. m.
Wabuska	2:05 p m.	2 50 p. m
Hawthorne	5 50 p. m.	11:10 a. m.
Luning	7:05 p. m.	9 55 a. m.
Soda Springs	8:05 p. m.	9:15 a. m
Belleville	9:15 p. m.	7:55a. m.
Candelaria	Ar. 10.00 p. m	Lv. 7:20 a. m.
	No. 3. Leave—	No. 4. Arrives—
Belleville	8 20 a. m	5:25 p m.
Benton	11:50 a. m	1:35 a m.
Bishop Creek	2:00p, m.	11:00 a. m
Alvord	2:45 p. m.	10:00 a. m
Independence	4:20 p. m.	8:30 a. m
Lone Pine	5:10p. m.	7:40 a. m
Keeler	Ar. 5:55 p. m.	Lv. 7.00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

At HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (37 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

At LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's. tri-weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville, Grantsville and Belmont.

At CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stages for Columbus (8 miles), Silver P Montezuma, Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.
D A BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles
OF
Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc
AT
L. WOOL
CASH STORE
A small stock of fresh groceries a canned goods constantly renewed.
Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.
CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!
THE CASH STORE
Is Where You Get
WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE
Blacksmith Shop.
R. C. Spear, Prop'r
—ALL WORK ON—
MINING TOOLS,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS
& FREIGHTING OUTFITS
—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—
HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING
All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON
KEELER, CAL.
In Lake View Hotel
BEER, WINES.
LIQUORS and CIGARS
All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.
JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.
J. C. MILLER, Lessee.
—THE BAR—
Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of
WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS
The most careful attention given to the the amusement and comfort of patrons.
A FINE BILLIARD TABLE!
Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon. sept-12 tf

No one doubts that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy really cures Catarrh, whether the disease be recent or of long standing, because the makers of it clinch their faith in it with a $500 guarantee, which isn't a mere newspaper guarantee, but "on call" in a moment.

That moment is when you prove that its makers can't cure you.

The reason for their faith is this:

Dr. Sage's remedy has proved itself the right cure for ninety-nine out of one hundred cases of Catarrh in the Head, and the World's Dispensary Medical Association can afford to take the risk of your being the one hundredth.

The only question is—are you willing to make the test, if the makers are willing to take the risk?

If so, the rest is easy. You pay your druggist 50 cents and the trial begins.

If you're wanting the $500 you'll get something better—a cure!

Lying is the basis of all evil. After one year of absolute truth all crime would disappear.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE BLIND.

Dr. La Grange wishes to make known his New Treatment for the cure of all diseases of the Eye; —Cataract, Defective Vision, Inflammation, etc., etc., without Operation or Pain. The remedy can be applied by the patient, and is simple, safe and sure in its effects, strengthening the muscles and nerves of the eye, removing pain almost instantaneously. It is a marvelous discovery and a blessing to the sufferer.

For further particulars address with stamped envelope, R. J. LA GRANGE, M. D., 215 Powell St., fourth door from Geary, San Francisco, Cal.

Office Hours, 11 till 3.

Justice is a little short-sighted, perhaps, but it frequently has an eye to the main chance.

MAKE YOURSELF A NEW BODY.

Purge away the old, diseased and worn out body, said Dr. Brandreth. Replace the discharged matters of the system with good, simple food and thus build up a new and sound body in place of one feeble and diseased. Every man should know that he must be "renewed" at least once in two or three years, else he would soon break down completely. This renewing process is easily brought about by purging with BRANDRETH'S PILLS. They put new life into old bodies.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS are purely vegetable, absolutely harmless and safe to take at any time.

Sold in every drug and medicine store, either plain or sugar coated.

Worrying is mental cowardice in almost every one except yourself.

DEAFNESS CAN'T BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Two good listeners may be friends, but two good talkers never.

Dr. Wallace Ely has removed his offices to 215 Powell St., San Francisco, Cal., where he continues to give special attention to Kidneys, Bladder, Prostate Gland and all diseases arising therefrom. Diabetes and Bright's Disease treated according to the latest approved method. Most cases can be treated successfully by correspondence. Consultations daily from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. WALLACE ELY, M. D., 215 Powell St., 4 doors from Geary St., San Francisco, Cal.

He was so very ugly, this Extraordinary man,
That when in battle he faced death
Death turned away and ran.

Every since 1864 there have been women (more each year) who claim that there is no soap half as good, or as economical as Dobbins' Electric. There must be some truth in their claims. Try it, see how much. Your grocer has it.

It is more blessed to give than be given away.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding, and Itching Piles when all other Ointments have failed. It absorbs the tumors, allays the itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and Itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted. Sold by Druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price, 50c. and $1.00 per box. WILLIAMS M'F'G CO., Props., Cleveland, O.

Beware of imitations of the genuine Seal of North Carolina Plug Cut Tobacco.

"August Flower"

How does he feel?—He feels blue, a deep, dark, unfading, dyed-in-the-wool, eternal blue, and he makes everybody feel the same way —August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?—He feels a headache, generally dull and constant, but sometimes excruciating—August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?—He feels a violent hiccoughing or jumping of the stomach after a meal, raising bitter-tasting matter or what he has eaten or drunk—August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?—He feels the gradual decay of vital power; he feels miserable, melancholy, hopeless, and longs for death and peace—August Flower the Remedy.

How does he feel?—He feels so full after eating a meal that he can hardly walk—August Flower the Remedy.

G. G. GREEN, Sole Manufacturer, Woodbury, New Jersey, U. S. A.

S. F. N. U. No. 460. New Series No. 15

THE SPLENDID SPUR.

Being Memoirs of the Adventures of Mr. John Marvel, a Servant of His late Majesty King Charles I, in the years 1642-3: written by himself.

EDITED IN MODERN ENGLISH BY "Q."

CHAPTER I.

THE BOWLING GREEN OF THE "CROWN."

He that has jilted the Muse, forsaking her gentle pipe to follow the drum and trumpet, shall fruitlessly besiege her again when the time comes to sit at home and write down his adventures. 'Tis her revenge, as I am extremely sensible; and methinks she is the harder to me, upon reflection how near I came to being her life long servant, as you are to hear.

'Twas on Nov. 29, 1642—a clear, frosty day—that the king, with the Prince of Wales (newly recovered of the measles), the Princes Rupert and Maurice, and a great company of lords and gentlemen, horse and foot, came marching back to us from Reading. I was a scholar of Trinity college, in Oxford, at that time, and may begin my history at 3 o'clock on the same afternoon, when going (as my custom was) to Mr. Rob Drury for my fencing lesson, I found his lodgings empty.

They stood at the corner of Ship street, as you turn into the Corn market—a low wain scoted chamber, ill lighted but commodious. "He is off to see the show," thought I as I looked about me; and, finding an easy cushion in the window, sat down to await him. Where presently, being tired out (for I had been carrying a halberd all day with the scholars' troop in Magdalen college grove), and in despite of the open lattice, I fell sound asleep.

It must have been an hour after that I awoke with a chill (as was natural), and was stretching out a hand to pull the window close, but suddenly sat down again and fell to watching instead.

The window looked down, at the height of ten feet or so, upon a bowling green at the back of the "Crown" tavern (kept by John Davenant, in the Corn market), and across it to a rambling wing of the same inn, the fourth side—that to my left—being but an old wall, with a broad sycamore growing against it. 'Twas already twilight; and in the darkening house, over the green, was now one casement brightly lit, the curtains undrawn, and within a company of noisy drinkers round a table. They were gaming, as was easily told by their clicking of the dice and frequent oaths; and anon the bellow of some tipsy chorus would come across. 'Twas one of these catches, I dare say, that woke me, only just now my eyes were bent, not towards the singers, but on the still lawn between us.

The sycamore, I have hinted, was a broad tree, and must, in summer, have borne a goodly load of leaves; but now, in November, these were strewn thick over the green, and nothing left but stiff, naked boughs. Beneath it lay a cracked bowl or two on the rank turf, and against the trunk a garden bench rested, I suppose for the convenience of the players. On this a man was now seated.

He was reading in a little book, and this first jogged my curiosity; for 'twas unnatural a man should read print at this dim hour, or, if he had a mind to try, should choose a cold bowling green for his purpose. Yet he seemed to study his volume very attentively, but with a sharp look, now and then, towards the lighted window, as if the revelers disturbed him. His back was partly turned to me, and what with this and the growing dusk I could but make a guess at his face, but a plenty of silver hair fell over his fur collar, and his shoulders were bent a great deal. I judged him between fifty and sixty. For the rest, he wore a dark, simple suit, very strailty cut, with an ample furred cloak and a hat rather tall, after the fashion of the last reign.

Now, why the man's behavior so engaged me, I don't know, but at the end of half an hour I was still watching him. By this 'twas near dark, bitter cold, and his pretense to read mere fondness; yet he persevered—though with longer glances at the casement above, where the din at times was fit to wake the dead.

And now one of the dicers upset his chair with a curse, and gets on his feet. Looking up I saw his features for a moment—a slight, pretty boy, scarce above eighteen, with fair curls and flushed cheeks like a girl's. It made me admire to see him in this ring of purple, villainous faces. 'Twas evident he was a young gentleman of quality, as well by his bearing as his handsome cloak of amber satin barred with black. "I think the devil's in these dice!" I heard him crying, and a pretty hubbub all about him, but presently the drawer enters with more wine, and he sits down quietly to a fresh game.

As soon as 'twas started one of the crew, that had been playing but was now dropped out, lounges up from his seat and, coming to the casement, pushes it open for fresh air. He was one that till now had sat in full view—a tall bully, with a gross, pimpled nose—and led the catches in a bull's voice. The rest of the players paid no heed to his rising, and very soon his shoulders hid them as he leaned out, drawing in the cold breath.

During the late racket I had forgot for a while my friend under the sycamore, but now, looking that way, to my astonishment I saw him risen from his bench and stealing across to the house opposite. I say "stealing," for he kept all the way to the darker shadow of the wall, and, besides, had a curious trailing motion with his left foot, as though the ankle of it had been wrung or badly hurt.

As soon as he was come beneath the window he stopped and called softly,

"Hist!"

The bully gave a start and looked down. I could tell by this motion he did not look to find any one in the bowling green at that hour. Indeed, he had been watching the shaft of light thrown past him by the room behind, and now moved so as to let it fall on the man that addressed him.

The other stands close under the window, as if to avoid this, and calls again.

"Hist!" says he, and beckons with a finger.

The man at the window still held his tongue (I suppose because those in the room would hear him if he spoke), and so for a while the two men studied one another in silence, as if considering their next moves.

After a bit, however, the bully lifted a hand, and, turning back into the lighted room, walks up to one of the players, speaks a word or two and disappears.

I sat up on the window seat, where till now I had been crouching for fear the shaft of light should betray me, and presently (as I was expecting) heard the latch of the back porch gently lifted, and spied the heavy form of the bully coming softly over the grass.

Now, I would not have my readers prejudiced, and so may tell them that this was the first time in my life that I had played the eavesdropper. That I did so now I can never be glad enough, but 'tis true, nevertheless, my conscience pricked me; and I was even making a motion to withdraw when that occurred which would have fixed any man's attention, whether he wished it or no.

The bully must have closed the door behind him but carelessly, for hardly could he have taken a dozen steps when it opened again with a scuffle, and the large house dog belonging to the "Crown" flew at his heels with a vicious snarl and snap of the teeth.

It was enough to scare the coolest. But the fellow turned as if shot, and before he could snap again had gripped him fairly by the throat. The struggle that followed I could barely see, but I heard the horrible sounds of it—the hard, short breathing of the man, the hoarse rage working in the dog's throat—and it turned me sick. The dog—a mastiff—was fighting now to pull loose, and the pair swayed this way and that in the dusk, panting and murderous.

I was almost shouting aloud—feeling as though it were my own throat thus gripped—when the end came. The man had his legs planted well apart. I saw his shoulders heave up and bend as he tightened the pressure of his fingers; then came a moment's dead silence, then a hideous gurgle, and the mastiff dropped back, his hind legs trailing limp.

The bully held him so for a full minute, peering close to make sure he was dead, and then, without loosening his hold, dragged him across the grass under my window. By the sycamore he halted, but only to shift his hands a little, and so, swaying on his hips, send the carcass with a heave over the wall. I heard it drop with a thud on the far side.

During this fierce wrestle—which must have lasted about two minutes—the clatter and shouting of the company above had gone on without a break; and all this while the man with the white hair had rested quietly on one side, watching. But now he steps up to where the bully stood mopping his face (for all the coolness of the evening), and, with a finger between the leaves of his book, bows very politely.

"You handled that dog, sir, choicely well," says he, in a thin voice that seemed to have a chuckle hidden in it somewhere.

The other ceased mopping to get a good look at him.

"But sure," he went on, "'twas hard on the poor cur, that had never heard of Capt. Lucius Higgs"——

I thought the bully would have had him by the windpipe and pitched him after the mastiff, so fiercely he turned at the sound of this name. But the old gentleman skipped back quite nimbly and held up a finger.

"I'm a man of peace. If another title suits you better"——

"Where the devil got you that name?" growled the bully, and had half a mind to come on again, but the other put in briskly:

"I'm on a plain errand of business. No need, as you hint, to mention names; and therefore let me present myself as Mr. Z. The residue of the alphabet is at your service to pick and choose from."

"My name is Luke Settle," said the big man boarsely (but whether this was his natural voice or no, I could not tell).

"Let us say 'Mr. X.' I prefer it."

The old gentleman as he said this popped his head on one side, laid the forefinger of his right hand across the book, and seemed to be considering.

"Why did you throttle that dog a minute ago?" he asked, sharply.

"Why, to save my skin," answers the fellow, a bit puzzled.

"Would you have done it for fifty pounds?"

"Ay, or half that."

"And how if it had been a puppy, Mr. X?"

Now all this from my hiding I had heard very clearly, for they stood right under me in the dusk. But as the old gentleman paused to let his question sink in, and the bully to catch the drift of it before answering, one of the dicers above struck up to sing a catch:

"With a hoy, trolly lolly! a leg to the devil,
And answer him civil, and off with your cap;
Sing—Hey, trolly lolly! Good morrow, Sir Evil.
We've finished the tap.

And, saving your worship, we care not a rap!"

Why, this din continued, the stranger held up one forefinger again, as if beseeching silence, while the other remaining still between the pages of his book.

"Pretty boys!" he said, as the noise died away; "pretty boys! 'Tis easily seen they have a bird to pluck."

"He's none of my plucking."

"And if he were, why not? Sure you've picked a feather or two before now in the low countries—hey?"

"I'll tell you what," interrupts the big man, "next time you crack one of your death's head jokes, over the wall you go after the dog. What's to prevent it?"

"Why, this," answers the old fellow, cheerfully. "There's money to be made by doing no such thing. And I don't carry it all about with me. So, as 'tis late, we'd best talk business at once."

They moved away towards the seat under the sycamore, and now their words reached me no longer—only the low murmur of their voices (or (to be correct) of the elder man's, for the other only spoke now and then, to put a question, as it seemed. Presently I heard an oath rapped out, and saw the bully start up. "Hush, man!" cried the other, and "hark ye now;" so he sat down again. Their very forms were lost within the shadow. I myself was cold enough by this time, and had a cramp in one leg, but lay still, nevertheless. And after a while they stood up together, and came pacing across the bowling green side by side, the older man trailing his foot painfully to keep step. You may be sure I strained my ears.

"Besides the pay," the stranger was saying, "there's all you can win of this young fool, Anthony, and all you find on the pair, which I'll wager"——

They passed out of hearing, but turned soon and came back again. The big man was speaking this time.

"I'll be shot if I know what game you're playing in this."

The elder chuckled softly. "I'll be shot if I mean you to," said he.

And this was the last I heard. For now there came a clattering at the door behind me, and Mr. Robert Drury reeled in, hiccoughing a maudlin ballad about "Tib and young Colin one fine day, beneath the hay cock shade-a," etc., etc., and cursing to find his fire gone out and all in darkness. Liquor was ever his master, and today the king's health had been a fair excuse. He did not spy me, but the roar of his ballad had startled the two men outside, and so, while he was stumbling over chairs and groping for a tinder box, I slipped out in the darkness and down stairs into the streets.

CHAPTER II.

THE YOUNG MAN IN THE CLOAK OF AMBER SATIN.

Guess, any of you, if these events disturbed my rest that night. 'Twas 4 o'clock before I dropped asleep in my bed in Trinity, and my last thoughts were still busy with the words I had heard. Nor, on the morrow, did it fare any better with me; so that, at rhetoric lecture, our president—Dr. Ralph Kettle—took me by the ears before the whole class. He was the fiercer upon me as being older than the gross of my fellow scholars, and (as he thought) the more restless under discipline. "A tutored adolescence," he would say, "is a fair grace before meat," and had his hour glass enlarged to point the moral for us. But even a rhetoric lecture must have an end, and so, tossing my gown to the porter, I set off at last for Magdalen Bridge, where the new barricado was building, along the Physic Garden in front of East Gate.

The day was dull and lowering, though my wits were too busy to heed the sky; but scarcely was I past the small gate in the city wall when a brisk shower of hail and sleet drove me to shelter in the Pig market (or Proscholium) before the Divinity school. 'Tis an ample vaulted passage, as I dare say you know; and here I found a great company of people already driven by the same cause.

To describe them fully 'twould be necessary to paint the whole state of our city in those distracted times, which I have neither will nor time for. But here, today, along with many doctors and scholars, were walking courtiers, troopers, mountebanks, cut purses, astrologers, rogues and gamesters, together with many of the first ladies and gentlemen of England, as the Prince Maurice, the Lords Andover, Digby and Colepepper, my Lady Thynne, Mistress Fanshawe, Mr. Secretary Nicholas, the famous Dr. Harvey, arm in arm with my Lord Falkland (whose boots were splashed with mud, he having ridden over from his house at Great Tew), and many such, all mixed in this incredible tag rag. Mistress Fanshawe, as I remember, was playing on a lute, which she carried always slung about her shoulders; and close beside her, a fellow impudently puffing his specific against the morbus campestris, which already had begun to invade us.

"Who'll buy?" he was bawling. "'Tis from the receipt of a famous Italian, and never yet failed man, woman nor child, unless the heart were clean drowned in the disease; the best part of it good muscadine, and has virtue against the plague, smallpox or surfeits!"

I was standing before this jackanapes, when I heard a stir in the crowd behind me, and another calling, "Who'll buy? Who'll buy?"

Turning, I saw a young man, very gayly dressed, moving quickly about at the far end of the Pig market, and behind him an old lackey, bent double with the weight of two great baskets that he carried. The baskets were piled with books, clothes, gewgaws of all kinds; and 'twas the young gentleman that hawked his wares himself. "What d'ye lack?" he kept shouting, and would stop to unfold his merchandise, holding up now a book and now a silk doublet, and running over their merits like any huckster—but with the merriest conceit in the world.

And yet 'twas not this that sent my heart flying into my mouth at the sight of him. For by his curls and womanish face, no less than the amber cloak with the black bars, I knew him at once for the same I had seen yesterday among the dicers.

As I stood there, drawn this way and that by many reflections, he worked his way through the press, selling here and there a trifle from his baskets, and at length came to a halt in front of me.

"Ha!" he cried, pulling off his plumed hat and bowing low, "a scholar, I perceive. Let me serve you, sir. Here is the 'History of Saint George,'" and he picked out a thin brown quarto and held it up; "written by Master Peter Heylin; a ripe book, they tell me (though, to be sure, I never read beyond the title), and the price a poor two shillings."

Now, all this while I was considering what to do. So, as I put my hand in my pocket, and drew out the shillings, I said very slowly (but softly, so that the lackey might not hear), looking him in the eyes:

"So thus you feed your expenses at the dice; and my shilling, no doubt, is for Luke Settle, as well as the rest."

For the moment, under my look, he went white to the lips; then clapped his hand to his sword, withdrew it, and answered me, red as a turkey cock:

"Shalt be a parson yet, Master Scholar, but art in a damned hurry, it seems."

Now, I had ever a quick temper, and as he turned on his heel was like to have replied and raised a brawl. My own meddling tongue had brought rebuff upon me, but yet my heart was hot as he walked away.

I was standing there and looking after him, turning over in my hand the "Life of Saint George," when my fingers were aware of a slip of paper between the pages. Pulling it out, I saw 'twas scribbled over with writing and figures, as follows:

"Mr. ANTHONY KILLIGREW, his acct for Oct. 25th, MDCXLII.—For herrings, 2d.; for coffe, 4d.; for scowring my coat, 6d.; at bowls, 5s. 10d.; for bleading me, 1s. 0d.; for ye King's speech, 3d.; for spiced wine (with Marjory), 2s. 4d.; for seeing ye rhinoceros, 4d.; at ye Ranter-go-round, 6½d.; for a pair of silver buttons, 2s. 6d.; for apples, 2½d.; for ale, 6d.; at ye dice, £17 5s.; for spiced wine (again), 4s. 6d.

And so on.

As I glanced my eye down this paper, my anger oozed away, and a great feeling of pity came over me, not only at the name of Anthony—the name I had heard spoken in the bowling green last night—but also to see that monstrous item of £17 odd spent on the dice. 'Twas such a boy, too, after all, that I was angry with, that had spent fourpence to see the rhinoceros at a fair, and rode at the ranter-go round) with "Marjory," no doubt, as 'twas for her, no doubt, the silver buttons were bought. So that, with quick forgiveness, I hurried after him, and laid a hand on his shoulder.

He stood by the entrance, counting up his money, and drew himself up very stiff.

"I think, sir," said I, "this paper is yours."

"I thank you," he answered, taking it and eying me. "Is there anything besides you wished to say?"

"A great deal, maybe, if your name be Anthony."

"Master Anthony Killigrew is my name, sir; now serving under Lord Bernard Stewart in his majesty's troop of guards."

"And mine is Jack Marvel," said I.

"Of the Yorkshire Marvels?"

"Why, yes; though but a shoot of that good stock, transplanted to Cumberland, and there sadly withered."

"'Tis no matter, sir," said he politely; "I shall be proud to cross swords with you."

"Why, bless your heart!" I cried out, full of laughter at this childish punctilio; "do ye think I came to fight you?"

"If not, sir"—and he grew colder than ever—"you are going a cursed roundabout way to avoid it."

Upon this, finding no other way out of it, I began my tale at once; but hardly had come to the meeting of the two men on the bowling green when he interrupts me politely.

"I think, Master Marvel, as yours is like to be a story of some moment, I will send this fellow back to my lodgings. He's a long eared dog that I am saving from the gallows for so long as my conscience allows me. The shower is done, I see; so if you know of a retired spot we will talk there more at our leisure."

He dismissed his lackey and strolled off with me to the Trinity grove, where, walking up and down, I told him all I had heard and seen the night before.

"And now," said I, "can you tell me if you have any such enemy as this white haired man with the limping gait?"

He had come to a halt, sucking in his lips and seeming to reflect.

"I know one man," he began; "but no—'tis impossible."

As I stood, waiting to hear more, he clapped his hand in mine, very quick and friendly. "Jack," he cried, "I'll call thee Jack—'twas an honest good turn thou hadst in thy heart to do me, and I a surly rogue to think of fighting—I that could make mince meat of thee."

"I can fence a bit," answered I.

"Now, say no more, Jack; I love thee."

He looked in my face, still holding my hand and smiling. Indeed, there was something of the foreigner in his brisk, grateful ways; yet not unpleasing. I was going to say I had never seen the like; ah, me! that both have seen and know the twin image so well.

"I think," said I, "you had better be considering what to do."

He laughed outright this time; and resting, with his legs crossed, against the trunk of an elm, twirled an end of his long lovelocks, and looked at me comically. Said he, "Tell me, Jack, is there aught in me that offends thee?"

"Why, no," I answered. "I think you're a very proper young man; such as I should loathe to see spoiled by Master Settle's knife."

"Art not quick at friendship, Jack, but better at advising; only in this case fortune has prevented thy good offices. Hark ye," he leaned forward and glanced to right and left, "if these twain intend my hurt—as indeed 'twould seem—they lose their labor, for this very night I ride from Oxford."

"And why is that?"

"I'll tell thee, Jack, though I deserve to be shot. I am bound with a letter from his majesty to the Army of the West, where I have friends, for my father's sake—Sir Deakin Killigrew, of Gleys, in Cornwall. 'Tis a sweet country, they say, though I have never seen it."

TO BE CONTINUED.

POPULAR AND PROSPEROUS.

Business men are glad that the PACIFIC BANK, of San Francisco, begins its twenty-eighth anniversary with the same reliable President, Dr. R. H. McDonald at the helm; this being sufficient guarantee that the liberal yet prudent policy which has made the Bank so popular and prosperous in the past will be the watchward in the future.

The Reno Journal says: W. Hargraves was engaged in planting currant bushes in the back yard of a lot on Second street Saturday and found, about six inches beneath the surface of the ground, a box about two feet long containing a coffin. He did not examine the contents, but the supposition is that it contained the body of an infant.

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED.

TO THE EDITOR—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy free to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their express and post-office address. Respectfully,

T. A. SLOCUM M. C., 181 Pearl St., New York.

The fact that riches have wings may be the reason that they enable a man to "fly high."

PROTECT YOUR HEALTH.

Cold and moisture combined have a torporising effect upon the bodily organs, and the digestive and secretive processes are apt to be more tardily performed in winter than in the fall. The same is true, also, of the excretory functions. The bowels are often sluggish, and the pores of the skin throw off but little waste matter at this season. The system, therefore, requires opening up a little, and also purifying and regulating, and the safest, surest and most thorough tonic and alterative that can be used for these purposes is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Persons who wish to escape the rheumatic twinges, the dyspeptic agonies, the painful disturbances of the bowels, the bilious attacks, and the nervous visitations, so common at this time of the year, will do well to reinforce their systems with this renowned vegetable stomachic and invigorant. It improves the appetite, strengthens the stomach, cheers the spirits, and renovates the whole physique.

One-half of real heroism consists of bravery, and the other half consists of not talking about it.

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Porterfield & Losey, 838 Market street, San Francisco.

Happiness can always be found in a dictionary.

Use Enameline Stove Polish; no dust, no smell.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.

No other baking powder does such work.

YOUNG MEN!

The Specific A No. 1 cures all unnatural discharges of Men, no matter of how long standing. Prevents strictures if taking as internal remedy. Cures when everything else has failed. Circular on application. Sold by Druggists, or sent on receipt of price by THE A. BOISKERET MEDICINE CO., San Jose, Cal.

PRICE $3.00

PISO'S REMEDY FOR CATARRH.—Best. Easiest to use. Cheapest. Relief is immediate. A cure is certain. For Cold in the Head it has no equal.

CATARRH

It is an Ointment, of which a small particle is applied to the nostrils. Price 50c. Sold by druggists or sent by mail. Address: E. T. HAZELTINE, Warren, Pa.

Beauty without neatness is a hook without a bait.

FAIR WOMEN should make their houses look fair with SAPOLIO. Try a cake in your next house-cleaning.

A SENSE OF DECENCY

Constrains many people to hide the dirt of their kitchens. They make the kitchen a secret chamber, into which it is forbidden to enter; but half the trouble which they take to hide the dirt and the disgrace which it entails, would keep the kitchen clean, and all its pots and pans bright as a dollar, that is, if they use

—SAPOLIO—

This Picture, Panel size, mailed for 4 cents.

J. F. SMITH & CO., Makers of "Bile Beans," 255 & 257 Greenwich St., N. Y. City.

CURE Biliousness, Sick Headache, Malaria.

BILE BEANS.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Proclaim the Victory

Remember last winter's siege. Recall how trying to health were the frequent changes of the weather. What was it that helped you win the fight with disease, warded off pneumonia and possibly consumption? Did you give due credit to SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda? Did you proclaim the victory? Have you recommended this wonderful ally of health to your friends? And what will you do this winter? Use Scott's Emulsion as a preventive this time. It will fortify the system against Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases (specially in Children). Palatable as Milk.

SPECIAL.—Scott's Emulsion is non-secret, and is prescribed by the Medical Profession all over the world, because its ingredients are scientifically combined in such a manner as to greatly increase their remedial value.

CAUTION.—Scott's Emulsion is put up in salmon-colored wrappers. Be sure and get the genuine. Prepared only by Scott & Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, New York. Sold by all Druggists.

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation permanently. For sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all druggists.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N. Y.

THE BEST — THE STRONGEST — THE PUREST

HOLMES' EXTRA SIFTED SALT PREPARED WITH NEW AND IMPROVED MACHINERY EXPRESSLY FOR BEST DAIRY AND TABLE USE. CHESHIRE ENGLAND

Many diseases are traceable to the use of impure salt. Much butter is spoiled by gritty particles and impurities in salt.

Will it pay you to risk the health of your family and the spoiling of your butter for the sake of saving the small difference in cost to you between the common salt and the BEST?

HOLMES' EXTRA SIFTED SALT is the best because it is the purest, it is the strongest and it is free from lime, pan scales, and any insoluble matter.

It needs no sifting, consequently does no waste, and being perfectly soluable five pounds will go as far as six or seven pounds of ordinary salt, without any danger of spoiling butter by gritty undissolved particles and impurities. No injury to health can result from the use of Holmes' Extra Sifted Salt.

Packed in sacks (24 lbs., 200 lbs., 100 lbs., 50 lbs., 10 lbs., 5 lbs. each; also in cartons of 4 lbs.

Ask your grocer for it, and take no other.

C. E. WHITNEY & CO., San Francisco, Sole Agents for the Pacific Coast.

BROOKLYN HOTEL Bush St., bet. Montgomery & Sansome, S. F.; conducted on both the European and American plan. This Hotel is under the management of Charles Montgomery, and is the best Family and Business Men's Hotel in San Francisco. Home comforts, cuisine unexcelled, first-class service, highest standard of respectability guaranted. Board and room, per day, $1.25 to $2.50; single room, 50 cts. to $1.00 per night. Free coach to and from the Hotel.

R. H. McDONALD PRES'T. ESTABLISHED 1863. Oldest Chartered Bank on the Pacific Coast. F. V. McDONALD, CASHIER. PACIFIC BANK. Capital Stock $1,000,000.00. Surplus $800,000.00. Av. Resources, $4,704,700.00. Yearly Volume of Business, $230,000,000.00. R. H. McDONALD, Prest. San Francisco, California, Jan'y 1, 1891.

Deposits Received from $1 Upward. Money Saved is Money Earned. PEOPLE'S HOME SAVINGS BANK. 808 Market St., cor. 4th St. IN FLOOD BUILDING. San Francisco, California. Deposits Invested in Savings Bank Bonds.

Guarantee Capital, $1,000,000. Paid up in Cash ..... $333,333.33. Subject to Call ..... 666,666.67. Interest per annum (5.52% on TERM Deposits for last three terms; 4.60% on ORDINARY Deposits). B. O. Carr, Manager and Sec'y. Columbus Waterhouse, President. San Francisco, California, Jan'y 1, 1891.

THE IDEAL OIL PUMP. BEST FAMILY ILLUMINATING OIL. INDISPENSIBLE TO HOUSEKEEPERS. Ask Your Dealer for it. Write for Circular. AMERICAN OIL CO., Agts. 11 to 15 Main St. San Francisco, California.

VASELINE.

FOR ONE DOLLAR sent us by mail, we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all the following articles carefully packed in a neat box:

One two-ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline	10 cts.
One two-ounce bottle Vaseline Pomade	15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream	15 "
One cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, scented	25 "
One two-ounce bottle of White Vaseline	25 "
	—$1.10

Or for stamps any single article at the price named. If you have occasion to use Vaseline in any form be careful to accept only genuine goods put up by us in original packages. A great many druggists are trying to persuade buyers to take VASELINE put up by them. Never yield to such persuasion, as the article is an imitation without value, and will not give you the result you expect. A bottle of Blue Seal Vaseline is sold by all druggists at ten cents.

Chesebrough M'f'g. Co., 24 State St., New York.

ASK SMITH'S CASH STORE

to send you their catalogue of cash prices, to consumers the

HOME CIRCLE.

Address as above. Mention this paper.

DO YOU WANT A PARTNER? YOU WANT TO BUY A BUSINESS? YOU WISH TO SELL YOUR BUSINESS?

We are incorporated Agents and propose giving our special attention to the forming of partnerships and the selling of business interests of every description. Investment Securities and City and County Real Estate for sale. Loans Negotiated. Call or address The Mercantile Agency & Investment Co., No. 16 Post Street, San Francisco. Will E. Fisher, Pres. Eugene G. Davis, V. Pres. Wm. S. Tevis, Treas. Alfred D. Hall, Sec'y.

THE SMOKER Will have no other Tobacco Who once tries "SEAL OF NORTH CAROLINA" Plug Cut. This is the secret of its Immense sale.

STEINWAY, Gabler and Pease Pianos Meaning the BEST PIANO MADE, and the favorite cheaper Pianos; all Musical Instruments; Bands Supplied; large stock of Sheet Music. STEINWAY HALL, 206 & 208 Post Street, MATTHIAS GRAY CO. Call and see our new rooms and new stock.

HAZELTON BROS., and HEMME & LONG PIANOS. Sold on Easy Installments. Also dealer in Sheet Music and Musical Merchandise. CHAS. S. EATON, General Agent, 753 Market St., S. F., Cal. Send for Catalogues of Pianos and Sheet Music.

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER CURED TO STAY CURED. A NEW DEPARTURE. WRITE TO HAROLD HAYES, M.D. BUFFALO, N.Y.

DROPSY TREATED FREE. Positively Cured with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured thousands of cases. Cure cases pronounced hopeless by best physicians. From first dose symptoms disappear; in ten days at least two-thirds all symptoms removed. Send for free book testimonials of miraculous cures. Ten days' treatment free by mail. If you order trial, send 10c. in stamps or pay postage. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Atlanta, Ga. If you order trial return this advertisement to us.

FOR MEN ONLY! VIGOR OF STRENGTH. For LOST or FAILING MANHOOD, General and NERVOUS DEBILITY; Weakness of Body and Mind, Effects of Errors or Excesses in Old or Young, Robust, Noble MANHOOD fully Restored. How to enlarge and Strengthen WEAK, UNDEVELOPED ORGANS & PARTS OF BODY. Absolutely unfailing HOME TREATMENT—Benefits in a day. Men testify from 50 States, and Foreign Countries. Write them. Descriptive Book, explanation and proofs sealed (sealed) free. Address ERIE MEDICAL CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

BIG G. Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Sold by Druggists. Or sent in plain wrapper, postpaid, for 50 cts. or 3 bottles, $1.00. Circular sent on request. THE EVANS CHEMICAL CO. CINCINNATI, O. U. S. A. Trade Mark. Big G is the acknowledged leading remedy for all the unnatural discharges and private diseases of men. A certain cure for the debilitating weakness peculiar to women. I prescribe it and feel safe in recommending it to all sufferers. A. J. STONER, M. D., DECATUR, ILL. Sold by Druggists. PRICE $1.00.

CAST YOUR OVER THIS.

SICK PEOPLE write for free illustrated family paper on surgical operations tumors, fistula, piles, varicocele, hydrocele, ruptures, deformities, female complaints; also, confidential book for men, explaining why thousands cannot get cured of special, private, chronic diseases, eyes, ears, lungs, seminal weakness, loss of manhood, gleet, syphilis, unnatural losses, results of abuse or excesses, which unfit all for marriage, happiness, or life's duties. DR. LIEBIG'S WONDERFUL GERMAN INVIGORATOR, the greatest remedy for above complaints. To prove its merits, $1 trial bottle sent free. Address, DR. LIEBIG & CO. 604 Geary St., San Francisco, Cal., or 601 W. 9th St., Kansas City, Mo.

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.,
FRIDAY, MAY 29, 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXII. NO. 50. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., MAY 29, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1074.

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.
One Year (post paid) $1
Six Months .....
Three Months .....
One Month .....
Single Copies .....

BRONCHITIS.

Symptoms and Treatment of the Affliction.

COUGH MIXTURES ARE INJURIOUS.

What to do in Case You Have not a Doctor.

During the winter season bronchitis is one of the most common affections. It is essentially an inflammation of the bronchial tubes, but it rarely occurs alone; the mucous membrane lining the throat and upper part of the windpipe are, as a rule, affected about the same time.

In the majority of cases an attack of bronchitis is preceded by a cold in the head. The inflammation, which starts in the nose, travels downward, affecting the throat more or less, and very soon enters the bronchial tubes. When those are reached there are added to the symptoms of a cold a sense of tightness and of soreness or rawness in the chest. Those unpleasant feelings are aggravated by the cough, which is at first dry, hacking and quite constant. As a rule, the person who is suffering from an attack of bronchitis is somewhat feverish, or, at least, inclined to be chilly. He has less appetite than usual, feels dull and heavy and disinclined to exertion. Those who have bronchitis generally complain of a dull, aching pain in the back and limbs.

The cough, which is at first dry and painful—as some say "tearing"—generally loosens up in from one to two days, and then the patient "raises" quite freely. The coughed up matters are generally of a yellowish or greenish color and salty taste; then they become quite yellow. As soon as the patient "raises" easily he is at once relieved; the pain and soreness disappear, and he goes rapidly on to recovery.

Acute bronchitis is usually caused by taking cold. If one is suddenly chilled, an attack is very likely to occur. By too severe and sudden cooling of the body the blood is driven from the surface to the internal organs. The lining membrane of the bronchial tubes is very easily congested in that way. Considering all things, it naturally follows that bronchitis is more prevalent after sudden changes in the weather and when the same is moist and cold.

When an attack of this disease comes on the sufferers who treat themselves, as a rule, direct their efforts entirely to stopping the cough, without giving much thought to the trouble that excites it.

The remedies which they usually take, while bringing, perhaps, some relief, yet more often do more harm than good, and really in the first stage of acute bronchitis there is seldom great need of what passes under the head of cough medicines.

While there is soreness or rawness in the chest, the patient should be confined to his bed and kept on a light diet.

Mustard poultices should be applied, morning and night, and left on until the pain from them is intolerable. After they are removed, a towel wrung out of warm water should be applied, and over that a dry one laid, and then several folds of flannel.

In the meantime, unless the cough is pleasant, there will scarcely be any need to give medicine for it, and certainly, if any are used, they should be wisely selected. Flaxseed tea is an excellent drink, having a soothing effect in such cases. It should be taken often and in considerable quantities each day.

If the patient is not under the care of a physician, and will not consult any, notwithstanding his cough is very troublesome, keeps him awake, etc., he might have put up at the druggist's a mixture of the sweet spirit of niter, paregoric and sirup of ipecac, of each one-half ounce. Of this mixture the dose for an adult is one teaspoonful, and it may be taken every two or three hours in a wine glass of water.

After two or three days, when the cough has become soft and loose, and the soreness and rawness in the chest has disappeared, then, instead of the medicine advised, the sirup of wild cherry bark should be taken, in teaspoonful doses, every three or four hours. If there is much to raise, it will be well to take also of the sirup of squills one-half a teaspoonful three or four times a day.

If one guards against exposure the affection is likely to subside quite rapidly; less and less is raised until finally the amount of secretion is near that in health and the cough disappears.—Yankee Blade.

Discrimination on Parallel Railroads.

But, without supposing that they were committing a crime, and as yet unconvinced of sin, these three railways, let us say, came together and determined to make a single rate to Chicago for all business received by each of the three lines; these receipts to be pooled and divided. Even had they proceeded upon a basis of the single actual receipts to each for solicited business, there could be no difference to the public either way; but they chose to consider the most complicated problem of a single tariff divided upon the items of expenditure, outlay and cost. What resulted? Simply that there was (as the interstate commerce law says there shall be) no discrimination. But when the interstate law, while keeping the word of promise to the ear by saying there should be no discrimination, broke it to the hope by saying there should be no pool, what resulted? Why, in the case of these three roads, a discrimination in favor of one-third against two-thirds! For, when each of these three roads makes its own tariff, of course, the road having the smallest fixed charges to pay makes the lowest rates. The dwellers along that line have the advantage of these low rates to which, of the other two railways, only one can approximate; while the third line must either go to the other extreme or defraud the holders of its securities.—Appleton Morgan in Popular Science Monthly.

Half Baby, Half Philosopher.

Horace Greeley bore his character in his face—half baby, half philosopher. The sweetest child that ever looked into its mother's eyes had not a more benevolent expression than his countenance habitually wore. The worst portrait does not quite obliterate it; the best renders it imperfectly. The politician who said, "A man who would hurt Horace Greeley would strike his own mother," roughly expressed the feeling which the child-like part of his face often excited. His voice, too, was the pipe of a child. But above the eyes there was such a noble dome of head that a Greek sculptor would have been glad to take it for the model of benevolent wisdom. His demeanor showed similar contrasts. From that baby face what torrents of bad words would come, with no more malice behind them than there is behind a child's vehement crying when some one has broken its toy. With a pen in his hand and a subject before him suited to his talents and disposition, as well as to the momentary needs of The Tribune, what editor ever wrote more effectively?—James Parton in Forum.

The Dead Came to Life.

A long lost brother, who was supposed to be dead, and on whose estate letters of administration were granted to his sister by Surrogate Rollings, of New York, in February, 1887, has turned up alive and healthy. Surrogate Ransom has revoked the letters, and the property, largely increased through his sister's careful management, has been restored to the man whose supposed death she had mourned. His name is Pierre E. Beauron, and his sister is Marie F. Jodrey. He was born in Switzerland forty-six years ago and came to this country when he was seven years old. He lived in Shohola, Pa., until 1863, when he started for Havana. He lived there three years, then started for the Pacific coast, and a few months later departed for Rio Janeiro, where he remained eighteen months. He next went to India and lived there four years. From there he went to Australia, where he lived nine years. Then he proceeded to Europe and remained in France seven months and in Spain seven months more. For over seven years prior to his return to Shohola his sister had not heard of him.—Buffalo News.

A Vote of Thanks.

A village in New England came into possession of a neat and much needed town hall, the gift of public spirited citizens. When completed a meeting was held to dedicate the new building. Speeches were made by prominent citizens, and special reference was naturally made to the chief benefactor and to those who had been most active in forwarding the enterprise.

One speaker mentioned the names of five or six of these citizens, and suggested that a vote of thanks be tendered them. This was done.

A moment later a little wizen faced old man arose in the back part of the hall, and, in a sharp, penetrating voice, called:

"Mr. Cheerman! Mr. Cheerman!"

The speaker being recognized, he proceeded:

"I jist wanted to say that there's them ez hain't been mentioned ez hez done ez much ez them ez hez."—Youth's Companion.

She Carried Him Off.

A charming old lady, worth her millions, called at a carpenter shop the other day, bearing in her hand a neat little basket. "Have you a comfortable chair in the shop?" she asked of the carpenter.

"A comfortable chair?" he repeated, doubtfully.

"Yes," she sweetly said. "I have come to stay until you have a man ready to go back to my house with me and do the work that you have been promising to do for three weeks. I have brought my luncheon and a book, and, if you haven't a comfortable chair, I'll have the carriage cushions brought in. I'm going to stay right here until I get that man."

The carpenter hastened to say that he could go right off just as well as not, and the old lady carried him off in triumph.—Boston Paper.

An Interesting Case.

The payment of an insurance policy of $5,000 on the life of "Doc" Haggerty, a teamster, who was so thoroughly blown away by the explosion of a wagon load of nitro-glycerine which he was driving, near Pleasantville, Pennsylvania, that not more than a pound of his body was found, is being disputed by the companies interested, on the ground that such utter annihilation was impossible even with so powerful an explosive. They claim that the "remains" found are no proof that Haggerty is dead. Interesting testimony is being gathered to show that nitro-glycerine has proved at times more of an eraser of human identity than the Pleasantville incident would indicate.—Harper's Bazar.

His Uncle's Nephew.

The present head of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Henry Bergh, is the nephew of the founder of the society. He is a slender man, under the medium height, with something of the cast of features of his great relative, though his face is smaller. He was elected by the executive committee of the directors, and has literally stepped into the founder's shoes, working all of every day at his office, and taking as keen an interest in the humane mission of the society as the original Bergh did. He is a little above 35 years of age.—New York Star.

Small Houses in Philadelphia.

One family of about five persons to a dwelling is the usual Philadelphia rule. Taking that as the average, Philadelphia built dwelling houses in 1888 for 7,673 families, or 38,365 people. That the love of home—a separate dwelling for each family—holds its own in Philadelphia is shown by the increased proportion of two story dwellings erected in 1888, nearly 6,000 of these little houses, provided with "modern conveniences," having been erected during the year.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Man Eating Shark.

Fishing schooner Northern Eagle brought into this port a large man eating shark of the shovel nose species. This shark, which is very uncommon in northern waters, was caught in a vessel's trawls while set in Ipswich bay. The monster is twelve feet in length and nine feet in circumference and weighs about 1,500 pounds.—Portsmouth (N. H.) Special.

Professionals.

First Base—Were you at Shortstop's marriage last week?

Second Base—Yes.

F. B.—Who was the umpire?—Boston Courier.

ARTIFICIAL FERTILIZERS.

The Wonderful Improvements in Them

DURING THE PAST THIRTY YEARS.

Substitutes for Guano.—A Giant Industry.

Among the other titles to distinction which the Nineteenth century is hereafter to enjoy, one will be found in the fact that in that age agriculture first began to be pursued in a systematic manner with the aid of scientific research. Manuring with the products of the barnyard is a very ancient art, but the resort to the mine for fertilizers is substantially an invention of our own times. Chemists first told the farmer the cause of the frequent speedy exhaustion in the grain producing powers of the soil; it has fallen to the geologist to show whence may be obtained the phosphatic element which is the most quickly exhausted of all the elements of plant food in process of cropping.

Although artificial fertilizers are practically the invention of the last thirty years, the industries connected with their manufacture now demand a capital of about $100,000,000, with an annual product of about that amount, and the volume of the industries is increasing more rapidly, perhaps, than any other art which pertains to mining. The use of artificial fertilizers grew out of the trade in guano. These heaps of bird dung were first made use of by the Peruvians. The account of Garcilasco de la Vega, published in 1604, relates that the Peruvians in the Twelfth century used guano beds as a source of fertilizers. Of such importance did they esteem the material of these beds that the penalty of death was imposed by the early Incas upon any one found killing the birds which made these precious deposits.

For many years the guano beds of the western coast of South America and other similar deposits within the tropical region supplied the demands of our gardens. As the supply of these guanos approached exhaustion and the price increased, the skill of chemists and geologists showed the manufacturers where to find and how to treat deposits of mineral phosphates in such a manner that they might substantially serve to replace the manures of animal origin. In bulletin No. 46, of the United States geological survey, Dr. R. A. F. Penrose, Jr., now assistant state geologist of Texas, has given an important treatise on phosphate deposits, and although his report mainly concerns the phosphates of North America, it gives a synoptic account of the known beds of this nature in all parts of the world. The report makes it plain that only a small part of the deposits of this nature are yet known to us.

The process of discovery of these valuable resources is now, and for a long time will be, slow, and this for the reason that the material occurs in forms which are unfamiliar to the public or even to the ordinarily trained prospector who seeks for mineral resources. In most cases the material appears either in the form of greenish crystals or in the shape of nodular masses looking much like claystones. In neither of these shapes is it likely to attract general attention. In fact the great deposits at Charleston, S. C., had been in view for a century or more. Concretions of cerne phosphate were dug up in the ditches of the rice fields and condemned as worthless until after the war, when a native chemist, once a man of fortune, but brought to need by the havoc wrought upon that country during the rebellion, groping about to find some means of mending his resources, analyzed the rejected stones. As the result of his inquiry they became the very foundation of the commercial prosperity in his state.—N. S. Shaler in Boston Herald.

A Diamond in the Fire.

There is a very unhappy young maiden at the branch telephone exchange at Hunt and Broadway. She was presented by her affianced with a diamond engagement ring, which cost $125. Proud of the jewel, she was exhibiting it to her companion at the exchange, and from one to the other the ring went clear along the line of operators seated at their respective tables, and admired by all of them. Arriving at the upper end of the line, the young lady who last examined it wrapped it up in a small piece of paper, and, calling the check boy, handed it to him, thinking that he knew that it belonged to Miss ——, and that he would hand it to her.

The boy walked to the stove and tossed the valuable little package into the fire. One of the rules of the exchange requires the young ladies, when they sharpen their lead pencils, to gather up the chips in a little paper, call the check boy and have them thrown in the stove.

In the case of the diamond ring, the check boy took it for granted that the package handed him was the pencil chips and tossed it in the stove, in which at the time there was a red hot fire.

Every effort was made to find the ring, but not even the diamond has been recovered. The engaged young girl is inconsolable.—Cincinnati Telegram.

George's Timely Interruption.

"No, George," faltered the maiden, "I fear it cannot be. I admire you as a gentleman, I respect you as a friend, but"——

"Laura," he exclaimed, "before you pass sentence hear me out. A recent lucky stroke in business has enabled me to buy a beautiful home on Prairie avenue, which shall be in your name. I will insure my life for $25,000, and"——

"George," calmly interposed the lovely girl, "you interrupted me. I was about to say that the sentiments of respect and esteem I feel for you, though so strong, are feeble in comparison with the deep love which—which I—which I have long—don't, George, dear!"

For George had interrupted her again.—Chicago Tribune.

GEN. BEN BUTLER'S "SPOONS."

His Story on the Witness Stand Concerning the Famous Silverware.

Gen. Benjamin F. Butler was on the witness stand in Washington the other day in a case brought in the court of claims by the heirs of Gen. David E. Twiggs, of New Orleans, to recover the value of certain property taken by the United States during the military occupation of that city in 1862. Among the property was some silverware, of which the famous spoons constitute a part—the spoons of which so much has been said and so little has been known for twenty-five years.

Gen. Butler has, of course, previously denied that he ever transferred any property in New Orleans to his own pocket, but this is the first time, we believe, that he has been enabled to make a detailed statement under oath as to the disposal of the silverware of which those celebrated spoons formed a part.

After reciting the circumstances of his occupation of the Twiggs mansion, Gen. Butler deposes that when he was relieved of his command he asked his successor, Gen. Banks, to appoint a property commission, which he did. An inventory was then taken of all the property that Gen. Butler and his agents had, and it was turned over to Gen. Banks and a receipt taken for it. As to the particular parcel containing the spoons, Gen. Butler says:

"There is but one article that I have any distinct remembrance of which was in my personal possession. The part of this property not in use was stored in the custom house, where there were large vaults, and among it was a tin box of jewelry, with a most ordinary lock upon it. My property agents at the time brought it to me and said it was very valuable; the custom house vaults were open to everybody and it might be carried off. I thereupon took it from him, sealed it up carefully with the ring which I then wore upon my finger and still wear, and put it into my own safe, and when this inventory was taken I had it receipted for in the words found in the receipt: 'One tin box containing jewelry, sealed.' This property all went into the actual possession of Capt. McClure before I left New Orleans. My property agent had to remain behind to settle up various matters, and I directed him to see to it that the chief quartermaster signed the receipt, which he did on the 1st of January, 1863.

"I have no further personal knowledge of what became of the property."

This particular and detailed statement, made under oath in a United States court, may be presumed to settle finally the once vexed question of what Gen. Butler did with those spoons.—New York Mail and Express.

A Granger in a Big Hotel.

"We had a funny incident only last week. A granger from Indiana strayed into the house and said he'd like to stop until the night train went out. That was just before the dinner hour. When meal time was announced the man from Indiana advanced to the counter and asked where the sink was. I knew what he wanted, and waved my hand in the direction of the washroom. He started off, and in about a minute I heard loud laughter from the people outside in the corridor. On looking out I saw my country friend busily engaged in washing his face at the drinking fountain. I hastened to him to inform him that he had made a mistake, but he met me before I could reach the spot. He presented a ludicrous sight. The water was dripping from his face, head and hands, while his hat, coat and vest lay in a heap on a chair near the fountain. It was too funny, and I, too, joined in the laughter. The old fellow appeared perplexed, but managed to stammer out: 'Whar do ye keep yer towel?' One of the porters then took pity on the old man and led him to the place he wanted, where he finished his toilet. Yes, we see all kinds of people in a hotel, and have some queer experiences," concluded the clerk, as he turned to hand out some writing material to a guest.—Chicago News.

One of New Mexico's Buried Towns.

A few days ago two prospectors, while wandering over the foothills east of the city, accidentally stumbled on signs of previous habitation buried under heaps of sand which had been drifted by the winds of years. Having selected a point at which to make an excavation, they went to work with a will, and in a few hours had reached the floor of a small chamber in the form of a parallelogram. They found the remains of several human beings, several handsome vases carved with geometrical figures in different colors, stone axes, hammers, pieces of cloth apparently manufactured from the fibre of the yucca; several strings of beads, sea shells, arrow heads and an abundance of fragments of obsidian quartz, and an incredible quantity of pieces of broken pottery, including several with a blue glazing. Only in one other instance have we ever heard of this color and quality of ware having been discovered in this territory, and that was at the ancient pueblo near the Santa Rita, in this country, and it indicates that the Spaniards had lived in New Mexico before the extinction of the race who inhabited this ruined and buried village.—Socorro Bullion.

Four Styles of Canal Boats.

It requires intellect to build a canal boat, even if it doesn't seem so. A canal boat never hurries, and people who think they know everything believe that speed is the only thing that requires meditation. Canal boats are built for what they can hold.

There are four styles of them—bullheads, lake boats, scows, steamboats and consorts. The bullhead is the everyday canal boat which impedes the ferries. The laker is a size larger, and can stand a sea. The scow is an old acquaintance, but the steamboats and consorts are new. They have come to revolutionize boating and banish the mule.

There are 3,900 canal boats in commission on the state canals. They keep about 1,400 men and boys busy during the season, and pay them $15 to $36 a month and feed. Boats travel as a rule doubled up—that is, with their two teams pulling both boats.—New York Sun.

You Can't Make Death Cheerful.

"No," said a Brooklyn undertaker, "I can't say that any one has adopted a wreath of flowers as a death signal, as did the Beecher family. You should think it would become fashionable? Well, it might. There are fashions in everything, even undertaking. The idea is right and beautiful, but it isn't likely to grow. You can't make death cheerful. The Chinese are the only people who do. White's their mourning color and flowers and feasts accompany their funerals. They think a man's life only begins when it ends—if that's not too Irish for you. But this country's different. The big knots of black that flutter from bell knobs are not going to vanish yet, and won't this side of the millennium. Yet I'd rather hang up flowers than crape."—New York Sun.

THE WOMEN OF MANILA.

They are Very Handsome and Intelligent.

THEY DRESS PRETTILY, BUT DO NOT LACE

Experts at the Sewing Machine and in Making Toys.

Perhaps one of the most interesting studies in this part of the world is the native and the development of his racial features. Those who are given to the study of physiognomy are impressed at once with the intellectual superiority of the female native over the male. She shows it plainly in her face and manner, and when she speaks it is even more unmistakably apparent. As a rule the native women are modest, industrious, anxious to acquire a knowledge of languages, and make most excellent house servants. They are very expert with the needle and learn music with scarcely an effort; in fact the whole race is naturally musical, and there are probably more really excellent brass bands in Manila than in any other city of its size on the face of the earth. Nearly every district has its brass band, and each regiment of soldiers has one that would do credit to any country. That attached to the artillery regiment received the first prize at the last Paris exposition, and several cities in the orient have bands of natives of the Philippines who furnish the best music to be had.

EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN.

Some years ago sewing machines were introduced here and the native women very soon learned to run them as easily as any white woman. Now no well regulated household is completely equipped without a sewing machine and a native woman to run it. An excellent seamstress can be had for twenty cents a day, and nearly every European family has one the year round. Of course, they lose quite a number of days, as the church feasts are numerous and they are most devout in their religious duties; they never work when there is a chance to go to church, so that, taking it altogether, they probably are paid for less than two-thirds of the year.

They live in their own homes—little nipa huts, with one or two rooms—and are in the houses of their employers from about 8 a. m. to 5:30 or 6 p. m. Large numbers of the native women work in the tobacco factories and other manufacturing establishments about the city, while many of them occupy themselves at home, making toys, fancy articles and embroidery for the shops. Some of their toys are very curious and give evidence of wonderful dexterity and delicacy of touch, and are quite as valuable as curios as those of the Chinese or Japanese. Full sets of dolls' furniture, ships, houses, native canoes, carriages, etc., are reproduced in miniature with great expertness and are sold at very low prices.

STREETS FULL OF BEAUTIES.

The natives are a branch of the Malay race, and none are much darker than a very dark brown. They have some of the characteristics of the American Indian, among which are the high cheek bones, which, however, are not as a rule prominent in the female face. A native belle has a bright, expressive face, soft black eyes full of animation, and a mouth that would be beautiful but for a suggestion of sensuality. Yet she is modest and drops her eyes bashfully in the presence of strangers, but has for her intimate friends a smile fascinating in the extreme. And there are many such faces among the natives; one can see them at almost any hour of the day on the streets selling goods of various kinds, returning to or from their places of employment or peeping coyly out of the one window of a nipa hut. These girls are never tall nor awkward, but their forms are just as nature made them, for they are not distorted and deformed by the fashionable dress appliances of civilized life. They are ignorant of the ways of the western world, are guileless and confiding, and it is not strange, considering the class of foreigners who usually come to this far off place, that the Eurasian, or half cast element, is constantly growing.

What would be called Eurasians in other parts of the east are called Mestizos or Mestizas; that is, the offspring of white fathers and native mothers. A fair type of the Spanish Mestiza dress, which is peculiar to this class, consists of a long skirt of heavy silk and a waist and neckkerchief made of the fibers of the pineapple plant and embroidered with white silk linen or cotton. This costume is calculated to greatly enhance the attractiveness of the face and neck, and therefore the Mestizas as a class have a reputation for beauty which they probably would not have if they wore European attire. Some of the skirts are beautifully painted and embroidered and cost fabulous sums, for there are many very wealthy people among the Mestizo class, who, although they could not be welcomed in the best society, form an aristocracy of their own, which is very exclusive.—Manila Letter in St. Louis Republic.

Street Signs in New York.

"What earthly reason is there for street lamps bearing the names of streets to become so depraved that they turn around and deceive innocent strangers?"

The question was asked by an indignant Philadelphian. He was standing at the corner of William and Pine streets. The signs on the lamp indicated with steady malevolence that William was Pine and that Pine was William.

"Every time I come to New York these mendacious lamps mix me up," went on the Philadelphian. "We wouldn't stand it in Philadelphia," he said proudly.

A policeman who was standing by listened to the annoyed gentleman's words and grinned.

"There ain't no earthly reason for it," he said. "It's spooks."

Related to the Whole Crowd.

She was a large, muscular woman with strong features that indicated plainly her prominence in the domestic circle, and he was a little, thin, weak eyed, meek faced man who only came to her shoulders. They sat side by side in a street car, totally oblivious of each other, as long married folks often are. They attracted the attention of two smart young men directly opposite them.

"How funny they must have looked as they stood up to be married," said one. "He must have looked like a lamb led to the slaughter." "Oh," said the other, "he was probably as large as she was in those days. Don't you know a henpecked man actually grows smaller under continued hectoring?" Just then the little man took his market basket from under the seat and left the car alone. She had overheard them, and in anything but dulcet tones she hissed: "Do you think I own any more of these people 'cause I happen to be on the same seat? You thought he was my husband 'cause he sat next me; d'ye think the rest of 'em are my relations too? Mebbe you're my second cousins 'cause you're in the same car?" She was wound up for several blocks further, but the loquacious individuals left the car without waiting to investigate any relationship.—Chicago Journal.

Who Owns the Photograph?

Justice North's decision in a London court that private photographs are private property is a reassertion, or rather a natural application, of a principle which should be familiar. Unscrupulous photographers have claimed the right to sell and exhibit photographs of their customers against their will, and there have been legal opinions confirming this extraordinary view. Thus it has been held that the employment and payment of a photographer to reproduce the features of a private person, for the latter's private purposes, gave the photographer a right to use the negative for the publication of photographs for public sale. Justice North, however, declares the photographer wholly in the wrong, and aptly says that while the negative belongs to the photographer the copyright is vested in the person photographed. This eminently sensible decision should check a practice common abroad. Fortunately, this evil has been less prevalent here, although it exists, and American courts, we believe, have decided that the photographer has no right to make merchandise of the likenesses of private customers.—Frank Leslie's Newspaper.

His First Sermon.

A bright young friend of mine who is working his way through the Bates Theological school, and who will some day be a worthy, and, as I believe, a successful worker in the Christian ministry, relates his first experience in "supplying": "I was pretty hard up, and that means considerable to me, for I have never had any troublesome 'surplus' during my course. It looked as if I would have to drop out a while and earn something before I could go on, and I had about concluded to canvass for a book when I got my first chance to supply. You may be sure I accepted it thankfully, for to my mind it promised needed financial aid. The church was some miles out of the city, but I didn't mind that. The next Sunday I hired a livery team and drove out there and delivered my best sermon, and after taking dinner with one of the good deacons, started for home with the contents of the contribution box, which amounted to $1.50. My bill at the livery stable amounted to $2.25, so that I was just 75 cents out of pocket by my first appearance in the pulpit."—Augusta (Me.) Journal.

The Slaughter at Khyber Pass.

One of the most terrible, as it is also one of the most thrilling, tales that history has to tell is recalled by the announcement in the Scottish papers of Miss Edith Brydon's marriage in Inverness cathedral. This lady's father was the famous Dr. Brydon, of the Afghan massacre of January, 1842—the one survivor who, wounded and faint and weary, after a most perilous ride, reached Jellalabad to tell Gen. Sale the piteous story of what had taken place in the Khyber Pass. They were 16,000—or, counting women and children, 26,000—who set out from Cabul on that ill starred journey, and he was the only one who had escaped. Between the dark crags of Jugdullak the murderous Afghans had their fill of blood. The death trap ran with the gore of soldiers, camp followers, women and children alike. Dr. Brydon alone escaped.—New York Telegram.

Boston's Principal Street.

An Omaha man recently arrived in Boston at the Boston and Albany station. The streets of his native city are laid out with regularity, it is well to state, and are of a width commensurate with western lavishness. The man from Omaha entered a hack and asked to be driven to one of the leading down town hotels. The driver proceeded, as had been his wont for years, and had nearly reached his destination when these words from the carriage window greeted him with considerable force and abruptness: "Look here, driver; I'm tired of being driven through all these alleys. You've done nothing but go through them ever since we started. Now, get right on to one of the boulevards so we can get ahead." The driver had enough self possession to stammer in reply: "Why, sir, this is Washington street, our principal street."—Boston Times.

Disconcerting a Witness.

Sir James Scarlett, when practicing at the bar, one day had to examine a witness whose evidence promised to be damaging unless he could be previously confused. The only vulnerable point of the man was said to be his self esteem. The witness, a portly, overdressed person, went into the box and Scarlett took him in hand. "Mr. John Tompkins, I believe?" "Yes." "You are a stock broker?" "I ham." Scarlett regarded him attentively for a few moments, and then said, "And a very fine, well dressed ham you are, sir." The shout of laughter which followed completely disconcerted Mr. Tompkins, and the lawyer's point was gained.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Life in a Nevada Mining Town.

The Virginia City Enterprise gives this picture of life in the mining towns of Nevada. A party of ladies and gentlemen in Sutro wanted to attend the theatre in Virginia City. Starting at the mouth of the Sutro tunnel, at their own doors, they traveled four miles under the mountains to the C. and C. shaft, and then, dismounting from the cars, they boarded the cages in the shaft and were shot upward to the surface, a vertical distance of 1,640 feet, coming out within a stone's throw of the ticket office.

FIELD AND FARM.

Suggestions That are Invaluable to the Farmer.

NOTES ON FRUIT DRYING.

The Orchardist Will Find Matter That Will Interest Him.

In the first place we will state that it is useless to attempt to make first class dried fruit from inferior or even ordinary fresh fruit. To be more explicit, no man wishes to produce a high grade dried fruit, and it should be the aim of every orchardist to do this), then we claim he must begin way back in the early stages of the fruit's growth, in the early spring, we were about to say; but we will go further back into the previous summer when the fruit buds are forming, and say give them good care then, and all the time the trees are in a growing condition until the fruit ripens.

The unreasonable practice of making fruit trees take care of themselves from the time the season's fruit is gathered, until the next spring, may do for those who are willing to take up with a small crop of inferior fruit but the progressive orchardist who wishes to get the best returns for his labor, is willing to do his part of the work, and Mother Nature seldom fails to reward him generously for his pains.

To illustrate this subject more fully, we happen to be acquainted with a painstaking fruit grower who had just turned out as fine a lot of dried apricots as this section affords, and this is how it came about: In the first place, his soil is well adapted to this variety of fruit; next he was wise enough, or fortunate enough to plant the varieties which are known to do best on the Lugonia soil—Hemskirk and Royal. These trees had good care all through the growing season, and when the fruit ripened he did not attempt to clean the trees at one picking, as some have been known to, but went over them carefully every other day, as the case required, picking only such as were fully ripe and well grown and as a result, when the fruit was dried, it was regular in size, well-colored and transparent; qualities which the experienced buyer readily recognizes and is willing to pay the highest price for.

The picking of fruit at the right time, is of more importance than most people seem to imagine, and the careless practice of pulling off green, ripe and overripe fruit at the same time, and putting it all into the same box, should not be tolerated by those who buy the crops for drying. We have found it a good rule in picking fruit to take only such as we would select for eating fresh from the tree. If this rule was followed, the dried fruit market would soon be rid of the black unsightly pieces, which overripe and partially decayed fruit is pretty apt to make, and of the pale, brownish specimens which are sure to result from drying green or half ripened fruit. These failings may have been excusable years ago, for want of experience, but the time has come when the man who produces the best fruit will get the best price, while the careless or indifferent grower will find it difficult to dispose of his fruit at any price.—C. H. Lathrop.

THE CURLED LEAF.

The curled leaf (Ascomyces deformans), a fungus too well known to most peach growers, has been given several generic names, but is, perhaps, best known as Ascomyces. It is now mature, and producing the countless spores which give a glaucous bloom to the distorted leaves. No remedy has been found which promises relief from its ravages, and a circumstance lately observed leads me to fear that its extirpation will be attended by an unexpected difficulty.

At several times during the past few years, leaves and twigs of buckeye (Æsculus Californica) have reached me, which were covered with an Ascomyces, practically indistinguishable from A. deformans, the only difference observed being, perhaps, a slightly more regular narrowing of the asci toward the base. All the specimens sent me, and all that have been observed, so far as I know, have come from the vicinity of infected peach trees. The localities noted are Salmon Falls, El Dorado county; Mormon Island, Sacramento county; San Gregorio Creek, San Mateo county; Scott Creek, near Santa Cruz; and Wildwood Glen, near Saucelito.

The fungus affects the buckeye somewhat differently from the peach. The infected tree usually has one or more rather dense bunches of small twigs, often one or two feet in diameter, the whole mass profoundly diseased, the mycelium ramifying to such an extent that the tender leaves are most frequently killed before the fungus matures, and the mass looks as if it had been dipped in boiling water or killed by a sharp frost. The mycelium evidently persists for years in these twigs and small branches, producing annually a crop of diseased leaves, and does not penetrate to the harder and older wood, for in that case it would be generally diffused. There are usually, besides these diseased bunches, scattered spots of infection upon the leaves in other parts of the tree. The difference in the action of the fungus is probably due to the very brief life of the buckeye leaves. In this State they usually fall in the early summer, the bare, white stems which form a conspicuous feature in so many of our hillside landscapes remaining leafless until the following April. The leaves are thus very apt to fall before the ramifying mycelium reaches the twig; this foot also lessens the danger of their infecting other trees.

The absolute identity of the buckeye Ascomyces with that of the peach can only be proved by a series of direct infections of healthy trees. In the meantime we trust our horticultural friends will pay some attention to their buckeyes, and furnish us notes as to the extent to which it prevails in various localities.—H. W. Harkness, in Zoe.

Judge Carpenter refused permission to General Butler to address him while on the Bench at Boston. This was due to the fact that outside the court-room Butler has so ridiculed the Judge and his rulings that it would have insured any one less distinguished arrest for contempt.

W. M. Fortescue, late a candidate for Mayor of Leavenworth, Kan., attacked Colonel Anthony on the streets. The latter had not supported the latter during the canvass. Neither was severely injured.

...DEPENDENT.

...Mulholland,
...TOR & PROPRIETOR.
...ISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
...AY, MAY 29 1891

...failures in monetary and ...ring circles continue in the ...e financial situation is far ...ring in the East, and there ...und for the general uneasi... ...pervades the country, and is ...d by the overflow of gold and ...ondition of the Federal treas...

...Washington correspondent of ...York Press, in an article re... ...he progress of reciprocity ne... ...alludes to the satisfactory ...ained in the Brazilian, ...d Venezuelan treaties, and ...As soon as the Chilean Gov... ...becomes stable the conference between Secretary Blaine and her Minister here will be renewed. A result as gratifying as that reached with Brazil is anticipated. Bolivia, Peru, the Argentine Republic, Ecuador and the rest of the Latin-American confederations have commercial agreements with the United States under consideration. Within a year, it seems safe to predict, many, if not all, of these will be consummated."

Regarding the Immigration Commission about to be sent to Europe, Secretary Foster explains that its purpose is to gather from our Consuls and all other sources as much information as possible on the subject of immigration. He alludes in terms of condemnation to the disposition of officials in many European districts to shift their burdens on this country, and, as in the Chinese invasion, finds the greatest objection arises from the "tramp" steamer traffic. He suggests that if these tramp steamers were obliged to carry back occasionally 50 or 60 per cent of the number of immigrants brought over a stop might be put to the practice.

That was a fearful cyclone that swept away a little settlement near Mexico, Missouri, on Wednesday. When a cyclone lifts up an iron roller, weighing 1200 pounds, and breaks it in pieces we need not marvel that men and women were caught in its wild embrace and dashed to death against flying houses and uprooted trees; nor that a baby was snatched from its father's arms and carried half a mile away. But the wonder is that the infant seems to have escaped with its life. This deadly cyclone is, as far as heard from, responsible for killing outright some fifteen people and maiming many others. How thankful ought the people of this section be when they contemplate such fatal visitations from a land that is exempt from fatal cyclones and destructive tornadoes!

Mashonaland, which the Boers desire to possess, is described by Sir John Willoughby as a country of wonderful fertility, which yields corn, sweet potatoes, beans and tobacco in abundance under the most primitive agricultural methods. There are thousands of square miles of fine grazing land. There is plenty of timber, water is everywhere, the climate is a good one and lovely scenery greets the eye in all directions. Possession of this fine stretch of African territory is not likely to be given up without a struggle. The British Chartered Company has already built forts, laid down railways and opened up telegraphic communication. They have the advantage of possession, but the Boers are of a very aggressive disposition and have not forgotten the successes of the Transvaal.

The Mayor of New Orleans spoke to the Italian offenders brought before him the other day with justifiable severity. When he told them that their threats and attempts to dominate and rule by terrorism would not be tolerated, and that the authorities of the city would use every means afforded them by the law to crush all such offendings and drive out conspirators and terrorizing agencies of hatred and malice, he spoke as became the Executive of the municipality. It was infinitely better than to appeal to the mob spirit and to complain that the law is unequal to its own vindication. Such declarations as the Mayor made on the occasion referred to will tend to discourage resort to violence, and to inspire the people with confidence in the law and in the power of its agencies to protect them and punish offenders.

...os Angeles is in some danger of ... the reputation which she has ...quired of being a law-abiding ...ing the last four days we ...wo sensational murders, ..., in the back room of the Carleton saloon, night before last, is mysterious in the extreme. According to the most careful investigation, the crime must have been committed about nine or half past nine o'clock, in a little cardroom adjoining the billiard room, which was crowded during the entire evening and up to the time of the discovery of the body. This apartment was being constantly passed and repassed by the patrons of the saloon. Miller could even be heard to snore. And yet there was apparently no intimation of the deadly incident to any one on the outside. Two mysterious disappearances complete the record of the four days.

Chinese Ideas About God.

A young lady who teaches Sunday school lessons to two Chinese boys in an Episcopal church on Fifth avenue, speaking of her work, said: "My two sons of the Flowery Kingdom can speak but little English, but I really think they have a good idea of Christ and his mission on earth. They seem very apt at learning, and kneel and stand up at the proper time during church services. Both of them wear queues, though, and would not part from them for any consideration. It took me a long time to make them understand that Christ was divine. They imagined I had reference merely to his goodness. At first they imagined he was an idol that had been found over eighteen hundred years ago at Bethlehem, in Judea, and had been buried, after being exposed on the cross, and then stolen and hidden by those who worshipped the idol. It was hard to get them away from the Joss idea.

"They speak English so imperfectly I think that is a drawback to their rapid advancement. One of them asked me if God was buried in Judea, as well as his son. When I explained that they lived above the clouds an incredulous look came upon the boys' faces, and one said, 'Melican men hab tings way up.' I could not deny that we worshipped a being far above us, but all around us. How long did it take me to make them understand the divinity of Christ? Well, nearly four years. They are bright boys."—New York Herald.

The Average Man.

One of the most galling tyrannies of modern life is that of the "average man." Who ever saw the average man? Is any one acquainted with any one who ever did? Has any one any reason to believe that the average man ever existed? The fact of the matter is that the average man is a myth. He never did and never will exist. He is a philosophical abstraction, a stage property of the metaphysician, a straw man set up to be worshiped or reviled, as the case may be. Yet people always bow down to him and talk in whispers about his thoughts, his moods, his needs and desires. They are rejoiced when he is supposed to smile, and are cast down when he frowns.

Statisticians burn the midnight oil in order to "do sums" about him. Statesmen give up their lives to his service. Political economists look solemn as they take his measure. Physicians explain how he may keep well, and preachers adjust the message of the gospel to his comprehension. Yet, of all the myriads of men who have ever lived each one differs more or less from the supposed average man. Who will deliver the world from the tyrannical rule of the average man? —Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

A Doomed Duet.

Singers who "murder" music are usually considered more guilty than the music is. The provoked Cincinnati judge was not blaming the music, however, when he turned the metaphor the other way.

His daughter and a young gentleman caller frequently indulge in tuneful vocal practice over the piano, and when they get together in the parlor the judge gets in as remote a part of the house as possible in order to avoid what he terms the uproar. One evening they had been even more devoted than usual to their music, and on the following morning the judge inquired of his daughter:

"What on earth was all that racket you and your caller were making in the parlor last evening?"

"Why, papa, Sam and I were trying a new duet."

"Trying a new duet, were you? Well, from what I heard I should judge that you found it guilty and inflicted the heaviest penalty on it."—New York Times.

An Old New Orleans Custom.

If you have plenty time to loaf and observe everything that passes before your gaze you will notice on nearly every post in the French quarters there are little hand bills tacked up and bearing the heading "Decede." Beneath this there is additional printing, all, however, in French. These are death notices, which seemed to be used instead of the newspapers to announce the invincible hand. They state the hour of the funeral, etc., and the name of the deceased.

As a general thing these notices are tacked up all over the French section in an hour after the person has died. I noticed several upon which the printers' ink had scarcely dried, and which announced the demise of some unfortunate which had taken place only a few minutes before.—New Orleans Cor. Richmond Dispatch.

Neatly Caught.

The following is told of a judge before whom a man was being tried for stealing a gold watch from a woman as she was entering a 'bus. The man declared the watch was his, and the woman was mistaken in identifying it as hers. Suddenly the judge asked:

"Where's the key?"

The prisoner fumbled in his pockets, and said he must have left it at home. The judge asked him if he wound the watch frequently with the key, and he said "Yes."

Then a key was procured, watch and key were handed to the prisoner, and he was told to wind the watch. He opened the case but could not find any place to use the key, because the watch was a keyless one. The sentence was five years.—London Tit-Bits.

The Thoughtful Manager.

Mrs. De Style (in theatre box)—What was this placard, "No Loud Talking," put in our box for?

Mrs. Forundred (after reflection)—I presume the manager left it here so we could show it to the people on the stage when their chatter interrupts our conversation.—New York Weekly.

A GRAVEYARD DANCE.

GHOSTLY CEREMONY WITNESSED IN A JAPANESE CEMETERY.

A Four Days' Feast for Legendary Spirits. Burying Grounds Richly and Luxuriously Decorated with Garlands and Tempting Viands.

Dr. G. H. Colton Salter, who for many years was United States consul in Japan and afterward entered the Chinese government service, gazed thoughtfully into the glowing embers in the grate and after a short pause told the following tale:

The many stories published about Indian ghost dances and the Messiah craze remind me of one of the most remarkable incidents I have ever witnessed during my long career in the Orient, and I am sure there are but few Americans or Europeans who have had the opportunity to see the sights of which I am going to tell.

The native religion of the Japanese is, as you know, Buddhism, and there is no creed which is as full of superstition. Some of the ancient beliefs of the Buddhists are calculated to frighten the faithful and vividly portray the horrible punishment that awaits the sinful man after he closes his earthly career, while others, with charming simplicity, show that the greatest aim of the Hindoo religion is the release from existence.

The doctrine of the transmigration of souls and a hope for a better fate in a future life are the principal foundations upon which Buddhism rests. Nagasaki, where I resided for many years, was famed for the splendid festivals in honor of Buddah, or Gautama, the founder of the religion. Owing to the work of missionaries and the consequent spread of Christianity in Japan, many of the religious fetes are no longer publicly observed, and the one of which I am about to speak had its last grand celebration in 1886, just before I left Nagasaki.

DECORATED GRAVEYARDS.

It is called the Matsidri and was held during the last week in August or the first week in September, continuing four days. These days were set aside for the reception of the spirits of the dead, who, according to a legendary belief, return once a year to their old homes. For many weeks previous to the festival preparations had been in progress. The houses of the believers had all been carefully swept, cleaned and polished, and the home altars, which are to be found in every native house, had been redecorated and refurnished. The interior of all the buildings had been profusely adorned with flowers, the streets had been repaired and the whole city was clothed in holiday attire.

On the morning of the first day the dead were received with much ceremony in the graveyard, which is in a beautiful grove. Each mound was profusely decorated with lighted lanterns and garlands of many colored paper; globes hung from tree to tree. On the top of every grave food of the daintiest kind was spread in a tempting manner and in quantities sufficient to appease the appetites of an army of the hungriest kind of ghosts. On mats spread about the graves sat all the living descendants of the person who had been buried in that particular spot. Not a single tomb was neglected. If in the course of years the family of any one of the silent sleepers had completely died out his grave had been embellished and supplied by strangers.

The spirits were supposed to arrive and depart by water from the sea, and for four days and nights the living commune with their dead and were with them in spirit. The souls of the departed were supposed to hover around the tombs like substantial visible beings, and they were treated with every attention due to sacred and distinguished visitors from the other world.

The night of the second day was devoted to a grand terpsichorean entertainment or spirit dance, and the graveyard was transformed for once into a ball room, where ghostly dancers were supposed to hold revelry.

A SPLENDID SIGHT.

The scenes made a strong and everlasting impression on me. The night was perfect, the moon was at its full and the air was fragrant with the perfumes of thousands of flowers. Myriads of lights were flickering on the hillsides which surround the city, and the colored lanterns swayed gently to and fro, keeping time to the chimes of the silvery bells in the temple tower, which furnished the music for the mystic entertainment. Around an artificial lake in the center of the graveyard the people knelt in silent devotion, worshiping on the shrine of Buddha, whose emblem, the lotus flower, rose from the middle of the lake.

Every one of the four days and nights brought new surprises and ceremonies, many of the latter being held in the temple, the doors of which were closed and guarded against the entrance of infidels. On the last night—or the night of nights, as it was called—a grand procession finished the festival. The people marched in parade to escort their spirit visitors to the water front, where they were to depart.

Boatmen carried on their shoulders a gigantic craft built of wood and straw, in which the dead were supposed to be seated, and which was to convey them back to spirit land and to Ohata, the great father beyond the sea. This boat, which is called Fukuy, was a masterpiece of Japanese carpentry. It was ninety feet long and had a stately mast with a huge sail which bore in native characters the inscription, "Naidinamawidi," a word which is symbolic of Gautama's greatness.

This boat, artistically and richly decorated, was launched with much ceremony after the last spirit had been embraced and, figuratively speaking, had taken his seat on board. It was then pushed out into the sea, and drifting away was finally carried out of sight by the tide. And so ended the last festival of Matsidri ever held publicly in Nagasaki, and the most splendid religious celebration I ever witnessed.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Early Icehouses.

In America icehouses have been known for at least 200 years. They were at first very primitive affairs, being nothing more than deep cellars, the flooring made of boards or stone, upon which was placed a layer of straw or sawdust. The sides were lined with boards set about a foot from the wall, and this space was filled in with sawdust, tanbark or straw. A rough, thatched roof completed the structure, which was then filled with ice, between the layers of which tanbark or sawdust was strewed.

Married Lovers.

The affectionate man, who sits with his arm on the back of the seat when he rides in the cars with his wife, is always open to the suspicion that somewhere in the recesses of his self esteem he considers himself a sadly henpecked individual, and is excessively attentive to his better half in public places for the simple purpose of side tracking any intimation of such a state of affairs that might be apparent if he didn't do his half of the acting.

But the exquisite way a friend of mine directed his pretty wife where to go the other day as they parted at a crowded street corner contained no such intimation, inasmuch as he put in the word "dear" wherever he could catch his breath, and concluded with, "Don't forget, dear, to take a car at Park square, dear, and remember that the number is three hundred, dear, and thirty-seven." —Boston Globe.

Sudden.

Presence of mind is not always monopolized by the brave and wise, nor is it uniformly cultivated for great and good purposes.

Several of the pupils in a certain "backwoods" district determined not to study geography. The teacher believed that they were old enough to begin the subject, and accordingly called one of the oldest boys to her desk and spoke to him about the necessity of a knowledge of his own and other countries.

"I sha'n't study g'ography till I git ready!" growled the youngster.

The teacher rose quickly and seized him by the collar, intending to shake him, when the young rascal hastily added, "But I am ready now!"—Youth's Companion.

This Can Be Done on Nearly Every Farm.

Given a flow of 100 gallons of water per minute and plenty of liver and scraps thrown in, and you can raise 1,000 pounds of trout in a pond 10 feet deep, 10 feet long and ten feet broad, replacing them with small ones as rapidly as they reach marketable size. It can be done very profitably too. The time is looked forward to, and it is not far away, when every farmer will look upon an acre of water as he does upon an acre of land, expecting so much yearly yield from it, whether it is pond, lake, river or estuary. —Washington Star.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING SALOON.

Shaving, Hair Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.

WM. H. HUFF, Prop'r

NOTICE

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, - Cal.

New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates.

☞Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.

O. L. MAINS, Prop.
feb12tf

IRWINS' SALOON

Cor. Edwards and Market Streets,

Independence . Cal.

THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt and furnished in a style second to none on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.

THE BAR

Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.

JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

BELL'S Flouring Mills,

A. N. BELL, Prop.

PRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.

Having added Patent Rolls and other Improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out a flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

Independence, Cal. A. N. BELL.

CROCKERS' HOTEL.

BIG PINE - CAL.

New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates

☞Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

W. H. UHLEMEYER, Lessee.
sept tf

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
☞Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.☜
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
Bishop Creek, Cal.,
Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

J. W. P. LAIRD. P. H. MACK.
MACK & LAIRD.
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

A. R. CONKLIN,
Attorney-at-Law.
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the States of California and Nevada.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)
Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
☞NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED.☜
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.
DENTISTS.
OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSfield, opposite the Southern Hotel.
Prompt and careful treatment given on the easiest possible pain inflicted. Address
WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

FOR SALE CHEAP.
Two span first class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.
Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:
Saturday ..... January 24th
" ..... February 21st
" ..... March 21st
" ..... April 18th
" ..... May 23rd
" ..... June 20th
" ..... July 18th
" ..... August 15th
" ..... September 12th
" ..... October 17th
" ..... November 14th
" ..... December 12th
JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

Sang Bile FORTUNES have been made at work for us, by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Bonn, Toledo, Ohio. See out. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Can work in spare time or all the time, big money for workers. Entire unknown among them. NEW and WONDERFUL. Full particulars FREE. H. Hallett & Co., Box 880 PORTLAND, MAINE.

TO ADVERTISERS
A list of 1000 newspapers divided into STATES AND SECTIONS will be sent on application—FREE.
To those who want their advertising to pay, we can offer no better medium for thorough and effective work than the various sections of our Select Local List. GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., Newspaper Advertising Bureau, 10 Spruce Street, New York.

OFFICIAL.

NOTICE OF

Sheriff's Sale,

ON FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES.

E. H. EDWARDS, Plaintiff, vs. WM. F. MATLACK, Administrator of the Estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased Defendant.

Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure and Sale.

UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF AN ORDER of sale and decree of foreclosure, issued out of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on the 15th day of November, 1890, in an action wherein E. H. Edwards was Plaintiff and Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, was Defendant, and in which said last above mentioned action, E. H. Edwards, the above named Plaintiff, obtained a judgment and decree of foreclosure against Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, Defendant, on the 15th day of November, 1890, for the sums of $1810.02 and $1171.49, gold coin of the United States, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $5981.51, gold coin as aforesaid, which said decree was, on that 15th day of November, 1890, recorded in Judgment Book 1 of said Court at page 286, (Wm. F. Matlack, Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, the above named Defendant, was by an order of said Superior Court duly made and entered on the 14th day of May, 1891 substituted as Defendant in said action in the place and stead of said Thomas Parker, now deceased.) I am commanded to sell, to satisfy said judgment and decree for the said sum of $1810.02, all those certain lots, pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Beginning at a point twenty chains East of the North-west Section corner of Section No. twenty-eight, in Township No. fifteen South of Range No. thirty six, East, Mt. Diablo Base and Meridian, (magnetic variation fifteen degrees and fifteen minutes East) thence south thirteen and ninety one-hundredths chains to North-west corner of Josiah G. Dodge's land; thence North, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, twenty two and thirty-one one-hundredths chains to Brewery street in the town of Lone Pine; thence North, twenty one degrees and forty minutes West, twenty-one one hundredths chains; thence South, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes West, eight and ten one-hundredths chains; thence North eight and forty-eight one hundredths chains to North line of Section No. twenty-eight; thence West thirteen and twenty-nine one-hundredths chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing fifteen and one-half acres.

Also a lot of land lying East of the last described tract and on the Wm. L. Moore tract of land North-west of the town of Lone Pine beginning at the North east corner of said last described tract, thirty three and twenty-nine one-hundredths chains East of the North-west corner of Section twenty-eight in Township Fifteen South, of Range Thirty-six East, of Mount Diablo Meridian, at an iron post set in the ground; thence, South eight and forty-eight one-hundredths chains to the lane from the last described tract of land to the town of Lone Pine; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, eight and seventy one one-hundredths chains to the East side of Brewery street in said town; thence, South twenty-one degrees and forty minutes East, fifty one-hundredths chains to the North line of Corral street in said town; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, seven and eighty-seven one hundredths chains to the West line of Main street in said town; thence, North twenty-one degrees and forty minutes West, three and nineteen one-hundredths chains to Section line of said Section twenty-eight; thence, West fifteen chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing eight and seventy-five one hundredths acres.

Also lots Nos. two, three, and the North half of lot six, in block No. 13, upon which is a house; and the fractional part of lots Nos. six, seven and eight in block No. 1 in the town of Lone Pine, in said County and State, as the same are known and designated on the plat of said town now on file in the Recorder's office of said County.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining.

I am also commanded to sell, to satisfy said judgment and decree for the sum of $1171.49, all that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

The East half of the South-west quarter and the West half of the South-east quarter of Section No. twenty-one, in Township No. fifteen, South, of Range No. thirty six, East, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on Saturday the 6th day of June, 1891, at 12 o'clock M. of that day, in front of the Court House in the County of Inyo, I will, in obedience to said order of sale and decree of foreclosure and sale, sell separately the above described property, or so much thereof, as may be necessary to satisfy said Plaintiff's judgment, with interest and costs etc., to the highest and best bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States.

Dated this 15th day of May, 1891.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff of Inyo County.
By D. HOLLAND,
Under-Sheriff.

Mack & Laird, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

EXECUTOR'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court in and for the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 14th day of May, 1891, in the matter of the estate of John R. Hughes, deceased, the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of John R. Hughes deceased, will sell, at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, and subject to confirmation by said Superior Court, on Saturday, the 6th day of June, 1891, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John R. Hughes, at the time of his death, and all the right, title and interest that the said estate has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to that of the said John R. Hughes at the time of his death, in and to all that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the town of Lone Pine, County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

An undivided one-half interest in and to the the South half of Lot Number Seven (7), in Block Number Five (5), as the same is known and designated on the official plat of the said town of Lone Pine, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county.

Bids or offers must be in writing and will be received at the residence of the undersigned, about six miles south of the town of Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, gold coin of the United States, ten percent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor on the day of sale, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at expense of purchaser. W. L. HUNTER.

Executor of the last Will and Testament of John R. Hughes, deceased.

Mack & Laird, Attorneys for Executor.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.

Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated, satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.

☞All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics Hall," Lone Pine.

FRED BURKHARDT.

OFFICIAL.

Notice of Election.

STEVENS DITCH COMPANY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Stevens Ditch Company will be held at the office of the Company, in the town of Independence, Inyo county, Cal., on

SATURDAY, MAY 30, 1891,

At the hour of One o'clock in the afternoon of that day. That at said meeting there will be held an election to elect Five Directors of said Company for the ensuing year. And also to transact such other business as may properly come before said Annual Meeting.

P. H. MACK,
Secretary.

NOTCE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JOHN LUCAS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased to the Creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his office in the town of Lone Pine, Inyo county, Cal., the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in said Inyo county, State of California. E. H. EDWARDS,

Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased.

Dated May 5th, 1891.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of PETER DIECKSON, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNdersigned, Administrator of the estate of PETER DIECKSON, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his residence, in the town of Lone Pine, in the county of Inyo, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in the county of Inyo.

Dated April 18th, 1891.

JOHN F. LUBKEN,
Administrator of said Estate.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

MARY A. BALL, Plaintiff, vs. ROBERT BALL, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Robert Ball, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant and for costs of suit, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 28th day of February, A.D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK.....PROPRIETOR.
Horseshoeing ..... $2 00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

FORBES & TOBEY,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.,
—DEALERS IN—
LUMBER
OF ALL KINDS.
DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS,
LATH,
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.
Matched and Dressed Flooring.
sept 11-tf

P. W. FORBES. P. H. MACK.
MACK & FORBES.
Real Estate Agents,
Address, P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal.
P. W. FORBES, Bishop, Cal.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, MAY 29 ..... 1891.

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 98½
Lead, 4 35
Copper, 13.70
Tin, 20.40
Sugar, .06
Coffee, 20 @ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 13 @ 19.

Rev. H. J. Winsor will breach in Lone Pine at 11 a. m.; George Creek 2:30; Independence, 7:30 p. m. Sunday school at Lone Pine and Independence at 2 p. m.

Service of song entitled "The Roll Call", will be given at Independence on Sunday, the 31st.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

FRIDAY, May 22, 1891.

Clara A. Scott vs. Rufus W. Scott—Filed complaint and issued summons.

WEDNESDAY, May 27, 1891.

Estate of John Mullane, deceased—Filed proof of publication.

MARRIED.

CHESS—GRAHAM At Rocker, Montana, May 19, 1891. Mr. Frank G. Chess to Miss Mattie Graham.

DIED.

CROUGH—At Big Pine, May 24, 1891, Daniel Crough, a native of Massachusetts, aged 34 years.

RODRIGUES—At Lone Pine, May 26, 1891, Casimero Rodriguez, a native of Mexico, aged 60 years.

Martin Mee came up from Lone Pine yesterday.

About $250 has been subscribed for the Fourth of July celebration.

Gus Stevens and J. J. Stewart were up from Lone Pine yesterday.

J. W. Murphy has been confined to his room for the last three days.

Mr. John Clarke and wife, of Bishop, were at Independence on Tuesday last.

Jake Miller and Bill Withrow left for Big Pine this morning to take in the Ball there to-night.

Lem. Baxter was examined before Judge Gill last Saturday on a charge of grand larceny and was discharged.

Hon. P. Reddy is expected down on to-day's train. He will go to Keeler to-day, thence to Darwin to-morrow.

P. W. Forbes, Esq., went to Bishop on Wednesday and First Officer Densmore is navigating the Ship of State.

H. Osborne, of the Los Angeles Express, has been appointed Collector at the port of Wilmington.

Quite a number of people were down from Big Pine early in the week to attend the funeral of the late D. Crough.

T. F. A. Connelly, Robt, Love and W. A. Chalfant came down from Bishop on Monday's train returning next day.

James C. Crocker has gone to Bakersfield and will probably be occupied for some time attending to business interests there.

Mr. Frank Fitzgerald, of Modock, accompanied by Miss Stella Meysan, of Lone Pine, paid Independence a short visit on Thursday.

Mrs. J. W. P. Laird went to Bishop last Sunday on a visit with relatives and friends previous to her removal to join Mr. Laird at Bakersfield.

It is said that Jim Keene, after losing $13,000,000 is again recuperating his fallen fortunes and is likely to be again a power in Wall street.

O. I. Mairs has cleared a tract of new ground at the Post and seeded it with potatoes. The soil is a light, sandy loam and should produce an excellent crop.

J. J. Stewart has just returned from a visit to Kernville. His wife and children accompanied him over and will remain on a visit for the Summer with her brothers, John and Israel Rittgers.

There should be a culvert put in the County Road about a mile east of the Meyers ranch at Georges Creek. With this exception the road from Independence to Lone Pine is in excellent condition.

A number of Independence people will go to Big Pine this afternoon to attend the opening ball given by Thos. Williams. The Mono colony at Bishop, all old friends of Mr. Williams, will be down in full force. A good time is sure to be enjoyed.

This season is the most backward ever known in Owens Valley. A most unusual amount of rain has fallen and the weather has been very cold. Small grains are thriving and will produce large crops, but as yet very little corn has been planted.

Jake Shoemaker and Charley Huile have leased the Black Rock sawmill from C. B. Rawson and are busily engaged getting ready to start up. The logging roads have been badly washed out and the flume is out of repair, consequently it will be some time before the saws are started.

Mr. Frank G. Chess and Miss Mattie Graham were united by marriage on the 19th of May, at Rocker, Montana. Frank was a resident of Owens Valley for some time, and was employed as a clerk in Mr. Eibeshutz's store at Independence, and at the store of Given & Ingalls in Bishop. The many friends Frank made while here join us in wishing him a pleasant journey on the sea of matrimony.

The Native Sons have made a thorough canvas during the week and have determined to go ahead with a Fourth of July celebration. The business men have subscribed liberally and a good programme will be presented. There will be a grand ball, with new features, on Friday night, July 4th, and a ball game and children's sports on Saturday. A full programme will be published next week.

A Good Work

The town of Big Pine is enjoying quite a temperance boom. There is a strong lodge organized there with a membership of about ninety. There are many active members that are alert to organize and carry through any movement that will create an interest in the Lodge workings. Last Friday night there was held what is known as a "medal contest." The Demorests, of the magazine of that name published in New York, sent out to lodges a nicely engraved silver medal and two books containing recitations, poems etc. Not less than eight members must enter the contest, and must recite some selection from either book. Judges are appointed, and the person acquitting themselves most creditably receives the medal. The following named were the contestants last Friday evening. Misses Mattie Wallace, Carrie Gregg, Tiny McDonald, Eva Bodle, Nancy Bodle, Ida Hall and Clara Eldred and Master Freeman Mitchell. On summing up the credits each one redeived, the award was made to Miss Mattie Wallace amid much applause. By the conditions governing contes's Miss Wallace will be debarred from future contests until at least seven silver medals have been won by other members. When this has been done a gold medal is sent, and the eight holders of silver medals contest for it, and similarly, holders of eight gold medals contest for a diamond medal. Not less than one month must elapse between each contest. On Saturday the Lodge gave a pic-nic in the grove on the old Jones' ranch which was well attended, and a splendid time enjoyed. A platform was erected, and those who wished had the pleasure of dancing in the open air. There were recitations, singing and other diversions, and the day passed away most agreeably. Besides affording amusement to many people these gatherings serve to keep alive interest in Lodge matters and to increase the membership.

C. & C. Railroad.

The annual meeting of the Carson & Colorado Railroad Company was held at Hawthorne, Nevada, on Thursday, the 11th inst., at which the following Directors were elected to serve for the year ensuing;

H. M. Yerington, D. L. Bliss, W. D. Tobey and D. A. Bender of Carson, Nev.; John Forbes of Hawthorne, Nevada; Lloyd Tevis of San Francisco, S. P. Smith of Sacramento.

The officers chosen were: H. M. Yerington President and General Superintendent, D. L. Bliss Vice President, S. P. Smith Treasurer, D. A. Bender Secretary.

The General Superintendent made the following appointments: Robert J. Laws Assistant Superintendent and Chief Engineer, D. A. Bender General Freight and Passenger Agent, E. B. Yerington Assistant Secretary, Geo. T. Mills Paymaster and Auditor, Hume Yerington Purchasing Agent, A. M. Ardery Superintendent of Telegraph, C. P. Mengel Train Dispatcher, J. H. McBride Roadmaster, James Quinn, Master Machinist, Chas. A. Brulin, Master Car Builder, Joseph Castle Master Painter, Hon. W. M. Stewart Attorney.

Silver to the Front.

Major F. M. Huffaker yesterday received the following letter from Senator Stewart:

"I find the gold monometalists are making a desperate effort to influence public opinion and bury the silver issue.

"Since Congress adjourned I have been doing all I could, in the way of writing letters and circulating documents, to keep the silver question before the country. It is a subject that cannot be ignored, if the friends of silver will continue to exert themselves to hold it to the front. It will be a live issue at the next Congress, when a free-coinage bill will pass both houses. Its fate when it reaches the Executive is uncertain. It may be vetoed, and in that event it is possible we will have enough votes to pass it over the veto. At all events, I believe we can make it the paramount issue in 1892. I have no doubt of ultimate success."—Enterprise.

Death of Daniel Crough.

Daniel Crough died at Big Pine on Sunday afternoon about 3 o'clock. He had been confined to his bed for about six weeks, and on the morning of the day of his death he seemed to be rallying, and was much brighter than he had been for some time past. After noon he sank rapidly and died as stated. Dan came to this valley in 18 and has resided here constantly since then. He graduated from the State Normal School and made teaching his life work. He was a member of the Board of Education for a number of years. He had been a member of Inyo Lodge, No. 301, I. O. O. F., and that fraternity took charge of the funeral obsequies. He was buried at Independence on Tuesday, a long concourse of people following the remains to the grave, many of whom had been his pupils. He leaves a widow and two little daughters to mourn his early death.

Fair Directors' Meeting.

The Fair Directors met at Independence on Monday evening, all present except W. S. Enos. The books were examined by a special committee and reported upon. A note held by the Association against Jacob Vagt was ordered canceled in consideration of Mr. Vagt not pushing an agreement made by the Directors to use track constructed by him. He also agreeing to put his track in suitable condition for training purposes. The Fifth Annual Fair will be held at Bishop from September 29th to October 2d inclusive. A premium and speed programme was ordered printed for distribution and an advertisement inserted in the four papers of the District.

"HEALTH, Grace, Beauty" (illustrated with 23 engravings) is the title of an interesting article in the June number of Demorest's Family Magazine. The article is from the pen of Professor E. B. Warman the leading exponent of Delsartean Philosophy in this country, who is at present lecturing in the cities on the Pacific Coast. This superb Magazine contains something to interest every member of the family, and is profusely illustrated with over 200 fine engravings. Single copies are 20 cents, and may be had of newsdealers everywhere, or the publisher, W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, 15 E. 14th St., New York.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Opening BALL!

There will be a

SOCIAL "HOP"

—AT THE—

Big Pine Hotel,

—ON—

Friday Eve, May 29.

Good music will be furnished and all are cordially invited to attend. Tickets, including supper, $2.00.

For Sale.

A well established butcher business in Independence. No opposition. A good substantial butcher shop with ice house, or refrigerator attached. All tools and implements necessary for carrying on the business. Also a comfortable dwelling on lot adjoining shop. Four large rooms and kitchen. Shop and dwelling are both new and in good condition. The entire property must be included in purchase and terms cash. Apply to

J. C. ROEPER.
Independence, Cal.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer without cost of repairs than any other machine. Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

For Sale!

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE

Eastside Canal.

There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,

C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

J. W. Murphy.

BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work.

Wagons and Carriages Repaired.

HORSESHOEING, $2.00 for CASH

Shop on Edwards St., opposite the Court House, Independence.

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.

Bee Keeper.

Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.

Independence, Inyo Co. Cal

BOOTS AND SHOES

MADE AND REPAIRED.

THE BEST MATERIAL.

FIRST-CLASS WORK.

Fepairs done Promptly.

Prices Reasonable.

A. J. DAVIS,
nov 30-tf Independence,

Grand Fourth of July Celelebration under the auspices of the N. S. G. W. July Fourth, 1891. Full programme next week.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THOMAS & HILL,

—DEALERS IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL,

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $25 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. Can work in spare time, or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDIS

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere.

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
n4761f

Lake View Hotel

Keeler, Cal.

John Barnes, Prop'r.

First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—

Wines, Liquors, & Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

BISHOP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE BISHOP.

Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St

In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable

S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK

BREWERY,

L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.

All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.

Customers supplied on all points

Of the C. & C. Railroad.

Send orders to

L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, patrons can be assured of finding there the best of Buggy Teams, Saddle Horses, and

Livery Accommodations

in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor.

A NEW DEAL!

LONE PINE

Livery, Feed & Sale Stable.

A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.

OPPOSITE SEWART HOUSE.

Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,

—DEALER IN—

General Merchandise,

LONE PINE,

INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.

PROVISIONS,

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, GEORGE STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R R

TAKING EFFECT

Sunday, November 16,

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1	To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Mound House	11:30 p. m.	5.50 p. m.
Dayton	12:00 p. m.	5:10 p. m.
Wabuska	2 05 p. m.	2 50 p. m.
Hawthorne	5.50 p. m.	11.10 a. m.
Luning	7:05 p. m.	9.55 a. m.
Soda Springs	8:05 p. m.	9:15 a. m.
Belleville	9:15 p. m.	7.55a. m.
Candelaria	Ar. 10.00 p. m	Lv. 7:20 a. m.
	No. 3. Leave—	No. 4. Arrives—
Belleville	8 20 a. m.	5:25 p. m.
Benton	11:50 a. m.	1:55 a. m.
Basaop Creek	2:00p. m.	11:00 a. m.
Alvord	2.45 p. m.	10:00 a. m.
Independence	4:20 p. m.	8:30 a. m.
Lone Pine	5:10p. m.	7:40 a. m.
Keeler	Ar. 5:55 p. m.	Lv. 7:00 a. m.

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Friday
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., and connect at Reno with east and west bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (36 miles); Bodie (65 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salsbury & Co's. tri-weekly stages (leave on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville, Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stages for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma, Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.

D. A. BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles

OF

Fashionable Clothing Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOL

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries a canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE

Blacksmith Shop

R. C. Spear, Prop'r

—ALL WORK ON—

MINING TOOLS,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS
& FREIGHTING OUTFITS

—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—

HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING

All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON

KEELER, CAL.

In Lake View Hotel

BEER, WINES,

LIQUORS and CIGARS

All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.

JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.

J. C. MILLER, Lessee.

—THE BAR—

Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of

WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS

The most careful attention given to the amusement and comfort of patrons.

A FINE BILLIARD TABLE!

Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon. sept-12 tf

THE SPLENDID SPUR.

Being Memoirs of the Adventures of Mr. John Marvel, a Servant of His late Majesty King Charles I, in the years 1642-3: written by himself.

EDITED IN MODERN ENGLISH BY "Q."

"Your highness," pleaded the unhappy man, "if, to please you, I sang that idocy, which, for fifty years now, I had forgotten"——

"Exc'll'nt shong," says Prince Rupert, waking up; "less have't again!"

To be short, 10 o'clock was striking from St. Mary's spire when, with a prince on either side of me and thirty guineas in my pocket (which was all the loose gold he had), I walked forth from Master Carter's door. To make up the deficiency their highnesses had insisted on furnishing me with a suit made up from the simplest in their joint wardrobes—riding boots, breeches, buff coat, sash, pistols, cloak and feathered hat, all of which fitted me excellently well. By the doors of Christ church, before we came to the south gate, Prince Rupert, who had been staggering in his walk, suddenly pulled up and leaned against the wall.

"Why, odd's my life, we've forgot a horse for him!" he cried.

"Indeed, your highness," I answered, "if my luck holds the same I shall find one by the road." (How true this turned out you shall presently hear.)

There was no difficulty at the gate, where the sentry recognized the two princes, and opened the wicket at once. Long after it had closed behind me, and I stood looking back at Oxford towers, all bathed in the winter moonlight, I heard the two voices roaring away up the street:

"It was a frog leaped into a pool!"

At length they died into silence; and, hugging the king's letter in my breast, I stepped briskly forward on my travels.

CHAPTER IV.

I TAKE THE ROAD.

So puffed up was I by the condescension of the two princes and my head so busy with big thoughts that not till I was over the bridges and climbing the high ground beyond South Hinckley, with a shrewd northeast wind at my back, could I spare time for a second backward look. By this the city lay spread at my feet, very delicate and beautiful in a silver network, with a black clump or two to southward, where the line of Bagley trees ran below the hill. I pulled out the letter that Anthony had given me. In the moonlight the brown smear of his blood was plain to see, running across the superscription:

"To our trusty and well beloved Sir Ralfth Hopton, at our Army in Cornwall—these."

'Twas no more than I looked for; yet the sight of it and the king's red seal quickened my step as I set off again. And I cared not a straw for Dr. Kettle's wrath on the morrow.

Having no desire to fall in with any of the royal outposts that lay around Abingdon, I fetched well away to the west, meaning to shape my course for Faringdon, and so into the great Bath road. 'Tis not my purpose to describe at any length my itinerary, but rather to reserve my pen for those more moving events that overtook me later. Only in the uncertain light I must have taken a wrong turn to the left (I think near Besselsleigh) that led me round to the south; for, coming about daybreak to a considerable town, I found it to be, not Faringdon, but Wantage. There was no help for it, so I set about inquiring for a bed. The town was full, and already astir with preparations for for cattle fair; and neither at the "Bear" nor the "Three Nuns" was there a bed to be had. But at length at the "Boot" tavern—a small house—I found one just vacated by a couple of drovers, and having cozened the chambermaid to allow me a clean pair of sheets, went up stairs very drowsily, and in five minutes was sleeping sound.

I awoke amid a clatter of voices, and beheld the room full of womankind.

"He's waking," said one.

"'Tis a pity, too, to be afflicted thus—and he such a pretty young man!"

This came from the landlady, who stood close, her hand shaking my shoulder roughly.

"What's amiss?" I asked, rubbing my eyes.

"Why, 'tis three of the afternoon."

"Then I'll get up, as soon as you retire."

"Lud! we've been trying to wake thee this hour past; but 'twas sleep—sleep!"

"I'll get up, I tell you."

"Thought thee'd ha' slept through the bed and right through to the floor," said the chambermaid by the door, tittering.

"Unless you pack and go I'll step out amongst you all!"

Whereat they fled with mock squeals, calling out that the very thought made them blush, and left me to dress.

Down stairs I found a giant's breakfast spread for me, and ate the whole, and felt the better for it, and thereupon paid my scot, resisting the landlady's endeavor to charge me double for the bed, and walked out to see the town.

"Take care o' thysel'," the chambermaid bawled after me; "nor flourish thy attainments abroad, lest they put thee in a show!"

Dark was coming on fast; and to my chagrin (for I had intended purchasing a horse) the buying and selling of the fair were over, the cattle pens broken up, and the dealers gathered round the fiddlers, ballad singers and gingerbread stalls. There were gaming booths, too, driving a brisk trade at shovel board, all fours and costly colors; and an eating tent, whence issued a thick reek of cooking and a rattle of plates. Over the entrance, I remember, was set a notice: "Dame Allaway, from Bartholomew fair. Here are the best geese, and she does them as well as ever she did." I jostled my way along, keeping tight hold on my pockets, for fear of cut purses; when presently, about half way down the street, there arose the noise of shouting. The crowd made a rush towards it; and in a minute I was left alone, standing before a juggler who had a sword half way down his throat, and had to draw it out again before he could with any sufficiency curse the defection of his audience; but offered to pull out a tooth for me if I wanted it.

I left him, and, running after the crowd, soon learned the cause of this tumult.

It was a meager old rascal that some one had charged with picking pockets; and they were dragging him off to be ducked. Now in the heart of Wantage the little stream that runs through the town is widened into a cistern about ten feet square and five in depth, over which hung a ducking stool for scolding wives. And since the townspeople draw their water from this cistern, 'tis to be supposed they do not fear the infection. A long beam on a pivot hangs out over the pool, and to the end is a chair fastened, into which, despite his kicks and screams, they now strapped this poor wretch, whose gray locks might well have won mercy for him.

Souse! he was plunged; hauled up choking and dripping; then—just as he found tongue to shriek—souse! again.

'Twas a dismal punishment; and this time they kept him under for a full half minute. But as the beam was lifted again, I heard a hullabaloo and a cry:

"The bear! the bear!"

And, turning, I saw a great brown form lumbering down the street behind, and driving the people before it like chaff.

The crowd at the brink of the pool scattered to right and left, yelling. Up flew the beam of the ducking stool, relieved of their weight, and down with a splash went the pickpocket at the far end. As well for my own skin's sake as out of pity to see him drowning I jumped into the water. In two strokes I reached him, gained footing, and with Anthony's sword cut the straps away and pulled him up. And there we stood, up to our necks, coughing and spluttering, while on the deserted brink the bear sniffed at the water and regarded us.

No doubt we appeared contemptible enough, for after a time he turned with a louder sniff and went his way lazily up the street again. He had broken out from the pit wherein, for the best part of the day, they had baited him, yet seemed to bear little malice. For he sauntered about the town for an hour or two, hurting no man, but making a clean sweep of every sweet stall in his way, and was taken at last very easily, with his head in a treacle cask, by the bear ward and a few dogs.

Meanwhile the pickpocket and I had scrambled out by the further bank and wrung our clothes. He seemed to resent his treatment no more than did the bear.

"Ben cove—'tis a good world. My thanks!"

And with this scant gratitude he was gone, leaving me to make my way back to the sign of "The Boot," where the chambermaid led me upstairs and took away my clothes to dry by the fire. I determined to buy a horse on the morrow, and with my guineas and the king's letter under the pillow dropped off to slumber again.

My powers of sleep must have been noised abroad by the hostess, for next morning at the breakfast ordinary the dealers and drovers laid down knife and fork to stare as I entered. After a while one or two lounged out and brought in others to look, so that soon I was in a ring of stupid faces, all gazing like so many cows.

For a while I affected to eat undisturbed, but lost patience at last and addressed a red headed gazer:

"If you take me for a show you ought to pay."

"That's fair," said the fellow, and laid a groat on the board. This came near to putting me in a passion, but his face was serious. "'Tis a real pleasure," he added heartily, "to look on one so gifted."

"If any of you," I said, "could sell me a horse"——

At once there was a clamor, all bidding in one breath for my custom. So, finishing my breakfast, I walked out with them to the tavern yard, where I had my pick among the sorriest looking dozen of nags in England, and finally bought from the red haired man, for five pounds, bridle, saddle and a flea bitten gray that seemed more honestly raw boned than the rest. And the owner wept tears at parting with his beast, and thereby added a pang to the fraud he had already put upon me. And I rode from the tavern door suspecting laughter in the eyes of every passer by.

The day ('twas drawing near noon as I started) was cold and clear, with a coating of rime over the fields; and my horse's feet rang cheerfully on the frozen road. His pace was of the soberest; but, as I was no skillful rider, this suited me rather than not. Only it was galling to be told so, as happened before I had gone three miles.

'Twas my friend the pickpocket; and he sat before a fire of dry sticks a little way back from the road. His scanty hair, stiff as a badger's, now stood upright around his battered cap, and he looked at me over the bushes, with his hooked nose thrust forward like a bird's beak.

"Bien lightmans, comrade—good day! 'Tis a good world; so stop and dine."

I pulled up my gray.

"Glad you find it so," I answered; "you had a nigh chance to compare it with the next last night."

"Sha'n't do so well i' the next, I fear," he said, with a twinkle; "but I owe thee something, and here's a hedgehog that in five minutes 'll be baked to a turn. 'Tis a good world, and the better that no man can count on it. Last night my dripping duds helped me to a cant tale, and got me a sliver penny from a man of religion. Good's in the worst; and life's like hunting the squirrel—a man gets much good exercise thereat, but seldom what he hunts for."

"That's as good morality as Aristotle's," said I.

"'Tis better for me, because 'tis mine." While I tethered my horse he blew at the embers, wherein lay a good sized ball of clay baking. After a while he looked up with red cheeks. "They were so fast set on drowning me," he continued, with a wink, "they couldn't spare time to look i' my pocket—the ruffin cly them!"

"He pulled the clay ball out of the fire, cracked it, and lo! inside was a hedgehog cooked, the spikes sticking in the clay, and coming away with it. So he divided the flesh with his knife, and upon a slice of bread from his wallet it made delicate eating; though I doubt if I enjoyed it as much as did my comrade, who swore over and over that the world was good, and as the wintry sun broke out, and the hot ashes warm'd his knees, began to chatter at a great pace.

"Why, sir, but for the pretty uncertainty of things I'd as lief die here as I sit"——

He broke off at the sound of wheels, and a coach with two postilions spun past us on the road.

I had just time to catch a glimpse of a figure huddled in the corner, and a sweet, pretty girl, with chestnut curls seated beside it, behind the glass. After the coach came a heavy broad shouldered servant riding on a stout gray, who flung us a sharp glance as he went by, and at twenty yards' distance turned again to look.

"That's luck," observed the pickpocket, as the travelers disappeared down the highway; "to-morrow, with a slice of it, I might be riding in such a coast as that, and have the hydropsy, to boot. Good lack! when I was ta'en prisoner by the Turks a-sailin' i' the Mary of London, and sold for a slave at Algiers, I escaped, after two months, with Eli Sprat, a Gravesend man, in a small open boat. Well, we sailed three days and nights, and all the time there was a small seabird following, flying round and round us, and calling two notes that sounded for all the world like 'Wind'ard! Wind'ard!' So at last says Eli, 'Tis Heaven's voice bidding us to ply to wind'ard.' And so we did, and on the fourth day made Marseilles; and who should be first to meet Eli on the quay but a Frenchwoman he had married five years before, and left. And the jade had him clapped in the pillory, alongside of a cheating fishmonger with a collar of stinking smelts, that turned poor Eli's stomach completely. Now, there's somewhat to set against the story of Whittington next time 'tis told you."

I was now for bidding the rascal good-by. But he offered to go with me as far as Hungerford, where we should turn into the Bath road. At first I was shy of accepting, by reason of his coat, wherein patches of blue, orange tawny and flame color quite overlaid the parent black; but closed with him upon his promise to teach me the horsemanship that I so sadly lacked. And by the time we entered Hungerford town I was advanced so far, and bestrode my old gray so easily, that in gratitude I offered him supper and bed at an inn, if he would but buy a new coat; to which he agreed, saying that the world was good.

By this the day was clouded over and the rain coming down apace. So that as soon as my comrade was decently arrayed at the first slop shop we came to, 'twas high time to seek an inn. We found quarters at "The Horn," and sought the travelers' room, and a fire to dry ourselves.

In this room, at the window, were two men who looked lazily up at our entrance. They were playing at a game, which was no other than to race two snails up a pane of glass and wager which should prove the faster.

"A wet day!" said my comrade cheerfully. The pair regarded him. "I'll lay you a crown it clears within the hour!" said one.

"And I another," put in the other; and with that they went back to their sport.

Drawing near, I myself was soon as eager as they in watching the snails, when my companion drew my notice to a piece of writing on the window over which they were crawling. 'Twas a set of verses scribbled there, that must have been scratched with a diamond; and to my surprise—for I had not guessed him a scholar—he read them out for my benefit. Thus the writing ran, for I copied it later:

MASTER EPHRAIM TUCKER, HIS DYING COUNCELL TO WAY FARDINGERS TO SEEK THE SPLENDID SPUR

Not on the necks of prince or hound,
Nor on a woman's finger twin'd,
May gold from the deriding ground
Keep sacred that we sacred bind:
Only the heel
Of splendid steel
Shall stand secure on sliding fate,
When golden navies weep their freight.

The scarlet hat, the laurel'd stave
Are measures, not the springs, of worth;
In a wife's lap, as in a grave,
Man's airy notions mix with earth.
Seek other spur
Bravely to stir
The dust in this loud world, and tread
Alp high among the whisp'ring dead.

Trust in thyself—then spur amain:
So shall Charybdis wear a grace,
Grim Ætna laugh, the Lybian plain
Take roses to her shrivel'd face.
This orb—this round
Of sight and sound—
Count it the lists that God hath built
For haughty hearts to ride a-tilt.

FINIS—Master Tucker's Farewell.

"And a very pretty moral on four gentlemen that pass their afternoon a-setting snails to race!"

At these words, spoken in a delicate, foreign voice, we all started round, and saw a young lady standing behind us.

Now that she was the one who had passed us in the coach I saw at once. But describe her, to be plain, I cannot, having tried a many times. So let me say only that she was the prettiest creature on God's earth (which, I hope, will satisfy her); that she had chestnut curls and a mouth made for laughing; that she wore a kirtle and bodice of gray silk taffety, with a gold pomander box hung on a chain about her neck; and held out a drinking glass towards us with a Frenchified grace.

"Gentlemen, my father is sick, and will taste no water but what is freshly drawn. I ask you not to brave Charybdis or Ætna, but to step out into the rainy yard and draw me a glassful from the pump there; for our servant is abroad in the town."

To my deep disgust, before I could find a word that villainous old pickpocket had caught the glass from her hand and reached the door. But I ran after; and out into the yard we stepped together, where I pumped while he held the glass to the spout, flinging away the contents time after time, till the bubbles on the brim and the film on the outside were to his liking.

'Twas he, too, that gained the thanks on our return.

"Mistress," said he, with a bow, "my young friend is raw, but has a good will. Confess, now, for his edification—for he is bound on a long journey westward, where, they tell me, the maidens grow comeliest—that looks avail naught with womankind beside a dashing manner."

The young gentlewoman laughed, shaking her curls.

"I'll give him in that case three better counsels yet: first (for by his habit I see he is on the king's side), let him take a circuit from this place to the south, for the road between Marlborough and Bristol is, they tell me, all held by the rebels; next, let him avoid all women, even though they ask but an innocent cup of water; and, lastly, let him shun thee, unless thy face lie more than thy tongue. Shall I say more?"

"Why, no—perhaps better not," replied the old rogue hastily, but laughing all the same. "That's a clever lass," he added, as the door shut behind her.

And, indeed, I was fain next morning to agree to this. For, awaking, I found my friend (who had shared a room with me) already up and gone, and discovered the reason in a sheet of writing pinned to my clothes:

YOUNG SIR—I convict myself of ingratitude; but habit is hard to break. So I have made off with the half of thy guineas and thy horse. The rest due and the letter thou bearest I leave. 'Tis a good world, and experience should be bought early. This golden lesson I leave in return for the guineas. Believe me, 'tis of more worth. Read over those verses on the window pane before starting, digest them, and trust me, thy obliged

PETER THE JACKMAN.

Raise not thy hand so often to thy breast; 'tis a sure index of hidden valuables.

(To be Continued.)

Three years ago a man named Westphal of Los Angeles beat his son on the head with a club, and came near murdering him. He was convicted and sent to San Quentin Prison for ten years. The boy lived in constant suffering until last week when he died.

POPULAR AND PROSPEROUS.

Business men are glad that the PACIFIC BANK, of San Francisco, begins its twenty-eighth anniversary with the same reliable President, Dr. R. H. McDonald at the helm; this being sufficient guarantee that the liberal yet prudent policy which has made the Bank so popular and prosperous in the past will be the watchword in the future.

HER ANSWER.

The question long had been upon my lips;
I asked it, trembling to my finger tips;
She did not falter, though her voice was low;
The answer that she made was simply "No."

She did not look upon me with surprise;
She did not from my glance avert her eyes;
But in her cheeks I saw the roses glow,
As she with gentle firmness answered "No."

She used no trick or artifice with me;
She did not say a sister she would be,
And no confusion did the maiden show
As to my question she responded "No."

What was my question, reader? Let me tell;
She just had told me that she loved me well;
I asked, "Will you e'er love another so?"
And to this question 'twas she answered "No."

—Boston Courier.

Too Suggestive.

Miss De Pretty—Let's form a secret society.

Miss De Pink—Let's. Just like the Odd Fellows and Red Men. Call it the "Ancient Order of—of King's Daughter's."

Miss De Blond—Or the "Ancient Order of Dianas."

Miss De Young—Or the "Ancient Order of American"——

Miss Oldmaid—Oh, don't let's call it the ancient order of anything.—New York Weekly.

"Here, John, Hand Me My Glass Coat."

A process has been discovered and machinery perfected by which waste glass can be manufactured into cloth. Among the many advantages which this textile will have over other fabrics it is claimed that it is incombustible, can be made in all colors and of any desired strength or thickness.—New York Journal.

The German emperor is a voracious newspaper reader. Fifty of the leading journals of Europe are laid on his table every morning, and immediately after breakfast he plunges through them, shears in hand, nipping any item that strikes his fancy.

A Good Motto.

"What is that motto you have over your store door, Mr. Harberdash?"

"That is an old Latin proverb, sir. Sic semper pajamas. It means we are never out of 'em."—Chatter.

There's a good deal of guarantee business in the store keeping of to-day. It's too excessive. Or too reluctant. Half the time it means nothing. Words—only words. This offer to refund the money, or to pay a reward, is made under the hope that you won't want your money back, and that you won't claim the reward. Of course.

So, whoever is honest in making it, and works—not on his own reputation alone, but through the local dealer whom you know, must have something he has faith in back of the guarantee. The business wouldn't stand a year without it.

What is lacking is confidence. Back of that, what is lacking is that clear honesty which is above the "average practice."

Dr. Pierce's medicines are guaranteed to accomplish what they are intended to do, and their makers give the money back if the result isn't apparent.

Doesn't it strike you that a medicine which the makers have so much confidence in, is the medicine for you?

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Porterfield & Losey, 838 Market street, San Francisco.

Sanso—Bad times make money scarce. Rodd—Yes; but not nearly so scarce as a really jolly good time does.

WHAT BRANDRETH'S PILLS DO.

In BRANDRETH'S PILLS the true life medicine has been found, composed as they are of numerous vegetables so combined that each multiplies the virtues of the rest. They never can do any harm. Their action is always the same, no matter how long or in what doses they are taken. They purge away the waste particles of the system. They recruit the animal vigor and arrest the progress of decay. They purify the blood. They stimulate the liver. They invigorate digestion. They open the pores. They make the bowels do the work of the kidneys, thus giving those organs an oftentimes needed rest. One or two at night for a week will demonstrate their power and is generally sufficient to cure ordinary disease.

An Ohio man being offered $8 for his vote "fell in a faint." But he was not at that time a member of the Legislature.

PROTECT YOUR HEALTH.

Cold and moisture combined have a torporising effect upon the bodily organs, and the digestive and secretive processes are apt to be more tardily performed in winter than in the fall. The same is true, also, of the excretory functions. The bowels are often sluggish, and the pores of the skin throw off but little waste matter at this season. The system, therefore, requires opening up a little, and also purifying and regulating, and the safest, surest and most thorough tonic and alterative that can be used for these purposes is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Persons who wish to escape the rheumatic twinges, the dyspeptic agonies, the painful disturbances of the bowels, the bilious attacks, and the nervous visitations, so common at this time of the year, will do well to reinforce their systems with this renowned vegetable stomachic and invigorant. It improves the appetite, strengthens the stomach, cheers the spirits, and renovates the whole physique.

When you can get close enough to a frog to poke him with a stick that's a sign of spring.

All who use Dobbins' Electric Soap praise it as the best, cheapest and most economical family soap made; but if you will try it once it will tell a still stronger tale of its merits itself. Please try it. Your grocer will supply you.

A good dinner is a shield and armor against the whole world.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Patience is mighty glad nowadays to roost on the site of a monument.

VALUABLE DISCOVERY FOR THE BLIND.

Dr. La Grange wishes to make known his New Treatment for the cure of all diseases of the Eye—Cataract, Defective Vision, Inflammation, etc. etc., without Operation or Pain. The remedy can be applied by the patient, and is simple, safe and sure in its effects, strengthening the muscles and nerves of the eye, removing pain almost instantaneously. It is a marvelous discovery and a blessing to the sufferer.

For further particulars address with stamped envelope, R. J. LA GRANGE, M. D., 215 Powell St., fourth door from Geary, San Francisco, Cal.

Office Hours, 11 till 3.

Maud—George told me last night I was his little duck! Ethel—He probably discovered that you were no chicken.

Dr. Wallace Ely has removed his offices to 215 Powell St., San Francisco, Cal., where he continues to give special attention to Kidneys, Bladder, Prostate Gland and all diseases arising therefrom. Diabetes and Bright's Disease treated according to the latest approved method. Most cases can be treated successfully by correspondence. Consultations daily from 10 A. M. to 4 P. M. WALLACE ELY, M. D., 215 Powell St., 4 doors from Geary St., San Francisco, Cal.

Calumny would soon starve and die of itself if nobody took it in and gave it lodging.

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED.

TO THE EDITOR—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy free to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their express and post-office address. Respectfully,

T. A. SLOCUM M. C., 181 Pearl St., New York.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

Use Enameline Stove Polish; no dust, no smell.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.

No other baking powder does such work.

INDISPENSIBLE TO HOUSEKEEPERS. Ask Your Dealer for it. Write for Circular. AMERICAN OIL CO., Agts. 11 to 15 Main St. San Francisco, California.

ASK SMITH'S 18 FRONT ST. STORE to send you their catalogue of cash prices to consumers the HOME CIRCLE.

Address as above. Mention this paper.

VASELINE.

FOR ONE DOLLAR sent us by mail, we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all the following articles carefully packed in a neat box:

One two-ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline	10 cts.
One two-ounce bottle Vaseline Pomade	15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream	15 "
One cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented	10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, scented	25 "
One two-ounce bottle of White Vaseline	25 "
	—$1.10

Or for stamps any single article at the price named. If you have occasion to use Vaseline in any form be careful to accept only genuine goods put up by us in original packages. A great many druggists are trying to persuade buyers to take VASELINE put up by them. Never yield to such persuasion, as the article is an imitation without value, and will not give you the result you expect. A bottle of Blue Seal Vaseline is sold by all druggists at ten cents.

Chesebrough M'f'g. Co., 24 State St., New York.

WANTED SOLDIERS' HOMESTEADS The addresses of all soldiers who homesteaded a less number of acres than 160 and made final proof on the same before June 22, 1874. W. E. MOSES P. O. Box 1765 Denver, Colo. Mention this paper.

BROOKLYN HOTEL Bush St., bet. Montgomery & Sansome, S. F.; conducted on both the European and American plan. This Hotel is under the management of Charles Montgomery, and is the best Family and Business Men's Hotel in San Francisco. Home comforts, cuisine unexcelled, first-class service, highest standard of respectability guaranteed. Board and room, per day, $1.25 to $2.00; single room, 50 cts. to $1.00 per night. Free coach to and from the Hotel.

DO YOU WANT A PARTNER? YOU WANT TO BUY A BUSINESS? YOU WISH TO SELL YOUR BUSINESS?

We are incorporated Agents and propose giving our special attention to the forming of partnerships and the selling of business interests of every description. Investment Securities and City and County Real Estate for sale. Loans Negotiated. Call or address The Mercantile Agency & Investment Co., No. 16 Post Street, San Francisco. Will E. Fisher, Pres. Eugene G. Davis, V. Pres. Wm. S. Tevis, Treas. Alfred D. Hall, Sec'y.

STEINWAY, Gabler and Pease Pianos Meaning the BEST PIANO MADE, and the favorite cheaper Pianos; all Musical Instruments; Bands Supplied; large stock of Sheet Music. STEINWAY HALL, 205 & 208 Post Street, MATTHIAS GRAY CO Call and see our new rooms and new stock.

Deposits Received from $1 and Upwards.

MONEY SAVED IS MONEY EARNED. DEPOSIT IN A GOOD SAVINGS BANK.

PEOPLE'S HOME SAVINGS BANK 605 Market St. cor. 4th St. SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.

Guarantee Capital, $1,000,000.00

Paid up in Cash..... $333,333.33
Subject to Call..... 666,666.67

PAYS INTEREST FROM DATE OF DEPOSIT.

Highest Rates Paid Consistent with Prudent Banking.

RATES PAID LAST TWO TERMS:

On Term Deposits.....5.52%
On Ordinary Deposits.....4.60%

In connection with the Bank are the SAFE DEPOSIT VAULTS, on the street floor with the Bank.

THE STRONGEST, WITHOUT EXCEPTION, ON THE COAST.

Steel Safes, under the Renter's Individual Control, from $4.00 to $50.00 per Year.

Trunks and Valuable Packages, taken on storage at reasonable rates.

Burglar-Proof, Fire-Proof, centrally located and easy of access.

Handsome, well-lighted, secluded and separate rooms for the use of safe renters.

(B) IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The People's Home Savings Bank announces its new system of

5-CENT DEPOSIT STAMPS

This Deposit Stamp System has proved a marked success in England and Germany, and has done wonders in encouraging small savings and in pleasantly inculcating in youthful minds valuable lessons of thrift and economy.

The stamps will be supplied at the Bank and through our Agents, a list of whom may be had on application.

B. O. Carr, Manager and Sec'y. Columbus Waterhouse, President. Pacific Bank, Treasurer.

San Francisco, California, Jan'y 1, 1891.

Statement, Jan. 1st, 1891.

R. H. McDONALD PRES'T. F. W. McDONALD, CASHIER.

ESTABLISHED 1863. Oldest Chartered Bank on the Pacific Coast.

PACIFIC BANK

Capital Stock $1,000,000.00. SURPLUS $800,000.00. AV. RESOURCES, $4,704,700.00

Yearly Volume of Business, $230,000,000.00

ASSETS.

Solvent Bills Receivable	$2,952,318.54
Banking House and other Real Estate	277,061.33
Sundry Stocks and Bonds	308,182.84
Due from Solvent Banks and Bankers	616,026.39
Money on Hand	881,438.18
Total,	$5,035,027.28

(B)

LIABILITIES.

Capital Stock	$1,000,000.00
Surplus Fund	800,000.00
Undivided Profits	3,824.10
Due Depositors	2,129,277.00
Due Banks and Bankers	1,060,702.18
Due Dividends	41,224.00
Total,	$5,035,027.28

San Francisco, California, } R. H. McDONALD, Prest.

Eggs Perfectly Preserved

For 6 months at a cost of ½ cent a dozen, and cannot be distinguished from fresh eggs. Full directions sent for $1. JAMES MORSE, 917 Eddy St.

ASTHMA CURED TO STAY CURED. AND HAY FEVER.... A NEW DEPARTURE. WRITE TO DR. HAROLD HAYES, M.D. BUFFALO, N.Y.

FOR MEN ONLY!

VIGOR AND STRENGTH For LOST or FAILING MANHOOD General and NERVOUS DEBILITY Weakness of Body and Mind, Effects of Errors or Excesses in Old or Young. Robust, Noble MANHOOD fully restored. How to enlarge and Strengthen WEAK, UNDEVELOPED ORGANS & PARTS OF BODY. Absolutely unfailing HOME TREATMENT—Results in a day. Men testify from 50 States and Foreign Countries. Write them. Descriptive Book, explanation and proofs mailed (sealed) free. Address ERIE MEDICAL CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

BIG G Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Sold only by THE EVANS CHEMICAL CO. CINCINNATI, O. U. S. A. Trade Mark

BIG G is the acknowledged leading remedy for all the unnatural discharges and private diseases of men. A certain cure for the debilitating weakness peculiar to women. I prescribe it and feel safe in recommending it to all sufferers. A. J. STONER, M. D., DECATUR, ILL. Sold by Druggists. PRICE $1.00.

Largest General Retail House on Pacific Coast.

WEINSTOCK, LUBIN, & CO., 400-412 K STREET, SACRAMENTO, CAL.

THE ILLUSTRATION shows the home of the largest mail-order shopping business on the coast. Weinstock, Lubin, & Co. sell almost everything that one needs to wear or use at home. They deal largely with manufacturers in Europe and America, thus bringing producer and customer in direct contact.

Small orders are filled as carefully as large ones, and goods not as ordered are returnable at their expense. For whatever you need, or wherever you are, send to them. They don't intend that any one, anywhere, shall supply your wants any better than they.

WEINSTOCK, LUBIN, & CO.'S mail-order shopping trade extends from New Mexico to Washington.

Their Illustrated Catalogue (free) reaches a quarter of a million readers annually.

If it pays others to deal with them, will it not pay you?

Large Descriptive Catalogue, Handsomely Illustrated, Free to Any Address.

DRY GOODS, CLOAKS, MEN'S CLOTHING, HATS, SHOES, MILLINERY, NOTIONS, TRUNKS, TOYS, SILVERWARE, HOUSEHOLD SUPPLIES, ETC.

S. F. N. U. No. 462. New Series No. 17

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor.
Independence, Cal.,
FRIDAY, JUNE 5, 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXII. NO. 51. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JUNE 5, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1075.

INYO INDEPENDENT.
COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.
C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.25
Three Months	1.50
One Month	50
Single Copies

SECRETS OF VOUDOO.

Very Little Known About the Sacred Rights.

AFRICAN AND AMERICAN VOUDOO.

Great Secrecy is Maintained by the Negroes.

The superstitions more or less current among the negroes of Louisiana, under the general name of voudoo, are without doubt relics of savagery brought by the ancestors of the civilized negroes from Africa. The voudoo ceremonial has never been described in detail by any writer on the subject, because, for the most part, there is no regular routine or form of the rites, which, whatever they may have been in the beginning, have doubtless become confused and mingled with various superstitious customs, some of which were derived from the whites themselves, and were preserved from the mediæval times when even the most enlightened people of Europe believed in witchcraft and the practice of magic.

Voudoo rites, as practiced in Louisiana, have usually been conducted in secret, but they are commonly believed to consist of prolonged and violent dancing by persons of both sexes, sometimes with little or no clothing. Tales are told of scenes of wild debauchery which occurred at these dances, and from the frequent statements that living snakes are used in some of these exercises it would appear that a sort of serpent worship makes up at least a part of the groundwork upon which the rites are based.

In the West Indies, but most particularly in Hayti, these survivals of negro savagery are quite common, and the rites are described as revolting to the extreme, embracing serpent worship, the most unalloyed debauchery, with human sacrifices and cannibalism. Sir Spencer St. John, in his work on the "Black Republics of the West Indies," has related at length accounts of these matters, which appear to be established as facts by testimony entirely credible. His narratives of the voudoo practices in Hayti are detailed and circumstantial, and while all the testimony is conclusive as to the African origin of these superstitions the writers who have paid most attention to the subject have not been able to trace the myths to the particular tribe and localities from which they were derived.

DERIVATION OF THE WORD.

The first writer to give any apparent accurate circumstantial account of the African superstitious rites is Major A. B. Ellis, a British officer, who, it seems, has made a study of the negro tribes in their ancient Africa. In The Popular Science Monthly he prints an article in which we find some interesting matter. He gives the following as to the derivation and definition of "voudoo:"

The word vodu belongs to the Ewe language, which is spoken on the slave coast of West Africa, between the River Volta on the west and the kingdom of Porto Novo on the east, and extends inland, as far as it is known, about 100 miles. It is derived from the verb vo—to inspire fear—and is used in just the same way as English speaking people used the word "fetich" that is to say, it is used as a descriptive noun = "god," and also an adjective in the sense of sacred or belonging to a god.

Thus any native god may be described as a vodu, and his image, paraphernalia and sacred tract of bush called vodu. A priest is termed vodu no—"He who stays with the vodu." The word is not an epithet of any particular god, it is a general term, and it is, therefore, incorrect to say that "it is the name of an imaginary being of vast supernatural powers residing in the form of a harmless snake."

No doubt the python god, worshiped by the inhabitants of the southeastern districts of Ewe territory, may very correctly be described as a vodu, but it is not more a vodu than Khebioso, So, Legba, Bo, Hunti, Wu and other gods of the Ewe pantheon. The expression "vodu worship" means, then, "god worship," which is a rather comprehensive term.

AFRICAN AND AMERICAN VOUDOO.

The Whydahs, a people of the Ewe nation, are well known worshipers of a python, or serpent god, and they, about the year 1729, were wholly subjugated by the Dahomeys and sold into slavery. Many of them were carried to the French West Indies, where they maintained their religion. Some of these Whydahs were brought to Louisiana, and hence the snake cult which is found here. But many more tribes, which were not snake worshipers, were also reduced to slavery, and some of their number were brought to America, so that their superstitions were mingled with those of the others.

The Whydahs had a very elaborate serpent cult, maintaining temples where bands of young girls ministered and took part in the dances and other exercises. These female attendants were organized as a sisterhood, known as Kosio. The name of their snake god is Danh-gbi. Says the writer quoted above:

The Kosio of Danh-gbi usually appears with the bosom smeared with palm oil, but their distinguishing mark is a necklet called adunka, made of the twisted filaments of a sprouting palm leaf. On ceremonial occasions they wear a fillet of the same material, with anklets, armlets and neck strings of cowries.

As is the case with the women attached to temples in India, this life is not considered dishonorable, because it is regarded as a part of the service of the religion. The kosio are, indeed, not considered as responsible for their actions. It is the god, say the people, who inspires them at such time.

The voodoo rites as practiced in Louisiana are far less brutal and atrocious than those in use in Hayti, but they are savage and demoralizing. There is no statute against them here, but the dances have been stopped when characterized as disorderly assemblages. It has been supposed that these superstitions will be exterminated by civilization, but such a result has not yet been attained. It is to be doubted if superstition is ever eradicated from human nature. It is claimed even that the negroes are returning to their savage worship. This is an interesting question.—New Orleans Picayune.

Lord Eldon introduced a bill into the British parliament for restraining the liberty of the press, and one of the honorable members moved as an amendment that all anonymous works should have the name of the author printed on the title page.

Edward Everett Hale, the Boston preacher, is 79 years old, but few men are busier. He preaches, edits a magazine and a weekly newspaper, leads missions, dips into politics and is also the president of inaumerable societies.

Peculiarities of Chinese Gordon.

Conversation with Gordon was not a colloquy—an interchange of ideas. When interested in a subject he talked, and you listened to his monologue, delivered in a low, monotonous tone, without apparent excitement, for he was very seldom animated. The stamp of earnest sincerity and strong conviction was on all his utterances, but he did not care to argue or discuss any question, and you saw it would be useless to attempt to change any of his opinions or beliefs. Nor did he seem to care much what your appreciation of his views might be. On men's judgments he set but little store.

On one occasion when we were sitting together near a window he rose up suddenly and said, "It is rather dark," and to my great surprise thrust his hand through a pane of glass to open the outer shutter—not remarking that the sash was down. He cut his hand in several places, but tying it up in his handkerchief paid no further attention to it, but resumed our conversation, resisting my attempts to see whether any pieces of glass had remained in the hand.

My wife was a great favorite of his, and he would call at Shepheard's hotel to see her shortly before the dinner hour. If engaged in earnest conversation he would entirely ignore the gong for dinner and refuse to dine at the table d'hote with us, but would frequently remain an hour longer, utterly oblivious of dinner and its duties.—E. de Leon.

General Sherman at School.

A man who was well acquainted with General Sherman the other day said: "The things that General Sherman seemed to have excelled in in later life were those in which he was the most deficient while at West Point. During the time he was a cadet he never was selected as a cadet officer or even a non-commissioned officer, as he was never deemed soldierly enough.

"As to the general's standing in his class when he graduated he was seventh in engineering, seventh in ethics, fourth in mineralogy and geology, twelfth in infantry tactics, eighth in artillery tactics and in deportment he ranked 216 out of a class of 233. Now the idea that a good scholar will not make a good commanding officer is disproved in this case. Had it not been for the general's low average in conduct he would have in all probability been a star scholar; that is, he would have had a star affixed to his name, as the first five men are given this honor. The general's low grade was not due to bad conduct, but to his unsoldierly appearance."—Philadelphia Press.

Taking an Oath.

The topic of kissing the Bible upon the taking of an oath was the subject of a discussion by the Cogburn club the other evening. Nobody seemed to know just why the discussion was started, but several members who have not been heard from lately had pronounced views upon the subject.

One of the members declared that the kissing habit was a relic of an idolatrous age, when men kissed the mouths of idols to such an extent that they wore them away, and it was believed that he who kissed the mouth of an idol and then told a lie would immediately die. Said he: "The practice of kissing the Bible in courts of justice is more than ten centuries old. In every court or upon the table of every justice you will find a soiled book, upon which you are sworn—a book not soiled by reverent hands in turning its pages, but made unclean and unhealthy by the constant handling of unclean witnesses and the contact of impure lips and mouths."—Utica Observer.

Spiders' Webs.

The webs of those spiders which spin snares out of doors, as the geometrical garden spider, are formed of two sorts of silk, one of which is used for the main cables and the radiating threads, the other for the concentric threads. The latter are thickly studded with minute globules of a viscous substance, which retains the fly, gnat or moth that may blunder against them, while the former are quite dry and harmless. A third kind of silk is produced by the busy little spinner when some such large insect as a wasp has become entangled in the web and threatens to break the delicate structure in its struggles. This takes the form of an enveloping mass, which is suddenly produced, and which effectually prevents any further gyrations on the part of the captured insect.—Cornhill Magazine.

Highly Unnatural.

Walker—I had a most unnatural dream last night, Fadman. I dreamt Binks borrowed five dollars of me for a week.

Fadman—Unnatural! Why, that's Binks all over!

Walker—Yes, but I went on dreaming and I dreamt that Binks paid it back to me at the end of the week!—American Grocer.

One Point Settled.

No matter how irregular the fold may be made, the head of the pin must positively fall in the center of the scarfing. Prince Victor of England has set the seal of his approval upon this edict, and there is no going behind such a sanction.—Clothier and Furnisher.

Mr. Conecake—Ticket for Pecosset, Rhode Islan'.

Agent—Air line?

Mr. Conecake—Blame it, no! Steam cars.—Judge.

Young Freddie.

Old Gentleman—And how old are you, my little man?

Little Freddie—I'm not old at all, sir; I'm nearly new.—London Tit-Bits.

MAPS FOR THE BLIND.

Facts About Their Construction.

HOW THE PUPILS USE THEM.

Cities Indicated by Tack Heads.—"Bounding."

A map for the blind is a curiosity. Blind people are fond of history, and as history cannot be properly learned, or indeed learned at all without some knowledge of geography, and to learn the latter without a map is impossible, something of the kind was necessary, and so special maps were invented and manufactured for the use of the eyeless. They are all of the kind known as the "dissected maps," and are of wood—are really carved blocks. All land stands in relief, the mountains are in ridges, the rivers are long depressions, the state lines are elevated. Each state is a separate block, and the pupil is taught to fit the blocks together and thus prepare for himself a map of the whole country.

The name of each state is marked, sometimes on the back, sometimes on the front, of the block, and the observer will notice all over the surface of the blocks small aggregations of what to him are meaningless dots. These are the names of rivers, towns and cities. Cities are designated by pin or tack heads, and the size and shape of these show the approximate number of population. In one map cities of less than 10,000 inhabitants were indicated by pin heads flat on top, and those of 10,000 to 20,000 by hemispherical. Flat tack heads showed the localities of cities having 20,000 to 50,000, rounded tack heads from 50,000 to 100,000. Tack heads flat and square indicated cities between 100,000 and 200,000. Tack heads round, but with a depression on the top, showed cities of greater size.

"Bounding" the states is an easy matter to the pupil. Taking Missouri, for example, the child requested to do the work began by placing the hand flat on the block to get a general idea of its position; then the forefinger of the right hand found the northwest corner, ran rapidly along the elevated Iowa line, followed the Mississippi down to Kansas, went too far and passed to Helena, where a pause was made, the name read and the mistake discovered; returned, found the line, traced it to the west along the southern limits of Pemiscot and Dunklin counties, missed it again at the St. Francis river, recovered it, went north, found the line at Butler county, ran it to the corner of McDonald county, thence along the western boundary to the starting point and then gave the whole result orally without a moment's hesitation.

By means of these dissected maps a fair idea is also gained by the pupils of the respective size of various countries and states. When asked to compare Ohio with Texas the boy laid the Ohio block on the Texas map, measured it off, turned it this way, that way, carefully keeping the count with his fingers on the space already covered, and finally announced that Texas, according to his idea, was about five times as large as Ohio, a calculation close enough to the truth to excite wonder at the accuracy rather than criticism of its lack of exactness. Dissected maps of every continent are provided, and a large globe, made on the principles which underlie the construction of the maps, enables the pupils to gain a fair general idea of the shape and geographical features of our planet. Geography, in most schools, is used as an aid to the study of history, and is studied not as a collection of meaningless names but as a subject which throws indispensable light on the deeds and words of mankind.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Free Wrestling Match.

As nearly as the spectators could judge it was a friendly wrestling bout between the black bears. There were four of them in a narrow cage in Central park. The smallest one was inclined to run things. He was particularly aggressive toward a bigger, blase looking bear, who seemed to want to be by himself and reflect. When the little one amused himself with biting the other's ear the big fellow thought it was time to put an end to it. He brought his paw around and knocked the little fellow against the bars. They growled challenges back and forth like professionals and then began to wrestle.

There was apparently a well understood agreement that there should be no biting nor striking. It was a wrestling bout without rules. The commotion attracted many people. A man with a little round paunch and thin legs put his flat crowned hat on the side of his head, thrust out two fingers and announced that he would referee the match. He called "time" and "foul" in a loud tone, and quoted the rules to the bears so that a white capped nurse nearly fainted with laughter. The bears were having no end of a good time. They rolled about in the cage and roared as loud as a Bowery actor in a melodrama. Once the big one hugged the little one so hard that his eyeballs seemed to start from his head, but the little fellow broke away and overturned his opponent. The spectators shrieked with delight and applauded vigorously. A sparrow policeman came along, swinging his club and wearing a heavy frown. He stalked up to the cage and stared dully and coldly at the wrestlers. The bears slunk back in their cages. The crowd melted away. The sparrow policeman jerked in his chin, shrugged his shoulders and stalked away.—New York Recorder.

It has been concluded that whatever preservative is to be applied, the timber for piles subjected to the action of seaworms should first be charred, so as to kill any germs near the surface, open the pores of the wood for the antiseptic, and destroy the nutritive matter upon which the worm lives while beginning its action.

A Scotch writer gives a list of instances which tend to prove that his countrymen are willing to suffer great extremity for learning. He mentions one young man who, though of fine manners and aristocratic appearance, dined but three times a week, and then upon a hot twopenny pie.

ERI'S BURGLARS.

Farmer Stebbins and His Wife Get a Terrible Scare from Strangers.

Farmer Eri Stebbins, fast asleep after his hard day's work in the field, was suddenly roused to semi-consciousness by a loud crash. Just what or where the noise was did not appear, and, after a little vain listening for further disturbance, the tired farmer sank again into slumber. A moment later he was once more roused—this time most thoroughly so—by his wife's voice whispering hoarsely in his ear: "Eri! Eri! wake up! There's somebody down suller trampin' round! Don't you hear um?"

Eri did hear some one moving somewhere in the lower part of the house, and he instantly slid out of bed ready to do battle. "Somebody in the cellar! He'd show 'em a thing or two worth remembering." With these warlike thoughts flashing through his mind the farmer slipped on his trousers and stole softly down stairs to the kitchen.

The noise in the cellar sounded very loud now, but not at all like tramping; rather it was a combination of scuffling and scratching with a queer slopping sound, as of some one paddling in water.

Eri was taking down his loaded gun from its hooks on the wall just as another crash sounded through the house. This time the sound was unmistakable; a pan of milk had been knocked from the table to the stone floor. The angry farmer cocked his gun, hurried to the cellar door, threw it open and then—stopped short.

The bright moonlight streaming in at the outside door of the cellar showed five or six half grown pigs making a feast of the milk, which was streaming over the floor.

Eri at once understood the situation. The pigs, which were pastured in the orchard about the house, had found their way to the outer door, pushed it open and entered the cellar. The only thing to do was to drive them out.

So, putting his gun back on the hooks, Eri started to eject the intruders.

Now if any one terrestrial quadruped is harder to drive than all others, that quadruped is a pig. However, as the farmer was experienced in pig driving and thoroughly in earnest, he soon got rid of all except one brute that steadfastly refused to go. He would charge full toward the open door, but when within a few feet of it would suddenly dart aside and rush back to the farthest corner of the cellar. When routed from this lurking place he would repeat his former maneuver with just enough variation to render impossible any attempt to stop him.

After three or four such experiences Eri began to get excited. He would have beaten the pig, but he had no weapon of any sort. At last, however, he got near the brute and, raising his foot, kicked him heavily in the rear. Alas for Eri! he had quite forgotten that he was barefooted.

As a result he nearly broke all the toes of his right foot. The kick, moreover, frightened the poor pig so badly that he suddenly made a bolt up the stairs toward the kitchen.

Now it happened that Dame Stebbins, armed with an old boot and carrying a tallow candle, was just coming to her husband's assistance. There was a fine combination of screams, squeaks and grunts, followed by several heavy bumps, as the the woman and pig rolled together down the stairs and into the puddle of milk below.

At this ludicrous sight Eri burst into laughter, whereupon his indignant spouse soundly berated him for his hardness of heart, declaring that he would laugh if she were to break her neck.

While the farmer was pacifying his angry wife prudent piggy slipped quietly out of the door and made good his escape.—Youth's Companion.

A Dog Modiste in Paris.

Lovers of pet dogs will be interested in the visit of an American lady to the store of a dog modiste in Paris. The sights were very amusing. The place was not so much a store as an establishment, with halls and rooms richly furnished. Ladies tripped in and out all day long, most of the visitors having with them pugs or terriers. The pet dogs were scattered through the rooms, each awaiting its turn. Many small mats and rugs were around the waxed floors, and every bit of carpeting of the kind was occupied by some pretty little creature. These dogs have various dresses. The robe used in the morning is a garment of dark blue cloth. It is called a paletot, and is lined with red flannel. From a leather collar little bells jingle as its wearer walks along. Sometimes a bunch of violets is fastened on the left shoulder of a dog. On very cold days the pet is clad in sealskin of the same pattern, the collar being in fur, mounted in silver.—American Register.

A Tenderfoot in Boom City.

Eastern Man—Yes, I like this climate and have about concluded to send for my family and settle here.

Boom City Man—Well, sir, I can show you some of the finest lots in——

"I can't afford to build. I must live in a rented house at the start. By the way, where is this Boom City you have been talking about?"

"You are in Boom City now. This railroad depot is at the foot of Metropolitan avenue, facing Monument square."

"But where are the houses? There isn't one in sight."

"See here, young fellow; if you are so danged unaesthetic that you can't enjoy the beauties of nature without having it spotted all over with houses you'd better go back East."—Omaha World.

Dr. Christopher Columbus Johnson, an honorary member of the club at Mobile, forwarded a communication in regard to spring tonics, and gave the following recipe for preparing what he calls "Johnson's Liver Annihilator:"

"Water, one gallon; alcohol, one quart. Put in sassafras root, peach stones, tonka beans, persimmon buds, New Orleans molasses and tar to suit the taste, and keep in a dark place for one week. This is warranted to cure perspiration of the liver in three days."

The secretary was ordered to return the heartfelt thanks of the club, and various members will at once prepare the tonic.—Detroit Free Press.

He Didn't Like to Walk.

A clever French comedian when a young and struggling actor in Paris hit on an ingenious plan to save himself the walk from the theater after rehearsal to his lodgings, which were situated near Montmartre cemetery. He dressed in black, and if he espied a funeral procession with a vacant seat in any one of the coaches he promptly pulled out a handkerchief and hid his face in it while hailing the vehicle. Under the impression that he was one of the mourners arrived late he was of course immediately installed in the vacant seat.—London Tit-Bits.

THE TURKISH BATH.

It is Very Popular With the Ladies.

BATHING TO INCREASE THE WEIGHT.

Ladies' Day at a St. Louis Institution.

While St. Louis cannot boast of any Turkish bath houses marked by Parisian or even Levantine luxury and elegance as to fittings and conveniences, she can claim to have a large contingent of fresh looking, handsome women who give full credit to the beautifying influence of regular Turkish baths. All the public Turkish baths have "Ladies' Days," and the register of the leading establishment yields on inspection a long list of names of ladies prominent in society, in the schools, in the churches—in all the sets and circles of the body social of our city. On "Ladies' Days" this bath house can hardly accommodate the crowds of maids, matrons, children and school girls that are its regular customers.

The visitor as well as the attendants at the bath house soon learn to look for certain classes on the same days of each successive week. Those who come by order of their physicians, or for some special physical ailment, are generally promptly on hand Tuesday; society women who come to recuperate their expended strength and for beauty baths, favor Thursday as the off day of their week, when the gayeties pause for breath and one is less likely to "miss something" on that day. Saturday is the teachers' day, when they may stop to shed the dead skin of their spent forces and relax the taut muscles of discipline on the slab where the spray soothingly falls on the just and the unjust alike, for most often, too, some of their recalcitrant pupils come in gay, noisy little shoals and make the corridors ring with their laughter and little screams of merriment.

The faith of many women in the virtues of the Turkish bath is limitless. Those who are too thin believe that they will attain the plumpness of their standard of perfection by continuing the baths. Those who groan with flesh think the bathing and the rubbing will make the burden roll away; those whose complexions are too pale or too sallow seek there color and clearness. The pimpled face expects to grow smooth, the flushed face pale—in sooth, they think the Turkish bath the real fountain of eternal youth and beauty. Women as ugly and old as the Witch of Endor have parboiled themselves until the sap of life has left their skins like parchment, and they have finally dried up and blown away on the way from their tri-weekly trips to the Turkish baths, where they hoped to grow fat, fair, and 40 at least, when scragginess and the seventies had seized them ten years before.

One entire fat family of social as well as personal magnitude in this city never fails to send its ample supply of daughters for a douche and a pounding every Thursday; but pounding only seems to make them more pulpy. Then there are three thin sisters who go to gain symmetry; and three other sisters who have the natural rotundity and rosiness of stocky girls only one generation removed from the farm life of their mother's parental precincts, go for—well, for what? Perhaps to get elongated; perhaps to acquire a little etherealization—heaven knows for what—perhaps only for the fun of it. Then there comes a tall girl, neither too thick nor too thin, too rosy nor too pale, and, as is natural, she inclines to the stout, short girls, and they compare notes on the advantages of Turkish baths.

The mother of nine children, whose friends tell her she "doesn't look a day older" (than whom or when?), comes regularly, and says, "it's the Turkish bath does it." The phrase may be a little promiscuous, but it seems to be understood by her friends and fellow bathers. After her will come a beautiful matron of ten years' standing, who never had any children, and her acquaintances will tell her she never looked so beautiful and strong, and congratulate her on the good times she has going around the world and having no children to keep her at home, and wind up by saying she looks younger than ever, and she says, it is all the Turkish bath.

Then a widely known teacher, wise and learned, will be heard telling a pale little Dante woman that nothing so helps to clear the brain and put spring into the vertebra and make keen the nerves, which, unclogged, aid all the faculties to digest the learned dissertations of the doctors now expounding doctrines of the flesh and the devil as given forth by Goethe at the guild rooms of St. George's, as a thorough massage of the physical woman.

A suffragist, tossing wildly on a hard couch near by, from which she can see the clock, whose warning hour hand stands at half-past 12, notes the fact that "we must all be getting out of here pretty soon for those selfish men, who want the place at 1 o'clock. When women can vote we'll change all this." "I hope you won't vote to let the men in during the women's hours," exclaimed the horrified woman of calculus and belles lettres. "No! wait till I get my corsets on," cries a beauty from her dressing room who has only heard "men" mentioned, and she immediately applies the rabbit's foot to her cheeks, ties down her lace veil and goes out with a last injunction to her bather to "take care of my terry blanket and things"—and with her face toward the door to get the first glimpse of any of those "horrid men" who may be coming, she looks over the register as she signs her name and reads therein a list of the best known names in the city.—St. Louis Republic.

There has been begun in Paris a campaign against trained nurses, and a return to the old system of nursing by Sisters of Charity has been strongly advocated. It is alleged that the mortality in hospitals is 4 per cent. higher since the introduction of trained nurses.

STOPPING ELECTRIC CARS.

Results of Some Experiments on Boston's Principal Line.

Some experiments that have been made to determine the distances required to stop an electric car under ordinary circumstances, from various speeds, have furnished interesting results as to the brake power of street cars, as appears by the annual report of the railroad commissioners. In making the experiments the following conditions were observed: A man with a number of surveying pins was stationed on the step of the rear platform; two observers with stop watches stood upon the platform; a fourth gave the signal for the driver to stop. With the car running at a uniform speed, it was necessary to determine—first, the rate of speed, and, second, the distance required to make a stop.

At a given signal the first stop watch was started and a pin was dropped upon the ground. At the expiration of ten seconds the observer with his stop watch gave another signal and stopped his watch. When this signal was given a second pin was dropped on the ground, the second stop watch was started and the signal given for the driver to put on the brakes. When the car came to rest the second stop watch was stopped and a third pin was dropped. The time required to pass over the distance between the first and second pins showed the rate of speed. The distance between the second and third pins was the length of stop.

On a subsequent occasion the speed was obtained by measuring the time necessary to pass over the distance between given streets. This method of observation was easy to carry out, but was, of course, not precise, and the given lengths of stop were slightly greater than the distances passed over from the time the brakes were actually applied to the wheels, owing to the fact that a fraction of a second was probably lost in giving the signals.

A great variation was shown between the different stops made. "Supposing," say the experts, "the friction to be the same, the length of stop should be as the square of the velocity. Really the friction is less the greater the velocity, so that the length of stop should be somewhat greater than in proportion to the square of the velocity. This was shown in a stop in thirty-six feet at 6.3 miles per hour, and in a stop in forty-eight feet at 12.2 miles per hour instead of a stop in 144 feet, as it would be according to the square of the velocity; or if the stop in forty-eight feet be taken as a basis of comparison the stop from six miles an hour should have been made in twelve feet. The grades in these cases were not greatly different. Again, comparing two experiments in which the speed was nearly the same, the stop on the down grade was much better than on the up grade. Other discrepancies of a similar character were noticed."—Boston Transcript.

The Need of Teaching Patriotism.

At the close of the first half century of the government, when, for instance, Webster delivered his eulogy of Adams and Jefferson, or his oration at the foundation of the Bunker Hill monument, there was no necessity of considering how to stimulate and deepen the sentiment of nationality. The vast flood of foreign immigration with which we are familiar had hardly begun to rise, and an appeal to American patriotism touched every heart with the same emotion. That day is passed.

The necessity and the consequent duty of instruction in national history and of preservation of the national traditions are imperative. The fundamental truths that there is no liberty without law, that every form of class legislation is anti-republican, that educated intelligence is a chief bulwark of free institutions, that individual vigilance and activity are the guarantee of political progress, must be constantly and practically inculcated.—Harper's Weekly.

A Sneezing Spot.

Everybody knows the "crazy bone" in the elbow. A man has had his attention called to an alleged crazy spot above the nose, about which little has been said. He sneezed while in the barber's chair having his hair combed.

"Did I touch the sneezing point?" inquired the barber. He then proceeded to explain that the "sneezing spot" was a sensitive place to the left of the middle of the forehead. "Why," said he, "there are men who come in here who sneeze regularly every time I comb their hair or shave them, just as soon as the comb passes over that spot. I had a man in here who sneezed three times just as hard as he could, all because I touched the 'sneezing spot.' It must be a very small nerve that tickles the nostril."—Albany Journal.

He Weighed 504 Pounds.

Dr. Charles T. Bean died at his home in Chelsea recently of pneumonia. A few years ago he was obliged to abandon outdoor practice on account of growing obesity, and has been confined to his home. His general health has been fair and his mind not impaired. His unnatural corpulence, which amounted to a disease, steadily increased, however, and a short time since he turned the scales at the enormous weight of 504 pounds.

"Here, John, Hand Me My Glass Coat."

A process has been discovered and machinery perfected by which waste glass can be manufactured into cloth. Among the many advantages which this textile will have over other fabrics it is claimed that it is incombustible, can be made in all colors and of any desired strength or thickness.—New York Journal.

THE GREAT BUDDHA.

A Mass of Gold Worshiped in Japan.

LAUGHTER RIGHT UNDER THE GOD'S NOSE

A Head and Shoulders Only, Ninety-Five Feet High.

The temple of Dai-Doutsou (the great Buddha) seems a temple built for fun—an enormous joke to amuse the faithful. This "Great Buddha" has only a head and shoulders, at least ninety-five feet high; he seems to be rising from the depths of the earth, with his neck stretching up like some one making a painful effort to struggle out of the ground. He alone fills all his temple, and his curling hair touches its roof.

One reaches him, just as all the gods are reached, by a series of stairways, porticoes and courts. From the gate of the sanctuary one can not very well explain to oneself at the first glance what is that hillock of gold, that shapeless mass in front (the shoulders of Buddha). It is only afterward, when you look up very high, that you see far above you the colossal gilded face, the huge fixed eyes gazing down upon you from the height of ninety feet with idiotic placidity.

I find myself making this pilgrimage at the same time as a good natured Nippon family of country people, who have come to the holy city for the first time; and the good folks, especially the ladies, cannot get over the idea of seeing so big a god; and there are cries of "Ah!" and "Oh!"—exclamations of surprise—little screams and little laughs. Now, really! this Buddha is just too funny, with his stork-like neck and his stupid air—funny as any of those snow men which urchins make at the corners of the streets—funny as some enormous caricature made to order by little children. And there the little country family are all laughing right under the god's nose—laughing till the tears roll down their cheeks, and the other visitors, and even the guardian bronzes themselves, also laugh to see them laugh. Then they all look at me to see how I feel about it, and I have to laugh, too—can't possibly help it. What a country this Japan, where everything is oddity and contrast! Who could ever imagine that this frivolous little temple, with its reverences and its eternal laugh, could have lived through centuries locked up in such ferocious mystery, and have given birth to those thousands of other temples, with their monsters and their hobgoblins?

MAKING THE ROUND.

By the payment of two cents one is privileged to make the round of the great Buddha—one ascends by a series of sloping plank galleries, placed at a very steep angle, on which you can pass behind the head of the colossus, a little above the nape of the neck. I advance upon it, still accompanied by the voyaging family; the sloping way is slippery, old, broken through here and there, worm eaten—the ladies very nearly fall. I put out my hand to help them, and then we become good friends right away. Behind the enormous head, in a dark nook, an old bronze is squatting down—for one cent he shows us a suit of armor and a war mask which once belonged to the great Taiko-Sama—and then he throws open for our benefit, sundry very ancient idol closets, in which animal headed divinities are conserved with various relics of weird aspect. There we do not laugh any more.

In the court of this temple is the most monstrous of all the bells of Kioto—at least seven or perhaps eight yards around. It is rung by means of an enormous beam tipped with iron—a sort of battering ram suspended horizontally with ropes.

For two cents extra one has the right to experiment with it. I harness myself to the pulling straps, a circle is formed around me, and children run up. Even two or three young girls come behind me to take hold, bothering me a great deal, pulling the wrong way half the time, bursting into fits of laughter. The united strength of the three is almost equal to the power of three good kittens.

Meanwhile the battering ram begins to yield; gradually it begins to swing. Boom! boom! A sound awful, cavernous, and prolonged into mighty orchestral vibrations which must be heard through the whole of the sacred city.

Then the audience is so happy!—delirious with joy—can't get enough of it; every one laughs, every one is in ecstasy.—New Orleans Times-Democrat's Translation from the French.

Metals and Alloys.

One of the curiosities of science is to be found in the effect of impurities upon an alloy of gold and copper or other metal. Workers in the precious metal have long known that minute quantities of certain other metals render gold brittle and unworkable. It is, in fact, a serious difficulty with which jewelers have always had to contend.

In an experiment recently made to demonstrate this truth, 200 sovereigns were melted and a minute portion of lead added, amounting only to the 2,000th part of the weight of the mass. A little of the pure gold had been first run into a small ingot, which was bent and flattened to prove that it was perfectly workable.

The rest of the mass was allowed to harden in the form of a bar, and when it was sufficiently cool to handle it could be broken by a slight tap of a hammer, or even with the fingers. The color of the gold was quite altered and had become an orange brown, while its tenacity—that is, its resistance to a force exerted to pull it asunder—had been reduced from eighteen tons to the square inch to five tons.

A bar of tin, which could scarcely be broken, though it would readily bend double, was rubbed with a slight quantity of quicksilver. The fluid penetrated the solid one, and in a few seconds the bar could be readily broken. Its fractured surface was white, like silver.

Concerning Hydrophobia.

Our knowledge concerning the conditions under which the poison which creates hydrophobia acts has been somewhat advanced by the recent experiments of M. Galtier, of Paris. According to the experiments the dried virus has its poisonous properties destroyed in from four to six days. On the other hand, earlier experiments of the same savant show that an animal which has died of rabies may retain the poison in that part of the brain called the medulla oblongata for six or seven weeks. It is evident that this fact may be of importance in cases where persons have been bitten by animals supposed to be rabid. If the body of the creature has been buried it may be possible to exhume it after many days and make experiments which will serve to show whether danger from the wound is to be apprehended. In this way unfounded anxieties may be allayed.—Popular Science News.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

C. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JUNE 5 ..... 1891.

Peru wants to enjoy the benefits of reciprocity with this country. As a natural consequence reciprocity with Peru means increased trade for San Francisco.

Lieutenant Governor Poujade of Nevada writes from Salt Lake that there is more talk than ever in that city of pushing the railroad south from Milford to Los Angeles.

The President of the Argentine Republic has given assurances that that country will be fitly represented at the World's Fair. In that case he will probably send some apparatus that will make at least one revolution daily.

The Governor of Massachusetts has appointed two women as factory inspectors. It does not seem to have been necessary to make women voters to give them official distinction, as the women suffrage advocates have all along held.

Under the amended law trustees of school districts are no longer required to submit to the voters a proposition to raise money for special school purposes. All that is now required is for the trustees to estimate the amount required and submit the same to the Board of Supervisors. The rate of taxation is then fixed and the money collected the same as other county money.

This is the season of the year when the sweet girl graduate talks learnedly about "standing upon the threshhold of the world prepared for the stern battle of life"—and ponders deeply the question whether that sweet thing in the light summer suit has really noticed how beautifully her hair is banged. But a few short years, and she will bang his hair with a wash board and suggest to him that he had better quit smoking cigarettes and buy little Willie some new pants.

The school and college commencements in this State show a patronage of learning entirely above the proportion due from our population. There is no part of the Union where so much attention is paid to good schools as here. The public schools are pressed by attendance beyond their proper accommodations, and at the same time private institutions, kindergartens, intermediate, academic and collegiate, are crowded full. Such attention to learning and letters argues well for the future of the common-wealth.

Senator Stewart of Nevada says he will introduce an amendment to the constitution at the next term of congress to limit the eligibilty of persons elected to the presidency to one term. He thinks four years' possession of the high office is honor enough for any man, and that the temptation of an incumbent to use his great position and patronage to secure a second election is injurious to the public interests. There is no doubt that the same objections that have been tacitly acquiesced in by the people against a third term are in a measure also tenable against a second term. But on the other hand when the duties of chief magistrate have been discharged with signal ability by a great man, it is natural that the people should desire to re-elect him. The danger lies in the possibility that the power of the office and the ability of the incumbent may at some time be abused so as to compass the perpetuation of the presidency in one individual, thus destroying the character of our institutions and practically forcing upon us a monarchy. While there is no constitutional limit to the number of times a man may be re-elected, yet the unwritten law of common consent has drawn the line at a third term. The test of the efficacy of this unwritten law was made in 1876, when it was proposed to nominate General Grant after he he had served two terms. The movement developed great strength but failed to succeed. No president has been found strong enough to resist the temptation of trying to succeed himself. Many have declared at the outset that they would not seek a second term, but changed their minds before the first term had expired. The merit of Senator Stewart's proposed amendment is to take away the temptation to use the great patronage of the presidency with a view to re-election, so that the duties of the office shall be carried out with a sole view to the advancement of the interests of the country instead of the ambition of the incumbent.

WAY OF THE WORLD.

Aloft on the bough the fair fruit hung,
Caressed by the wind and kissed by the sun.
And standing below as it swung out of reach
One longed for a taste of so luscious a peach.

One just as perfect was lying below
Where the fickle wind tossed it hours ago;
Its tints as dainty, its form as round,
But nobody cared—for it lay on the ground.

It is ever the fruit that is just beyond reach,
Be it fame or honor, or love or a peach,
That man longs for the most—why we never will know,
Yet he scorns to pick where the fruit grows low.

—Ada E. Field in New York Herald.

An Englishman Couldn't See It.

Little Marshall P. Wilder, the famous merrymaker, is perennial, and has a humorous skit for every hour of the day. This is one of his latest, illustrative of an Englishman's appreciation of humor:

I have been in England, and I have studied English humor. Its fundamental principles are not related to the American article that raises a cyclone of laughter. An Englishman was dining at a swell hotel out west, and after he finished his regular dinner he asked for sweets. A waiter from the Bowery had gone west for employment, and was waiting on the particular table at which the Englishman sat.

"And phwat is sweets, sur?" asked the waiter.

The Englishman finally explained that he meant dessert, pudding, etc.

"We 'ave apple and mince pie," said the Bowery man.

"Give me mince pie."

"What's der matter wid der apple pie?" asked the waiter in a hard, I-don't-care-a-continental tone of voice. Many heard the remark and laughed. An hour later I happened to meet the Englishman, and he asked me if I heard the waiter ask him what was the matter with the apple pie. I said 'Yes.' Then the Englishman naively asked me:

"Well, what was the matter with the apple pie?"—New York World.

That Lovely Narcissus.

Narcissus was a mythological young person who had so much beauty that it was in the way. He was interrupted during office hours by people who wanted to admire him, and a case went on record of a woman's thinking so much of him that she would always keep still until he got clear through talking. At last he got a good look at himself in a mirror, and he said he couldn't blame them. He felt that he was a menace to society, and history says that he drowned himself. But he didn't.

He went and got a pair of voluminous trousers, decorated his eye with a large piece of glass, took the fit out of the back of his coat, shoved his chin out of place with his collar, and went about his business satisfied that he had restored their peaces of mind to the feminine members of his acquaintance. But it was in vain. And he is obliged to devote large portions of his time—in fact, nearly all of it—to the search for improvements that will make his garments effective for their true purpose. In the meantime he is obliged to go on bothersomely beloved.—Washington Post.

Clothing of the Esquimaux.

Clothing for men consists of knee breeches, belted at the loins, a loose-fitting cloak trimmed around the bottom, and the hood with wolf or wolverine, or a blending of both, a pair of stockings and a short legged pair of boots with sealskin soles. In winter two suits are worn, the inner suit with the hair next the body and the outer with the hair turned out.

The difference between the dress of men and women is that the latter have their boots, stockings and pantaloons all in one garment. The cloaks of all females have at the back of the neck a fullness for carrying infants.

These cloaks come down below the knees and are gored out at the sides up to the hips, making the front look like an apron.—Exchange.

Many Roman and Greek epicures were very fond of dog's flesh. Before Christianity was established among the Danes, on every ninth year ninety-nine dogs were sacrificed. In Sweden each ninth day ninety-nine dogs were destroyed. But later on dogs were not thought good enough, and every ninth year ninety-nine human beings were immolated, the sons of the reigning tyrant among the rest, in order that the life of the monarch might be prolonged.

It has been concluded that whatever preservative is to be applied, the timber for piles subjected to the action of sea-worms should first be charred, so as to kill any germs near the surface, open the pores of the wood for the antiseptic, and destroy the nutritive matter upon which the worm lives while beginning its action.

A Scotch writer gives a list of instances which tend to prove that his countrymen are willing to suffer great extremity for learning. He mentions one young man who, though of fine manners and aristocratic appearance, dined but three times a week, and then upon a hot twopenny pie.

Lord Eldon introduced a bill into the British parliament for restraining the liberty of the press, and one of the honorable members moved as an amendment that all anonymous works should have the name of the author printed on the title page.

Edward Everett Hale, the Boston preacher, is 79 years old, but few men are busier. He preaches, edits a magazine and a weekly newspaper, leads missions, dips into politics and is also the president of innumerable societies.

Two miles of silk have been drawn from the body of a single spider, and yet it is calculated that twenty-seven large spiders would be required to produce a pound weight of the material.

Promiscuous handshaking in America has repeatedly served as a target for European cynicism. Yet the handshake, after all, is the sincerest manifestation of courteous good will.

At the Table; Guests Present.

Mamma—Why, Bessie! Get down from the back of your chair. What are you doing?

Bessie—Mamma, you told me little girls should be seen, not heard.—Demorest's.

The Red Man's Disappointment.

"Ugh!" said the Indian, in disgust.

"What's the matter, Swallowtail?" asked the agent.

"Big Injun chase white man four mile. Want scalp. Catch white man. Ugh! white man bald."—Harper's Bazar.

EGGS BY MACHINERY.

A PLAN TO MAKE THEM BETTER AND CHEAPER THAN HENS CAN.

What the Manufactured Article Contains. How the Ingredients Are Secured—The Making of the Shell Is Really a Delicate Piece of Work.

Patents have been granted to James Storrey, of Kansas City, for the manufacture of eggs.

All the necessary machinery, which is not worth more than $500 at the outset, is in readiness to begin this overwhelming competition with the American men. If as much success attends the new venture as is anticipated by Mr. Storrey, the contest between the machine and the hen for supremacy in the egg producing business will be short, with the victory to the credit of the former.

Mr. Storrey's process is very simple, and yet he is prepared to manufacture an artificial egg that a connoisseur will find it difficult to distinguish either in appearance or taste from the prime product of a Plymouth Rock or Leghorn.

Lime, water, blood, milk, tallow, peas and one or two other vegetables are the ingredients of his compound. The shell and the yolk will not be difficult of manufacture. To make a good imitation of the "white" of the egg is the part that has required the most ingenuity to conquer, but Mr. Storrey has succeeded in solving the problem successfully.

MAKING THE YOLK.

The yolk of an egg is composed of 30 per cent. of yellow fat, 14 per cent. of caseine, about 3 per cent. albumen and water. The fat is common animal fat, and beef fat, which is very cheap, will be the chief ingredient. To this a liberal amount of caseine, which is that portion of the milk which produces butter and cheese, will be added, and albumen mainly from beef blood, together with water, will be mixed in small quantities. The color, already a yellow, will be treated with a chemical which will serve a double purpose of deepening the color and preserving the mixture in a semi-liquid state until it is cooked.

The "white" of the egg is about one-eighth pure albumen, and is a difficult substance to produce chemically. A substance that appears to the eye exactly similar, and which hardens and whitens when cooked, has been produced by a mixture of legumin, or vegetable albumen, extracted from common peas, and which forms one-fourth of the peas, a little albumen from beef blood, a trifle of sulphur, considerable gelatine and a chemical solution to prevent rapid decomposition, and which also whitens the whole bulk when subjected to heat, just as the egg becomes white when boiled.

As beef blood will be utilized in very large quantities in the big egg mill, a few special cars will be fitted up with tanks to bring the blood from the Chicago slaughter houses.

MAKING THE SHELL.

The shell will be perfectly imitated by a simple solution of lime, water and glue. The machinery that is required is needed mainly in putting the egg together. Every yolk will be first run into a mold to be properly shaped, and then dumped into a second mold, where the right quantity of the white is placed previously. This latter substance, being a gelatine like matter, will incase the yolk very readily. By a unique machine the meat is there enveloped in the shell.

The shell is only partially hardened when the egg is put into it, and as there is a liberal amount of glue added to the lime, the edges of the shell soon adhere to each other very tightly, leaving no traceable mark where they were joined. In order to make the imitation more completely successful, molds of several sizes will be introduced, making the eggs vary in bulk as do the products of any respectable flock of hens. The color of the shell will also be of two or three shades, rendering the likeness to the original still more striking.

Tests have been made which show that the artificial egg can be preserved for a month under proper conditions, and still taste as fresh as one laid by an ordinary hen. As all the ingredients of this reform egg are exceedingly cheap, it can be manufactured at the rate of about three cents a dozen. There will be no limit to the capacity of the novel mill, and families and boarding house keepers can be supplied in any quantities at prices so dazzlingly small as to warrant immediate popularity.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Strange Wants.

They must have a strange herd of sheep in New Zealand, where a settler announced that he wanted "an industrious man to take charge of 3,000 sheep who could talk Spanish." He must have been related to the young lady who announced "that she could do all kinds of sewing and embroidery except music." A western "ad." reads: "Wanted an energetic young man for a retail store partly out of doors, partly behind the counters." A contemporary asks what will be the result when the door is shut.—Providence Journal.

A Share in a Jewel.

There is a story told of a French savant who was shown a priceless jewel by a great duke.

"Thank you, my lord duke," said the man of science, "for allowing me to share with you the possession of so great a treasure."

"In what way?" said the duke.

"Why, your grace can do no more than look at it, and you have allowed me to do the same."—All the Year Round.

Spoke Too Quick.

Mr. Repplier (playing cribbage)—What a very fine crib board, Miss Passee!

Miss Passee (playfully)—A gift from my very first sweetheart, Mr. Repplier, when I was only 15.

Mr. Repplier (with polite interest)—Indeed! That is quite the oldest crib board I ever saw—that is—er—I mean——.—West Shore.

A Dreadful Threat.

A poet having loaned a small amount to a friend found it very difficult to collect the same, as his friend failed to recollect the incident. Meeting his friend in need the poet said:

"If you don't pay me that $17 which you owe me I shall have to resort to extreme measures."

"And what may they be?"

"I'll dedicate my next poem in your honor."

The friend turned pale and shelled out abruptly.—Texas Siftings.

A MOCKING BIRD'S LESSON.

In a Few Minutes It Learned Some New Sounds But Forgot It's Clever Songs.

"There he goes again!" groaned Mr. George Phalen, a wealthy resident of Highbridge. "Was ever man cursed with such a bird?"

"Bird!" exclaimed Mr. Phalen's visitor in astonishment. "Why, you don't mean to say you keep a bird with all those cats in the house?" For the sudden chorus of hissing, spitting and mewing that floated in from the rear room seemed to indicate that an animated feline argument was in progress there.

"There is no cat under my roof," was the reply. "All the noise you hear is made by a single mocking bird. Just step into the other room and look at him. A more woebegone creature you never saw."

The bird, indeed, looked as though he had seen hard and long service. He had no vestige of a tail left, and one of his eyes was gone. His few feathers were ruffled, and all his sleek and glorious beauty had departed.

"Three years ago old Nick (that is his name) was a remarkably handsome bird," said Mr. Phalen, "and his numerous accomplishments made him a great favorite and very valuable. He could whistle 'The Campbells Are Coming' and a dozen other airs with wonderful clearness and musical precision, and he was so clever that he could learn a new tune in an hour. I would not have sold him then for $500.

"But one night everybody in the house was awakened by an awful uproar in the back parlor. The mocking bird was shrieking, shouting and swearing like a human being; a cat, that must have entered by the cellar door, for we harbored none of his kind, was spitting and hissing furiously, and the sound of some heavy metallic object dashed frequently and violently against the furniture was distracting. I went down stairs with a light, and I found that the cat's paw was tightly wedged between the wires of the bird's prison, and the terrified brute was swinging the cage about the room, trying to release himself. Old Nick was nearly dead and badly dilapidated, as you see him now, before I could disentangle the cat from the wires and kick him out into the darkness.

"The bird's tail never grew again, nor did his plumage regain its luster. He was quite silent for a full week, and then he suddenly made the air vocal with a horrible series of caterwaulings, and he has kept them up almost without intermission ever since. In the few dreadful minutes that he passed face to face with the cat he learned every intonation of voice that his assailant could teach him, and utterly forgot all the songs and speeches with which years of careful tuition had enriched his mind. A poor exchange, it seems to me."—New York Sun.

A Scotch student had a curious method of studying. He spread out his books where the hearth rug would naturally have been, and lay there at full length, learning his task by the light of a fire made from roots of decayed trees which he had dug in a wood near Edinburgh and carried to his lodgings.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING SALOON.

Shaving, Hair Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.

WM. H. HUFF, Prop'r

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, - Cal.

New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates.

☞Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.

O. I. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

IRWINS' SALOON

Cor. Edwards and Market Streets,

Independence . Cal.

THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt and furnished in a style second to none on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.

THE BAR

Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.

JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

BELL'S
Flouring Mills,

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.

Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

A. N. BELL,
dependence, Cal.

P. W. FORBES. P. H. MACK.

MACK & FORBES.

Real Estate Agents,

Address,
P. H. MACK, P. W. FORBES,
Independence, Cal. Bishop, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and
Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
☞Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.☜
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
Bishop Creek, Cal.,
Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

J. W. P. LAIRD. P. H. MACK.

MACK & LAIRD.
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

A. R. CONKLIN,
Attorney-at-Law.
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the States of California and Nevada.

HIVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)
Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
☞NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED.☜
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.

DENTISTS.

OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSFIELD, opposite the Southern Hotel.
Prompt and careful treatment given and the easiest possible pain inflicted. Address

WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

FOR SALE CHEAP.

Two span first class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday ..... January 24th
" ..... February 21st
" ..... March 21st
" ..... April 18th
" ..... May 23rd
" ..... June 20th
" ..... July 18th
" ..... August 15th
" ..... September 12th
" ..... October 17th
" ..... November 14th
" ..... December 12th

JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

Smug little FORTUNES have been made at work for us, by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Bonn, Toledo, Ohio. See out. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Can work in spare time or all the time. Big money for workers. Failure unknown among them. NEW and WONDERFUL. Full particulars FREE. H. Hallett & Co., Box 880 PORTLAND, MAINE.

TO ADVERTISERS

A list of 1000 newspapers divided into STATES AND SECTIONS will be sent on application—FREE.
To those who want their advertising to pay, we can offer no better medium for thorough and effective work than the various sections of our Select Local List. GEO. P. ROWELL & CO.,
Newspaper Advertising Bureau,
10 Spruce Street, New York

OFFICIAL.

NOTICE OF

Sheriff's Sale,

ON FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES.

E. H. EDWARDS, Plaintiff,
vs.
WM. F. MATLACK, Administrator of the Estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased
Defendant.

Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure and Sale.

UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF AN ORDER of sale and decree of foreclosure, issued out of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on the 15th day of November, 1890, in an action wherein E. H. Edwards was Plaintiff and Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, was Defendant, and in which said last above mentioned action, E. H. Edwards, the above named Plaintiff, obtained a judgment and decree of foreclosure against Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, Defendant, on the 15th day of November, 1890, for the sums of $1810.02 and $4171.49, gold coin of the United States, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $5981.51, gold coin as aforesaid, which said decree was, on that 15th day of November, 1890, recorded in Judgment Book 1 of said Court, at page 281, (Wm. F. Matlack, Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, the above named Defendant, was by an order of said Superior Court duly made and entered on the 14th day of May, 1891 substituted as Defendant in said action in the place and stead of said Thomas Parker, now deceased.) I am commanded to sell, to satisfy said judgment and decree for the said sum of $1810.02, all those certain lots, pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Beginning at a point twenty-chains East of the North-west Section corner of Section No. twent-eight, in Township No. fifteen South of Range No. thirty six, East, Mt. Diablo Base and Meridian, (magnetic variation fifteen degrees and fifteen minutes East) thence south thirteen and ninety one-hundredths chains to North-west corner of Josiah G. Dodge's land; thence North, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, twenty-two and thirty-one one-hundredths chains to Brewery street in the town of Lone Pine; thence North, twenty-one degrees and forty minutes West, twenty-one one hundredths chains; thence South, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes West, eight and ten one-hundredths chains; thence North eight and forty-eight one hundredths chains to North line of Section No. twenty-eight; thence West thirteen and twenty-nine one-hundredths chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing fifteen and one half acres.

Also a lot of land lying East of the last described tract and on the Wm. L. Moore tract of land North-west of the town of Lone Pine beginning at the North-east corner of said last described tract, thirty three and twenty-nine one hundredths chains East of the North-west corner of Section twenty-eight in Township Fifteen South of Range Thirty-six East, of Mount Diablo Meridian, at an iron post set in the ground; thence, South eight and forty-eight one-hundredth chains to the lane from the last described tract of land to the town of Lone Pine; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, eight and seventy one one-hundredths chains to the East side of Brewery street in said town; thence, South twenty-one degrees and forty minutes East, fifty one-hundredths chains to the North line of Corral street in said town; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, seven and eighty-seven one-hundredths chains to the West line of Main street in said town; thence, North twenty-one degrees and forty minutes West, three and nineteen one-hundredths chains to Section line of said Section twenty-eight; thence, West fifteen chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing eight and seventy-five one hundredths acres.

Also lots Nos. two, three, and the North half of lot six, in block No. 13, upon which is a house; and the fractional part of lots Nos. six, seven and eight in block No. 1 in the town of Lone Pine, in said County and State, as the same are known and designated on the plat of said town now on file in the Recorder's office of said County.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining.

I am also commanded to sell to satisfy said judgment and decree for the said sum of $4171.49, all that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

The East half of the South-west quarter and the West half of the South-east quarter of Section No. twenty-one, in Township No. fifteen, South of Range No. thirty six, East, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on Saturday the 6th day of June, 1891, at 12 o'clock M. of that day, in front of the Court House in the County of Inyo, I will, in obedience to said order of sale and decree of foreclosure and sale, sell separately the above described property, or so much thereof, as may be necessary to satisfy said Plaintiff's judgment, with interest and costs etc., to the highest and best bidder, for cash gold coin of the United States.

Dated this 15th day of May, 1891.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff of Inyo County.
By D. HOLLAND,
Under-Sheriff.

Mack & Laird, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

EXECUTOR'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court in and for the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 14th day of May, 1891, in the matter of the estate of John R. Hughes, deceased, the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of John R. Hughes deceased, will sell, at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, and subject to confirmation by said Superior Court, on Saturday, the 6th day of June, 1891, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John R. Hughes, at the time of his death, and all the right title and interest that the said estate has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to that of the said John R. Hughes at the time of his death, in and to all that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the town of Lone Pine, County of Inyo, state of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

An undivided one-half interest in and to the South half of Lot Number Seven (7), in Block Number Five (5), as the same is known and designated on the official plat of the said town of Lone Pine, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county.

Bids or offers must be in writing and will be received at the residence of the undersigned, about six miles south of the town of Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, gold coin of the United States, ten percent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor on the day of sale, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at expense of purchaser. W. L. HUNTER,

Executor of the last Will and Testament of John R. Hughes, deceased.

Mack & Laird, Attorneys for Executor.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.

Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated, satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.

☞All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine.

FRED BURKHARDT.

OFFICIAL.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, San Francisco, California. Location of works, Marmol, Nevada.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AT A meeting of the Board of Directors, held the 26th day of May 1891, an assessment (No. 13) of Ten Cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, No. 132 California street, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 10th day of July, 1891, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on FRIDAY, the 28th day of July, 1891, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

G. W. LUCE, Secretary.

Office, 135 California St., San Francisco, California.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Independence, California. Location of canal, near Independence, Inyo county.

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of a Board of Directors, held on the 30th day of May, 1891, an assessment (No. One) of Fifty (50) cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary at the office of the company, Independence, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 3d day of July, 1891, will be delinquent, and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Saturday, the 25th day of July, 1891 to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

By order of the Board of Directors.

P. H. MACK, Secretary.

NOTICE FOR PROPOSALS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Lone Pine Canal Company, at its office, in the town of Independence, up till 10 o'clock a. m. of June 13, 1891, for the construction of one mile of ditch, commencing at a point on H. J. Robinson's land about one-half a mile south of the terminus of the Stevens Ditch and running thence in a Southerly direction along and following the line of survey as shown by a map now on file in the company's office.

Said mile of ditch to have a ten inch bottom, eighteen inch cut, and two feet of banks, two feet horizontal to one foot vertical.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids.

P. H. MACK,
Secretary.

Independence, June 4th, 1891.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JOHN LUCAS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased to the Creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his office in the town of Lone Pine, Inyo county, Cal., the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in said Inyo county.

State of California. E. H. EDWARDS,
Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased.

Dated May 5th, 1891.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of PETER DICKSON, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNDERSIGNED, Administrator of the estate of PETER DICKSON, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his residence, in the town of Lone Pine, in the county of Inyo, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in the county of Inyo.

Dated April 18th, 1891.

JOHN P. LUDWIG,
Administrator of said Estate.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

MARY A. BALL, Plaintiff, vs. ROBERT BALL, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Robert Ball, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County, or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant and for costs of suit, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer said Complaint, above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 28th day of February, A. D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

FORBES & TOBEY,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.,
—DEALERS IN—
LUMBER
OF ALL KINDS.

DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS,
LATH,
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.

Matched and Dressed
Flooring.
sep 11-1 y

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JUNE 5 1891

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 97¾
Lead, 4 35
Copper, 13 70
Tin, 20 40
Sugar, .06
Coffee, 20 @ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 13 @ 19.

Rev. H. J. Winsor will breach in Lone Pine at 11 a. m.; George Creek 2:30; Independence, 7:30 p. m. Sunday school at Lone Pine and Independence at 2 p. m.

COUNT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

FRIDAY, May 29, 1891.

Estate of John Lucas, deceased—Filed petition for order of sale.

WEDNESDAY, June 3, 1891.

Estate of John C. Eddy, deceased—Issued inventory and appraisement.

A. Cohn et. al., vs. T. K. Hutchison—Filed original summons.

THURSDAY, June 4, 1891

Estate of Ben. Theban, deceased—Filed inventory and appraisement.

Estate of Duncan Campbell—Filed order.

Estate of John Lucas—Filed proof of publication.

See notice for proposals in another column.

E. H. Edwards came up from Lone Pine yesterday, returning the same day.

The first new potatoes of the season appeared at Independence last week.

Silas Reynolds has been very ill with the grippe at Georges Creek this week. Dr. L. L. Woodin has been in constant attendance.

Mrs. H. J. Winsor has gone to Loyalton Sierra County, to visit her sister.

C. H. Parsons came down from Round Valley on Tuesday and is visiting in the vicinity.

Will Bill Johnson inform us how long it has been since cabbage plants bloomed but once a century?

Misses Sophie and Emily Rhine arrived from San Francisco on last Friday's train on a visit of several weeks with her brothers.

Mrs. J. W. P. Laird, accompanied by Masters Lester and Roland Laird, returned yesterday from a visit to Bishop and Round Valley.

S. P. McKnight, C. E. and daughter came down from Bishop on Tuesday. Mr. McKnight is engaged on work for the Inyo Canal Company.

Hon. Tremmore Coffin of Carson has been visiting Independence and vicinity during the week. He is in a fair way to recover from his recent illness.

A purse of $75 is offered for a footrace [illegible] between Olds, Ober and Diaz. It is understood that Diaz will have plenty backing if the race comes off.

McBride's stallion, Bronco is getting around all right again, and his trainer says he will be in good shape for the races next fall. He will not be used in the stud again this season.

The Independence base ball nine have sent a challenge to the Bishop nine to play at Independence on July 4th, for $75 a side, and have deposited $25 with the secretary as a forfeit.

Master Julian and Miss Elsie Eibeshutz will arrive on to-day's train from San Francisco where they have been attending school. The latter has not visited her home for three years. Mrs. Eibeshutz went to Reno to meet them.

One of the features of the Memorial services at the Opera House to-night will be an address by Judge Conklin. He is a fluent, forcible speaker, and there will evidently be a good attendance to hear him. —Bakersfield Gazette.

A very good idea may be obtained of what can be accomplished with a little labor and care by visiting Lank & Kehoe's place in town. They purchased the Lake place five years ago and set out a young orchard, mostly of apple trees. These are now all making thrifty growth and are bearing, many of them, their second crop. A small vineyard was set out at the same time and this is heavily loaded with young grapes, a quantity being marketed from it last year. There are four hundred trees in the orchard and in five years time every tree will net at least ten dollars a year.

Breyfogle Mines

A Gazette reporter had the pleasure of meeting and conversing with L. J. Hanchett, who passed through Reno last evening on his return to San Francisco from his last visit to the Breyfogle mines. Mr. Hanchett is so well known among the mining men of Nevada and this coast generally that his opinions when based upon his own observations, are considered worthy of full credence, and hence may be regarded in the light of authority. Mr. Hanchett was one of the original owners in the old Pioche mine at Pioche in the early '70's, from which he amassed a large fortune, as did his son-in-law, A. H. Rutherford. Mr. Hanchett has been engaged in mining for many years and hence his views are regarded as those of an intelligent practical miner. He says that he has made two visits to the Breyfogle mines. On his first visit he was well impressed with the prospects, as footwalls in both the Montgomery and Yount claims rich ore was found on the surface. But on his second visit the little sinking which had been done, to a depth of seven or eight feet, changed the appearance of the rock altogether, and the results of horn tests and assays were not at all encouraging. In fact, Mr. Hanchett on his first visit felt inclined to take a small mill into the district, but when he completed his examinations on the second trip he decided to drop the proposition altogether. He is candid in admitting that possibly good mines of small productive character may be developed in time with industry and economy, but he does not believe there is any prospect for any large mining operations to be created in that section.

BIG PINE CORRESPONDENCE.

The opening ball given by the proprietors of the Big Pine Hotel last Friday evening was an unqualified success. Early in the evening guests began to arrive from all over the valley, filling the large house to overflowing. A cordial greeting was given to all by Mr. and Mrs. Williams. A large platform had been erected for dancing on the south end of the building. A piece of canvas about eight feet high was stretched around the sylvan hall, the branches of the locust trees forming a canopy overhead. Chinese lanterns were hung all about and with the gracefully moving forms of the dancers made a lovely picture. The music was good and the management all that could be desired. The supper—well, that settles it. I can't discuss the supper. I am somewhat of an eater myself, but as I was unable to sample more than half the good things provided I am unqualified to express an opinion. I will say, however, that the roasted porker with its gay decorations deserved the place of honor at the feast. After supper dancing was continued until after three o'clock, and a thoroughly enjoyable time was had. The old Mono friends of Mr. and Mrs. Williams were present en masse, and the cordial reception given and the evident desire to please, won many new friends who will look forward with pleasure to any affair given at Big Pine Hotel.

DECORATION DAY CEREMONIES.

The patriotic citizens of Big Pine held a public meeting and determined to fittingly observe Decoration Day. In response to a call a large number of people gathered in the school house on Saturday afternoon last. The meeting was called to order by D. J. Hessian, President of the Day, in a few brief words, and the following programme was well rendered.

1. Song, "Rest, Comrades Rest"..Choir.
2. Address, ...Mr. John Hale.
3. Recitation, "Lives of Great men Imperishable".....Mr. Ed. Smith.
4. Song, "Our Last Grand Camping Ground".....Choir.
5. Recitation, "Thirty-seven".....Fred. Crocker.
6. Recitation, "Custer's Last Ride"..Mr. John Hale.
7. Reading, "Cover Them Over"..Carrie Gregg.
8. Song, "They Rest in Peace"....Choir.

A procession was then formed and marched to the cemetery, and the graves were handsomely decorated with flowers. The grave of Bray Miller, a young man who died last winter, was beautifully decorated with flowers sent from San Francisco. The gathering was then dispersed.

There is a general growl among horse men that no programme is announced for the coming fair. We have some good horses here, but we cannot commence training until we know what we are going to run for.

The smiling countenance of Jake Miller showed up early in the week. Big Pine still has some attractions for Jake.

This burgh is very quiet at present but there a number of colonization schemes on the tapis that may result in lively times in the near future. Will keep you posted.

MR. E.

The Fourth at Independence.

Arrangements for a big Fourth of July celebration at Independence are now fairly under way and a grand affair will surely be had. Over $300 has been subscribed, and more will yet be raised. The native Sons are determined to make their initial venture a grand success. A grand ball will be given at the pavilion on Friday evening, the 3rd. A plan is now under discussion to serve the supper at the pavilion grounds which will be a great convenience. On the morning of the 4th appropriate exercises will be held at the pavilion. In the afternoon children's sports, games and races will complete the programme. There has been considerable discussion as to the respective merits of Olds, Ober and Diaz, and it has been decided to give a purse of $75 for a race of 125 yards, free for all, ten per cent entrance to be added to the purse, the race to start if any two or all of the above named start; otherwise to be declared off. Entries are to close with the secretary, F. E. Densmore, June 20th. This will be a good betting race, and will afford a good opportunity to prove which is the best man at the distance. Other novel features will be added to the programme from time to time.

HEIR TO $500,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A dispatch was received yesterday from Baltimore announcing that George F. Beiser of Brooklyn had become heir to a vast estate there valued at $500,000. The property came through relatives who emigrated from France in the days of the Hugnenots. Mr. Beiser is an accountant in a Fulton street clothing house. Bruce's Law and Inquiry Agency, of Chicago, Ill., prosecuted his claim.—Louisville Courier-Journal, Nov. 27

We are Mr. Beiser's lawyers and by him seeing our advertisement, became the agent of his good fortune. If your ancestors came from the old country write to us, and enclose $1 for our list of heirs. There are more than half a billion dollars in Great Britain and Germany, unclaimed, which rightly belong to people in the United States.

BRUCE'S LAW AND INQUIRY OFFICE,
164 and 166 Randolph St.
Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

The Native Sons have written D. A. Bender endeavoring to get a special train from Hawthorne on the 4th.

BIG PINE HOTEL.

BIG PINE - CAL.

New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates

Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

Thos. Williams,
Proprietor.

NOTICE

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will presen the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For Sale.

A well established butcher business in Independence. No opposition. A good substantial butcher shop with ice house, or refrigerator attached. All tools and implements necessary for carrying on the business. Also a comfortable dwelling on lot adjoining shop. Four large rooms and kitchen. Shop and dwelling are both new and in good condition. The entire property must be included in purchase and terms cash. Apply to

J. C. ROEPER.
Independence, Cal.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer without cost of repairs than any other machine, Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

For Sale!

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE

Eastside Canal.

There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,

C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

J. W. Murphy.

BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work.

Wagons and Carriages Repaired.

HORSESHOEING, $2.00 for CASH

Shop on Edwards St., opposite the Court House, Independence.

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.

Bee Keeper.

Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.

Independence, Inyo Co. Cal

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.

PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP

Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

W. F. MATLACK.....PROPRIETOR.

Horseshoeing .....$2.00 for Cash

For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

BOOTS AND SHOES
MADE AND REPAIRED.
THE BEST MATERIAL.
FIRST-CLASS WORK.

Repairs done Promptly.
Prices Reasonable.

A. J. DAVIS,
nov 30-tf Independence,

Grand Fourth of July Celelebration under the auspices of the N. S. G. W. July Fourth, 1891. Full programme next week.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE,
BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL,
We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.
THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $25 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. Can work in spare time, or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EDWARD CHENOT
Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDIS

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and pric before purchasing elsewhere.

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
n476tf

Lake View Hotel
Keeler, Cal.
John Barnes, Prop'r.

First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
Wines,
Liquors,
& Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

BISHOP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE
BISHOP.

Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St

In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable

S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,

L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.

All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.

Customers supplied on all points

Of the C. & C. Railroad.

Send orders to

L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, patrons can be assured of finding there the best of Buggy Teams, Saddle Horses, and

Livery Accommodations

in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor.

A NEW DEAL!

LONE PINE

Livery, Feed & Sale Stable.

A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.

OPPOSITE SEW ART HOUSE.

Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,

—DEALER IN—

General Merchandise,

LONE PINE,

INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.

Dealer in
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS
Supplies

PROVISIONS,
&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, GEORGE STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R R

TAKING EFFECT

Sunday, November 16,

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1		To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—		Arrives—
Mound House.....	11:30 p. m.		5.50 p. m
Dayton	12:00 p. m.		5:10 p. m.
Wabuska	2:05 p. m.		2:50 p. m
Hawthorne	5.50 p. m.		11:10 a. m.
Luning	7:05 p. m.		9:55 a. m.
Soda Springs.....	8:05 p. m.		9:15 a. m
Belleville.....	9:15 p. m.		7:55a. m.
Candelaria.....	Ar. 10:00 p. m.	Lv.	7:20a. m.
	No. 3.		No. 4.
	Leave—		Arrives—
Belleville.....	8 20 a. m.		5:25 p m.
Benton	11:50 a. m.		1:25 p m.
Bishop Creek	2:00p. m.		11:00 a. m
Alvord.....	2.45 p. m.		10:00 a. m
Independence.....	4:20 p. m.		8:30 a. m
Lone Pine.....	5:10p. m.		7:40 a. m
Keeler.....	Ar. 5:55 p. m.	Lv.	7:00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

At HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (3 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

At LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's. tri-weekly stages (leavin Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville Grantsville and Belmont.

At CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver P Montezuma Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.

D A BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles

OF

Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies'
Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOL

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries a canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

THE CASH STORE
Is Where You Get
WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE

Blacksmith Sh
R. C. Spear, Prop
—ALL WORK ON—
MINING TOOLS,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS
& FREIGHTING OUTFITS
—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—
HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING

All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON

KEELER, CAL.

In Lake View Hotel

BEER, WINES.
LIQUORS and CIGARS

All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.

JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.

J. C. MILLER, Lessee.
—THE BAR—

Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of
WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS

The most careful attention given to the the amusement and comfort of patrons.

A FINE BILLIARD TABLE!

Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon. sept-12 td

Taken away

—sick headache, bilious headache, dizziness, constipation, indigestion, bilious attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. It's a large contract, but the smallest things in the world do the business—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They're the smallest, but the most effective. They go to work in the right way. They cleanse and renovate the system thoroughly—but they do it mildly and gently. You feel the good they do—but you don't feel them doing it. As a Liver Pill, they're unequaled. Sugar-coated, easy to take, and put up in vials, and hermetically sealed, and thus always fresh and reliable. A perfect vest-pocket remedy, in small vials, and only one necessary for a laxative or three for a cathartic.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, because they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You only pay for the good you get.

That's the peculiar plan all Dr. Pierce's medicines are sold on, through druggists.

If a man has nothing to say, he is sure to take much time and use many words in saying it.

STOOD THE TEST.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS have successfully stood the test of over thirty years' use by the public; their virtues have never been equalled by the unscrupulous imitators who have sought to trade upon the reputation of ALLCOCK'S by making plasters with holes in them, and claiming them to be "just as good as ALLCOCK'S."

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS stand to-day indorsed by not only the highest medical authorities, but by millions of grateful patients who have proved their efficacy as a household remedy.

A judicious silence is always better than truth spoken without charity.

EXCURSIONS EAST

Every Tuesday. Pullman Tourist Sleeping Cars to Chicago without change. Shortest Route; Quickest Time; Select Company; Lowest Rates. For descriptive circular, berths and tickets apply to E. A. Holbrook, General Traffic Agent, Chicago and Northwestern Railway, 2 New Montgomery Street, under Palace Hotel, San Francisco.

Truth, wisdom, love, seek reasons; malice seeks only causes.

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet DR. Porterfield & Losey, 838 Market street, San Francisco.

That which is called cynicism is often only disagreeable truth.

Use Enameline Stove Polish; no dust, no smell.

THE BEST STANDARD REMEDIES.

ST. JACOBS OIL TRADE MARK THE GREAT REMEDY FOR PAIN

DR. AUGUST KŒNIG'S Hamburg Breast Tea (Hamburger Brusttheе) —FOR— COUGHS and COLDS.

At Druggists and Dealers, or sent by mail on receipt of 25 cts. (5 packages $1.00) in stamps.

THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., Baltimore, Md.

DIAMOND VERA-CURA —FOR— DYSPEPSIA AND ALL STOMACH TROUBLES.

At Druggists and Dealers, or sent by mail on receipt of 25 cts. (6 boxes $1.00) in stamps. Sample sent free on receipt of 2-cent stamp.

THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., Baltimore, Md.

"August Flower"

For two years I suffered terribly with stomach trouble, and was for all that time under treatment by a physician. He finally, after trying everything, said stomach was about worn out, and that I would have to cease eating solid food for a time at least. I was so weak that I could not work. Finally on the recommendation of a friend who had used your preparations with beneficial results, I procured a bottle of August Flower, and commenced using it. It seemed to do me good at once. I gained in strength and flesh rapidly; my appetite became good, and I suffered no bad effects from what I ate. I feel now like a new man, and consider that August Flower has entirely cured me of Dyspepsia in its worst form. JAMES E. DEDERICK, Saugerties, New York.

A worn-out Stomach.

W. B. Utsey, St. George's, S. C., writes: I have used your August Flower for Dyspepsia and find it an excellent remedy.

BROOKLYN HOTEL Bush St., bet. Montgomery & Sansome, S. F.; conducted on both the European and American plan. This Hotel is under the management of Charles Montgomery, and is the best Family and Business Men's Hotel in San Francisco. Home comforts, cuisine unexcelled, first-class service, highest standard of respectability guaranteed. Board and room, per day, $1.25 to $2.00; single room, 50 cts. to $1.00 per night. Free coach to and from the Hotel.

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER CURED TO STAY CURED. A NEW DEPARTURE. WRITE TO DR. HAROLD HAYES, M.D. BUFFALO, N.Y.

S. F. N. U. No. 463. New Series No. 18

THE SPLENDID SPUR.

Being Memoirs of the Adventures of Mr. John Marvel, a Servant of His late Majesty King Charles I, in the years 1642-3: written by himself.

EDITED IN MODERN ENGLISH BY "Q."

Be sure I was wroth enough; nor did the calm interest of the two snail owners appease me when at breakfast I told them a part of the story. But I thought I read sympathy in the low price at which one of them offered me his horse. 'Twas a tall, black brute, very strong in the loins, and I bought him at once out of my shrunken stock of guineas. At 10 o'clock I set out, not along the Bath road, but bearing to the south, as the young gentlewoman had counseled. I began to hold a high opinion of her advice.

By 12 o'clock I was back at the inn door, clamoring to see the man that sold me the horse, which had gone dead lame after the second mile.

"Dear heart!" cried the landlord, "they are gone, the both, this hour and a half. But they are coming again within the fortnight, and I am expressly to report if you returned, as they had a wager about it."

I turned away, pondering. Two days on the road had put me sadly out of conceit with myself. For mile after mile I trudged, dragging the horse after me by the bridle, till my arms felt as if coming out from their sockets. I would have turned the brute loose and thought myself well quit of him, had it not been for the saddle and bridle he carried.

'Twas about 5 in the evening, and I still laboring along, when, over the low hedge to the right, a man on a sorrel mare leaped easily as a swallow and alighted some ten paces or less in front of me, where he dismounted and stood barring my path. The muzzle of his pistol was in my face before I could lay hand to my own.

"Good evening!" said I.

"You have money about you, doubtless," growled the man curtly, and in a voice that made me start. For by his voice and figure in the dusk I knew him for Capt. Settle; and in the sorrel with the high white stocking I recognized the mare Molly, that poor Anthony Killigrew had given me almost with his last breath.

The bully did not know me, having but seen me for an instant at "The Crown," and then in a very different attire.

"I have but a few poor coins," I answered.

"Then hand 'em over."

"Be shot if I do!" said I, in a passion; and, pulling out a handful from my pocket, I dashed them down in the road.

For a moment the captain took his pistol from my face and stooped to clutch at the golden coins as they trickled and ran to right and left. The next, I had struck out with my right fist, and down he went staggering. His pistol dropped out of his hand and exploded between my feet. I rushed to Molly, caught her bridle, and leaped on her back. 'Twas a near thing, for the captain was rushing towards us. But at the call of my voice the mare gave a bound and turned; and down the road I was borne, light as a feather.

A bullet whizzed past my ears; I heard the captain's curse mingle with the report; and then was out of range and galloping through the dusk.

CHAPTER V.

MY ADVENTURE AT THE "THREE CUPS."

Secure of pursuit, and full of delight in the mare's easy motion, I must have traveled a good six miles before the moon rose. In the frosty sky her rays sparkled cheerfully, and by them I saw on the holsters the silver demi-bear that I knew to be the crest of the Killigrews, having the fellow to it engraved on my sword hilt. So now I was certain 'twas Molly that I bestrode, and took occasion of the light to explore the holsters and saddle flap.

Poor Anthony's pistols were gone—filched, no doubt, by the captain; but you may guess my satisfaction when, on thrusting my hand deeper, I touched a heap of coins, and found them to be gold.

'Twas certainly a rare bargain I had driven with Capt. Settle. For the five or six gold pieces I scattered on the road, I had won close on thirty guineas, as I counted in the moonlight; not to speak of this incomparable Molly. And I began to whistle gleefully, and taste the joke over again and laugh to myself, as we cantered along with the north wind at our backs.

All the same, I had no relish for riding thus till morning. For the night was chill enough to search my very bones after the heat of the late gallop; and, moreover, I knew nothing of the road, which at this hour was quite deserted. So that, coming at length to a tall hill with a black ridge of pine wood standing up against the moon like a fish fin, I was glad enough to note below it, and at some distance from the trees, a window brightly lit, and pushed forward in hope of entertainment.

The building was an inn, though a sorry one. Nor, save for the lighted window, did it wear any grace of hospitality, but thrust out a bare shoulder upon the road, and a sign that creaked overhead and looked for all the world like a gallows. Round this shoulder of the house and into the main yard (that turned churlishly towards the hillside), the wind howled like a beast in pain. I climbed off Molly, and, pressing my hat down on my head, struck a loud rat-tat on the door.

Curiously, it opened at once, and I saw a couple of men in the lighted passage.

"Heard the mare's heels on the road, Cap—Hillo! What in the fiend's name is this?"

Said I, "If you are he that keeps this house, I want two things of you—first, a civil tongue, and next a bed."

"You'll get neither, then."

"Your sign says that you keep an inn."

"Ay—the 'Three Cups;' but we're full."

"Your manner of speech proves that to be a lie."

I liked the fellow's voice so little that 'tis odds I would have remounted Molly and ridden away; but at this instant there floated down the stairs and out through the drink smelling passage a sound that made me jump. 'Twas a girl's voice singing:

> "Hey nonni—nonni—no!
> Men are fools that wish to die!
> Is't not fine to laugh and sing
> When the bells of death do ring."

There was no doubt upon it. The voice belonged to the young gentlewoman I had met at Hungerford. I turned sharply towards the landlord, and was met by another surprise. The second man, that till now had stood well back in the shadow, was peering forward, and devouring Molly with his gaze. 'Twas hard to read his features, but then and there I would have wagered my life he was no other than Luke Settle's comrade, Black Dick.

My mind was made up. "I'll not ride a step farther to-night," said I.

"Then bide there and freeze," answered the landlord.

He was for slamming the door in my face, when the other caught him by the arm, and, pulling him a little back, whispered a word or two. I guessed what this meant, but resolved not to draw back; and presently the landlord's voice began again, betwixt surly and polite:

"Have ye too high a stomach to lie on straw?"

"Oho!" thought I to myself, "then I am to be kept for the mare's sake, but not admitted to the house;" and said aloud that I could put up with a straw bed.

"Because there's the stable loft at your service. As ye hear" (and in fact the singing still went on, only now I heard a man's voice joining in the catch), "our house is full of company. But straw is clean bedding, and the mare I'll help to put in stall."

"Agreed," I said, "on one condition—that you send out a maid to me with a cup of mulled sack; for this cold eats me alive."

To this he consented, and, stepping back into a side room with the other fellow, returned in a minute alone and carrying a lantern, which, in spite of the moon, was needed to guide a stranger across that ruinous yard. The flare, as we picked our way along, fell for a moment on an open cart shed, and, within, on the gilt panels of a coach that I recognized.

In the stable that stood at the far end of the court I was surprised to find half a dozen horses standing, ready saddled and munching their fill of oats. They were ungroomed, and one or two in a lather of sweat that on such a night was hard to account for. But I asked no questions, and my companion vouchsafed no talk, though twice I caught him regarding me curiously as I unbridled the mare in the only vacant stall. Not a word passed as he took the lantern off the peg again and led the way up a ramshackle ladder to the loft above. He was a fat, lumbering fellow, and made the old timbers creak. At the top he sat down the light and pointed to a heap of straw in the corner.

"You's your bed," he growled, and before I could answer was picking his way down the ladder again.

I looked about, and shivered. The eaves of my bed chamber were scarce on speaking terms with the walls, and through a score of crannies at least the wind poured and whistled, so that after shifting my truss of straw a dozen times I found myself still the center of a whirl of draught. The candle flame, too, was puffed this way and that inside the horn sheath. I was losing patience when I heard footsteps below; the ladder creaked, and the red hair and broad shoulders of a chambermaid rose into view. She carried a steaming mug in her hand, and muttered all the while in no very choice talk.

The wench had a kind face, though, and a pair of eyes that did her more credit than her tongue.

"And what's to be my reward for this, I want to know?" she panted out, resting her left palm on her hip.

"Why, a groat or two," said I, "when it comes to the reckoning."

"Lud!" she cried, "what a dull young man!"

"Dull?"

"Ay—to make me ask for a kiss in so many words;" and with the back of her left hand she wiped her mouth for it frankly, while she held out the mug in her right.

"Oh!" I said, "I beg your pardon, but my wits are frozen up, I think. There's two, for interest, and another if you tell me whom your master entertains to-night, that I must be content with this crib."

She took the kisses with composure and said:

"Well, to begin, there's the gentlefolk that came this afternoon with their own carriage and heathenish French servant; a cranky old grandee and a daughter with more airs than a peacock; Sir Something-or-other Killigrew—Lord bless the boy!"

For I had dropped the mug and spilled the hot sack all about the straw, whose it trickled away with a fragrance reproachfully delicious.

"Now I beg your pardon a hundred times, but the chill is in my bones worse than the ague;" and, huddling my shoulders up, I counterfeited a shivering fit with a truthfulness that surprised myself.

"Poor lad!"

"—And 'tis first hot and then cold all down my spine."

"There, now!"

"And goose flesh and flushes all over my body."

"Dear heart—and to pass the night in this grave of a place!"

"And by morning I shall be in a high fever; and oh! I feel I shall die of it!"

"Don't; don't!" The honest girl's eyes were full of tears. "I wonder, now?—she began; and I waited, eager for her next words. "Sure, master's at cards in the parlor and 'il be drunk by midnight. Shalt pass the night by the kitchen fire, if only thou make no noise."

"But your mistress—what will she say?"

"Is in heaven these two years, and out of master's speaking distance forever. So blow out the light and follow me gently."

Still feigning to shiver, I followed her down the ladder and through the stable into the open. The wind by this time had brought up some heavy clouds and massed them about the moon; but 'twas freezing hard, nevertheless. The girl took me by the hand to guide me, for, save from one bright window in the upper floor, there was no light at all in the yard. Clearly, she was in dread of her master's anger, for we stole across like ghosts, and once or twice she whispered a warning when my toe kicked against a loose cobble. But just as I seemed to be walking into a stone wall she put out her hand. I heard the click of a latch and stood in a dark, narrow passage.

The passage led to a second door that opened on a wide, stone paved kitchen, lit by a cheerful fire, whereon a kettle hissed and bubbled as the vapor lifted the cover. Close by the chimney corner was a sort of trap, or buttery hatch, for pushing the hot dishes conveniently into the parlor on the other side of the wall. Besides this, for furniture, the room held a broad deal table, an oak dresser, a linen press, a rack with hams and strings of onions depending from it, a settle and a chair or two, with (for decoration) a dozen or so of ballad sheets stuck among the dish covers along the wall.

"Sit," whispered the girl, "and make no noise, while I brew a rack punch for the men folk in the parlor." She jerked her thumb towards the buttery hatch, where I had already caught the murmur of voices.

I took up a chair softly, and set it down between the hatch and the fireplace, so that while warming my knees I could catch any word spoken more than ordinary loud on the other side of the wall. The chambermaid stirred the fire briskly, and moved about singing, as she fetched down bottles and glasses from the dresser:

> "Lament ye maids an' darters
> For constant Sarah Ann,
> Who hanged hersel' in her garters
> All for the love o' man,
> All for the"——

She was pausing, bottle in hand, to take the high note; but hushed suddenly at the sound of the voices singing in the room upstairs:

> "Vivre en tout cas
> C'est le grand soulas
> Des honnetes gens:"

"That's the foreigners," said the chambermaid, and went on with her ditty:

> "All for the love of a soulger
> Whose christ'ning name was Jan."

A volley of oaths sounded through the buttery hatch.

"—And that's the true born Englishmen, as you may tell by their speech. 'Tis pretty company the master keeps these days."

She was continuing her song when I held up a finger for silence. In fact, through the hatch my ear had caught a sentence that set me listening for more with a still heart.

"Damn the captain!" the landlord's gruff voice was saying; "I warned 'n agen this fancy business when sober, cool headed work was toward."

"Settie's way from his cradle," growled another; "and times enough I've told 'n: 'Cap'n,' says I, 'there's no sense o' proportions about ye.' A master mind, sirs, but 'a 'll be hanged for a hen roost, so sure as my name's Bill Widdicomb."

"Ugly words—what a creeping influence has that same mention o' hanging!" piped a thinner voice.

"Hold thy complaints, Old Mortification," put in a speaker that I recognized for Black Dick; "sure the pretty maid upstairs is tender game. Hark how they sing!"

And, indeed, the threatened folk upstairs were singing their catch very choicely, with the girl's clear voice to lead them:

> "Comment dit papa
> —Margoton, ma mie?"

"Heathen language, to be sure," said the thin voice again, as the chorus ceased; "thinks I to mysel', 'They be but Papisters,' an' my doubting mind is mightily reconciled to manslaugter."

"I don't like beginning 'ithout the cap'n," observed Black Dick; "though I doubt something has miscarried. Else, how did that young spark ride in upon the mare?"

"An' that's what thy question should ha' been, Dick, with a pistol to his skull."

"He'll keep till the morrow."

"We'll give Settle half an hour more," said the landlord. "Mary!" he pushed open the hatch, so that I had barely time to duck my head out of view, "fetch in the punch, girl. How did'st thou leave the young man i' the loft?"

"Asleep, or nearly," answered Mary—

> "Who hanged hersel' in her gar-ters,
> All for the love o' man——

"Anon, anon, master: wait only till I get the kettle on the boil."

The hatch was slipped to again. I stood up and made a step towards the girl.

"How many are they?" I asked, jerking a finger in the direction of the parlor.

"A dozen all but one."

"Where is the foreign guests' room?"

"Left hand, on the first landing."

"The staircase?"

"Just outside the door."

"Then sing—go on singing for your life."

"But"——

"Sing!"

"Dear heart, they'll murder thee! Oh! for pity's sake, let go my wrist—

> "Lament, ye maids and darters!"

I stole to the door and peeped out. A lantern hung in the passage, and showed the staircase directly in front of me. I stayed for a moment to pull off my boots, and, holding them in my left hand, crept up the stairs. In the kitchen, the girl was singing and clattering the glasses together. Behind the door, at the head of the stairs, I heard voices talking. I slipped on my boots again and tapped on the panel.

"Come in!"

Let me try to describe that on which my eyes rested as I pushed the door wide. 'Twas a long room, wainscoted half up the wall in some dark wood, and in daytime lit by one window only, which now was hung with red curtains. By the fireplace, where a brisk wood fire was crackling, leaned the young gentlewoman I had met at Hungerford, who, as she now turned her eyes upon me, ceased fingering the guitar or mandolin that she held against her waist, and raised her pretty head not without curiosity.

But 'twas on the table in the center of the chamber that my gaze settled; and on two men beside it, of whom I must speak more particularly.

The elder, who sat in a high backed chair, was a little, frail, deformed gentleman of about fifty, dressed very richly in dark velvet and furs, and wore on his head a velvet skull cap, round which his white hair stuck up like a ferret's. But the oddest thing about him was a complexion that any maid of sixteen would give her ears for—of a pink and white so transparent that it seemed a soft light must be glowing beneath his skin. On either cheek bone this delicate coloring centered in a deeper flush. This is as much as I need say about his appearance, except that his eyes were very bright and sharp and his chin stuck out like a vicious mule's.

The table before him was covered with bottles and flasks, in the middle of which stood a silver lamp burning, and over it a silver saucepan that sent up a rare fragrance as the liquid within it simmered and bubbled. So eager was the old gentleman in watching the progress of his mixture, that he merely glanced up at my entrance and then, holding up a hand for silence, turned his eyes on the saucepan again.

The second man was the broad shouldered lackey I had seen riding behind the coach, and now stood over the saucepan with a twisted flask in his hand, from which he poured a red sirup very gingerly, drop by drop, with the tail of his eye turned on his master's face, that he might know when to cease.

Now it may be that my entrance upset this experiment in strong drinks. At any rate, I had scarce come to a stand about three paces inside the door, when the little old gentleman bounces up in a fury, kicks over his chair, hurls the nearest bottles to right and left, and sends the silver saucepan spinning across the table to my very feet, where it scalded me clean through the boot, and made me hop for pain.

"Spoiled—spoiled!" he screamed; "drenched in filthy liquor, when it should have breathed but a taste!"

And to my amazement he sprang on the strapping servant like a wild cat and began to beat, cuff and belabor him with all the strength of his puny limbs.

'Twas like a scene out of Bedlam. Yet all the while the girl leaned quietly against the mantel shelf and softly touched the strings of her instrument, while the servant took the rain of blows and slaps as though 'twere a summer shower, grinning all over his face and making no resistance at all.

Then, as I stood dumb with perplexity, the old gentleman let go his hold of the fellow's hair, and, dropping on the floor, began to roll about in a fit of coughing, the like of which no man can imagine. 'Twas hideous. He barked, and writhed, and barked again, till the disorder seemed to search and rack every innermost inch of his small frame. And in the intervals of coughing his exclamations were terrible to listen to.

"He's dying!" I cried, and ran forward to help.

The servant picked up the chair, and together we set him in it. By degrees the violence of the cough abated, and he lay back, livid in the face, with his eyes closed and his hands clutching the knobs of the chair. I turned to the girl. She had neither spoken nor stirred, but now came forward and calmly asked my business.

"I think," said I, "that your name is Killigrew?"

"I am Delia Killigrew, and this is my father, Sir Deakin."

"Now on his way to visit his estates in Cornwall?"

She nodded.

"Then I have to warn you that your lives are in danger." And, gently as possible, I told her what I had seen and heard down stairs. In the middle of my tale the servant stepped to the door, and returned quietly. There was no lock on the inside. After a minute he went across and drew the red curtains. The window had a grating within, of iron bars as thick as a man's thumb, strongly clamped in the stone work, and not four inches apart. Clearly, he was a man of few words; for, returning, he merely pulled out his sword and waited for the end of my tale.

The girl also did not interrupt me, but listened in silence. As I ceased, she said:

"Is this all you know?"

"No," answered I, "it is not. But the rest I promise to tell you if we escape from this place alive. Will this content you?"

She turned to the servant, who nodded. Whereupon she held out her hand very cordially.

"Sir, listen; we are travelers bound for Cornwall, as you know, and have some small possessions that will poorly reward the greed of these violent men. Nevertheless, we should be hurrying on our journey did we not await my brother Anthony, who was to have ridden from Oxford to join us here, but has been delayed, doubtless on the king's business"——

(To be Continued.)

The Canadian Surveyor-General denies that Canada has lost any territory by the misplacement of boundary marks in Washington. On the contrary, there is a probability that she has gained a slice of a quarter of a mile, for several miles, of Uncle Sam's domain.

AN OLD LAND MARK.

Among the old land-marks of San Francisco, and around which nothing but pleasant memories cling, is the PACIFIC BANK. No depositors can say they have lost money in this staunch institution. In stands at the head of all that is just and right, and has become a synonym through twenty-seven years of continued prosperity, of all that is solid, substantial and reliable in a financial sense.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding, and Itching Piles when all other Ointments have failed. It absorbs the tumors, allays the itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and Itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted. Sold by Druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price, 50c. and $1.00 per box. WILLIAMS M'F'G CO., Props., Cleveland, O.

The highest exercise of charity is charity toward the uncharitable.

THROUGH THE WEARY HOURS

Of many a night, made doubly long by its protracted agony, the rheumatic sufferer tosses to and fro on his sleepless coach, vainly praying for that rest which only comes by fits and starts. His malady is one which ordinary medicines too often fail to relieve, but there is ample evidence to prove that the efficient blood depurent, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, affords the rheumatic a reliable means of relief. Check the malady in its incipient stages, when the first premonitory twinges come on, with this agreeable medicine, and avoid years of torture. Whatever be the rationale of the active influence of the Bitters upon this malady, certain it is that no evidence relating to its effect is more direct and positive than that which relates to its action in cases of rheumatism. Like all sterling remedies, however, it deserves a protracted, systematic trial, and should not be abandoned because not at once remedial. It is equally efficacious in dyspepsia, indigestion and kindred diseases.

The wise prove, and the foolish confess by their conduct, that a life of employment is the only life worth living.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Never confide in a young man—new pails lank. Never tell your secrets to the aged—old doors seldom shut closely.

"Penny wise and pound foolish" are those who think it economy to use cheap soda and rosin soaps, instead of the good old Dobbins' Electric Soap; for sale by all grocers since 1864. Try it once. Be sure, buy genuine.

Great minds are too busy with great thoughts and deeds to be annoyed much by small insults.

The Occidental Hotel, San Francisco, is universally pronounced by the public the model hotel of the Pacific Coast. Everything is perfection to the minutest detail, and guests are made to feel entirely at home. J. A. Hooper, Manager.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation permanently. For sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all druggists.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

WANTED SOLDIERS' HOMESTEADS The addresses of all soldiers who homesteaded a less number of acres than 160 and made final proof on the same before June 22, 1874. W. E. Moses P. O. Box 1765. Denver, Colo. Mention this paper.

WANTED TO EMPLOY Agents or Organizers, on Cash terms, in all communities, for the Annual Benefit Society of Philadelphia, Pa., Endowment plan, doubling our money in one year. Admits Ladies and Gents from 14 to 70; pays sick benefits; is not a secret order; has over 9000 members in 17 states, 97 lodges of this order in Philadelphia; Lady or Gentleman can secure this at once, with full particulars, by addressing, W. H. LOOMIS, M. D., Deputy Supreme Councilor for the Pacific Coast, Alameda, California. Box 867.

Old Gold and Silver Bought; send your old Gold and Silver by mail to the old and reliable house of A. Coleman, 41 Third street, San Francisco; I will send by return mail the cash, according to assay; if the amount is not satisfactory will return gold.

HUMORS of the BLOOD & SKIN Cured by Cuticura

HUMORS OF THE BLOOD, SKIN, AND Scalp, whether itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, blotchy, or copper-colored, with loss of hair, either simple, scrofulous, hereditary, or contagious, are speedily, permanently, economically, and infallibly cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood and Skin Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. CUTICURA REMEDIES are the only infallible blood and skin purifiers, and daily effect more great cures of blood and skin diseases than all other remedies combined.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston, Mass. Send for "How to Cure Blood and Skin Diseases."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Backache, kidney pains, weakness, and rheumatism relieved in one minute by the celebrated CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

No Fire, No Boiler, No Danger. Always Ready.

BUY THE REGAN VAPOR ENGINE

For Pumping Water or Wine, Spraying Fruit Trees, Sawing Wood, Running Lathes, Electric Light Plants, etc.

REGAN VAPOR ENGINE CO., 221-223 First Street, S. F.

THE GAVI CALIFORNIA FRUIT Female Pills.

Perfectly Harmless; a Positive Preventative for Suppressed, Irregular and Painful Menstruation, no matter how weak the patient is or what the difficulty may be. Price $2.50 per box. Postpaid. Secure from observation. PROSSER BROS., 111 Grant Avenue, San Francisco, Cal.

NEW HOUSE PLANS.

PARTIES INTENDING BUILDING AND sending 50 cts. to pay postage and packing will receive my new book of exteriors and interiors of over 46 New Dwelling Houses of the latest style. Address SAMUEL NEWSOM, 318 PHELAN BLOCK, SAN FRANCISCO.

ORIGINAL BUCKEYE MOWERS, McCORMICK MOWERS, BRADLEY'S WHEELED WIRE RAKES. All kinds of Hay Presses and Haying Tools. Truman-Hooker Co.'s Bale-Ties. Truman, Hooker & Co., San Francisco and Fresno.

STEINWAY, Gabler and Pease Pianos Meaning the BEST PIANO MADE, and the favorite cheaper Pianos; all Musical Instruments; Bands Supplied; large stock of Sheet Music. STEINWAY HALL, 206 & 208 Post Street, MATTHIAS GRAY CO. Call and see our new rooms and new stock.

DR. R. W. PAYNE, Specialist for Nose, Throat and Lungs. Academy of Sciences, San Francisco, Cal.

NELSON'S AMYCOSE. Too much effort cannot be made to call the attention to the great value of NELSON'S AMYCOSE. My young son being troubled with Catarrh for nine years I was induced to try a bottle of it. I found, after using it a few weeks that it not only relieved, but positively cured him of his terrible disease; it is also a powerful remedy for all throat troubles. I hear it recommend it to the public, wishing them to be benefitted by such a good article. MME. B. BIBER, 725 Sutter Street, San Francisco, Cal.

CROLEY'S CALIFORNIA ROUP CURE

NOTICE.—When using this remedy it is not necessary to remove the sick fowls from the well ones.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

Contains nothing injurious. One bottle sufficient to treat 500 Fowls. Best, cheapest, and most easily applied Remedy on the market.

Directions.

Pour one tablespoonful of this liquid into a pint of luke warm water, into which dip the bird's head two or three times, completely filling nostrils, mouth and eyes. 100 can be treated in one hour. Price, $1.00 Per Bottle. Six Bottles, $5.00.

TESTIMONIALS.

Sacramento Poultry Yards, Sacramento, Cal. Please send at once three more bottles; I find it a splendid remedy and have made some wonderful cures with it. Have not lost a case so far. C. J. COX.

Oakdale Poultry Yards, Oakdale, Cal. In nearly every instance it effected a cure. I consider it the BEST remedy for Roup I ever tried. O. J. COLLY.

GEO. H. CROLEY, Dealer in all Poultry and Dog Remedies, Supplies, Books, Papers, Etc., 414 Sacramento Street, San Francisco.

CHICHESTER ENGLISH. RED CROSS PENNYROYAL PILLS DIAMOND BRAND. THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE. The only Safe, Sure, and reliable Pill for sale. Ladies, ask Druggist for Chichester's English Diamond Brand in Red and Gold metallic boxes sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other kind. Refuse Substitutions and Imitations. All pills in pasteboard boxes, pink wrappers, are dangerous counterfeits. At Druggists, or send us 4c. in stamps for particulars, testimonials, and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Name Paper. CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO., Madison Square, Sold by all Local Druggists. PHILADELPHIA, PA.

This Picture, Panel size, mailed for 4 cents.

CURE Billousness, Sick Headache, Malaria.

J. F. SMITH & CO., Makers of "Bile Beans," 255 & 257 Greenwich St., N. Y. City. BILE BEANS.

PISO'S REMEDY FOR CATARRH.—Best. Easiest to use. Cheapest. Relief is immediate. A cure is certain. For Cold in the Head it has no equal.

CATARRH

It is an Ointment, of which a small particle is applied to the nostrils. Price 50c. Sold by druggists or sent by mail. Address: E. T. HAZELTINE, Warren, Pa.

"PUNCH" says "Ought to be done?—Quick! it stands for nothing." The house ought to be cleaned with Sapolio. Try a cake in your next house-cleaning and be convinced.

"IGNORANCE of the law excuses no man," and ignorance is no excuse for a dirty house or greasy kitchen. Better clean them in the old way than not at all; but the modern and sensible way is to use SAPOLIO on paint, on floors, on windows, on pots and pans, and even on statuary. To be ignorant of the uses of SAPOLIO is to be behind the age.

A State of Siege

How many people there are who regard the coming of winter as a constant state of siege. It seems as if the elements sat down outside the walls of health and now and again, led by the north wind and his attendant blasts, broke over the ramparts, spreading colds, pneumonia and death. Who knows when the next storm may come and what its effects upon your constitution may be? The fortifications of health must be made strong. SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda will aid you to hold out against Coughs, Colds, Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases, until the siege is raised. It prevents wasting in children. Palatable as Milk.

SPECIAL.—Scott's Emulsion is non-secret, and is prescribed by the Medical Profession all over the world, because its ingredients are scientifically combined in such a manner as to greatly increase their remedial value.

CAUTION.—Scott's Emulsion is put up in salmon-colored wrappers. Be sure and get the genuine. Prepared only by Scott & Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, New York. Sold by all Druggists.

TIGER MOWERS.

Cut 4 feet, 3inches,	$75 00
Cut 5 feet,	82 50
Cut 6 feet,	90 00

Will cut where any other Mower can.

Baker & Hamilton San Francisco, Cal.

WE QUOTE SPECIAL

Pop Corn, shelled, per 100 lbs.	$2 25
Rice, best quality, imported, 100 lbs.	5 50
Silver Flake Hominy, 50 lb. bbl.	2 25
Japan Tea, chest, lots, lb.	10c to 85c
Cooking Raisins, as wanted	5c to 6c
Dried Grapes	4c to 5c
Eastern Codfish, extra	8c to 10c
Vermont Syrup, qts. 25c; ½ gals. 50c, gals.	$1 00
Pure Maple Syrup, 1 gal. cans	1 35
Rock Candy Drips (genuine), 5 gals.	3 00
Table Grapes, finest quality, doz	1 60
Table Plums, finest quality, doz	1 60
Axle Greese, best, 50 lbs.	2 50
Alfalfa, finest seed, 100 lbs.	8 75

Write for copy, free, of forty page catalogue; contains price of several thousand articles. Address Smith's Cash Store, 416 and 418 Front Street, San Francisco.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St. New York.

JAMES LEFFEL WATER WHEELS

THE JAMES LEFFEL & CO. We send FREE to those desiring information, the Finest Pamphlet Published.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, or Liberty St., NEW YORK CITY.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor.

Independence, Cal.,

FRIDAY, JUNE , 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXII. NO. 52. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JUNE 12, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1076.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.25
Three Months	1.50
One Month	50
Single Copies

TROUBLE HUNTERS.

Things Seen by Telegraph Pole Climbers.

LOOKING ON BEECHER'S DEATH BED.

How Breaks in the System are Discovered and Remedied.

To a person not thoroughly versed in matters pertaining to telegraphing the line room on the seventh floor of the Western Union building on Broadway would prove particularly interesting. It is situated immediately beneath the switchboard, and has over 5,000 wires entering the different windows. This is the linemen's headquarters, and the starting point of the "trouble hunters."

"I am often asked what a 'trouble hunter' is, and I'll tell you," said one of the oldest hands to a Star reporter who was sitting in the room yesterday. "We are notified by one of the operators at the switchboard that circuit thirty-six, say, is dead, and the 'trouble hunter' starts from this point and follows the wire carefully to the spot where the break is. There his responsibility ceases and the repair gang take hold and remedy what defect they find. There are three classes of difficulties we encounter. They are designated as 'open,' 'ground' and 'escape.' An 'open' is a complete break in the wire, which is easily enough repaired when found.

A COOL HEAD REQUIRED.

"When a wire 'grounds' it's a different thing. The earth, of course, is a repository for all electrical fluids, and if an exposed wire touches at any place it naturally interferes with the circuit. A green pole, when wet, is also an excellent conductor, and frequently causes us no end of trouble. A telegraph pole should be thoroughly seasoned before being put into use, but frequently a green one is put up, and then after a heavy shower the wrapper around the wire may become worn, and, the line coming in contact with the green wood, the electrical current, instead of being carried along on the circuit, runs into the earth; and until the defect is remedied the line is practically useless. A green pole from a window, touching an exposed wire, would not interfere with the working unless the pole in some way ran into the earth.

"An 'escape' is on the same principle as a 'ground.' It generally occurs where the insulation on a wire becomes worn and part of the electrical fluid escapes and part runs on the circuit."

"What are the principal qualifications to become a lineman?"

"A cool head. Any one could perform the mechanical part of the work after a little experience, but to do it at an elevation of a couple of hundred feet on a slim pole, when a fall means certain death, is another thing. When a strong wind is blowing it makes the task particularly hard and dangerous. The spurs we wear, attached to our boots, sometimes give way; and then again the wood is often rotten, and one misstep means a fall. There's a knack in climbing up a pole properly, but it's not half as bad as the coming down. The sensation, I can tell you, is very peculiar at a new hand.

SEEN FROM THE POLE'S TOP.

"According to the statement of half a dozen linemen spoken to, some very queer sights have been witnessed by them while perched on a crossbar of a pole. One of them in relating his experience said he was working for a telegraph company in Brooklyn and had been sent to repair a wire on Clark street. It was necessary for him to climb nearly every pole in the street, and while ascending one near the corner of Hicks street he was enabled to look diagonally into the windows of a house. The sight he saw riveted his attention for a few moments. There was an elderly gentleman on the bed surrounded by members of his family, and was evidently dying. The man gazed at the picture a moment in surprise, and then proceeded with his work and descended to the ground. The house faced on Hicks street, and before the door a small crowd had gathered, and were discussing some news.

"Whose house is that?" he asked an old gentleman who had come down the steps. The gentleman looked at him in surprise a moment.

"That is Henry Ward Beecher's house," he replied, "and he has just died."

Another lineman related a peculiar experience he had while perched on a pole on Third avenue, near Seventy-third street. He had a pair of pinchers in his hand, and was in the act of twisting the two ends of a broken wire, when he heard a woman scream. He turned his head and saw a man in a room abusing a woman, who was screaming at the top of her voice. On the impulse of the moment he threw his pinchers through the window at the brute, who beat a hasty retreat. When he reached the ground the woman was waiting for him. She had called an officer and wanted to have him arrested for assaulting her husband by throwing the pinchers at him. The lineman was obliged to pay for a pane of glass, through which he had thrown the pinchers, notwithstanding he considers his act saved the woman's life. The various experiences they relate, many of them of a very dramatic and interesting character, would fill volumes and show the different phases of life to be found in a great city.—New York Star.

Not a Judge.

Albert Hawkins, the executive coachman, is a broad minded philosopher. Like the sun, he shines for all. As the White House coach was standing in front of the portico yesterday morning a gentleman came up, looked at the horses with a critical eye and remarked:

"That is not as good a team as Cleveland's, is it?"

Albert's black face was covered with an expression of unutterable disgust, and he remarked: "Now, boss, you ought to know more than to be saying such things like that to me. You'll get me in trouble. The other day I was standing out here and some ladies came along, and one of them says: 'Albert, I am glad that President Harrison kept you in your old place.' 'Thank you, mum,' says I, 'for your kindness.' Then she says: 'Albert, Mrs. Harrison is not as pretty a lady as Mrs. Cleveland, is she?' There were lots of people standing around listening to what she was saying to me and what I was saying to her, and I tho't I would fall off the box; but I just drew myself up and said: 'Madame, I ain't no judge of ladies.'"—Washington Letter.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Peaches are not a favorite except with a few animals, though rabbits fancy them.

Never cut your corns with a sharp instrument. This is at best but a temporary relief.

The United States has referred thirty-three international disputes to arbitration during the present century.

All the letters of the alphabet appear in in the following sentence, "The quick brown fox jumps over a lazy dog."

A child three years old has actually been carried off by an eagle near Trencsin, in Hungary, in sight of the father and mother.

A citizen of St. Louis is said to make a good living by renting turtles to restaurants for advertising purposes.

On dark nights a white light can be seen farther than any other color; on bright nights red takes the first place.

Mrs. Worth, the wife of the famous Parisian dressmaker, dresses very plainly. It goes to prove the truth of an old proverb.

Lady Burton's revised version of Sir Richard Burton's translation of the "Arabian Nights" is the edition from which the ex-emperor Dom Pedro is making a Portuguese translation.

Rub together one tablespoonful of butter and three of flour. Roll this into the upper crust of pies. It will render the crust flaky and tender.

A Boston society woman says it is quite a fad among Boston young gentlemen to take up the practice of veterinary surgery. The same thing is noted in Washington.

In armorplate tests steel has generally been found to compete more successfully with compound armor when the plates were eighteen inches thick than when they were only twelve inches thick.

Previous to the emancipation act of 1829 Roman Catholics were excluded from corporate offices, from parliament, forbidden to marry Protestants or to carry arms, and were under various other disabilities.

It is well known that vegetable and animal oils are unsuitable for cylinder lubrication, and recently in France where colza oil was used it was found necessary to burn out the deposits in the ports of the locomotive cylinders.

Katie Got the Book.

Katie was going to bed after a day of toil minding her sick and maimed dolls—chronic invalids all of them—and her b-e-a-u-tiful duck, the one old quacker that traveled with the hens because he had no better company. The robin that had been watching her out of the corners of his bright eyes, as he ran over the lawn and listened to her prattle, was asleep already with his head under his wing, and Katie's hung heavily on mother's shoulder as she was undressing her. "Now I lay me" had been said, with many yawns in between, and mamma's pet had been tucked in snugly; but just as the sleepy eyes were closing she sat suddenly bolt upright.

"Mamma," she said, "I want Johnnie's picture book—that with the lambs."

"Hush, Katie!" said her mother, the least bit wearily, for the little feet and the little tongue had never ceased going one moment all day. "Now we will go to sleep."

"But, mamma," and the big eyes pleaded earnestly, "can't I have Johnnie's picture book this onst?"

"Not tonight, dearie; it is too late."

"Mamma," said Katie, sitting up very straight and looking very solemn indeed, "I heard a story of a little girl—she was a good little girl—that asked her mamma onst when she was put to bed for the picture book with the lambs, and the mamma told her she couldn't have it, and—and"—the baby voice fell to an awed whisper and the eyes grew very big—"in just—about—two—minutes—she was dead!"

"My, Katie! And what killed her so quick?"

"Because," said Katie with conviction, "because she didn't get the book."

She got it, and in five minutes was asleep with it in her arms.—Harper's Young People.

Wanted to Know.

Few men were ever fonder of news and gossip than was old Jerry Clishen. Despite this fondness, however, Jerry was not a talker, and rarely took part in conversation other than to ask an occasional question about some point of special interest. One day Jerry's brother William, who lived some miles away, came to visit him. William had his right hand heavily bandaged, and this fact, of course, required an early explanation.

"Burnt it 'most off 't the fire t' other night," said William. "Ye see, old 'Square Dean's barn got afire, 'n' I went with the rest; but 'twan't any use, 'bout everything was burnt. If I wuz the 'square I'd give that boy seen a lickin' 't he couldn't stan'."

"What for?" asked the interested Jerry.

"Why, fur settin' the barn afire," was the reply; "but there! I furgot ter tell ye 'bout that part of it. Ye see the square's boy—great dough head—he found an owl settin' on the ridge pole, and so, of course, he had ter shoot at it.

"Wal, the barn winder was open, 'n' the gunwad went right inter the haymow, 'n' 'twan't five minutes afore 'twas all a-blaz in'. Everybody turned out, and we got out the old hoss, 'n' then Bill Treat said"—and so the old man went on with a long story, giving every detail of what was done, said and thought by each one who was present at the fire.

When at last the story was ended old Jerry remained for several minutes silently meditating on what he had heard; then he suddenly looked up and gravely asked, "Did ye say whether the boy killed the owl?"—Youth's Companion.

Girls Like to Be Kissed.

A young society man who moves in the younger circles told something out of the usual run the other day. He is a handsome fellow, tall and erect, and a prime favorite among the girls.

He said that he attempted to kiss a pretty girl, and just as he got his arms around her slender waist and was about to kiss her she said if he dared she would scream.

Not wishing to have a scene, which such an action would cause, he withdrew his arm and resumed his seat at the other end of the sofa. In an instant the pretty girl said, "Oh, I thought you were braver than that."

She, however, obstinately refused to let him kiss her.

In a couple of days he called on another girl. He wanted to kiss her, but she likewise threatened to scream if he should attempt it. He thought he would profit by his former experience and paid no attention to the warning.

He kissed her—she screamed; her mother came in and demanded an explanation. The girl came to his rescue, however, and said a mouse was in the room, and she screamed as it ran across the floor. Furthermore, by saying the young man had gallantly tried to catch the mouse, she explained his blushes to the mother's satisfaction.—Louisville Commercial.

ART WORK IN BUILDING.

A Church That Attracts Attention.

ITS EXTERNAL AND INTERNAL NOVELTIES

Conventional Ideas Disregarded by the Architects.

The Peddie Memorial Baptist church in Newark is the most recent and most notable example of ecclesiastical architecture in the metropolis of New Jersey. It is situated on Broad street, in the very heart of the city, and the pleasing and impressive mass would attract attention anywhere, though it is doubtful whether an uninformed passer-by would guess that it was a building erected for religious worship. The architect, Mr. William Halsey Wood, has not been restrained by the conventional rules of ecclesiastical architecture, and the only suggestion in the exterior of the building of the purpose of the structure is in the pointed towers, one taller than the other, and with clustered spires.

The predominating idea of the whole is Romanesque, though the dome is Byzantine, and the short, thick columns of the loggia and the loggia itself are early Italian. The arches are Romanesque, as is also the belt of sculpture which enriches the upper story of the two principal fronts. On the apex of the dome is a figure representing an angel with a trumpet. This figure has excited a deal of local criticism. The loggia, through which are the main entrances to the church, opens upon a vestibule sheltered by swing doors of oak; the inner doors of the vestibule and the partition separating it from the auditorium are of heavy plate glass, through which those arriving have a complete view of the interior before entering.

THE INTERIOR.

The general effect of the interior of the building is as novel in a church as the exterior, and it is equally agreeable. Low galleries sweep around the greater part of a circle, and there is no chancel. The predominating tone of color is that of old gold, with deeper shades of reddish brown and amber. The woodwork, with the exception of the pews, which are of sycamore, is of North Carolina pine, somewhat darkened by oil. The wood of the inner dome is unplaned, with the intention of assisting the acoustic qualities of the auditorium.

The few wall spaces are of marble and stone in warm colors. The pulpit, which is rather low on the floor, is almost directly beneath the great skylight in the eye of the dome. Behind the pulpit is the baptistery, a somewhat narrow structure, the floor of which is higher than the platform of the pulpit. In the rear of this is a decorated screen of cherry wood and hard pine, which rises perpendicularly and cuts off the rear portion of the dome. Behind this screen are the Sunday school rooms, three stories in height and with an entrance from the street.

There are six stained glass windows in the front of the church, four of them being memorials of deceased members of the congregation. Four windows on the north front are occupied with one continuous composition representing the baptism of Christ. A landscape and river scene stretches through the four windows, and the figures of the composition occupy the two central windows.

NOVELTIES IN DECORATIONS.

In the semi-circular recess in the northwest angle of the church on the second floor are three memorial windows and two tablets fixed into the walls. These are commemorative of the life and services of the late Henry Clay Fish, for many years pastor of the church. This recess opens into the auditorium through a noble arch, and affords a retiring room or place for social greeting for the congregation. An impressive and beautiful effect of the interior is a vast arch that spans the perpendicular screen in the rear of the pulpit platform, springing from either side of the building and reaching into the dome above. This arch is enriched with tracery of a Moresque quality, and bears on its face in illuminated letters the words, "These stones shall be his memorial."

Opposite this and spanning the recessed bay of the second or gallery floor, in which are the windows on the front, is another fine arch; this is supported on either side by large, delicately carved stones, the work on which is of remarkable beauty. To the left of this arch, as one faces the pulpit, is a small balcony in the wall, the entrance to which is from the pastor's study in the north tower. From here is obtained the best view of the interior of the edifice, the details of the elaborate architecture being fused into harmony, while the mellow luster from the great yellow skylight above falls down in a flood of softened color. On either side of the church, at the bases of the memorial arch, rise the clustered pipes of the two organs.

This church was the gift of the late Mr. Peddie to the First Baptist congregation, of which he was long time a member. Mr. Peddie came from Scotland to Newark when a young man. He began his career in Newark as a journeyman trunkmaker. Beginning the manufacture of trunks and bags in a small way, his business grew with the years, and he became a very rich man. This church is the memorial he chose for himself.—Harper's Weekly.

Chicken Feathers.

Dashaway—Look here, Uncle Jasper, I thought you said your wife's new dress was trimmed with feathers? I didn't see any yesterday when she had it on.

Uncle Jasper—No, sah. Dat's de 'culiarity 'bout dat dress. De feathers is dar, sah, but you can't see 'em.—Cloak Review.

Very Bad Form.

Daughter (after the theater)—That play was so interesting I couldn't do a thing but just sit and listen to it.

Fashionable Mother—It was abominable, the way you watched that play. People must have thought we were from the country.—New York Weekly.

Profit and Loss.

A prominent legal firm in this city which does a great deal of business for a rich mercantile concern lately rendered a bill which the senior partner of the mercantile establishment, who was accustomed to liberal charges, thought was too high. He therefore took the bill to the law firm and asked the chief to look it over and see if it was all right. The account was subsequently returned with $10 added for "advice as to the reasonableness of the bill."—Boston Journal.

From Her Point of View.

Cousin Jack (who has just been showing a Hebrew Bible)—Funny way they have of reading books—beginning at the back.

Mabel—Why, doesn't everybody do that?—Life.

The Arizona Kicker.

We take the following from the last issue of The Arizona Kicker:

APOLOGETICAL.—We hope our readers will excuse the typographical appearance of the inside pages of The Kicker this week. We were working them off as usual on Wednesday, having Joe the Digger Indian as roller boy, when Judge Shackawacksen made us a call and jumped on our collar. Greatly to our surprise we picked the judge up and mopped him all over the office and flung him out doors. His boot heels, hind buttons, spectacles and tobacco box flew about and alighted on the forms, and in our excitement we failed to notice them.

The big hole in our editorial on the tariff was caused by a boot heel. The blurr on the poem entitled: "When Baby Wakes Again," was caused by two hind buttons. Such society items as are unreadable owe their present state to the judge's spectacles. We hope it won't occur again.

NOT THIS EVE.—Our name is being prominently mentioned in connection with the United States senatorship from Arizona. While we are flattered and feel to step high, we must beg our friends to hold up.

In the first place, we are too honest, sober and conscientious.

In the second place, we are needed at home. We propose to run about ten thousand human coyotes out of this territory during the next twelve months, and put a thousand others behind prison bars.

While we feel tickled all over and can hardly sleep nights, we can't accept the office nor leave Arizona. Just pass the place along to some other man and leave us to do our work.—Detroit Free Press.

An Extreme Remedy.

It was time to go, by the steamer's clock, yet she lingered still at her dingy dock, and the mate blasphemed, and the captain roared, and the rain it steadily poured and poured on the luckless men who still implored that obstinate mule to go aboard. With rigid limbs and a stony stare, with ears firm set and its tail in the air, and an aw-he-haw-he long and loud, that horrible mule defied the crowd; and heedless of hunch and kick and nudge, it stood stock still in the muck and sludge—a mule with an everlasting grudge, that had taken an oath it wouldn't budge.

"Let me take that mule," said a passer by; "I'll load him or know the reason why. I've had some dealings with men and mules, and learned some things not taught in the schools." The crowd made way and the man drew near, and into the unresisting ear of the hapless beast he sang—for shame!—he sang of "The Letter That Never Came." With a voice like a wheezy clarionet's he warbles the song, "Sweet Violets." Bewildered by the dismal sound, the tortured mule turns half way round, and full in its face the man then sings the crowning woe they call "White Wings." With a trembling step at each fell note, the animal backs into the boat. 'Tis done. But the mule—ah! well-a-day. 'Tis its corpse the steamer carries away.—Chicago Tribune.

"Ain't It Cute?"

A lady recently visited the Lick observatory and asked to see Sirius, the Dog Star. The learned scientists at once turned the great telescope on Sirius, and the lady looked at it long and earnestly. Then turning around to the scientific gentlemen who were waiting for her to make some astronomical remark, she placidly murmured, "Ain't it cute?" just as if she had been viewing the latest thing in poodles.—New York Tribune.

A Triumph of Art.

Customer (in "hand-me-down" store)—This suit is all full of creases and wrinkles. It looks as if it had been slept in.

Dealer—Dot vas our ladest improved tourist suit, mister; noddings like it in Viladelphia. Dot suit make all your vriends dink you shust return vrom a tervelve months tour off Europe. No extra sharge vor dose wrinkles. Dey goes mit de suit.—Philadelphia Record.

A Trifle Skeptical.

Minister—Well, Bobby, what did you learn at school today?

Bobby—I learned that the world is round, and turns on hinges like that globe in the parlor.

Minister—Well, what did you think of that?

Bobby—I think they're asking me to believe a good deal for a small boy.—New York Sun.

Sad News.

Two pronounced Celts, who were apparently old acquaintances, met in Scollay square the other day, and after the usual preliminary greetings were given one said, "By the way, Dan, did you know that —— is dead?" "Dead?" returned the other, "Arrah, long life to the poor man, when did he die?"—Boston Budget.

Something of an Artist.

A small boy, seeing an apple on the mantelpiece, begged his grandmother to give it to him.

"What do you want of it?" asked grandma.

"Well, I guess my mother could make an apple pie of it," was the reply. "She's considerable of an artist."—Harper's Bazar.

Boyhood Friends.

Clerk (to busy employer)—There is a gentleman outside, sir, who says that he is a very old friend of your father's.

Busy Employer—Tell him I'm sorry, but my father is dead.—Life.

HAUNTING A MURDERESS.

Story of a Terrible Tragedy in a Prison.

VISITATIONS OF A GHOST TO THE SCENE.

It Disappears When Spoken to.—Tumbling Washtubs.

People passing the woman's wing of the penitentiary on rainy nights have heard moans and mutterings coming from the washhouse, and a sound as if some one was turning over tubs and chairs. Most of the belated wayfarers, on hearing the noise, have merely quickened their pace and said nothing about it.

The strange occurrence, however, has gained some notoriety in the neighborhood, and a reporter questioned Deputy Warden Crass about it.

"What is it?" said the deputy warden. "Why, those groans were uttered by our ghost."

"A ghost?" incredulously queried the reporter.

"Yes; and if you will come with me I will introduce you to witnesses who have seen it with their own eyes. But before we go I will give you a brief history of how we come to have such an unearthly visitor.

"On page 96, book C, prison records, is inscribed: 'Aug. 3, 1883. Mollie Dinwood, sent up March 26, 1883, two years for arson, was killed at 9:15 o'clock today, in the wash yard, by Sue Fletcher, sent up two years for larceny.' The two women quarreled and Sue cut Mollie's throat with a small penknife. I'll never forget the face of the poor doomed wretch as Drs. Eve and Roberts bent over her trying in vain to stop the flow of blood. She was lying on the cover of the old well moaning and gasping for breath. She was past human aid, and after a close examination Dr. Eve arose and said there was no hope. We buried her and Sue was given ten years more for her murder.

"Can the dead come back? It is a question that has worried the brains of the scientific and thinking men of every period, yet the question is no nearer a solution now than it was a thousand years ago. Now, come with me and you may hear the story of those who have seen the wraith of poor Mollie with their own eyes."

The reporter was carried to the woman's wing and talked to a number of the women who claimed to have seen the ghostly visitor.

Sue Fletcher, alias Burton, the murderess, said, with wild, dilating eyes: "She comes to me every rainy night. One night, about four years ago, she came to my bed and stood for a while, then said, 'The Lord has forgiven me and I won't come any more.' She was dressed in the old brown dress, with white trimmings, but I could see right through her. After that she did not come back any more until about a month ago, when she came into my cell and stood by my bed, moaning and the blood dripping out of the hole in her neck. I am scared of her and I hate to see it cloud up, for she comes every rainy night, and when I can I get some one to sleep with me, for I am afraid to sleep alone."

Numbers of the women claim to have seen her in the old brown dress, floating over the well platform and going in and out of the washhouse. They say that when she goes into the washhouse she turns over tubs and keeps up a continual moaning as if she was in pain. She has even been seen in the day time when it was dark and cloudy wandering about the yard.

One peculiarity is that when spoken to by any one but Sue Fletcher she disappears for an instant, then becomes visable in a few moments in some other portion of the yard. Her favorite place is over the old well where she died. The spirit has been seen by the terror stricken women to float over the spot for an hour at a time. Nearly all the women have seen and are afraid of her, and all swear that she is a "haunt" and not a human being.—Nashville American.

Well Known.

He was a cabin passenger, and the steamship was one of the ocean racers. The company, even those who occupy the mose expensive staterooms, is not always "select," in the society sense; but this man seemed more than ordinarily out of place. Who was he? No one knew.

One day the mystery was solved. He seated himself beside a distinguished lawyer and opened the conversation.

"I've read your speeches in the newspapers many a time, and I'm pleased to know you."

"Thank you," the other answered, and then, improving the opportunity, he added, "Do you live in New York?"

"Why, bless you!" was the answer, "you must know who I am. I'm Mike McCarthy; everybody knows me. I've been a boss teamster in New York for more than forty years."—Youth's Companion.

Such a Convenience.

A young lady living up town received a special delivery letter. The messenger handed her the book to sign for it. She took the book, and instead of writing her signature she wrote: "Dear John: Glad to hear from you. Come up Sunday night." She had answered the letter!—Philadelphia News.

A Passion for Music.

He (to Miss Breezy, of Chicago)—Are you fond of opera, Miss Breezy?

She—Oh, passionately!

He—Do you prefer the Italian school?

She—I have never seen any but the Chicago school. That is just splendid.—New York Sun.

A Visit to Ancient Carthage.

But the chief interest in Tunis is in its nearness to the site of one of the most famous cities of the ancient world. It is but a drive of six miles to the spot where once stood Carthage. In our visit we had again the invaluable companionship of our archæologist. As we rode across the plain it was very easy to see that the ancient city had ample room to spread out on every side except toward the sea, where it had the most splendid position on the very shore, presenting a long front to the Mediterranean, while a headland which projected into the sea served as a mighty breakwater, and formed a harbor in which all the Roman and Carthagenian fleets could ride together. On that headland Scipio Africanus landed the army which, marching round to the mainland, took Carthage in the rear and finally captured the city.

No city of antiquity has left so few ruins as Carthage. When it was taken by the Romans the decree of implacable hate, Carthago est delenda—Carthage must be destroyed—was inexorably carried out. Its merciless conquerors left but few monuments of its former greatness. Indeed, the only structures of imposing size which remain are the cisterns—great reservoirs covered by arches—which supplied water to the city, and these are said to be of Roman origin. All that is distinctly Carthagenian is the mound on which stood the ancient citadel, around which gathered all the martial life of a city which had the climax of its power and glory hundreds of years before Christ. Beneath that tumulus lie buried the foundations of temples and palaces, all mingled in one undistinguishable ruin.—Cor. Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Rateatcher's Methods.

"A rat that is caught by the tail will not squeal," said a professional rat-catcher. "In those cases where they squealed I had caught them by the body, not having time to get my favorite grip on them. The rat, you see, is paralyzed for a minute by the light; he rises up and tries to reach over it, and as he is doing that I reach the tongs in under him and catch him by the tail if I can, and if I miss the tail I catch anywhere. When he's thrown into the sack he lies quiet; they don't squeal if you let them alone, nor even if there's a dozen of them together. They are content to lie still and await events rather than raise a row; they're thinking all the time maybe I'll forget all about them. That's where they're off. Another thing, A rat cannot gnaw through a hanging bag—the bag 'gives' and the rat cannot get hold. If the bag is laid down they can grip on the creases and gnaw their way out in short order, but a hanging bag is as good as an iron safe. A rat has only four teeth—two above, which are about a half an inch long, and two below, which are about an inch and a half and run clear through the under jaw."—Chicago Tribune.

Origin of "Up Salt River."

The following derivation of the slang phrase "Rowed up Salt river," to express the condition of a defeated candidate for office, is thus explained by Bayard Taylor: "Formerly there were extensive salt works on Salt river, Ohio, a short distance from its mouth. The laborers employed in them were a set of athletic, belligerent fellows who soon became known far and wide for their achievements in the pugilistic line. Hence it became common for the boatmen on the Ohio, when one of their number became refractory, to say to him, 'We'll row you up Salt river,' when, of course, the burly salt men would have the handling of him. By a natural figure of speech, the expression was applied to political candidates—first, I believe, in the presidential campaign of 1840." A better explanation of the phrase than that given by Mr. Taylor above seems to be that in the early days the mouth of Salt river was a favorite stronghold of the river pirates, who preyed on the commerce of the Ohio, and rowed their plunder up Salt river.

A friend suggests a third probable derivation of the phrase. He says that he has heard it applied to defeated candidates as far back as 1833, and that it originated in 1832, when Henry Clay, as candidate for the presidency, had an engagement to speak at Louisville, Ky. He had employed a boatman to row him up the Ohio. Now this boatman was a Jackson Democrat; he pretended to have lost his way, and instead of rowing up the Ohio turned into Salt river. This caused Clay much delay, for he did not reach Louisville until the day after election.—St. Louis Republic.

After a Match.

The average person notices the arrangement of a room surprisingly little. Its dimensions and the relative positions of the furniture may seem to be familiar to him, but in reality they seldom are. The way to become convinced of this is to hunt for something, a match for instance, in the dark.

You have the mantel, and make a grab where you imagine the match safe stands. Down goes a piece of bric-a-brac to the floor.

More care is used. You find the end of the mantel, and run your hand along the marble slab. Off goes a verse or two. You strike the clock; you've got it. No, it's on the other side. Not there! Ah, then it's on the table.

After running against the stove and tripping over the chair, you find—the sofa. Keep cool and take your bearings. The table is north of the sofa, and the sofa runs east and west; north, therefore, is in front of you. Now you have it. That article that dropped to the floor sounded like the match safe. But it's the ink well, and your fingers are dyed with a color warranted not to fade.

A bright idea—the stove! You burn your fingers and warp your patience, but you secure a light. And the match safe? It is on the mantelpiece in front of the clock—the only place you didn't search.—Albany Argus.

Jones' Scheme.

Brown—Jones is not so miserly as I thought he was.

Green—No?

B.—No; I see he has gone to the expense of moving out of one of his houses into another.

G.—Ay, but do you know the reason?

B.—No.

G.—The house he has gone into has an electric light before the door. He moved to save gas bills.—Boston Courier.

Highly Unnatural.

Walker—I had a most unnatural dream last night, Fadman. I dreamt Binks borrowed five dollars of me for a week.

Fadman—Unnatural! Why, that's Binks all over!

Walker—Yes, but I went on dreaming and I dreamt that Binks paid it back to me at the end of the week!

Drew a Crowd.

Jones—I hear you had a dog show in your town last week. How did it go off?

Adams—Splendidly. It was a howling success.—Kate Field's Washington.

A SECRET OF DUDEDOM.

How Some of the Gilded Youth Dress Well.

SOMETHING THAT PUZZLES MANY PEOPLE

Small Salaries and Stolen Goods.—The Second-Hand Man.

There is a permanent interrogation point in a great many people's minds, and that is how young men earning anywhere from $10 to $18 a week can dress as well as men earning five or six times as much. Yet they manage to do it, and have enough money left to make a polite little ripple in the society in which they move.

The early elevated trains and horse cars are crowded with well dressed young men, who gaze about as complacently and self satisfied as if they were part owners in a railroad and lived only to cut coupons and draw dividends. They are dressed well, and their clothing, from the cape coat to the light cloth gaiters over their shoes, would compare favorably with the latest fashion plate. Yet if you follow them you will be pretty sure to learn that they are simply clerks in brokers' offices, and do not receive more than $15 in a majority of cases. How do they dress so well, then? Do they "borrow" from their employers, or do they speculate in bucket shops? They do not "borrow," and, as for speculating, they do that sometimes in a small way. Their clothes are bought honestly enough with the money they earn every week, and the way they do it is very easy.

Most New Yorkers have heard of that class of people known as "fences," whose business is to buy stolen goods from the thieves direct at a ridiculously low price, and sell the stuff to small dealers at a small profit. A "fence" will buy anything that is stolen, from a silver spoon to a suit of clothes or an assortment of clothing, and thereby hangs part of a tale. Every time there is a big clothing robbery the stuff is fenced and immediately passed to the sacred precincts of Baxter street. Sometimes the better portion of the thieves' work find their way into clothing stores in better neighborhoods, and because of the extremely reasonable price at which it is bought, the suits are sold very cheap. Now, you would not suppose a broker's clerk would go to Baxter street for clothes. Neither does he. He sends the clothing man's agent for what he wants. This agent calls on the clerk and is told what style of clothing is wanted. Then the young man is measured, and when the clothes come home they need very little altering. The cost is comparatively nothing. A good Prince Albert coat and vest can be bought for from $8 to $20, while cutaways and sack suits are to be had for prices ranging from $5 to $15. Of course a great deal of the stuff is second hand and a great deal is stolen. The second hand clothes are easily "fixed up," and the merchants of Baxter street have so delicate a facility for this "fixing up" process that they will change the whole complexion of a suit. The stolen goods are sold just as they are bought with the exception of a slight change in the maker's tag on the inside of the collar.

Still there is another, more legitimate, way of obtaining clothing that is fashionable, new and costly. There are a great many young men, rich and fashionable, in New York, who spend most of their time buying and giving clothes away after wearing them once or twice. This may seem strange to men who have but two suits, and wear them until they are absolutely too threadbare to wear any longer, yet nevertheless it is the case. Suits of clothes costing all the way from $50 to $100 each are made for these wealthy young men, and are worn probably three or four times and then given to valets. To follow the course of the clothes from this point would be a pretty heavy undertaking. Sometimes they are sold to second hand dealers on Sixth, Fourth and Third avenues, who make a handsome profit on every suit bought and sold. Out of the clothes given to him the valet keeps the best for himself, of course, and manages to make considerable money out of what he sells. Thus it is that so many young men earning small salaries can dress so fashionably and live honestly.—The Clothier.

He Was Wrong.

"Can I speak to you a moment?" he said softly as he called the chief clerk in the postoffice to the window the other day.

"Certainly."

"Thanks. I didn't know but you were busy. Two months ago I came here and asked for a letter. Remember it?"

"I do not."

"Probably not, as you are always busy. I didn't get any. I gave it as my opinion that some of you had stolen it. Remember?"

"No."

"Probably not, but I spoke very emphatically. That was my opinion, and I went away feeling very much hurt. Remember?"

"No."

"Probably not, as I am of no great consequence. I now desire to ask your pardon. Will you forgive me?"

"Of course."

"Thanks. I believed you would. You see, I expected a letter from my aunt. None came. She couldn't write one. She was dead. See? Therefore, how could I get one? I take it back. I apologize. I was wrong. Shake."

"That's all right."

"Thanks. I'll never do it again. This is an honest postoffice. I was wrong. Good-by."—Detroit Free Press.

A Mistake Corrected.

First Sweet Child—Oh! Isn't it lovely! How I wish I could have some real old lace, too.

Second Sweet Child—Mamma bought this yesterday. It's just common lace, like yours.

F. S. C.—Why, I thought it was the same kind those Bonanza children wear.

S. S. C.—No, I just tumbled down in the mud.—Tid Bits.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

C. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JUNE 12 ..... 1891.

The selection of new designs for coins of the United States is now occupying the attention of the Director of the Miut and a committee of three artists appointed by him.

While some portions of Europe are confronted with the horrors of famine or the prospects of poor crops, the American farmer expects to reap a bountiful harvest, and to make such generous contributions to Europe's demand for bread stuffs as will turn the golden tide again toward this country.

The share-holders of the Panama Canal, who are still urging the French Government to use its influence to assist De Lesseps to complete the undertaking in which so many millions have been sunk, are obviously going to be bitterly disappointed. The more gloomy the prospects appear to them the brighter they appear to the rival enterprise at Nicaragua.

There is a pleasing prospect for an early and satisfactory settlement of the Behring Sea difficulty. The bill before the British Parliament, to prohibit the taking of seals, is likely to become a law. Its introduction indicates that the British Government is disposed to co-operate with the United States for the preservation of the seals. The passage of the bill would remove all occasion for trouble in Alaskan waters this season, and before the opening of the next season a settlement of the question at issue is likely to be reached by arbitration. Neither nation was anything to gain by hostilities over such a matter, and there are many reasons why the peace and good will existing should be preserved.

It is to be expected that advocates in Congress of the McKinley blunder will defend their pet measure upon the stump. We are not therefore surprised to find Mr. Reed declaring that the Act has been "unjustly criticised." But the truth is, no measure ever passed Congress that the people took so absolutely upon trust and with reliance upon the predictions of its advocates. but thus far there has been no criticism of the bill not justified by developments under it. Take, for instance, the promise that it would enhance wages and stimulate new manufactures neither of which has happened, nor is there any indication that there is going to be any augmented manufacturing, over and above the normal increase consistent with the growth of the country. There are in the bill very many articles removed from the free to the dutiable list that enter directly into manufacturing industries, which have been crippled in consequence. A very few were, it is true, added to the free list, but not compensating for the new burdens put upon matcrials by the increase of the dutiable schedules.—Record-Union.

There is more than one good reason to be advanced in support of the Michigan plan for selecting Presidential Electors by Congressional Districts. In that State the new law requires the Electors to be chosen in each Congressional District, save from the two grand divisions of the State, as provided in the Act. The system commends itself because, for one thing, it does away with the "pivotal" State business, and therefore cuts short a great amount of rascality, corruption and ballot-box manipulation. Under this system—which, by the way, was practiced a number of years in the earlier history of the Republic—the States classed as "certain" will become less so, and those rated as "doubtful" will be more doubtful still. Just in that proportion the incentive to tamper with elections dishonestly will be reduced. Under the Michigan system there is minority representation, and the election of President is brought nearer the people without abandoning the electoral system, which is wise and should not be discarded, since it represents the sovereign States of the Union. Election by direct vote would tend to centralization that is not wholesome or necessary, and would give to congested population undue voice in the Federal administration. But, under the plan Michigan has adopted, States will break up their electoral vote in many cases and go solid as States in the few only. There is no good reason, it would appear, why the electoral vote of a State should not divide and the minority have a representation in the Electoral College.

BETTER NOW.

If you have a fragrant flower
In your heart's own garden grown,
For your friend, and some glad hour
Mean to make it all her own,
Do not wait; the lilied coffin
Sees no wreath; dear heart! Learn how Love's best blossoms may be given
Better now.

If a box of alabaster
For your darling's head you hold,
Costly, precious, and would cast her
All its sweetness manifold,
Some glad day, wait not. Tomorrow
By her grave, perhaps, you'll bow—
Stay not for the touch of sorrow;
Break it now.

Better silence by the casket,
Funeral eulogy unsaid,
Than the living lips that ask it
Lack the word that's merited.
Death reads no obituary,
Hears no requiem; learn how
Praise to speak, pre-mortuary;
Speak it now.

Better coffin plain and flowerless,
Holding one whose life was filled
Full of fragrance. Gifts are powerless
When the beating heart is stilled.
Kiss belated, love post-portem
Cannot smooth the furrowed brow;
Garlands throw no backward perfume—
Wreath them now.

—Julia H. May in Good Housekeeping.

A CITY MYSTERY.

Miss Melinda Parkinson had come down to New York to buy her summer patterns and to indulge herself with a glimpse at the great world, of which hitherto she had only become acquainted through the columns of the weekly newspaper.

"It must be a mortal strange place," said that amiable spinster, "where folks walk up and down Broadway in their Sunday clothes, and milk sells for ten cents a quart. And where they hain't no garrets to their houses, and go out to parties just when we Centervillers are tying on our nightcaps to go to bed. Well, well, it takes all sorts of people to make a world."

So Miss Melinda retrimmed her leghorn hat with sage green ribbons, sponged over her ancient black silk gown, indulged in the extravagance of new gloves, and set forth for the great American metropolis to visit Cousin Lemuel Larkins, whose family had frequently spent halcyon summers at the farm, and to partake of whose hospitality she had had a standing invitation for some time.

Cousin Lemuel and his eldest daughter, Persephone, met her at the depot, with faces of friendly welcome. Cousin Lemuel was a photographer on the Bowery, and Miss Persephone "did" supernumerary parts at the Sparkle theater, and had the promise of "going on" whenever there should be a vacancy in the regular dramatis personæ.

"Come along, Cousin Melly," said Mr. Larkins. "Where's the check for your baggage? Here, expreseman! And look sharp, d'y' hear?"

"But," shrieked Miss Melinda, "that check is all I've got to show for my trunk. How do you know he'll ever bring up the trunk at all," gasped Miss Parkinson. "I once read in The Sentinel how"——

"Come along," said Mr. Larkins, good humoredly. "You'll find it'll all be as right as a trivet!"

"Ain't we going in a carriage?"

"Bless us, no," said Cousin Larkins. "We're agoin' in the 'short cars.'"

"But why are you going in the short cars?" said Miss Melinda in great bewilderment. "I thought you said you lived a mile and a half from the depot?"

"Oh!" said Mr. Larkins. "'short' means the cars, not the distance. Let me help you aboard, there's a good girl."

No sooner was Miss Parkinson safely bestowed between a stout gentleman reading his paper and a black velvet cloaked lady than she again began to be uneasy in her mind.

"Lemuel," said she, in a stage whisper, "I don't like these cars. I'd rather walk."

"But why?" said Mr. Larkins, who was hanging from a strap like a first class trapeze performer. "Eh? The man next you a pickpocket? But, my dear woman, it can't possibly be! He's a-holding up the paper with both hands! How can he be picking your pocket?"

"Ah!" nodded Miss Parkinson, "they can't deceive me. One of 'em's stuffed! I've read all about it! And he may be a-takin' my watch and my twenty-five dollars out of my under pocket with the real hand, this very minute, for all I know!"

"Madam," said the strange gentleman, jumping up and turning very red, as he started for the door, "I have not yet arrived at my destination, but I much prefer walking a few blocks to finding myself the subject of aspirations such as these! Conductor, you will have the goodness to stop."

"There," cried Miss Parkinson, starting to her feet, "it's just as The Sentinel says! He's escaping! Driver, I insist that he shall be searched! Conductor, call the police!"

"Pr'aps," suggested Cousin Lemuel, "you'd better see if your watch and money ain't safe, Melinda!"

"Because, marm," added the conductor, with the corners of his mouth twitching, "that there gent is Judge De Griffiths, of the court of common complaints, as ain't noway addicted to pocket picking, as ever I heerd on!"

And Miss Parkinson, discovering that her valuables were all safe, subsided once more into her place and merely remarked that "we are all liable to mistakes."

She was rather surprised to discover that the Larkins family, instead of occupying one of the palatial mansions contiguous to Central park, lived on the fourth floor of a rusty brick house on the Bowery, whose front windows were blinded by the elevated road and whose rear outlook consisted chiefly of cats and chimney tops. There was a summer garden next door, where a band discoursed sweet music until 3 o'clock in the morning, and a shooting gallery on the other side, and the ground floor of their own building was occupied by a job printer, whose steam machinery, albeit it was underground, roared and hissed and kept the walls a-tremble, until Miss Parkinson declared it was just like living over the crater of Vesuvius!

"La, my dear," said Mrs. Larkins, a comfortable, elderly lady with a greasy poplin dress and a cap covered with crumpled artificial flowers, "you won't mind it after a day or two. It's really a very superior neighborhood!"

They supped off clam chowder, boiled lobsters, Vienna bread and Limburger cheese—for the Larkins family were cosmopolitan in their tastes—and spent the evening at the Ingomar theater, for which Miss Persephone had always a limited number of "orders."

Miss Melinda Parkinson retired to rest in a back hall bedroom, with the elevated road shaking the very casters of her bed every thirteenth minute, and a quartet of cats on the roof rivaling the German arias of Mme. Frida Von Poppenhusen in the garden below, she seriously believed that gentle sleep was banished altogether from her eyelids.

In the middle of the night Mrs. Larkins was aroused from her balmy slumbers by a rapping at her chamber door.

"Eh?" said Mrs. Larkins, sitting up in bed, her classic brow crowned by a cheveux de frise of curl papers. "It ain't burglars, is it? Nor the fire department? Dear me, Cousin Melinda, what can you possibly be wanting at this time of night?"

"Lucretia," said Miss Parkinson, "hush! Come with me at once."

"Laws!" cried Mrs. Larkins, hurriedly shuffling her feet into list slippers and flinging on an ancient flannel dressing gown. "What is the matter? Ain't nobody sick, is there?"

"It's a somnambulist," whispered Miss Parkinson, as Mrs. Larkins joined her in the hall. "A poor crazy creature on the roof next door, all alone by herself, with nothing but a step between her and death."

"La!" said Mrs. Larkins, beginning to tremble and develop strongly hysterical symptoms. "Are you sure, quite sure, now, Melinda, that it ain't the Limburger cheese settin' heavy on your stomach? It don't agree with everybody, you know. And"——

"Come and see for yourself," said Melinda; and she drew her cousin to the curtained casement which commanded the feline and the smoke blackened view previously alluded to. "There! Don't you see her dress flutter? Do you perceive how dangerously near the parapet wall she stands?"

"Oh, good gracious!" cried Mrs. Larkins, covering her eyes with her hands. "Let's call Lemuel."

"Who is it that lives in the next house?" demanded Melinda. "For we must go there ourselves, Lucretia. There's no time to rouse up anybody."

"And Lemuel sleeps like a log," said Mrs. Larkins, "and always thrashes round with his fists when he's roused up sudden, thinkin' of burglars the very first thing, poor dear. It's Mr. Burnabee as lives there, a manufacturer of ladies' felt skirts; quite decent and respectable. Oh, yes, my dear; p'raps we'd better go, then, or the poor dear'll fling herself over the parapet, and it'll be a clear case for the coroner's inquest."

In the cloudy moonlight the two women crept down stairs and rang loudly at Mr. Burnabee's door.

There was a delay. There always is a delay after the ringing of a city door bell. But to Miss Parkinson and Mrs. Larkins there was a delay which seemed almost interminable before Mr. Burnabee appeared on the scene, a little old red nosed man, with scanty gray hair, a palm leaf patterned dressing gown, and a candle whose feeble flame flickered to and fro while he held it shaded from the night wind with one hand.

"Is it fire," said Mr. Burnabee, "or is it a accident on the elevated road? I've always knowed it would come sooner or later."

"The roof! The roof!" gasped Melinda.

"Save her!" shrieked Mrs. Larkins.

"Eh?" said Mr. Burnabee. "Save who? What are you talking about, ladies?"

"The sleepwalker!" cried Miss Parkinson. "The poor creature who hovers between life and death on the top of this house!"

"We saw a woman on the roof," explained Mrs. Larkins, "and she wouldn't answer when my cousin called to her, and we're almost certain sure she's insane."

Mr. Burnabee's wrinkled countenance broke into a smile.

"There ain't no woman there," said he.

"Man," said Miss Melinda, "you are deceiving us."

"It's nothing on earth," went on Mr. Burnabee, "but my wire dummy as I fit the skirts over. The roof leaked all over her new pink cambric slip in the hard shower yesterday, so I jest set her out on the roof to dry. I put her out at night, because I knowed if I did it in the daytime there'd be no end of people asking questions and minding everybody else's business but their own."

"Oh!" said Miss Parkinson, rather awkwardly.

"Of course," said Mrs. Larkins, biting her lip.

"Much obliged to you, all the same," said Mr. Burnabee blandly, although he still chuckled.

And the two women crept home again.

"Lucretia," said Miss Parkinson, standing opposite her own door.

"W-w-well!" faltered Mrs. Larkins, scarcely able to repress her shivering.

"Don't speak of this to any one, will you?"

"No, I won't" said Mrs. Larkins.

But it is to be feared that she did not keep her word, for Mr. Larkins was full of dark allusions the next day, and Miss Persephone could scarcely speak for laughing.

Miss Parkinson purchased her patterns, and secured her summer styles, and hastened speedily back to Centerville, and ever since she declares that all the wealth of the Indies would not induce her to live in that sink of iniquity and head center of mystery, New York! And if people ask her why, she only shakes her head and says mysteriously:

"Never mind!"—Amy Randolph in New York Ledger.

Catholic Bibles.

The clergy of the Roman Catholic church brought out in 1582, at Rheims, an English translation of the New Testament, and in 1610, at Douai, an English version of the Old Testament, now known as "the Douai Bible." Like Wyclif's, these were translations of a translation, taken from the Latin Vulgate. The Douai Bible abounds in curious hybrid words which one never meets with anywhere else, but quite a large number of the readings and renderings of the Douai Bible were adopted by the revisers in 1881. They did not, however, adopt the variation of the "treacle" rendering which the Douai revisers took, "Is there no rosen in Galaad?"

The Catholic version of the Bible now most commonly used in this country is one made by Dr. Challoner, in 1749 and 1750, of the Rheims New Testament and the Douai Old Testament. A revision of both was also made in 1783 by the Rev. Bernard MacMahon, with the approbation of Archbishop Troy, of Dublin, and is known as "Troy's Bible."—Chambers' Journal.

Ten Days for Wearing "Speelers."

Talking about police justices, an old time observer said: "We have had some pretty good specimens of police justices in Brooklyn long before today, but one of the most modest, unique characters I ever came across was the late Tom Riley. When Riley ascended the bench he did not know much about law, but could beat the decks in the quickness with which he would judge a prisoner by his appearance. In those days what were known as "speeler" trousers were in vogue with certain young men, and Riley was very much down on them. Indeed, it was said that the mere fact that an accused person had his nether limbs covered by the objectionable garment was regarded by Riley as prima facie evidence of guilt.

"One morning a young fellow was arraigned before him. The judge listened to the evidence, but that did not seem to move him. Finally he arose from his seat, looked over the desk at the young man's trousers, the ends of which protruded far over the shoes, and calmly remarked: 'Speelers. Ten days.' It is needless to add that after that the new kind of trousers soon went out of fashion."—Brooklyn Eagle.

FORBES & TOBEY,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.,
—DEALERS IN—
LUMBER
OF ALL KINDS.
DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS,
LATH,
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.
Matched and Dressed
Flooring.
sep 11-u

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING SALOON.
Shaving, Hair Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.
WM. H. HUFF, Prop'r

NORMAN
HOUSE,
Independence, - Cal.
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates.
Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.
O. L. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

IRWINS' SALOON
Cor. Edwards and Market Streets,
Independence . Cal.
THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt and furnished in a style second to no one on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.
THE BAR
Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.
JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

BELL'S
Flouring Mills,
A. N. BELL, Prop.
TRY BELL'S
EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.
Having added Patent Rolls and other Improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully
Equal to the Best
Corn, Oats and Barley Crocked on Short Notice.
A. N. BELL,
Independence, Cal.

P. W. FORBES. P. H. MACK.
MACK & FORBES.
Real Estate Agents,
Address,
P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal.
P. W. FORBES, Bishop, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and
Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
Bishop Creek, Cal.,
Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

J. W. P. LAIRD. P. H. MACK.
MACK & LAIRD.
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

A. R. CONKLIN,
Attorney-at-Law
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the States of California and Nevada.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M. D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)
Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED.
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.
DENTISTS.
OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSFIELD, opposite the Southern Hotel.
Prompt and careful treatment given and the easiest possible pain inflicted. Address
WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

FOR SALE CHEAP.
Two span first class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday	January 24th
"	February 21st
"	March 21st
"	April 18th
"	May 23rd
"	June 20th
"	July 18th
"	August 15th
"	September 12th
"	October 17th
"	November 14th
"	December 12th

JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

Snug little FORTUNES have been made at work for us by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Bonn, Toledo, Ohio. See out. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Can work in spare time or all the time, big money for workers. Failure unknown among them. NEW and WONDERFUL. Full particulars FREE. H. Hallett & Co., Box 880, Portland, Maine.

TO ADVERTISERS
A list of 1000 newspapers divided into STATES AND SECTIONS will be sent on application—FREE.
To those who want their advertising to pay, we can offer no better medium for thorough and effective work than the various sections of our Select Local List. GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., Newspaper Advertising Bureau, 10 Spruce Street, New York.

OFFICIAL.

NOTICE OF

Sheriff's Sale,

ON FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES.

E. H. EDWARDS, Plaintiff,
vs.
WM. F. MATLACK, Administrator of the Estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased
Defendant.

Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure and Sale.

UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF AN ORDER of sale, upon a decree of foreclosure and sale, issued out of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo State of California, on the 12th day of June, 1891, in an action wherein E. H. Edwards was Plaintiff and Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, was Defendant, and in which said last above mentioned action, E. H. Edwards, the above named Plaintiff, obtained a judgment and decree of foreclosure against Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, Defendant, on the 15th day of November, 1890, for the sums of $1810.02 and $417.49, gold coin of the United States, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $59-1.51, gold coin as aforesaid, which said decree was on that 15th day of November, 1891, recorded in Judgment Book 1 of said Court at page 281 (Wm. F. Matlack, Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, the above named Defendant, was by an order of said Superior Court duly made and entered on the 14th day of May, 1891 substituted as Defendant in said action in the place and stead of said Thomas Parker, now deceased) I am commanded to sell, to satisfy said judgment and decree for the said sum of $1810.02, all those certain lots, pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Beginning at a point twenty chains East of the North-west Section corner of Section No. twenty-eight, in Township No. fifteen South of Range No. thirty six, East, Mt. Diablo Base and Meridian, (magnetic variation fifteen degrees and fifteen minutes East) thence south thirteen and ninety one-hundredths chains to North-west corner of Josiah G. Dodge's land; thence North, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, twenty two and thirty-one one-hundredths chains to Brewery street in the town of Lone Pine; thence North, twenty-one degrees and forty minutes West, twenty-one one hundredths chains; thence South, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes West, eighteen and ten one-hundredths chains; thence North eight and forty eight one-hundredths chains to North line of Section No. twenty eight; thence West thirteen and twenty-nine one-hundredths chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing fifteen and one-half acres.

Also a lot of land lying East of the last described tract and on the Wm. L. Moore tract of land North-west of the town of Lone Pine beginning at the North-east corner of said last described tract, thirty three and twenty-nine one-hundredths chains East of the North-west corner of Sect on twenty-eight in Township Fifteen South of Range Thirty-six East, of Mount Diablo Meridian, at an iron post set in the ground; thence, South eight and forty-eight one-hundredths chains to the lane from the last described tract of land to the town of Lone Pine; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, eight and seventy one one-hundredths chains to the East side of Brewery street in said town; thence, South twenty one degrees and forty minutes East, fifty one-hundredths chains to the North line of Corral street in said town; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, seven and eighty-seven one-hundredths chains to the West line of Main-street in said town; thence, North twenty one degrees and forty minutes West, three and nineteen one-hundredths chains to Section line of said Section twenty-eight; thence, West fifteen chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing eighty and seventy-five one hundredths acres.

Also lots Nos. two, three, and the North half of lot six, in block No. 13, upon which is a house; and the fractional part of lots Nos. six, seven and eight in block No. 1 in the town of Lone Pine, in said County and State, as the same are known and designated on the plat of said town now on file in the Recorder's office of said county.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining.

I am also commanded to sell, to satisfy said judgment and decree for the said sum of $59-1.49, all that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

The East half of the South-west quarter and the West half of the South-east quarter of Section No. twenty-one, in Township No. fifteen, South, of Range No. thirty six, East, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on Monday the 6th day of July, 1891, at 12 o'clock M. of that day, in front of the Court House in the County of Inyo, I will, in obedience to said order of sale and decree of foreclosure and sale, sell separately the above described property, or so much thereof, as may be necessary to satisfy said Plaintiff's judgment, with interest and costs etc., to the highest and best bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States.

Dated this 12th day of June, 1891.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff of Inyo County.
By D. HOLLAND,
Under-Sheriff.

Mack & Laird, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

EXECUTOR'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court in and for the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 11th day of May, 1891, in the matter of the estate of John R. Hughes, deceased, the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of John R. Hughes deceased, will sell, at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, and subject to confirmation by said Superior Court, on Saturday, the 6th day of June, 1891, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John R. Hughes, at the time of his death, and all the right title and interest that the said estate has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to that of the said John R. Hughes at the time of his death, in and to all that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the town of Lone Pine, County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

An undivided one-half interest in and to the the South half of Lot Number Seven (7), in Block Number Five (5), as the same is known and designated on the official plat of the said town of Lone Pine, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county.

Bids or offers must be in writing and will be received at the residence of the undersigned, about six miles south of the town of Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, gold coin of the United States, ten percent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor on the day of sale, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at expense of purchaser. W. L. HUNTER.

Executor of the last Will and Testament of John R. Hughes, deceased.

Mack & Laird, Attorneys for Executor.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine.
FRED BURKHARDT

OFFICIAL.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, San Francisco, California. Location of works, Marmol, Nevada.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AT A meeting of the Board of Directors, held the 26th day of May 1891, an assessment (No. 13) of Ten Cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, No. 132 California street, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 10th day of July 1891, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on FRIDAY, the 28th day of July, 1891, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

G. W. LUCE Secretary.

Office, 135 California St., San Francisco, California.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Independence, California. Location of canal, near Independence, Inyo county.

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of a Board of Directors, held on the 30th day of May, 1891, an assessment (No. One) of Fifty (50) cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary at the office of the company, Independence, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 3d day of July, 1891, will be delinquent, and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Saturday, the 25th day of July, 1891 to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

By order of the Board of Directors.

P. H. MACK, Secretary.

NOTICE FOR PROPOSALS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Lone Pine Canal Company, at ... in the town of Independence, up till 10 o'clock a. m. of June 13, 1891, for the construction of one mile of ditch, commencing at a point on H. J. Robinson's land about one-half a mile south of the terminus of the Stevens Ditch and running thence in a Southerly direction along and following the line of survey as shown by map now on file in the company's office.

Said mile of ditch to have a fifteen foot bottom, eighteen inch cut, slope of banks one foot horizontal to one foot vertical.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids. P. H. MACK, Secretary.

Independence, June 4th, 1891.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JOHN LUCAS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned Administrator of the estate of John Lucas deceased to the Creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at his office in the town of Lone Pine, Inyo county, California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in said Inyo county, State of California. E. H. EDWARDS,

Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased.

Dated May 5th, 1891.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of PETER DIECKSON, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE undersigned, Administrator of the estate of PETER DIECKSON, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the Administrator, at his residence, in the town of Lone Pine, in the county of Inyo, State of California, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in the county of Inyo.

Dated April 18th, 1891.

JOHN F. LUCAS,
Administrator of said estate.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

MARY A. BALL, Plaintiff, vs. ROBERT BALL, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Robert Ball, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant and for costs of suit, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief therein demanded.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 28th day of February, A. D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
P. H. MACK, Attorney for Plaintiff.

NOTICE OF SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court in and for the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 6th day of June, 1891, in the matter of the Estate of John Lucas deceased, the undersigned will sell at private sale to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, on Saturday, the 27th day of June, 1891, at 2 o'clock P. M., at the late residence of said deceased, near the town of Lone Pine, County of Inyo, State of California, the following personal property, to wit:

117 Head of Stock Cattle.
18 Head of Horses

Bids or offers in writing will be received at the office of the undersigned, in the said of Lone Pine, up to and including the 26th day of June, 1891.

E. H. EDWARDS
Administrator of the Estate of John Lucas deceased.

Dated June 12th, 1891.

BIG PINE HOTEL
BIG PINE - CAL.
New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
Thos. Williams,
Proprietor.

DEPENDENT.

DENCE, CAL.

.....1891.

ET REPORT.

13 @ 19.

...or will preach at the ...Schoolhouse on Sunday, June 14, ...0 a. m., at ...ion Schoolhouse at 2:30 ...Lone Pine ...:30 p. m.

...v. J. Smi... will preach at Independence ...7:30 p. m.

...ill preach at Keeler, Wed...une 17, in the dining... ...Hotel.

...one Pine and Independence ...

COURT NOTES.

Geo. H. Bail, Superior Judge.

MONDAY, June 8, 1891.

... Decker vs. Ida C. Decker—Filed order dismissing action.

Ida C. Decker vs. S. Decker—Filed complaint and issued summons.

Estate of Charles D. Begole—Filed order for sale of real estate and personal property.

TUESDAY, June 9, 1891.

Manuel Diaz vs. Abraham Diaz et al—Entry default.

A. ... Olivas et al. vs. Nathan Rhine—Demurrer ...ed and sustained.

Frank Silva vs. Southern Development Company—Plaintiff allowed 30 days to file brief showing ...hy action should not be dismissed.

WEDNESDAY, June 10, 1891.

A. Cohn & Co., vs. T. E. Hutchinson—Filed demurrer to complaint.

BORN.

...—At Lone Pine, June 5, 1891, to Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Spear, a daughter.

DIED.

...—Near Independence, June 7, 1891, Nicholas Cleer, a native of Germany, aged ...

OLIVAS—At Lone Pine, June 7, 1891, ...daughter of Mr. and J. Olivas, aged 11 months.

Ben Cosby was up from Lone Pine early in the week.

It requires considerable experience to be able to handle ...les.

...rekel of the ... is visiting ...ce with Mrs. F. W. P. ...

...me down from Big Pine ...will start training for the fourth.

...ing to numerals from the District the ...census children at Independence is ...less than last year.

The Independence Silver Cornet Band met at Independence last Tuesday evening and commenced practicing for the Fourth.

H. S. Miner Esq. arrived at Independence last Monday and is still in town. He is occupied on business in the Superior Court.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. N. E. ...klin has been seriously ill during the ...k but when last heard from was im...

It is said that 300 colonists will soon enter Owens Valley to settle on land recently purchased there by Lord Herbert of Ireland.—Enterprise.

The kite craze has joined its predecessors as a relic of the past. The last kite floats its skeleton to the breeze on a telegraph wire near the depot.

There have been several fishing parties up on the creeks during the week and good catches are reported, though the water is too high for very successful fishing.

Unless we have warm weather soon the corn crop will very likely be a total failure. Crops of wheat, barley and oats and also the hay crop will be larger than usual.

Sir John McDonald, the Canadian Premier, is dead. He was an exceedingly able statesman and Canada is much exercised over the task of securing a fitting successor.

Silas Reynolds is steadily improving in health and will soon be well again. At one time his life was despaired of but constant attention and good nursing brought him through.

P. H. Mack Esq. has purchased the law library of the late Charles Schuman and received the same from Bridgeport early in the week. It numbers about eight hundred volumes of the choicest law books.

P. R. Reynolds of Los Angeles is at Keeler and will visit Independence in a few days. Mr. Reynolds is a thoroughly skilled dentist and comes highly recommended. He expects to visit all the towns in the Valley before returning to Los Angeles.

Hon. P. Reddy arrived in the Valley two weeks ago to-day, going to Darwin to look after mining interests there. He came up to Independence on Tuesday to attend to legal business in the Superior Court and started on his return to the City yesterday morning.

Mr. Carl Richel and daughter went north on their way to Bishop yesterday coming from Los Angeles by way of Mojave. A son of Mr. Richel's was at Bishop some months ago and located land. Mr. Richel will spend a lock over the Valley with a view to locating here.

Dr. J. Wasson of Bakersfield came up to Independence on yesterday's train and will remain in town for a few days. Dr. Wasson is the senior member of the firm of Wasson & Wasson, Dentists. The firm has been located at Bakersfield for many years and have established an excellent reputation for conscientious workmanship. We have a personal acquaintance with the Doctor and confidently recommend him for first class work.

A Busy Company.

Charley Luce of the Marble works at Verdi was in town yesterday. He reports that company is employing 30 men at the quarry in Inyo county, 22 in the mill at Verdi and 130 in the yard at San Francisco. It will take them two years to finish the contract for the Mills building. They are figuring on other buildings, among them the new home for the Examiner on the corner of Third and Market streets, San Francisco.—Gazette.

Died On The Road.

Last Sunday Paul Myrtengreen left Lone Pine in charge of Nicholas Cleer, en route for the County Hospital. Cleer had been ailing for some time with the asthma and had become so weak as to require being carried to the conveyance. When arriving at Georges Creek he became entirely exhausted and with one feeble gasp for breath expired. Paul lashed the body to the buggy seat and continued on to Independence. A Coroner's inquest was held that afternoon and continued until Monday pending the arrival of witnesses. The jury rendered a verdict of death from natural causes and the body was interred under the direction of the Coroner.

An Excellent Article.

The edition of the San Francisco Chronicle of Sunday, June 7th, contains nearly thirteen pages, or ninety columns, of an article on irrigation. The first portion of the article is devoted to what has been accomplished in foreign countries by irrigation; then follows an exhaustive resumé of irrigation in California, including irrigation law and Supreme Court decisions. The article is profusely illustrated and evidences a vast amount of labor and expense. The article should be read carefully by every farmer in Inyo county, as to irrigation more than anything else must we look for whatever future prosperity we may meet with.

Meteorological Summary.

Following is the report of the Signal Service Station at Keeler for the month of May, 1891.

Mean barometer.....29.784
Highest barometer.....29.993
Lowest barometer.....29.300
Mean temperature.....64.2
Highest temperature, 30th.....86.
Lowest temperature, 8th.....36.
Greatest daily range temperature, 31, 28.
Least daily range temperature, 31st, 13.
Prevailing direction of wind, North.
Total movement of wind, 5943 miles.
Extreme velocity of wind, direction and date, 38 miles N. on 20th.
Total precipitation, 0.87 inches.
Number of days on which .01 inch or more of precipitation fell, 7.
Number of cloudless days.....13
Partly cloudy days.....11
Cloudy days.....7

H. E. WILKINSON,
Sergt., Signal Corps, Observer.

On Monday evening cards of invitation were received to the commencement exercises of the Nevada University, sent at the instance of Misses Ella T. and Sadie F. Malone, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. James Malone of Independence. The young ladies have been attending the above institution for some time past, and that they are graduating with honor is a source of pleasure to the many friends here.

Ben T. Williams came in from Modock yesterday and will return today. He reports mining matters in a flourishing condition in that region. Eight men are at work taking out ore in the lower tunnel and about ... ton of ore are shipped every week. Two men are at work in the Minietta. A considerable quantity of ore is being shipped from Darwin.

James Meehan of the Sutro Tunnel and Dominick Briden, two first class miners and prospectors returned Sunday from a week's prospecting trip in Inyo County. They reported having inspected a number of good claims, and they may return and take another look before long.—Enterprise.

HEIR TO $500,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A dispatch was received yesterday from Baltimore announcing that George F. Beiser of Brooklyn had become heir to a vast estate there valued at $500,000. The property came through relatives who emigrated from France in the days of the Huguenots. Mr. Beiser is an accountant in a Fulton street clothing house. Bruce's Law and Inquiry Agency, of Chicago, Ill., prosecuted his claim.—Louisville Courier-Journal, Nov. 27

We are Mr. Beiser's lawyers and by him seeing our advertisement, became the agent of his good fortune. If your ancestors came from the old country write to us, and enclose $1 for our list of heirs. There are more than half a billion dollars in Great Britain and Germany, unclaimed, which rightly belong to people in the United States.

BRUCE'S LAW AND INQUIRY OFFICE,
164 and 166 Randolph St.,
Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

PALACE SALOON.
LONE PINE, CAL.
—THE FINEST—
WINES,
BEER,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS
—o—
☞ This Saloon is conducted in a strictly first class manner, and every attention tendered my patrons. FRED. BURKHARDT, Lessee.
112-tf

Dentistry!

Dr. Wasson, the well known Dentist, located at Bakersfield, has arrived at Independence and can be seen at the Norman House. Those who need dentistry should lose no time in calling as his stay will not be long.

NOTICE

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.
FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For Sale.

A well established butcher business in Independence. No opposition. A good substantial butcher shop with ice house, or refrigerator attached. All tools and implements necessary for carrying on the business. Also a comfortable dwelling on lot adjoining shop. Four large rooms and kitchen. Shop and dwelling are both new and in good condition. The entire property must be included in purchase and terms cash. Apply to
J. C. ROEPER.
Independence, Cal.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine, Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address
ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

For Sale!

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE

Eastside Canal.

There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,
C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

J. W. Murphy.

BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work.

Wagons and Carriages Repaired.

HORSESHOEING, $2.00 for CASH

Shop on Edwards St., opposite the Court House, Independence.

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.
Bee Keeper.
Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.
Independence, Inyo Co. Cal

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK.....PROPRIETOR.
Horseshoeing.....$2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

BOOTS AND SHOES
MADE AND REPAIRED.
THE BEST MATERIAL.
FIRST-CLASS WORK.
Repairs done Promptly.
Prices Reasonable.
A. J. DAVIS,
nov 30-tf Independence,

1776 Breathes there a man with soul so dead, 1891
1776 Who never to himself hath said, 1891
1776 "This is my own, my native land!" 1891

INDEPENDENCE GLORIOUS TRIBUTE.
—TO OUR—
NATAL DAY.
Under the management of
POLETA PARLOR, N. D. C. W.
INYO PARLOR NO. 145, N. S. G. W.
MT. WHITNEY PARLOR NO. 136, N. S. G. W

A CORDIAL INVITATION EXTEDNED TO ALL

Commencing with a
☞ GRAND BALL ☜
Friday Evening, July 3d. Grand March at 8 Sharp.
Excellent music and splendid floor. Supper in the Annex, with seating capacity for all.
BERTRAND RHINE, FLOOR DIRECTOR.
FLOOR COMMITTE:
Milt. Clark, S. A. Chapman, R. Hessian,
F. E. Denrmore, J. D. Lewis, J. E. Shepherd
Robt. Carrasco, Ben Lasky, Henry Rhine

SATURDAY, JULY FOURTH.
Grand salute . . . . . At sunrise.
Parade and Literary Exercises.
Parade forms at Reddy place. Line of march direct to Pavilion.
GEORGE H. LEWIS, GRAND MARSHALL.
MISS MARGIE BELL, GODDESS OF LIBERTY.
PROGRAMME:

Prayer, Rev. H. J. Winsor.	Oration, F. E. Densmore,
Red, White & Blue, Choir.	Unfurl the Glorious Banner, Miss M Mulholland,
Remarks, by C. W. Craig,	Declaration of Independence, Miss L. Clark
President of the Day.	America, Choir.
Music, by the Band.	Benediction, Chaplain.
Recitation
Hail Columbia, by Band.

FUN FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS,
125 YARD FOOT RACE,
BASE BALL TOURNAMENT

MISCELLANEOUS.

THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL.
We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.
THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $75 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. You can work in spare time, or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EDWARD CHENOT
Independence, Cal.,
INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS extensive stock of
GENERAL MERCHANDIS
....Consisting of....
GROCERIES.
PROVISIONS
Tobacco, Cigars,
WINES AND LIQUORS
FLOUR & GRAIN
Together with an Assortment of
DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING
ETC., ETC
☞ Buyers and consumers should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere.
E. CHENOT.
Independence, Cal., March 9 1884.
n-761f

Lake View Hotel
Keeler, Cal.
John Barnes, Prop'r.
☞ First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.
THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
Wines,
Liquors,
& Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.
Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.
—o—
The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the
LARGEST AND BEST STOCK
of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.
PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.
☞ All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.
Address orders and packages to
HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

BI' 10P ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.
Harness Maker.
Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.
O. H. Hill, Prop'r.
A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE
BISHOP.
Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St
In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable
S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
☞ Customers supplied on all points ☜
☞ Of the C. & C. Railroad. ☜
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Pioneer
Livery & Feed Stables.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, patrons can be assured of finding there the best of Buggy Teams, Saddle Horses, and
Livery Accommodations
in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.
O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor

A NEW DEAL!
LONE PINE
Livery. Feed & Sale Stable.
A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.
OPPOSITE SEWART HOUSE.
Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,
—DEALER IN—
General Merchandise,
LONE PINE,
INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,
BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.

PROVISIONS,
&c., &c., &c.
A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once GEORGE STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R R
TAKING EFFECT
Sunday, November 16,

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1	To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Mound House.....	11:30 p. m.	5.50 p. m
Dayton.....	12:00 p. m.	5:10 p. m.
Wabuska.....	2.05 p. m.	2:50 p. m
Hawthorne.....	5.50 p. m.	11:10 a. m.
Luning.....	7:05 p. m.	9.55 a. m.
Soda Springs.....	8:05 p. m.	9:15 a. m
Belleville.....	9:15 p. m.	7:55 a. m.
Candelaria.....	Ar. 10.00 p. m	Lv. 7:20 a. m.
	No. 3. Leave—	No. 4. Arrives—
Belleville.....	8 20 a. m	5:25 p m.
Benton.....	11:50 a m	1:35 a m.
Bisnop Creek.....	2 00p. m.	11:05 a. m
Alvord.....	2.45 p. m	10:00 a. m
Independence.....	4:20 p. m.	8:30 a. m
Lone Pine.....	5:10 p. m	7:40 a. m
Keeler.....	Ar 5:35 p. m.	Lv. 7.00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R., which connect at Reno with east and west bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (3 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salsbury & Cole, tri weekly stages (Tuesdays, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downieville Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Mountain, Montezuma Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.
D. A. BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles
OF
Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc.
AT
L. WOOL
CASH STORE
A small stock of fresh groceries a canned goods constantly renewed.
Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.
CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!
THE CASH STORE
Is Where You Get
WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE
Blacksmith Shop.
R. C. Spear, Prop'r
—ALL WORK ON—
MINING TOOLS,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS
& FREIGHTING OUTFITS
—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—
HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING
☞ All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON
KEELER, CAL.
In Lake View Hotel
BEER, WINES,
LIQUORS and CIGARS
All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.
JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.
J. C. MILLER, Lessee.
—THE BAR—
Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of
WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CGARS
☞ The most careful attention given to the the amusement and comfort of patrons.
A FINE BILLIARD TABLE!
Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon. sept-12 1d

Let's reason together.

Here's a firm, one of the largest the country over, the world over; it has grown, step by step, through the years to greatness—and it sells patent medicines!—ugh!

"That's enough!"—

Wait a little—

This firm pays the newspapers good money (expensive work, this advertising!) to tell the people that they have faith in what they sell, so much faith that if they can't benefit or cure they don't want your money. Their guarantee is not indefinite and relative, but definite and absolute—if the medicine doesn't help, your money is "on call."

Suppose every sick man and every feeble woman tried these medicines and found them worthless, who would be the loser, you or they?

The medicines are Doctor Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," for blood diseases, and his "Favorite Prescription," for woman's peculiar ills. If they help toward health, they cost $1.00 a bottle each! If they don't, they cost nothing!

"There is music in the heir," said the young husband, reaching for the paregoric bottle.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Hypnotism will presently crowd the insanity dodge out of murder trials.

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Porterfield & Losey, 838 Market street, San Francisco.

Worn in Front—"I've seen that man's face before." "That's where he generally carries it."

Five cents saved on soap; five dollars lost on rotted clothes. Is that economy? There is not 5 cents difference between the cost of a bar of the poorest soap made and the best, which is as all know, Dobbins' Electric.

The man who would be known and not know, should vegetate in a village; but he who would know and not be known, should live in a city.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted .....

Sold by druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco

Beware of imitations of the genuine Seal of North Carolina Plug Cut Tobacco.

Use Enameline Stove Polish; no dust, no smell.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

Rheumatism

—IS—

PROMPTLY CURED BY

St. Jacobs Oil

Cures Also: Neuralgia, Lumbago, Sciatica, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Wounds, Swellings, Soreness, Frost-bites, Stiffness, All Aches.

THE Chas. A. Vogeler Co., Baltimore, Md.

Fresno and Tulare Lands.

Homes on easy terms in the Level Orchard Land Colony. Two canals through the tract. Terms, 15 per cent. down, balance on five years' time. Our lands are adopted to the Orange, Raisin and Deciduous Fruit. Apply to

D. T. CURTIS,

REEDLEY, Fresno County, Cal.

RITE FAST HOW? LEARN SHORTHAND by mail, of an actual reporter, at your own home, without interfering with other duties.

A NEW AND PLEASANT WAY.

Better than personal lessons. Better than a "business college." Small fraction of the usual cost. G. H. STIPP, SAN JOSE, CAL.

OPIUM AND MORPHINE HABIT, whether used by the mouth or hypodermically. The only absolute and accredited cure is Dr. C. J. Weatherby's ANTIDOTE. Painless. Harmless and Sure. Has stood the test of 19 years use on the Pacific Coast, without a failure when directions are followed. Is cheaper than the drug, and ABSOLUTELY DESTROYS ALL DESIRE FOR OPIUM in any form. Smoking Antidote $2 per bottle, or 3 bottles for $5. Individual treatment for other modes of use. All communications confidential. Write to Pacific Medicine Co., San Francisco, sole agents. Mail address, Care Box 2902.

CAROLAN & CO.

Wholesale Importers of

HARDWARE, IRON, STEEL,

Mining and Mill Supplies.

BUILDERS' HARDWARE,

WROUGHT IRON PIPE AND FITTINGS

BARB WIRE, ETC.

511 Francisco, California.

THE SPLENDID SPUR.

Being Memoirs of the Adventures of Mr. John Marvel, a Servant of His late Majesty King Charles I, in the years 1642-3: written by himself.

EDITED IN MODERN ENGLISH BY "Q."

She broke off, as I started; for below I heard the main door open, and Capt. Settle's voice in the passage. The arch villain had returned.

"Mistress Delia," I said, hurriedly, "the twelfth man has entered the house, and unless we consider our plans at once, all's up with us."

"Tush!" said the old gentleman in the chair, who (it seems) had heard all, and now sat up brisk as ever. "I, for my part, shall mix another glass, and leave it all to Jacques. Come, sit by me, sir, and you shall see some pretty play. Why, Jacques is the neatest rogue with a small sword in all France!"

"Sir," I put in, "they are a round dozen in all, and your life at present is not worth a penny's purchase."

"That's a lie! 'Tis worth this bowl before me that, with or without you, I mean to empty. What a fool thing is youth! Sir, you must be a dying man like myself to taste life properly." And, as I am a truthful man, he struck up, quavering merrily:

"Hey, nonni—nonni—no!
Men are fools that wish to die!
Is't not fine to laugh and sing
When the bells of death do ring?
Is't not fine to drown in wine,
And turn upon the toe,
And sing, hey—nonni—no!
Hey, nonni—nonni—"

"Come and sit, sir, nor spoil sport. You are too raw, I'll wager, to be of any help, and boggling I detest."

"Indeed, sir," I broke in, now thoroughly angered, "I can use the small sword as well as another."

"Tush! Try him, Jacques."

Jacques, still wearing a stolid face, brought his weapon to the guard. Stung to the quick, I wheeled round and made a lunge or two, that he put aside as easily as though I were a babe. And then—I know not how it happened, but my sword slipped like ice out of my grasp, and went flying across the room. Jacques, sedately as on a matter of business, stepped to pick it up, while the old gentleman chuckled.

I was hot and ashamed, and a score of bitter words sprang to my tongue tip, when the Frenchman, as he rose from stooping, caught my eye, and beckoned me across to him.

He was white as death, and pointed to the hilt of my sword and the demi-bear engraved thereon.

"He is dead," I whispered; "hush!—turn your face aside—killed by those same dogs that are now below."

I heard a sob in the true fellow's throat. But on the instant it was drowned by the sound of a door opening and the tramp of feet on the stairs.

CHAPTER VI.

THE FLIGHT IN THE PINE WOOD.

By the sound of their steps I guessed one or two of these dozen rascals to be pretty far gone in drink, and afterwards found this to be the case. I looked round. Sir Deakin had picked up the lamp and was mixing his bowl of punch, humming to himself without the least concern:

"Vivre en tout cas
C'est le grand soulas,"

with a glance at his daughter's face, that was white to the lips, but firmly set.

"Hand me the nutmeg yonder," he said, and then, "Why, daughter, what's this?—a trembling hand?"

And all the while the footsteps were coming up.

There was a loud knock on the door.

"Come in!" called Sir Deakin.

At this, Jacques, who stood ready for battle by the entrance, wheeled round, shot a look at his master and, dropping his point, made a sign to me to do the same. The door was thrust rudely open, and Capt. Settle, his hat cocked over one eye and sham drunkenness in his gait, lurched into the room, with the whole villainous crew behind him, huddled on the threshold. Jacques and I stepped quietly back, so as to cover the girl.

"Would you mind waiting a moment?" inquired Sir Deakin, without looking up, but rubbing the nutmeg calmly up and down the grater; "a fraction too much, and the whole punch will be spoiled."

It took the captain aback and he came to a stand, eying us, who looked back at him without saying a word. And this discomposed him still further.

There was a minute during which the two parties could hear each other's breathing. Sir Deakin set down the nutmeg, wiped his thin white fingers on a napkin, and addressed the captain sweetly:

"Before asking your business, sir, I would beg you and your company to taste this liquor, which, in the court of France"—the old gentleman took a sip from the mixing ladle—"has had the extreme honor to be pronounced divine." He smacked his lips, and, rising to his feet, let his right hand rest on the silver foot of the lamp as he bowed to the captain.

Capt. Settle's bravado was plainly oozing away before this polite audacity; and, seeing Deakin taste the punch, he pulled off his cap in a shamefaced manner and sat down by the table with a word of thanks.

"Come in, sirs; come in," called the old gentleman, "and follow your friend's example. 'Twill be a compliment to make me mix another bowl when this is finished." He stepped around the table to welcome them, still resting his hand on the lamp, as if for steadiness. I saw his eye twinkle as they shuffled in and stood around the chair where the captain was seated.

"Jacques, bring glasses from the cupboard yonder! And, Delia, fetch some chairs for our guests—no, sirs, pray do not move!"

He had waved his hand lightly to the door as he turned to us; and in an instant the intention as well as the bright success of this comedy flashed upon me. There was now no one between us and the stairs, and as for Sir Deakin himself, he had already taken the step of putting the table's width between him and his guests.

I touched the girl's arm, and we made as if to fetch a couple of chairs that stood against the wainscot by the door. As we did so, Sir Deakin pushed the punchbowl forward under the captain's nose.

"Smell, sir," he cried, airly, "and report to your friends on the foretaste."

Settle's nose hung over the steaming compound. With a swift pass of the hand, the old gentleman caught up the lamp and had shaken a drop of burning oil into the bowl. A great blaze leaped to the ceiling. There was a howl—a scream of pain; and as I pushed Mistress Delia through the doorway and out to the head of the stairs, I caught a backward glimpse of Sir Deakin rushing after us, with one of the stoutest of the robbers at his heels.

"Down stairs, for your life!" I whispered to the girl, and, turning, as her father tumbled past me, let his pursuer run on my sword, as on a spit. At the same instant, another blade passed through the fellow transversely, and Jacques stood beside me, with his back to the lintel.

As we pulled our swords out and the man dropped, I had a brief view into the room, where now the blazing liquid ran off the table in a stream. Settle, stamping with agony, had his palms pressed against his scorched eyelids. The fat landlord, in trying to beat out the flames, had increased them by upsetting two bottles of aqua vitæ, and was dancing about with three fingers in his mouth. The rest stood for the most part dumfounded; but Black Dick had his pistol lifted.

Jacques and I sprang out for the landing and round the doorway. Between the flash and the report I felt a sudden scrape, as of red hot wire, across my left thigh and just above the knee.

"Tenez, camarade," said Jacques' voice in my ear; "a moi la porte—a vous le maitre, la-bas;" and he pointed down the staircase, where, by the glare of the conflagration that beat past us, I saw the figures of Sir Deakin and his daughter standing.

"But how can you keep the door against a dozen?"

The Frenchman shrugged his shoulders with a smile—

"Mais—comme ca!"

For at this moment came a rush of footsteps within the room. I saw a fat paunch thrusting past us, a quiet pass of steel, and the landlord was wallowing on his face across the threshold. Jacques' teeth snapped together as he stood ready for another victim; and as the fellows within the room tumbled back he motioned me to leave him.

I sprang from his side, and, catching the rail of the staircase, reached the foot in a couple of bounds.

"Hurry!" I cried, and caught the old baronet by the hand. His daughter took the other, and between us we hurried him across the passage for the kitchen door.

Within, the chambermaid was on her knees by the settle, her face and apron of the same hue. I saw she was incapable of helping, and hastened across the stone floor and out towards the back entrance.

A stream of icy wind blew in our faces as we stepped over the threshold. The girl and I bent our heads to it, and, stumbling, tripping and panting, pulled Sir Deakin with us out into the cold air.

The yard was no longer dark. In the room above some one had pushed the casement open, letting in the wind; and by this 'twas very evident the room was on fire. Indeed, the curtains had caught, and, as we ran, a pennon of flame shot out over our heads, licking the thatch. In the glare of it the outbuildings and the yard gate stood clearly out from the night. I heard the trampling of feet, the sound of Settle's voice shouting an order, and then a dismal yell and clash of steel as we flung open the gate.

"Jacques!" screamed the old gentleman; "my poor Jacques! Those dogs will mangle him with their cut and thrust"—

'Twas very sigular and sad, but, as if in answer to Sir Deakin's cry, we heard the brave fellow's voice; and a famous shout it must have been to reach us over the roaring of the flames:

"Mon maitre—mon maitre!" he called twice, and then "Sauve toi!" in a fainter voice, yet clear. And after that only a racket of shouts and outcries reached us. Without doubt the villains had overpowered and slain this brave servant. In spite of our peril (for they would be after us at once), 'twas all we could do to drag the old man from the gate and up the road; and as he went he wept like a child.

After about fifty yards we turned in at a gate and began to cut across a field, for I hoped thus not only to baffle pursuit for a while, but also to gain the wood that we saw dimly ahead. It reached to the top of the hill and I knew not how far beyond; and, as I was reflecting that there lay our chance of safety, I heard the inn door below burst open with loud cries and the sound of footsteps running up the road after us.

Moreover, to complete our fix, the clouds that had been scurrying across the moon's face now for a minute left a clear interval of sky about her; so that right in our course there lay a great patch brilliantly lit, whereon our figures could be spied at once by any one glancing into the field. Also, it grew evident that Sir Deakin's late agility was but a short and sudden triumph of will over body; for his poor crooked legs began to trail and lag sadly. So, turning sharp about, we struck for the hedge's shadow, and there pulled him down in a dry ditch and lay with a hand on his mouth to stifle his ejaculations, while we ourselves held our breathing.

The runners came up the road, pausing for a moment by the gate. I heard it creak, and saw two or three dark forms enter the field—the remainder tearing on up the road with a great clatter of boots.

"Alas, my poor Jacques!" moaned Sir Deakin; "and to be butchered so, that never in his days killed a man but as if he loved him!"

"Sir," I whispered harshly, "if you keep this noise I must gag you." And with that he was silent for a while.

There was a thick tangle of brambles in the ditch where we lay; and to this we owe our lives. For one of the men, coming our way, passed within two yards of us, with the flat of his sword beating the growth over our heads.

"Reu-ben! Reuben Gedges!" called a voice by the gate.

The fellow turned; and, peeping between the bramble twigs, I saw the moonlight glittering on his blade. A narrow, light haired man he was, with a weak chin; and since then I have paid him out for the fright he gave us.

"What's the coil?" he shouted back.

"The stable roof's ablaze—for the Lord's sake come and save the hosses!"

He strode back, and in a minute the field was clear. Creeping out with caution I grew aware of two mournful facts: first, that the stable was indeed afire, as I perceived by standing on tiptoe and looking over the hedge; and, second, that my knee was hurt by Black Dick's bullet. The muscles had stiffened while we were crouching, and now pained me badly. Yet I kept it to myself as we started off again to run.

But at the stile that, at the top of the field, led into the woods I pulled up.

"Sorry I am to say it, but you must go on without me."

"O—oh!" cried the girl.

"'Tis for your safety. See, I leave a trail of blood behind me, so that when day rises they will track us easily."

And, sure enough, even by the moon, 'twas easy to trace the dark spots on the grass and earth beside the stile. My left boot, too, was full of blood.

She was silent for a while. Down in the valley we could hear the screams of the poor horses. The light of the flames lit up the pine trunks about us to a bright scarlet.

"Sir, you hold our gratitude cheaply."

She unwound the kerchief from her neck, and, making me sit on the stile, bound up my knee skillfully, twisting a short stick in the bandage to stop the bleeding.

I thanked her, and we hurried on into the depths of the wood, treading silently on the deep carpet of pine needles. The ground rose steeply all the way; and all the way, though the light grew feebler, the roar and outcries in the valley followed us.

Towards the hill's summit the trees were sparser. Looking upwards I saw that the sky had grown thickly overcast. We crossed the ridge, and after a minute or so were in thick cover again.

'Twas here that Sir Deakin's strength gave out. Almost without warning, he sank down between our hands, and in a second was taken with that hateful cough, that once already this night had frightened me for his life.

"Ah, ah!" he groaned, between the spasms, "I'm not fit—I'm not fit for it!" and was taken again, and rolled about barking, so that I feared the sound would bring all Settle's gang on our heels. "I'm not fit for it!" he repeated, as the cough left him, and he lay back helpless among the pine needles.

Now, I understood his words to bear on his unfitness for death, and judged them very decent and properly spoken; and took occasion to hint this in my attempts to console him.

"Why, bless the boy!" he cried, sitting up [illegible] and staring, "for what d'ye think I'm unsuited?"

"Why, to die, sir—to be sure!"

"Holy Mother!" He regarded me with surprise, contempt and pity, all together; "was ever such a dunderhead! If ever man were fit to die, I am he—and that's just my reasonable complaint. Heart alive! 'tis unfit to live I am, tied to this absurd body!"

I suppose my attitude expressed my lack of comprehension, for he lifted a finger and went on:

"Tell me—can you eat beef and drink beer and enjoy them?"

"Why, yes."

"And fight—hey? and kiss a pretty girl, and be glad you've done it? Dear, dear, how I do hate a fool and a fool's pity! Lift me up and carry me a step. This night's work has killed me; I feel it in my lungs. 'Tis a pity, too, for I was just beginning to enjoy it."

I lifted him as I would a babe, and off we set again, my teeth shutting tight on the pain of my hurt. And presently, coming to a little dingle about half a mile down the hillside, well hid with dead bracken and blackberry bushes, I consulted with the girl. The place was well sheltered from the wind that rocked the treetops, and I feared to go much farther, for we might come on open country at any moment and so double our peril. It seemed best, therefore, to lay the old gentleman snugly in the bottom of this dingle and wait for day. And with my buff coat, and a heap of dried leaves, I made him fairly easy, reserving my cloak to wrap about Mistress Delia's fair neck and shoulders. But against this at first she protested.

"For how are you to manage?" she asked.

"I shall tramp up and down, and keep watch," answered I, strewing a couch for her beside her father; "and 'tis but fair exchange for the kerchief you gave me from your own throat."

At last I persuaded her, and she crept close to her father, and under the edge of the buff coat for warmth. There was abundance of dry bracken in the dingle, and with this and some handfuls of pine needles I covered them over and left them to find what sleep they might.

For two hours and more after this I hobbled to and fro near them as well as my wound would allow, looking up at the sky through the pine tops, and listening to the sobbing of the wind. Now and then I would swing my arms for warmth, and breathe on my fingers, that were sorely benumbed; and all the while kept my ears on the alert, but heard nothing.

'Twas, as I said, something over two hours after, that I felt a soft, cold touch, and then another, like kisses on my forehead. I put up my hand and looked up again at the sky. As I did so the girl gave a long sigh and awoke from her doze.

"Sure I must have dropped asleep," she said, opening her eyes and spying my shadow above her; "has aught happened?"

"Ay," replied I, "something is happening that will wipe out our traces and my bloody track."

"And what is that?"

"Snow! See, 'tis falling fast."

She bent over and listened to her father's breathing.

"'Twill kill him," she said, simply.

I pulled some more fronds of the bracken to cover them both. She thanked me and offered to relieve me in my watch, which I refused. And indeed by lying down I should have caught my death very likely.

The big flakes drifted down between the pines, till, as the moon paled, the ground about me was carpeted all in white, with the foliage black as ink above it. Time after time, as I tramped to and fro, I paused to brush the fresh forming heap from the sleepers' coverlet and shake it gently from the tresses of the girl's hair. The old man's face was covered completely by the buff coat, but his breathing was calm and regular as any child's.

Day dawned. Awaking Mistress Delia, I asked her to keep watch for a time, while I went off to explore. She crept out from her bed with a little shiver of disgust.

"Run about," I advised, "and keep the blood stirring."

She nodded; and, looking back, as I strode down the hill, I saw her moving about quickly, swinging her arms, and only pausing to wave a hand to me for good speed.

'Twas an hour before I returned, and plenty I had to tell. Only at the entrance to the dingle the words failed from off my tongue. The old gentleman lay as he had lain through out the night. But the bracken had been tossed aside, and the girl was kneeling over him. I drew near, my step not arousing her. Sir Deakin's face was pale and calm; but on the snow that had gathered by his head lay a red streak of blood. 'Twas from his lungs, and he was quite dead.

CHAPTER VII.

I FIND A COMRADE.

But I must go back a little and tell you what befell in my expedition.

I had scarce trudged out of sight of my friends, down the hill, when it struck me that my footprints in the snow were in the last degree dangerous to them, and might lead Settle and his crew straight to the dingle. Here was a fix. I stood for some minutes nonplused, when above the stillness of the wood (for the wind had dropped) a faint sound as of running water caught my ear, and helped me to an idea.

The sound seemed to come from my left. Turning aside, I made across the hill towards it, and after two hundred paces or so came on a tiny brook, not two feet across, that gushed down the slope with quite a considerable chatter and impatience. The bed of it was mainly earth, with here and there a large stone or root to catch the toe; so that, as I stepped into the water and began to thread my way down between the banks of snow, 'twas necessary to look carefully to my steps.

Here and there the crook fetched a leap down a sharper declivity, or shot over a hanging stone; but, save for the wetting I took in these places, my progress was easy enough. I must have waded in this manner for half a mile, keeping the least possible noise, when at an angle ahead I spied a clearing among the pines, and to the right of the stream, on the very verge, a hut of logs standing, with a woodrick behind it.

'Twas a low building, but somewhat long, and I guessed it to be, in summer time, a habitation for the wood cutters. But what surprised me was to hear a dull, moaning noise, very regular and disquieting, that sounded from the interior of the hut. I listened, and hit on the explication. 'Twas the sound of snoring.

Drawing nearer with caution, I noticed, in that end of the hut which stood over the stream, a gap, or window hole. The sound issued through this like the whirring of a dozen looms. "He must be an astonishing fellow," thought I, "that can snore in this fashion. I'll have a peep before I wake him." I waded down till I stood under the sill, put both hands upon it, and, pulling myself up quiet as a mouse, stuck my face in at the window, and then very nearly set back into the brook for fright.

For I had gazed straight down into the upturned faces of Capt. Settle and his gang.

How long I stood there, with the water rushing past my ankles, and my body turning from cold to hot and back again, I cannot tell you. But 'twas until, hearing no pause in the sleepers' chorus, I found courage for another peep; and that must have been some time.

(To be Continued.)

The grippe is prevailing at Lockport, N. Y., to an alarming extent. There are several hundred cases. Several of the physicians are ill.

Canada proposes to put crude petroleum on the free list and reduce the duty on sugar.

A PERFECT BANK.

What makes a representative bank? One whose resources are far ahead of its liabilities; which will not lend money except on sterling securities; which can lend money at the shortest notice; which will discount good business notes, and which issues letters of credit to any part of the civilized world; a bank which has the entire confidence of the general public, and has the best citizens of the place as its directors and officers. Such a one is the Pacific Bank, of San Francisco.

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED.

To the Editor—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy free to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their express and post-office address. Respectfully,

T. A. Slocum M. C., 181 Pearl St., New York.

The winter girl for months has reigned,
But now her beauty waxes dim;
Her power is waning, soon she'll find
That she must either sink—or swim.

THROUGH THE WEARY HOURS

Of many a night, made doubly long by its protracted agony, the rheumatic sufferer tosses to and fro on his sleepless couch, vainly praying for that rest which only comes by fits and starts. His malady is one which ordinary medicines too often fail to relieve, but there is ample evidence to prove that the efficient blood depurent, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, affords the rheumatic a reliable means of relief. Check the malady in its incipient stages, when the first premonitory twinges come on, with this agreeable medicine, and avoid years of torture. Whatever be the rationale of the active influence of the Bitters upon this malady, certain it is that no evidence relating to its effect is more direct and positive than that which relates to its action in cases of rheumatism. Like all sterling remedies, however, it deserves a protracted, systematic trial, and should not be abandoned because not at once remedial. It is equally efficacious in dyspepsia, indigestion and kindred diseases.

To be great, your opportunity must come when the world is looking on.

THINGS WORTH REMEMBERING.

When you feel a kind of goneness about the stomach it is a sign that your food does not sit well and that you are about to have a fit of indigestion.

When you begin to feel nervous and are unable to sit still comfortably; when your clothes suddenly seem to lose their fit and become too tight in places the fit of indigestion is surely upon you.

When this fit of indigestion is repeated from day to day it finally resolves itself into dyspepsia.

Chronic dyspepsia will surely make the happiest life a hell upon earth.

Remember that three to ten of Brandreth's Pills will cure the worst case of indigestion or dyspepsia, or both, and that a regular course of them, say two every night for a week or ten days will act as a preventive of either complaint.

Nothing that shuns the light can be trusted in the dark.

The Occidental Hotel, San Francisco, is universally pronounced by the public the model hotel of the Pacific Coast. Everything is perfection to the minutest detail, and guests are made to feel entirely at home. J. A. Hooper, Manager.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Used in Millions of Homes—

40 Years the Standard.

Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.

No other baking powder does such work.

Stop that Chronic Cough Now!

For if you do not it may become consumptive. For Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility and Wasting Diseases, there is nothing like

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil and HYPOPHOSPHITES Of Lime and Soda.

It is almost as palatable as milk. Far better than other so-called Emulsions. A wonderful flesh producer.

Scott's Emulsion

There are poor imitations. Get the genuine.

"German Syrup"

The majority of well-read physicians now believe that Consumption is a germ disease. In other words, instead of being in the constitution itself it is caused by innumerable small creatures living in the lungs having no business there and eating them away as caterpillars do the leaves of trees. The phlegm that is coughed up is those parts of the lungs which have been gnawed off and destroyed. These little bacilli, as the germs are called, are too small to be seen with the naked eye, but they are very much alive just the same, and enter the body in our food, in the air we breathe, and through the pores of the skin. Thence they get into the blood and finally arrive at the lungs where they fasten and increase with frightful rapidity. Then German Syrup comes in, loosens them, kills them, expells them, heals the places they leave, and so nourish and soothe that, in a short time consumptives become germ-proof and well.

A Germ Disease.

THE GAVI

CALIFORNIA FRUIT

Female Pills.

Perfectly Harmless; a Positive Preventative for Suppressed, Irregular and Painful Menstruation, no matter how weak the patient is or what the difficulty may be. Price $2.50 per box. Postpaid. Secure from observation. PROSSER BROS., 111 Grant Avenue, San Francisco, Cal.

STEINWAY, Gabler and Pease Pianos

Meaning the Best Piano Made, and the favorite cheaper Pianos; all Musical Instruments; Bands Supplied; large stock of Sheet Music. Steinway Hall, 206 & 208 Post Street, Matthias Gray Co. Call and see our new rooms and new stock.

S. F. N. U. No. 464 New Series No. 19

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation permanently. For sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all druggists.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

BIG PRIZES. In underwear we have one line of grey mixed, nice quality of goods for men, either shirts or drawers, sizes, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, at $1.75 each.

Our 50 cent goods are not often over 42 in drawers or 44 in shirts.

Scarlet or blue grey flannel, in extra sizes and quality, drawers up to 46, and shirts to 48; the scarlet are $2.00, and the grey $1.75.

Riveted overalls, Brown Duck, extra quality, at 65 cents, to close the lot bought at a sacrifice.

Waist 42, leg either 30, 31, 32 or 33 inches.
Waist 40, leg either 30, 31, 32, 33 or 34 inches.
Waist 38, leg either 33, 34, 35 or 36 inches.
Waist 36, leg either 30, 32, 33, 34, 35 or 36 inches.
Waist 34, leg either 30, 32, 33, 34 or 35 inches.

We have the largest variety of good quality overalls in extra sizes to be found in town. If out of one color in above lot will substitute another unless otherwise directed. We have one odd dozen beautiful grey color, size 38x31, at same price, formerly sold at $1.10.

Mens' cassimer pants, in neat styles for old or middle aged men, in extra sizes, as follows: Waist 40, leg 31; w. 41, l. 30; w. 42, l. 29 or 30; w. 44, l. 31 or 32; w. 46, l. 31, 32, 33, 34; w. 47, l. 30. These are true to measure. Price, $3.50 to $6.00.

Smith's Cash Store, 416 & 418 Front St. S. F.

INDISPENSIBLE TO HOUSEKEEPERS. Write for Circular. Ask Your Dealer for it.

AMERICAN OIL CO., Agts. 11 to 15 Main St. San Francisco, California.

DEPUE & AYDELOTTE'S

BUSINESS COLLEGE, OAKLAND, CAL.

Bookkeeping, 6 mos., $50; Shorthand, 6 mos., $50; Telegraphy, 6 mos., $50.

NO VACATIONS. SEND FOR CIRCULARS, &c.

ORIGINAL BUCKEYE MOWERS.

McCORMICK MOWERS, BRADLEY'S WHEELED WIRE RAKES

All kinds of Hay Presses and Haying Tools. Truman-Hooker Co.'s Bale-Ties.

Truman, Hooker & Co., San Francisco and Fresno.

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER CURED TO STAY CURED. A NEW DEPARTURE. WRITE TO PHAROLD HAYES, M.D. BUFFALO, N.Y.

FOR MEN ONLY!

VIGOR AND STRENGTH For LOST or FAILING MANHOOD, General and NERVOUS DEBILITY, Weakness of Body and Mind, Effects of Errors or Excesses in Old or Young. Robust, Noble MANHOOD fully Restored. How to enlarge and Strengthen WEAK, UNDEVELOPED ORGANS & PARTS OF BODY. Absolutely unfailing HOME TREATMENT—Benefits in a day. Testify from 50 States and Foreign Countries. Write them. Descriptive Book, explanation and proofs mailed (sealed) free. Address ERIE MEDICAL CO. BUFFALO, N. Y.

BIG G Cures in 1 to 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Big G is the acknowledged leading remedy for all the unnatural discharges and private diseases of men. A certain cure for the debilitating weakness peculiar to women. I prescribe it and feel safe in recommending it to all sufferers. Mfd only by THE EVANS CHEMICAL CO. CINCINNATI, O. U. S. A. Trade Mark. A. J. STONER, M. D., DECATUR, ILL. Sold by Druggists. PRICE $1.00.

YOUNG MEN! The Specific A No. 1 cures all unnatural discharges of Men, no matter of how long standing. Prevents stricture, it heals an inflamed urethra. Cure a week without everything else. Use failed. Circular on application. Sold by druggists, or sent on receipt of price by The A. Schommer Manufg Co., San Jose, Cal. PRICE $3.00

R. H. McDonald PRES'T. ESTABLISHED 1863. Oldest Chartered Bank on the Pacific Coast. PACIFIC BANK. Capital $1,000,000. Surplus $800,000. Av. Resources, $4,704,000. Yearly Volume of Business, $230,000,000. R. H. McDONALD, San Francisco, California.

Deposits Received from $1 upwards. Money Saved is Money Earned. PEOPLE'S HOME SAVINGS BANK. 808 Market St., cor. 4th St. IN FLOOD BUILDING. San Francisco, California. Guarantee Capital, $1,000,000. Paid up in Cash ..... $333,333.33. Subject to Call ..... 666,666.67. Interest per annum (5.52% on TERM Deposits for last three terms: (4.60% on ORDINARY Deposits. B. O. Carr, Manager and Sect'y. Columbus Waterhouse, President. San Francisco, California, Jan'y 1, 1891.

VASELINE.

For ONE DOLLAR sent us by mail, we will deliver, free of all charges, to any person in the United States, all the following articles carefully packed in a neat box:

One two-ounce bottle of Pure Vaseline.. 10 cts.
One two-ounce bottle Vaseline Pomade. 15 "
One jar of Vaseline Cold Cream ..... 15 "
One cake of Vaseline Camphor Ice..... 10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, unscented... 10 "
One cake of Vaseline Soap, scented..... 25 "
One two-ounce bottle of White Vaseline. 25 "
——$1.10

Or for stamps any single article at the price named. If you have occasion to use Vaseline in any form be careful to accept only genuine goods put up by us in original packages. A great many druggists are trying to persuade buyers to take VASELINE put up by them. Never yield to such persuasion, as the article is an imitation without value, and will not give you the result you expect. A little of Blue Seal Vaseline is sold by all druggists at ten cents.

Chesebrough M'f'g. Co., 24 State St., New York.

BROOKLYN HOTEL Bush St., bet. Montgomery & Sansome, S. F.; conducted on both the European and American plans. This Hotel, under the management of Charles Montague, and is the best Family and Business Men's Hotel in San Francisco. Home comforts, cuisine unexcelled, first-class service, highest standard of respectability guaranted. Board and room, per day, $1.25 to $2.00; single room, 50 cts. to $1.00 per night. Free coach to and from the Hotel.

WANTED SOLDIERS' HOMESTEADS The addresses of all soldiers who homesteaded a less number of acres than 160 and made final proof on the same before June 22, 1874. W. E. Mosier, P. O. Box 1765 Denver, Colo. Mention this paper.

TIGER MOWERS.

Cut 4 feet, 3inches, - - - - $75 00
Cut 5 feet, - - - - - - 82 50
Cut 6 feet, - - - - - - 90 00

Will cut where any other Mower.

Baker & Hamilton

San Francisco, Cal.

No Fire, No Boiler, No Danger, Always Ready.

BUY THE REGAN VAPOR ENGINE

For Pumping Water or Wine, Spraying Fruit Trees, Sawing Wood, Running Lathes, Electric Light Plants, etc.

REGAN VAPOR ENGINE CO., 221-223 First Street, S. F.

THE SMOKER Will have no other Tobacco Who once tries "SEAL OF NORTH CAROLINA" Plug Cut. This is the secret of its Immense sale.

This Picture, Panel size, mailed for 4 cents. J. F. SMITH & CO., Makers of "Bile Beans," New York City.

CURE Biliousness, Sick Headache, Malaria. BILE BEANS.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Pleasant and agreeable to the taste. Children take it without objection. By druggists. 25 CTS. 25 CTS.

"Say aye "No" and ye'll ne'er be married" —Don't refuse all— Our Advice to use SAPOLIO: It is a solid cake of scouring soap, used for cleaning purposes

I asked a maid if she would wed,
And in my home her brightness shed;
She faintly smiled and murmured low,
"If I can have SAPOLIO."

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor.

Independence, Cal.,

FRIDAY, JUNE 19, 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXIII. NO. 1. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JUNE 19, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1077.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.25
Three Months	1.50
One Month	50
Single Copies

BATHS FOR HORSES.

Where They Receive the Turkish Kind.

VERY POPULAR IN CASE OF SICKNESS.

It is the Only Establishment of the Kind in the West.

Turkish baths for horses are not only given in Milwaukee, but they are quite popular and are very generally made use of in case of sickness as well as to humor the caprice of aristocratic family pets. The bath house in this city is the only establishment of the kind in the west. The place was designed by Dr. T. T. Toussaint, and the baths are given under his personal supervision. Being a veterinary surgeon, Dr. Toussaint first made use of the bath for the [illegible] of certain diseases, but afterwards he became popular among horse owners, who send their favorite blooded animals for a regular weekly bath.

The bath house is designed much the same as those which are patronized by humanity, only on a larger scale. There are three rooms connected with wide doors that shut so closely as to be almost air tight. The horse is first taken to the rear room, where the floor is made of hard wood strips. A steam coil is concealed in the wall, and the steam can be turned on from the room adjoining. After the horse has been led in, the door is closed and the room filled with steam until the temperature rises 100 degrees Fahrenheit. The animal is left there until the perspiration is streaming from its body, when the door is opened and the horse is led into the middle room. Here there is no steam, but the temperature is at 165 degrees. Two attendants now come forward and a little window is opened into the first room, through which the horse's head is placed. This is done so that the animal will not breathe the air at a temperature above 100 degrees.

From the ceiling a shower bath is directed on the horse, and the two attendants, standing on either side with smooth, flexible pieces of hard wood, rub off the perspiration and the water. The shower bath is continued for the space of fifteen minutes, then it is stopped and the horse is given a shampoo, where soft brushes are used. He is then rubbed for a few minutes with dry cloths and is led into the front room. The room is at moderate temperature and is fitted with an adjustable table, padded and covered with an oiled canvas.

The horse is given a drink of brandy and then led up beside the table. This padded table is of mechanical construction. When first seen it seems to be an upright platform. The top of the table is in a perpendicular position, one side of which rests on the stone floor. Through it are drawn wide strips of heavy canvas, and as the horse is led up beside the table top the canvas is placed around the animal's body and fastened. His feet are also buckled in straps, and when he is securely fastened against the upright table top an attendant begins to turn a revolving shaft that tips the padded board over, and it soon rests in a horizontal position with the horse lying at full length on his side.

The rubbing process is now carried out, while the horse lies on the table and a preparation of bay rum is applied. The mane and tail are combed and braided, and when the horse is again restored to an upright position by the tipping of the table, he is given another drink of brandy and led out.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Historic Match Box.

Yesterday I saw in the possession of a gentleman here an elegant gold match box that once belonged to Prince Maximilian, who was shot in Mexico more than twenty years ago. Just before he was put to death he gave this box and two watches to the soldiers who were detailed to carry into execution the sentence of death which had been passed upon him. He told them that he gave them these mementoes to show that he bore no ill will towards them, as they were only acting in obedience to orders. "Aim at my heart!" he said. They did so, and in a moment he was a corpse. The soldiers who were his executioners appear to have had very little sentiment, and were glad to sell the relics of the prince for a good price.

They were bought by an American traveling in Mexico and were brought to Washington, where some time later they were exposed for sale at Galt's jewelry store. One of the watches, which was beautiful and costly, was bought by the Austrian minister then here. The match box was picked up by a gentleman who is a connoisseur in things with a history. It is of solid Mexican gold, elaborately chased and ornamented with exquisite armatory designs, among which are a Cupid, heart, bow and arrow and altar. It is presumed to have been a gift to the prince from some lady admirer. If it had been a present from his wife, the unfortunate Princess Carlotta, it is likely her name would have appeared on it, and he would hardly have given it away. A large diamond glistens upon the spring by which it is opened.—Washington Cor. Cleveland Leader.

Blondes and Brunettes.

M. Topinard has been making a statistical inquiry into the colors of the eyes and hair in France, and from his 180,000 observations he deduces many interesting results, one of the most curious being that where the race is formed from a mixture of blondes and brunettes the hereditary blonde coloring comes out in the eyes and the brunette element reappears in the hair. To this tendency probably is to be attributed the rarity of a combination of light hair with dark eyes. Several observers have asserted that the American people, who are pre-eminently a mixed race, are becoming a dark haired and blue eyed nation, and if this be true such a development must be owing to the working of the law formulated by M. Topinard.—Boston Budget.

Silver Point Sketching.

Mr. Charles Sainton is hard at work at his silver point sketches, which are to be exhibited at Dowdeswell's next October. Forty pictures will be required altogether, and the artist is about half way through already. A silver point is simply a sketch made on prepared paper, with a bit of silver mounted in a holder in lieu of a bit of lead. The effect is extremely delicate, and many of Mr. Sainton's portraits look like faces seen in a dream. The study of this art is said to be deeply absorbing, and it possibly owes some of its fascination from the extreme care requisite in its execution. Erasure is impossible, and a false step can never be retrieved. Mr. Sainton's sketches are varied in character, and the select party of friends who were recently invited to view his work at his studio were much delighted at the delicate effect of the pictures, all set off by white enamel frames.

A large decorative sketch of a nymph floating over a limpid lake, followed by a fairy sprite, was exceedingly well composed, and there were portraits of society beauties and heads of artists' models. But by far the most effective thing in the whole collection was the danseuses, sketched from memory at the Empire. The medium is particularly suited to the transparent draperies, fairy like effects, and the graceful figures, with their floating skirts and star crowned hair, are beautifully brought out against a soft shaded background. We may safely predict a great success for Mr. Sainton's exhibition, which will probably revive a taste for this fascinating art.—London Star.

A Bird That Dances.

Macon has the most remarkable bird in the known world, being nothing less than a musical gander. This wonderful bird is owned by some negroes living in the vicinity of the gas works, at the foot of Mulberry street. For several weeks the employes of the gas works, as well as the electric light works in the same neighborhood, have been seen to stop every evening on quitting work and surround a lot of little negroes who daily congregate on the square near the railroad embankment. Yesterday a Telegraph man determined to see the cause of the gathering, and on proceeding to the locality found the little negroes engaged in "patting" with all their might and an old gray goose in the center of the circle dancing, first on one foot and then on the other. The gander seemed to enjoy the dance, and, though it might read like a "fake," was keeping most excellent time to the rude music of the children. For an hour or so that fool goose will dance to the patting, always stopping when the children cease their music, and seems always ready to resume. Any one who will take the trouble to go down to the gas works any of these evenings will see the wonderful goose.—Macon (Ga.) Telegraph.

An Empress' Economy.

The Japan Weekly Mail, in a recent issue, observes that the empress of Japan has long shown an extreme interest in all the charitable institutions of Tokio which are devoted to women and children. Especially is this the case in regard to the Tokio Female hospital, which has proved so useful to the poorer classes in the capital that larger premises became necessary, while the funds were insufficient for the purpose. Her majesty cast about for some methods of giving effectual assistance to the institution, and at last decided that she could best do so by exercising strict economy in her personal expenditure and devoting what could be spared to the hospital. As the result of one year's saving, her majesty has just bestowed a sum of 8,446 yen, 90 sen and 8 rin on the institution. This amounts to about $7,500. A sen is equivalent to a halfpenny, and contains 10 rin. "There is something picturesque," observes The Mail, "about these sen and rin. They represent an account minutely and faithfully kept between her majesty's unavoidable expenses and the benevolent impulse that constantly urged her to curtail them. Such gracious acts of sterling effort command admiration and love."

The Koburger Bible.

The latest addition to the private collection of antiquities, curios, old manuscripts, in possession of Gen. Charles W. Darling, of Utica, N. Y., is a perfect copy of the Koburger Bible, printed in folio by Anthony Koburger, of Nuremburg, 1483. Previously to this time printing had been done mostly in Latin, although in 1480 the Italians began to print with Greek and Hebrew types. Anthony Koburger was distinguished for his learning as well as celebrated for the elegance of his printing. He was likewise a very extensive book seller, and had large book stores in his own city, Lyons, and in many other of the great European cities. In twenty-six years he printed thirteen editions of the Bible, twelve in Latin and one in Greek, all large folios, and extremely beautiful specimens of the art.—New York Times

Noble Street Singers.

Now that the aristocracy are taking to trade they seem determined to let no industry escape. Even the street singer has titled rivals, for the other night the Marchioness of Bristol, the ladies Hervey, and a few of their friends went through the streets and squares of Belgravia, singing and playing on guitars and mandolins. They tried to suit all tastes, and sang "O Bella Italia" and "Oh dem Golden Slippers!" with equal vigor. The proceeds of the night's work are to be given to the Hospital Sunday fund.—London Star.

Increase of a Bad Habit.

The cigarette habit is increasing. The commissioner of internal revenue collected taxes last year upon 2,151,515,300, which is an increase of 288,789,260 over the preceding fiscal year. The number taxed is a pretty good indication of the consumption. The number of cigars taxed during the last fiscal year was 3,867,385,640, an increase of 22,658,990, showing that the consumption of cigarettes is increasing more rapidly than that of cigars.—Exchange.

FACTS ABOUT CIGARS.

A Talk With an Observing Tobacconist.

HOW THE "DRY SMOKE" HABIT IS FOSTERED

Peculiarities of the Fragrant Havana. Heavy Smokers.

"Much has been written about cigars and smokers," said a La Salle street tobacconist, "but there are some things that haven't been told yet. For instance, do you know that 'dry' smoking is on the increase? A dry smoke is making away with the cigar without lighting it—crunching, chewing, crushing away on it with the teeth until the last particle of juice is extracted."

"What is the origin of this habit?" asked the reporter, as he puffed away at a fragrant Havana the cigar dealer had passed over to him.

"In nearly every case it begins with heart scare. You see, in some forms of dyspepsia the stomach distends with wind and presses a trifle against the heart. The smoker turns pale as he reflects that the red corpuscles of the blood have become triangulated, as his scientific doctor told him they would, and now he must give up smoking if he would live. But giving up smoking is, with most tobacco users, far easier said than done. Then comes the compromise. The frightened smoker holds the cigar in his mouth but does not light it. Every nerve in his body is a-quiver, and nothing but the extract of tobacco will allay that nervousness. The teeth press down upon the unlighted torch, the nicotinous fluid starts. This is a dry smoke. The man soon learns to like it, and the habit grows upon him just as the real fire smoke habit had done. But he is no better off. He gets fully as much tobacco into his system by that practice as by the other—in many cases more."

"Can a man get away with many cigars in that way?"

"I should say so. I have a customer—a well known attorney—who buys daily a box of twenty-five imported Havana cigars, for which he pays me $4.50, or eighteen cents apiece. He is wealthy and can afford the expense. He dry smokes these cigars pretty thoroughly, too. I have another customer—a real estate broker, and one of the most companionable and sociable of fellows—who buys thirty-five straight ten-cent domestic cigars every morning, and he smokes every one of them himself. Should he give one to a friend he buys another to take its place. He is systematic in all things, and he will smoke no more and no less than the number mentioned."

The reporter subsequently saw this broker, who confirmed the statement, and denied that his nerves or his health were in any wise affected by the large number of cigars he smoked.

"Men's whims and caprices are shown as decidedly in the matter of cigars as in anything in the world. A physician, and a popular one, too, smokes just seven cigars a day, no more and no less, and they are of a special brand. He has smoked them for thirteen years. During all this time, he assures me, he has never smoked one more or one less than seven a day. Physicians are called out so irregularly that one would least expect to find method in their ranks; yet he has a regular hour for smoking, and will let nothing interfere with it.

"Is there such acute taste as that in cigars? Is it possible for a man to be educated up to a particular brand, so that he can enjoy no other?"

"Imagination plays a big part in that particular. A certain brand which has had a big run will suddenly grow unpopular. Smokers will declare the quality has depreciated, but such is not the case. Any honest manufacturer will seek above all things to maintain the quality. It's imagination. I demonstrated that once to my entire satisfaction. I had an excellent brand, which for convenience I'll call the 'Escurial,' but it palled on my customers' taste. Knowing it to be a splendid cigar, the qest quality of goods I carried, I got the manufacturer to change the name to—well, let me call it 'The Amber,' and at once those who had rejected it under another name took to it handsomely. That was a year ago, and I have no more popular cigar in my entire stock."

"Has the color of the wrapper anything to do with the strength of cigars?"

"It has very little. You will observe how small a part of the weight it is. It is the filler, the great inside bulk, which determines the quality of a cigar's strength, and not the binder or the wrapper, neither of which constitutes a twentieth part of the volume of goods used."

"Concerning flavored Havana cigars?"

"There it is again. How often have I heard self styled connoisseurs in imported cigars invite attention to the delightful perfume in a certain brand and allege that therein is the virtue of the cigar.

"Let me tell you there is not a manufacturer in Havana who ever did or ever will export a scented cigar. They do place stems in a hogshead and fill it with water, and use the water when it becomes impregnated with the strength of the stems for the sprinkling of the tobacco when they work it. But this is done to give slightly added strength to the goods, not to perfume it. There is no essence or extract on the face of the earth that can compare in excellence, from the smoker's standpoint, with the natural bouquet of choice tobacco grown in Cuba. Let me get back to the wrapper business to say this:

"Don't you know that the Sumatra wrapper is being used more and more by domestic manufacturers, not to impart any distinctive flavor, or to give strength or to take it away from the cigar, but in order to add to its comeliness, the leaf being very smooth and pretty? If the wrapper affected the strength of the cigar to any extent, or interfered in any degree with its flavor, manufacturers would not, as they do here daily in America, put a Sumatra wrapper around a filler of imported Havana tobacco which is of far better quality and of more desirable strength."—Chicago Herald.

A Trophy of the Bloody Angle.

One of the happiest men who returned from the Gettysburg memorial encampment is C. W. Bishing, of Harvey's Lake, this county. He was a private in Capt. Rice's company, Fifty-third Pennsylvania volunteers. Bishing was shot twice at Gettysburg, his wounds being ugly ones, a bullet shattering an arm and another entering near his right thigh. This occurred near the bloody angle and not far from the spot on which the regimental monument stands. As soon as he received the wounds he set to work to bury his musket. He fell near a big rock, and, though suffering great pain and bleeding profusely, he managed to scoop out enough dirt at the base of the bowlder to slip his musket into the excavation. Afterward he carefully covered it and wondered whether he would ever see it again.

Bishing accompanied the surviving members of his old regiment, the Fifty-third Pennsylvania volunteers, to Gettysburg on the occasion of the dedication of their monument. While there Bishing, accompanied by several old comrades, started out to look for the musket he had buried twenty-six years before. The bloody angle was easily found, and he soon distinguished the huge bowlder at whose base he had fallen and where he had hidden the gun. It took but a few moments to dig the earth up, when, to his joy, he struck the old musket and quickly resurrected it. It had the appearance of Rip Van Winkle's fowling piece. The stock had fallen apart, but was still in a good state of preservation. The barrel was bound about with a thick coat of rust, and the lock and other portions were in the same condition. But Bishing lifted the old musket tenderly, and, as the recollections of the past filled his mind, he kissed it with the enthusiasm of a father who has found a long lost child. Bishing brought the musket to Wilkesbarre this afternoon. He says he is poor, but no money will buy the musket.—Wilkesbarre (Pa.) Cor. New York Sun.

A Queer Sect of Turks.

Among the last batch of Syrians arriving at Castle Garden were three Druses. Two were farmers and the third was a shoemaker. They went from Castle Garden to Baltimore.

These three men are the only Druses who have ever come to this country. An isolated and peculiar race, the Druses have lived for generations near Mount Lebanon. Their total number is about 40,000. Hakem, the third Fatimite caliph, is claimed by them as their founder. They honor him as a divine being, and faithfully observe the curious religious rites which he established.

They are divided into two classes—the elect and the ignorant. The elect are the high priests, and the ignorant are those who are too young and inexperienced to be initiated into the mysteries of their religion. The high priests guard the mysteries of their faith zealously, and tolerate neither Hebrews nor Christians. The ignorant are far less conservative, and frequently mingle socially with believers in their creeds.

The elect Druses believe that Jesus Christ was merely an ordinary prophet, and that Hakem was really God, manifested in the flesh. They are confident, too, that the number of orthodox Druses can never decrease or increase.

The three Druses in this country are fine looking men, and are evidently possessed of unusual intelligence.—New York Herald.

Where's the Aurora?

The aurora borealis is a phenomenon that for years has been conspicuous by its absence from these skies. Time was, and that not so long ago, when the northern heavens presented a spectacle of weird, bewildering beauty. Why this dearth of electrical display? The earth and the heavens and the sun and the air are the same, to all appearances. Yet the borean horizon is innocent of its shifting canopy of northern lights. Nor has there been any reason given by scientific men for this disappearance. Big spots on the sun come and go. Their appearance has been in former years found to be coeval with the aurora, but the rule has not held good for a decade. Have the thousands of dynamos that have come into existence in that time ground out such a lot of electrical energy that there is not enough left in the atmosphere to fit out a single display in the northern heavens?—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Love and Law.

When two fellows are in love with the same girl, and one of them happens to be a postmaster, what a big advantage the latter has over his rival! A Maine postmaster recently found himself in this situation and made the best of his opportunity—or the worst, just as you may think. The girl sent her new lover papers through the postoffice. The seller of stamps thought all was not right, and upon investigation discovered that within the paper was a letter written to his fortunate rival. The postmaster reported the case and the girl was fined $10. The fine was subsequently remitted. And now the query is, doesn't the postmaster wish he hadn't done it?—Lewiston Journal.

A Western Inventor.

Edgar F. Lincoln, of Topeka, Kan., has taken out more patents during the last two years than any man in the country. His inventions cover all fields, and he has patented almost everything, from an improved electric light to a celluloid toothpick. Like a great many inventors he finds it difficult to make money out of his cleverness. Other men reap the profit of his brain effort. His latest design is a toboggan brake. It enables a toboggan to stop in the middle of the steepest incline instantly if any obstruction suddenly appears on the chute.—New York Telegram.

The son and successor of the dead Prince of Monaco is reported to be opposed to gambling, and the inference is that he will close the world (in-)famous gambling establishment in the principality, with its train of ruined lives and fortunes.

AFTER MEXICAN LIONS.

Hunting Big Game in the Lone Star State.

DAREDEVIL BOB HARPER'S PROPOSITION.

Scaring Four of Them out With an Improvised Bomb.

Along in the '60s W. H. Stephens, an old and well known Texas frontiersman, established a cattle ranch on the Medina river, twelve miles above the town of Bandera, and as his stock was large and rapidly increasing he built several small cabins in different parts of his range for the convenience of his hands.

In 1879 the writer, with some half a dozen companions, was up in the mountains above Bandera on a camp hunt, and one night camped at one of Mr. Stephens' "sub-ranches," as we called it, which that night happened to be the camping ground of Stephens himself and some of his cowboys.

Stephens, or Uncle Billy, as he was called, was enraged over the depredations of some varmint on his stock. He had that day found a fine colt and a fine Jersey bull calf dead and partially devoured, and, from the tracks, he was satisfied that either a Mexican lion or a "painter," as he called it, had killed his animals.

He said the country around abounded in both. He and his men had killed a number of each, and he knew the difference between the two animals very well.

Killing deer, turkeys and squirrels had grown rather monotonous to our party, and we determined to have a try for larger game and more exciting sport. We had several good hounds, and had already enjoyed several night hunts for wild cats and the like, of which we had killed several.

One of Uncle Billy's hands said he was satisfied he knew where a pair of lions had their den, from the fact that a few evenings before, about sundown, he had seen two cubs frolicking on a large rock on a small hill densely covered with brush, about five miles from camp, and he knew the old ones could not be far off.

He had no dog or gun with him, but had determined to beat up their quarters the first convenient opportunity, and he now offered to guide us to the place. His offer was gladly accepted, and the next morning our party set out for the varmints' lair, accompanied by Uncle Billy and the guide, John Jarvis.

A short chase brought us to what looked like a cave in a ledge of rocks, or rather beneath the ledge, and the beaten trail leading into it plainly showed that it was occupied by some wild animals.

The dogs ran to the opening and stopped. They sniffed around, whining and giving an occasional yelp, but declined to enter. We approached cautiously and peered in, but could see nothing.

At intervals, however, our ears were greeted with a low growl. We knew we had run something to its lair, but whether it was a lion, panther or bear, we could not tell. The next question was how to induce whatever it was to come out and be killed.

Leaving four of the coolest men and best shots to watch the entrance, the balance of the party began a search to see if there was any other entrance to the den or cave.

A short time satisfied us there was not, and we returned, when a council of war was held. Bob Harper proposed that two or three of us crawl in and see what we could find. We scouted the idea, and Bob admitted that he was not in earnest.

He was just enough of a daredevil to have tried it, though. We tried to smoke them out, but either the smoke did not penetrate the cave or there were crevices enough in the rocks for it to escape. Anyhow, it didn't have the desired effect.

A bright idea struck Uncle Billy. He sent Jarvis back to our temporary camp for a small canteen he had in his saddle and a blanket.

Jarvis soon returned, accompanied by our two companions who had been left to keep camp.

Uncle Billy took the canteen and poured nearly a pint of powder into it from the horn he carried. He next cut several strips from the blanket, which he damped slightly and then smeared with a small bottle of bear oil he had in his pouch, rubbing them thoroughly with powder, making a very respectable fuse.

He then tied a small rope to the canteen, and sticking the end of the fuse into the mouth of the canteen he bade us look to our guns while he lowered the improvised bomb into our den.

We formed a sort of semicircle in front of the den and breathlessly awaited the result. As soon as Uncle Billy felt the canteen lodge he tied the rope, and striking a match he carefully lighted the fuse and then fell back in good order, calling out:

"Look out, boys! If that darned thing works he'll come!" The "darned thing" worked. We heard a dull report in about three minutes, and not only "he," but she and the little ones came; and the old ones came "like the waves come when navies are stranded."

They didn't wait a second, and charged at once on the party nearest to them. But what chance had two brutes, no matter how large and fierce, against seven or eight men armed with Winchesters, each with sixteen cartridges in the magazine?

Both the old ones were badly wounded at the first volley, but it took several shots each to finish them.

The whelps were supposed to have been about two months old. Some of the boys shot one of them, but Bob Harper and Jarvis captured the other, receiving several severe scratches.

The lion measured 7 feet and 2 inches from tip to tip, the lioness 7 feet 3 inches.—Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Believes in Witches.

Samuel Armstrong, of Wapello, 82 years old and possessed of $250,000, is insane and at times so violent that it becomes necessary to confine him. His history has some queer features. For many years he was a prominent and successful contractor in Cincinnati, where he accumulated money and invested it in real estate in that vicinity. His largest holdings lay in Avondale, Greenville and Columbia, O., and they have become very valuable. About a score of years ago, as he was driving away from the place, a man who was trespassing hurled a heavy stone at him. The missile struck him in the back of the head, and from that time on he began to lose his mind.

While this infirmity was coming on, and before it had proceeded so far as to call for interference in his behalf, he was induced to transfer his Avondale estate to an unprincipled man, who, it is said, did not render him the slightest compensation for it. Litigation followed, and the sale was set aside.

Some time after this a Greenville man was appointed his guardian. The Avondale property was sold for $100,000. The rest of his property is still untouched. Armstrong was never married. His only heirs are his nephews and nieces, children of his sister, and nearly all of them live in Louisa county, not far from Wapello. Several years ago he was brought there and since then has made his home with his niece and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Paris. He is subject to several harassing delusions, principal among which is a firm belief in witches. He sees them come into his room through small openings, such as keyholes, and is greatly bothered by them in various ways. He keeps the crevices in his room closely stopped and wears straps around his ankles to keep the witches from crawling up the legs of his pants.—Chicago News.

The Remaining Territories.

After the admission of the two Dakotas, Washington and Montana, there will still remain five territories that will be candidates for admission. Four of these have at some time formulated constitutions that have been left to season. Two of these, Idaho and Wyoming, are now engaged in either revamping constitutions or making new ones. The third one, New Mexico., is about to engage in the same work. The question of the admission of these five territories will probably come before congress at the next session. The latest estimates of population made by officers of these several territories show the population to be as follows:

Arizona	50,000
Idaho	100,000
New Mexico	160,000
Utah	210,000
Wyoming	85,000

The figures here given, especially for New Mexico and Utah, will probably bear trimming down. No territory has a right to statehood by virtue of population or other qualifications. There is no statute conferring on a territory right of admission. There are, of course, numerous precedents. But the Federal government exercises the sovereign right of both admission and rejection.—San Francisco Bulletin.

The Turning of the Leaves.

A lunch was given at Flushing, L. I., last week to celebrate the turning of the leaves. The walls of the dining room into which the guests were ushered were painted a yellowish cream, with brown tones in the frieze and a flush of red in the cornice warming the brown. The fireplace and the deep window seats were filled with maple boughs flashing from yellow into the most vivid crimson. Maple boughs hung from the chandeliers, and twigs of maple and oak and brownish yellow chestnut leaves filled a huge old yellow bowl that stood in the middle of the table. The hostess wore a cream colored silk, with brown brocade redingote and crimson sash, and flaming leaves fluttered down through the menu cards that lay by the napkins. Each guest received as a favor a chestnut twig bearing a prickly burr, which, when opened, proved to be a satin lined bon bonniere.—New York Mail and Express

The Rivers of Russia.

The Russian Gazette has received some disturbing intelligence on the subject of the rivers of Russia, which play such an important part in the internal communication of the country. The Dnieper has become so shallow that navigation is difficult at even the deepest parts, such as between Kiev and Catherinoslav. Small boats can only pass now where vessels sailed formerly. The Volga itself is not much better, and the river steamers are unable to reach Nijni Novgorod. In consequence of these facts a strenuous measure of river dredging and stricter regulation for the control of the navigation of the greater rivers, such as the Don, the Dnieper, and the Volga, is being advocated, and it is believed that the minister of ways of communication has the subject under his serious consideration.

The Octogenarian Cardinal.

Cardinal Newman, who is now in his 89th year, cordially receives American visitors whenever his health permits. He is simple to a degree in his habits, getting up until quite lately, even if he does not still, between 5 and 6 in the morning, both in summer and winter. He then says mass in a chapel adjoining his bedroom, and afterward takes his breakfast and during the day presides over the meals of the fathers at 1 o'clock and at 6. On great feast days, such as that of St. Philip Neri, who founded the congregation, or of Sts. Peter and Paul, the cardinal conducts the service of benediction for the boys in the school chapel, but even this light effort has been more than he could frequently undertake during the last two or three years.—Boston Journal.

The German emperor will present the queen with his bust in memory of his recent visit to England. The bust is now being executed and represents Emperor William in the uniform of the Prussian body guards. He wears his helmet, instead of being bareheaded, as in all previous likenesses.

ANOTHER MAMMOTH CAVE.

A Cavern That Rivals That of Kentucky.

WHAT THE EXPLORING PARTY FOUND.

It Contains a Lake of Unfathomable Depth.

A rival to the great Mammoth cave has at last been discovered. Henry Griendle, living on Limestone Ridge, over the line in Wyandot county, was plowing, when one of his horses broke through the earth into a deep hole. It was rescued from its position with great difficulty. Upon examing the spot Griendle found a large hole leading perpendicularly down into the earth. He dropped in a stone, and heard it rumble and rattle in its downward course till the sound died away in the distance.

Sensational reports of this discovery reached this city, and an exploring party was made up and drove over to the ridge to ascertain what was at the bottom of the story and the hole. The party consisted of half a dozen well known gentlemen, who were provided with ropes, lights, fireworks, etc., to make a thorough exploration. Having fixed everything in readiness for the descent, the question arose as to who should first go down. The men looked into the dark mysterious hole, mentally made a calculation as to the probability of finding a nest of rattlesnakes at the bottom, and each one was perfectly satisfied to let several of the others go first.

Finally one of the party summoned up sufficient courage and volunteered to make the descent alone. As he was lowered down, down, down, the light of his lantern could be seen growing fainter and smaller until a tiny speck was visible. After letting out the rope about 100 feet a faint, muffled whisper announced that he had found solid bottom. The reporter went down next, and finally the whole party found itself at the bottom of the shaft.

The hole descends through limestone rock all the way down and varies in diameter from three to thirty feet. The bottom is dry rock, and the place proved to be a capacious cavern. The place where the landing was made was estimated to be sixty feet in width, and while the ceiling at that point was low it gradually rose like a dome to the height of fully fifty feet. The floor was very uneven. The party had not gone a quarter of a mile when they were suddenly confronted by a yawning chasm, ten feet in width and of an unknown depth. Beyond this impassable cleft they could see the roof glittering in the light of their lanterns.

Several Roman candles were fired into the space, but the side walls could not be seen, so that there is no telling how far the cave extends in that direction. The fireworks revealed numerous stalactites and stalagmites of beautiful formation, whose marble like whiteness glistened and shone resplendent in the vari-colored lights. The roof sparkled with a frost like incrustation, which reflected the light from a myriad of shining points as though the whole dome were set in diamonds.

Retracing their steps for some distance, the party found to the right a small opening at the top of the steep ascent, and, entering it, were obliged to crawl on hands and knees for a distance of perhaps ten yards. Then the cavern suddenly opened into another mammoth chamber, apparently much larger than the first one, and possessing more stalactite formations. At a great distance from the entrance they came upon a lake of pure, cold water, as clear as crystal and of unfathomable depth. Holding the light to the water, a shining penny was dropped in and its gradual descent watched until it had fallen apparently fifty feet, when all trace of it was lost.

The water of the lake was perfectly still and dead, there being no current, and no signs of fish or animal life were visible. A few shells were picked up on the shores of the lake, and, being again shut off from further advance, the party retraced their steps. Openings were seen in other directions, as though the cavern extended its wings still further, but the fear of losing their way and of the oil in the lanterns giving out prevented further explorations at present. It is proposed at some time in the near future to make further examination, going provided with boats, ladders, planks, etc., that the lakes and chasms may not stop the way.—Findlay (O.) Cor. Pittsburg Dispatch.

Girls Saved by a Dog.

Last Sunday Miss Susie Feney, of Strawberry valley, and Miss Jessie Martin, of Oroville, who was visiting her, accompanied by an English mastiff, went into an adjacent wood in search of ferns. While seated on a log in an isolated part of the forest, quite a distance from their home, they were approached by a cinnamon bear. At sight of their visitor the young ladies started to run toward home, screaming at the top of their voices and followed by the bear. The mastiff was not afraid, and caught hold of the bear by the neck. A desperate struggle took place until two of Miss Feney's brothers arrived and shot the bear. The dog was so badly mangled that he will probably die.—Marysville Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

Strange Disturbance of Nature.

Four miles southeast of Villanow, Ga., on the west slope of John's Mountain, on lot 241, owned by William Roper, occurred over two months ago a strange disturbance of nature. It was confined to a strip of land running east and west and being 250 yards in length and between 30 and 50 yards in width. On that limited area the ground shows the mark of some mighty convulsion. Stumps were forced asunder, rocks were split and huge roots torn in twain. Fissures run in every direction. Accompanying the disturbance was an evident upheaval. As it passed, at the east end the ground settled back below the original level, while at the west end it was left raised.—Atlanta Constitution.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JUNE 19..... 1891.

With this issue the INYO INDEPENDENT begins its twenty-third volume. For twenty two years the "INYO" has been constantly identified with the interests of the county and has become a household word. During the period of its existence it has changed proprietors a number of times but its policy, that of viewing all matters from an independent and unbiased standpoint has been steadily maintained. With this issue the name at the head of the editorial page again changes but the independent spirit will be if anything intensified. The present proprietor is under no obligation to any corporation or firm. There are no "strings" upon him of any kind whatever and he is therefore in a position to advocate freely and fearlessly any course that he deems for the benefit and good of the people of Inyo County. As an individual he is a staunch Democrat in principle, but the paper will be, as it always has been, strictly independent as regards county politics. The present editor holds no salaried position from the government or county and depends wholly and solely on the patronage of the people of Inyo county for support. The paper will not be conducted in the interest of any man or set of men, but of the people at large. While any measure that will benefit the people will be freely advocated, any scheme that will work an injury to future advancement will be correspondingly denounced. With this outline of future policy we confide ourselves to the people of Inyo for whatever success we may attain.

Queen Victoria may have been somewhat displeased at the part her princely son played at Tranby Croft, but she stands by the verdict. The official journal announces that the name of Sir William Gordon Cumming has been removed from the list of officers of the army, the Queen having no further need of his services. This will determine the course of society toward the disgraced officer if there were doubt of that course before. No person who pretends to be anybody will receive the disgraced officer after this. People wil be curious to know what course American society will take in this matter. The Englishmaniacs of New York will doubtless receive their law from the English Queen, but there are some very respectable people in this country who will not.

Unquestionably the public pulse in the United States beats in sympathy with the Chilean insurgents. But it has happened in such cases that the American impulses have cooled, and our judgment controlled the manifestation of our sympathies. As matters now stand, however, there is a strong current of sympathy for the Congressional party. The reproach of the insurgents because of the seizure of the arms borne by the Itata is therefore felt to be measurably just. At the same time, the American people are conscious that the action of the United States Government in maintaining the inviolability of the neutrality laws was proper, and that we could not have consistently have taken any other position. It is a case, in short, in which Americans stand between their sympathies on one side and a stern sense of duty on the other.

One of the things which has puzzled Californians for the past ten or twenty years is the slow growth of the State. We have progressed fairly well, but not so rapidly as our natural advantages would seem to warrant. One would say that lands, which can, at comparatively small expense, be made worth from five hundred to one thousand dollars an acre would not long remain in the market at from $10 to $25 an acre. Yet this is the condition of things. There are within two hours' ride of the city of San Francisco hundreds and thousands of acres of land now worth $500 an acre, which ten years ago was bought for from $25 to $50. What has been done in the past will be repeated in the future on a much larger scale. The fortunes that will be made in land in the next ten years cannot even be guessed at. But we are still face to face with the question why people do not take advantage of these opportunities. Why is the movement from the State nearly equal to the movement toward the State? Why, in fact, does any person who comes to California ever return to the Eastern States except on a visit? A number of prominent citizens have tackled this problem and propose to work at it until a solution is evolved. They will consider the question from every possible point of view. They will try to find out if the dollar limit, as applied to San Francisco, keeps people from buying land in interior counties. They will inquire if the non-savory character of recent Legislatures has frightened people away from the State. They will ask if life and property are not as secure in California as in the East, and if happiness may not be pursued with as much diligence and success as in Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts. What does a man or woman want that may not be had in California with as little effort as anywhere else in the world? The people will follow the deliberations of the coming State Convention to promote immigration with the eager interest with which an intelligent man or woman follows an inquiry that has so far led to unsatisfactory results.

FOR ILL CHINAMEN.

A Chinese Hospital in Brooklyn in Charge of a Chinese Doctor.

The interest of the Chinese embassy in this country a few years ago was aroused by the condition of their sick and destitute countrymen in New York. The embassy made some efforts to establish a hospital here, but failed because there was no properly authorized physician who understood the Chinese language. That difficulty was not solved until when there was graduated from the Long Island college Joseph C. Thoms, the first Chinaman graduated from an American medical school.

In November a number of people interested in the Chinese mission work took hold of the project. A meeting was held at which there were present representatives of sixteen churches of New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City. It was determined to provide a place where ill Chinamen could obtain proper treatment and care. There are about 8,000 Chinese in New York and the immediate vicinity, and not more than fifty of them are so situated as to possess comfortable beds in case of sickness. They live in small, poorly ventilated basements and cellars, and can with the greatest difficulty be persuaded to enter the general hospitals.

Chinese are particularly liable to pulmonary diseases. Their habits of life and the change from their native climate render consumption and phthisis the most prevalent disease among them. Fifteen or twenty Chinese doctors practice in Mott street. Their methods are as crude as their ways of life. Their decoctions are things to be wondered at and avoided. Lizards and beetles are their favorite remedies. Fluid extracts of dogs' tails and snakes are also used by them.

The Chinese Hospital association was organized to fill the want, which was an opportunity for these abuses. The building at 45 Hicks street, Brooklyn, was hired, and Dr. Thoms was placed in charge. He is assisted by a Chinese nurse, who studies with him, and by three Chinese missionaries. Dr. C. E. Bruce, of New York; Dr. S. R. Forman, of Jersey City, and Drs. N. B. Sizer and W. A. Little, of Brooklyn, are the attending staff. The association is made up of delegates from various churches in this and neighboring cities, and elects a board of managers, which have charge of the affairs of the hospital.

The hospital is a three story brick building. There are three wards, one for one bed, one for three and one for four. The King's Daughters furnished the largest one. Everything about the hospital is neat and well cared for. Dr. Thoms makes a special effort to impress his patients with the value of light and air. Poor ventilation, he says, is the cause of half their sickness. Since the opening the hospital has received thirty-three patients. No contagious diseases are treated. Most of the patients suffered from consumption, of which eight of them died.

Those who are in the first stages of the disease are always advised to go home to China, and in several cases this advice has been followed. Those who have the disease in its advanced stages are cared for and rendered as comfortable as possible. The hospital has been full from its beginning, and has been fairly successful in the treatment of its patients.

The hospital has had unexpected support from Mott street. Over $1,300 has been given by the Chinese merchants. The association hopes to obtain a larger building, and endeavors to obtain subscriptions for that purpose. A contribution of twenty-five dollars entitles a person to membership in the association for one year. A contribution of $250 names and one of $5,000 endows a bed. Dr. C. E. Bruce, 456 Lexington avenue, is the treasurer of the association.—New York Sun.

Numbering Houses.

When our forefathers began to number the houses in their cities they went to work in a very simple fashion. They put 1 on the first house, 2 on the next, 3 on the third, and so on until they came to the end of a street. Then they crossed over, and if the last house they had numbered was 80, the first on the opposite side was 81, the next 82, and so on until they came back to their starting point, when perhaps number 160 faced number 1. As straight and regular streets took the place of crooked and winding ones a new plan of numbering came into vogue. The odd numbers were given to the houses on one side of the street, and even numbers to those on the other side. When a street's direction was known a number at once told whether a house faced north or south, or east or west.—Youth's Companion.

A Large Difference.

"What was your lawyer's fee in that case, Dimling?"

"It wasn't a fee, Totling; it was an honorarium."

"What's the difference?"

"Well, an honorarium is about ten times as much as a fee."—Harper's Bazar.

Odds Is the Difference.

When a subject of the king of Dahomey is ailing he is bled from the arm. If this doesn't cure him he is laid on his face and two men walk up and down his spine. If this fails, his case is called incurable, and he is left to shift for himself as a very obstinate fellow.—Detroit Free Press.

Tea Gowns Always Popular.

It is not likely that tea gowns will ever go out of fashion. They are too comfortable, too graceful, and far too picturesque to be forsaken, at least until some garment with similar or greater advantages and attractions can be devised, and that creation has not as yet appeared. Most women never look so well as in flowing robes that follow, though not too closely, the lines of the figure, and more luxurious and expensive fabrics and more daring color melanges can be employed than would be permissible in an ordinary day gown. Even the stylish tailor girl is glad to relax for a time and seek easy comfort in a tea gown, and no "five o'clock" reception room or pretty boudoir looks normal with the inmates tight bodiced and round skirted. The tea gown is as necessary in either place or case as Hamlet in "Hamlet."

Not in the Second Hand Business.

As Sheridan was entering court one day carrying his books and briefs in a green bag, according to the custom of the time, some of his brother barristers, thinking to play a joke on him, urged some boys to ask him if he had old clothes for sale in his green bag. "Oh, no!" instantly replied Sheridan, "they are all new suits."—San Francisco Argonaut.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Dentistry!

Dr. Wasson, the well known Dentist, located at Bakersfield, has arrived at Independence and can be seen at the Norman House. Those who need dentistry should lose no time in calling as his stay will not be long.

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK.....PROPRIETOR.
Horseshoeing .....$2 00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

BOOTS AND SHOES
MADE AND REPAIRED.
THE BEST MATERIAL.
FIRST-CLASS WORK.
Repairs done Promptly.
Prices Reasonable.
A. J. DAVIS,
nov 30-tf Independence,

J. W. Murphy.
BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work.
Wagons and Carriages Repaired.
HORSESHOEING, $2 00 for CASH
Shop on Edwards St., opposite the Court House, Independence.

NOTICE
ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.
FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.
$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.
It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer without cost of repairs than any other machine, has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.
Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.
For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address
ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

P. W. FORBES. P. H. MACK.
MACK & FORBES.
Real Estate Agents,
Address, P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal.
P. W. FORBES, Bishop, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

IRWINS' SALOON
Cor. Edwards and Market Streets,
Independence . Cal.
THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt an furnished in a style second to none on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.
THE BAR
Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.
JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

PALACE SALOON
LONE PINE, CAL.
—THE FINEST—
WINES,
BEER,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS
—o—
This Saloon is conducted in a strictly first-class manner, and every attention tendered my patrons. FRED. BURCKHARDT, Lessee.
jl2-tf

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING SALOON.
Shaving, Hair-Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.
WM. H. HUFF, Prop'r

NORMAN HOUSE,
Independence, - Cal.
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates.
Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.
O. I. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

FORBES & TOBEY,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.,
—DEALERS IN—
LUMBER
OF ALL KINDS.
DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS,
LATH,
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.
Matched and Dressed Flooring.
sep 11-tf

BELL'S Flouring Mills,
A. N. BELL, Prop.
TRY BELL'S
EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.
Having added Patent Rolls and other Improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully
Equal to the Best
Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.
A. N. BELL,
dependence, Cal.

For Sale!
ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE
Eastside Canal.
There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,
C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
Bishop Creek, Cal.,
Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

J. W. P. LAIRD. P. H. MACK.
MACK & LAIRD.
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

A. R. CONKLIN,
Attorney-at-Law
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the States of California and Nevada.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)
Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED.
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.
DENTISTS.
OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSFIELD, opposite the Southern Hotel.
Prompt and careful treatment given and the easiest possible pain inflicted. Address
WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

FOR SALE CHEAP.
Two span first class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.
Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:
Saturday ..... January 24th
" ..... February 21st
" ..... March 28th
" ..... April 18th
" ..... May 23rd
" ..... June 20th
" ..... July 18th
" ..... August 15th
" ..... September 12th
" ..... October 17th
" ..... November 14th
" ..... December 12th
JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

Song little FORTUNES have been made at work for us, by Anna Page, Austin, Texas, and Jno. Bonn, Toledo, Ohio. See cut. Others are doing as well. Why not you? Some earn over $500.00 a month. You can do the work and live at home, wherever you are. Even beginners are easily earning from $5 to $10 a day. All ages. We show you how and start you. Can work in spare time or all the time, big money for workers. Failure unknown among them. NEW and WONDERFUL. Full particulars FREE. H. Hallett & Co., Box 880 PORTLAND, MAINE.

TO ADVERTISERS
A list of 1000 newspapers divided into STATES AND SECTIONS will be sent on application—FREE.
To those who want their advertising to pay, we can offer no better medium for thorough and effective work than the various sections of our Select Local List. GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., Newspaper Advertising Bureau, 10 Spruce street, New York.

OFFICIAL.

NOTICE OF

Sheriff's Sale,

ON FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES.

E. H. EDWARDS, Plaintiff, vs. WM. F. MATLACK, Administrator of the Estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased Defendant.

Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure and Sale.

UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF AN ORDER of sale, upon a decree of foreclosure and sale, issued out of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on the 12th day of June, 1891, in an action wherein E. H. Edwards was Plaintiff and Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, was Defendant, and in which said last above mentioned action, E. H. Edwards, the above named Plaintiff, obtained a judgment and decree of foreclosure against Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, Defendant, on the 15th day of November, 1890, for the sums of $1810.02 and $4171.49, gold coin of the United States, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $5981.51, gold coin as aforesaid, which said decree was, on that 15th day of November, 1890, recorded in Judgment Book 1 of said Court, at page 284, (Wm. F. Matlack, Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, the above named Defendant, was by an order of said Superior Court duly made and entered on the 14th day of May, 1891 substituted as Defendant in said action in the place and stead of said Thomas Parker, now deceased.) I am commanded to sell, to satisfy said judgment and decree for the said sum of $1810.02, all those certain lots, pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Beginning at a point twenty chains East of the North-west Section corner of Section No. twenty-eight, in Township No. fifteen South of Range No. thirty six, East, Mt. Diablo Base and Meridian, (magnetic variation fifteen degrees and fifteen minutes East) thence South thirteen and ninety one-hundredths chains to North-west corner of Josiah G. Dodge's land; thence North, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, twenty-two and thirty-one one-hundredths chains to Brewery street in the town of Lone Pine; thence North, twenty one degrees and forty minutes West, twenty-one one hundredths chains; thence South, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes West, eighteen one-hundredths chains; thence North eight and forty eight one-hundredths chains to North line of Section No. twenty-eight; thence West thirteen and twenty-nine one-hundredths chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing fifteen and one-half acres.

Also a lot of land lying East of the last described tract and on the Wm. L. Moore tract of land North-west of the town of Lone Pine beginning at the North east corner of said last described tract, thirty three and twenty-nine one-hundredths chains East of the North-west corner of Section twenty-eight in Township Fifteen South of Range Thirty-six East, of Mount Diablo Meridian, at an iron post set in the ground; thence, South eight and forty-eight one-hundredth chains to the lane from the last described tract of land to the town of Lone Pine; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, eight and seventy one one-hundredths chains to the Eastside of Brewery street in said town; thence, South twenty one degrees and forty minutes East, fifty one-hundredths chains to the North line of Corral street in said town; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, seven and eighty-seven one-hundredths chains to the West line of Main street in said town; thence, North twenty-one degrees and forty minutes West, three and nineteen one-hundredths chains to Section line of said Section twenty-eight; thence, West fifteen chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing eight and seventy-five one hundredths acres.

Also lots Nos. two, three, and the North half of lot six, in block No. 13, upon which is a house; and the fractional part of lots Nos. six, seven and eight in block No. 1 in the town of Lone Pine, in said County and State, as the same are known and designated on the plat of said town now on file in the Recorder's office of said County.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining.

I am also commanded to sell, to satisfy said judgment and decree for the said sum of $4171.49, all that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

The East half of the South-west quarter and the West half of the Southeast quarter of Section No. twenty-one, in Township No. fifteen South, of Range No. thirty six, East, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on Monday the 6th day of July, 1891, at 12 o'clock M. of that day, in front of the Court House in the County of Inyo, I will, in obedience to said order of sale and decree of foreclosure and sale, sell separately the above described property, or so much thereof, as may be necessary to satisfy said Plaintiff's judgment, with interest and costs etc., to the highest and best bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States.

Dated this 12th day of June, 1891.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff of Inyo County.
By D. HOLLAND,
Under Sheriff.

Mack & Laird, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

EXECUTOR'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court in and for the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 11th day of May, 1891, in the matter of the estate of John R. Hughes, deceased, the undersigned, the Executor of the last will and testament of John R. Hughes deceased, will sell, at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, and subject to confirmation by said Superior Court, on Saturday, the 6th day of June, 1891, all the right, title, interest and estate of the said John R. Hughes, at the time of his death, and all the right title and interest that the said estate has, by operation of law or otherwise, acquired other than or in addition to that of the said John R. Hughes at the time of his death, in and to all that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the town of Lone Pine, County of Inyo, State of California and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

An undivided one-half interest in and to the the South half of Lot Number Seven (7), in Block Number Five (5), as the same is known and designated on the official plat of the said town of Lone Pine, now on file in the office of the County Recorder of said Inyo county.

Bids or offers must be in writing and will be received at the residence of the undersigned, about six miles south of the town of Independence, Cal., or delivered to said Executor personally, or may be filed in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court at any time after the first publication of this notice and before the making of sale.

Terms and conditions of sale: Cash, gold coin of the United States, ten percent. of the purchase money to be paid to the said Executor on the day of sale, balance on confirmation of sale by said Superior Court. Deed at expense of purchaser.

W. L. HUNTER.
Executor of the last Will and Testament of John R. Hughes, deceased.
Mack & Laird, Attorneys for Executor.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine.
FRED BURKHARDT

OFFICIAL.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, San Francisco, California. Location of works, Marmol, Nevada.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AT A meeting of the Board of Directors, held the 26th day of May 1891, an assessment (No. 13) of Ten Cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, No. 132 California street, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 10th day of July 1891, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on FRIDAY, the 28th day of July, 1891, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

G. W. LUCE, Secretary.
Office, 135 California St., San Francisco, California.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Independence, California. Location of canal, near Independence, Inyo county.

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of a Board of Directors, held on the 30th day of May, 1891, an assessment (No. One) of Fifty (50) cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary at the office of the company, Independence, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 3d day of July, 1891, will be delinquent, and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Saturday, the 25th day of July, 1891 to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

By order of the Board of Directors.
P. H MACK, Secretary.

NOTICE FOR PROPOSALS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Lone Pine Canal Company, at its office, in the town of Independence, up till 10 o'clock a. m. of June 13, 1891, for the construction of one mile of ditch, commencing at a point on H. J. Robinson's land about one-half a mile south of the terminus of the Stevens Ditch and running thence in a Southerly direction along and following the line of survey as shown by a map now on file in the company's office.

Said mile of ditch to have a fifteen foot bottom, eighteen inch cut, slope of banks, two feet horizontal to one foot vertical.

The right is reserved to reject any and all bids. P. H. MACK, Secretary.

Independence, June 4th, 1891.

NOTCE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JOHN LUCAS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased to the Creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his office in the town of Lone Pine, Inyo county, Cal., the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in said Inyo county, State of California. E. H. EDWARDS, Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased.

Dated May 5th, 1891.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of PETER DIECKSON, deceased.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNDERSIGNED, Administrator of the estate of PETER DIECKSON, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his residence, in the town of Lone Pine, in the county of Inyo, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in the county of Inyo.

Dated April 18th, 1891.

JOHN F. LUBKEN,
Administrator of said Estate.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

IDA C. DECKER, Plaintiff, vs. STEPHEN DECKER, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Stephen Decker, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant; that plaintiff be allowed and decreed to resume her former name of Ida C. Adams, and for general relief, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 17th day of June, A. D 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
MACK & LAIRD, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

NOTICE OF SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court in and for the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 6th day of June, 1891, in the matter of the Estate of John Lucas, deceased, the undersigned will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder for cash, gold coin of the United States on Saturday, the 27th day of June, 1891, at 2 o'clock P. M., at the late residence of said deceased, near the town of Lone Pine, County of Inyo, State of California, the following personal property, towit:

117 Head of Stock Cattle.
18 Head of Horses.

Bids or offers in writing will be received at the office of the undersigned, in the said town of Lone Pine, up to and including the 26th day of June, 1891.

E. H. EDWARDS,
Administrator of the Estate of John Lucas, deceased.

Dated June 12th, 1891.

BIG PINE HOTEL.
BIG PINE - CAL.
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
Thos. Williams,
Proprietor.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JUNE 19.....1891.

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 97½
Lead, 4 35
Copper, 13 70
Tin, 20 40
Sugar, .06
Coffee, 20 @ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 13 @ 19.

MARRIED.

SAINZ—GRIJALVA—At Lone Pine, June 17, Albert M. Sainz and Herminia C. Grijalva, both of Lone Pine. Rev. H. J. Winsor officiated.

DIED.

NERNEY—At Fish Springs, June 13th, the wife of D. Nerney.

COLLINS—At Los Angeles, June 6, 1891, wife of Charles Collins of Warm Springs.

WHIPPLE—At Independence, June 18, 1891, H. C. Whipple, a native of Wisconsin, aged 44 years.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

SATURDAY, June 13, 1891.

Jos. Fernbach vs. Anna M. Fernbach—Action for Divorce. Filed complaint and summons.

Estate of Ezra M. Goodale—Filed inventory and appraisement.

TUESDAY, June 16, 1891.

Diaz et al. vs. Rhine—Demurrer to amended complaint overruled and defendant allowed 30 days to answer.

W. H. Uhlmeyer vs. Sylvania Mining Company and J. F. Turner—Complaint filed.

Estate and Guardianship of Johnson children—Filed petition for order for conveyance of real estate in exchange.

WEDNESDAY, June 17, 1891.

Ida C. Decker vs. Stephan Decker—Filed amended complaint and issued Alias Summons.

Ertate of B. F. Theban, deceased—Filed claim of Nathan Rhine.

Who-o-o-o-o!

See new advertisements this week.

L. D. Matthews was in town Wednesday.

Jimmy McNally came down from Bishop on Wednesday.

Phil Keough came down from Bishop on Monday, returning next day.

Hon. John A. Hannah has been appointed a Notary Public.

F. Fitzgerald and family came in from Modock on Wednesday.

Every lady attending the Ball will receive a handsome souvenir.

Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Decker, of Lone Pine, were in town on Wednesday.

A. W. De La Cour Carroll returned to Independence on Tuesday's train.

The Bishop Band has been engaged and will furnish the music for the Fourth.

Silas Reynolds has recovered from his recent severe illness and is around again.

Mrs. Julia Church and Miss Maud Cook arrived on Monday's train from Hawthorne.

Nathan Gilbert, of Deep Spring Valley was in town this week. He reports good crops on his place.

A. A. Johnson started for San Francisco on Tuesday's train. He expects to be gone about two weeks.

Mark Hand left Lone Pine yesterday morning for Reno to meet a nephew coming from the States.

Dr. J. B. Wasson has rented the Tibbett's building, opposite the Land Office, and is fitting up Dental Rooms there.

Mrs. D. Nerney died at Fish Springs last Saturday and was buried Sunday. She had been ailing for a long time.

Tom Webb, Giles and other cattle men started for Long Valley last Monday with the second drive for the year.

Gus Stevens, Frank Edwards and N. L. Apple will leave Lone Pine to-morrow on a hunting and fishing trip to Kern River.

Miss Addie Lewis has gone to San Francisco on a visit to her sister, Mrs. F. Samuels. She will be absent several months.

Miss Angie Brockman and Miss Louisa Clarke have kindly accepted an invitation to recite at Literary Exercises on the Fourth.

Ober says he will run Rosenthal or any one else for all the money they can show up. It is understood Diaz will give him a tussle.

The Committee have decided to abandon the project of holding the Ball Supper at the Pavilion, and supper will be given at either hotel.

S. P. Smith of Bishop was in town yesterday. He took away with him a fine Clydesdale stallion purchased by P. P. Keough from A. A. Johnson.

Walter J. Maxwell has been rejected as Chief of the Horticultural Department at the World's Fair and General N. P. Chipman, of Red Bluff, appointed.

Considerable interest is being manifested in the foot-race on the Fourth. It is reported that B. Rosenthal, of Hawthorne, will be one of the contestants.

M. Castro and wife and C. A. Harvey and wife started for the lower country last Sunday, going by way of Mojave. Curt is expected to return in a day or two.

A Special Train has been chartered and the following will be the rates for return trip tickets:

Hawthorne	$7 50
Candelaria, Belleville	6 50
Soda Springs and Rhodes	6 50
Benton	4 00
Bishop	2 50
Alvord	1 50
Lone Pine	1 00
Keeler	2 00

Train will leave Independence Sunday morning, July 5, for return trip. Free transportation to and from the Station and Independence.

High Tradegy In Mono.

Bridgeport has been having a decided sensation lately. About two weeks ago a reservation Indian from Walker Lake went into a China house at Bridgeport to play poker and was never again seen alive. The Indians at the Agency became alarmed at his absence and began hunting him. A few days afterward a human body was found in the river in a terribly mutilated condition. The head and limbs were cut from the body and the trunk cut open and viscera removed. There is no doubt but this was the body of Poker Tom. All the circumstances pointed to Ah Quong Tia, a Chinese store keeper, as the murderer. The Indians were greatly wrought up and threatened vengeance, and Tia sought the protection of the officers. On a preliminary examination Tia was discharged, there being insufficient evidence to hold him for trial. As soon as the verdict was rendered the Indians entered the court-room, siezed the Chinaman, hurried him to an adjoining field and lynched him, cutting his body to pieces as was the dead Indian's. The white residents were greatly excited, fearing the savages would commit further atrocities. But the Indians went about the affair in a business like manner, got through with the job and quietly returned to the Reservation. So far as known no action has yet been taken by the authorities in the matter and the general expression of opinion is that the Chinaman met his just deserts.

Dentistry.

Dr. J. B. Wasson, D. D. S., Resident Dentist of Bakersfield for a number of years is still in our town, very busy attending to the wants of our citizens in having their teeth looked after. But, since his arrival more than a week ago, he has been so much hurried filling teeth alone, as well as cleansing, etc.,—and extracting, treating, and preparing mouths for new teeth, that he has had no time to commence inserting new teeth, or doing plate work, of which he has a large number of sets engaged to be done at once. Many of our people in Inyo County have been unfortunate in having to patronize traveling dentists, who seemed to have lacked both skill and reputation for first-class dentistry. The consequence has been failures often as well as damage done to their teeth in many ways. A good dentist, well educated and versed in his profession is a necessity in every community, and we hope the time will soon come when quacks and frauds in this, as well as other professions, will soon find no place for them on the Pacific Coast, more than they find back East, where they come from. Dr. Wasson, Sen., has had a quarter of a century's experience in his profession, in the United States, and in Europe and the Orient, where he has practiced before coming to California.

A Grave Injury.

During the last two weeks an excerpt from an article published in the Daily Report has been published in the Index. As a paid advertisement in the Report the article was well enough, as a man who pays for his space may represent his wares in as glowing a manner as he desires. But to report the same in the Index without advertising marks or editorial comment is to endorse the statements contained. The editor of the Index has lived in Inyo county long enough to know that many of the statements were glaring falsehoods, and betrays a willingness to serve as a tool of corporations to the detriment of the farmers of the west side of the Valley. Our farmers are accused of shiftlessness, ignorance and laziness. In fact the land of the west side of the Valley is greatly depreciated by comparing it with that owned by the Eastside Corporation, and our people are abused and spat upon to make more alluring the prospects held out by the speculators. Such a course is reprehensible in the extreme and works a great detriment to every farmer and business man in the Valley.

A Valuable Enterprise.

There is an enterprise being prosecuted in this vicinity about which there is little said, but which promises to be very beneficial to Lone Pine and the surrounding country. The projectors of the Lone Pine Canal are determined to extend the Stevens Ditch to Owens Lake. The project is a feasible one because there is no better land in Inyo County than at Lone Pine and extending south to the Lake. With but one exception, all the ditches and canals in this county were built by home parties, and that shows conclusively that our home people have faith in our county and are willing to invest their money at home. There are about 12,000 acres of land lying below the projected canal, and this land, with sufficient water to irrigate it will be worth at a low estimate, fifty dollars an acre.

Passed Away.

Henry C. Whipple died at Independence last evening at eight o'clock. He was feeling much better during the day and was sitting up laughing and chatting with Dr. Woodin. Suddenly he started up saying, "Doctor, I am blind." The doctor says he died immediately. He had no relatives but friends took charge of the remains, and made every arrangement for the interment. The funeral took place to-day. The deceased lived in Inyo County in the '60s removing from here to Mono where he was under-Sheriff for a considerable time. He returned to Inyo about six years ago, living for the last four at Independence. He was ill during the whole time but his sudden death was entirely unexpected. His mother and sisters live in Los Angeles.

A Sad Death

Charley Collins went north on Tuesday morning on his way home from Los Angeles. On the evening of the 6th he received a telegram from Los Angeles stating that his wife was dead and he started at once but arrived too late to attend her funeral. Mrs. Collins gave birth to a fine boy, which survives her, and was doing very nicely, but neglect on the part of the physician attending her brought on fever of which she died. Mrs. Collins leaves a little boy and girl besides the infant, to comfort the young husband on the taking away of all that was nearest and dearest to him. Many expressions of heartfelt sympathy greeted him on returning from his sad mission.

Modock Mines.

OFFICE OF FRANK FITZGERALD,
Modock, June 13, 1891.

ED. INDEPENDENT:—There was sold on May account ore to the value of $5,634 80. The various places that are being worked show the usual amount of ore. The sinking of a winze was started on the 11th at the 300 foot point in the main tunnel that shows ten inches of metal averaging 255 ounces silver and $38 gold per ton. There are two foremen, two cooks and twenty-three men employed.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

W. S. Enos, wife and family started for the lower country on Tuesday, going by way of Mojave. Mr. Enos took with him a fine band of young horses, mostly fillies by Albenton.

General Benton has another representative in the 2:30 list. Last Saturday Willard, a roan gelding, beat Moraquita and Maud B. at San Jose in the fast time of 2:24¼, 2:23.

Mr. Terry, of Fresno, passed through town on Monday with a band of young horses he had purchased in the valley. He paid an average price of $65 a head for sixteen animals, all of them unbroken.

There was a terrible smash-up at Port Costa last Tuesday. The Los Angeles express collided at that point with a gravel train, both engines being entirely wrecked, two men killed and several injured.

A letter received during the week states that Andrew Bell, who was committed to the Asylum at Stockton about a year ago, has been discharged as thoroughly cured, and he is now at work on a ranch at La Grange.

About thirty bug-hunters of the United States commission are at Lone Pine. Half the number have gone into the mountains, their objective point being Mt Whitney. They will camp for the present on Cottonwood Creek.

Bids were received by the Lone Pine Canal Co., for the construction of one mile of ditch but the Board of Directors considered them too high and have decided to prosecute the work by days pay. Ground was broken this week,

Fred Biegle, aged 18 years, committed suicide at Virginia City, June 7th, by taking strychnine caused by false charges made against him by his employer, who immediately jumped the town for California, after the tragedy.

Dr. Wasson will deliver one of his instructive and popular lectures on travels in the East, Orient and Holy Land, next Sunday at 2 o'clock, in the M. E. Church. Let all both old and young come out to hear him, it will do them good.

In conversation with Dr. Wasson, he informs us he has written to his son Julian C. Wasson, D. D. S., located at Bakersfield, to join him next week, and to remain with him this Summer. After leaving Independence they will visit Big Pine, Bishop, Candelaria mining camps and other places professionally, at which time further notice will be given.

HEIR TO $500,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A dispatch was received yesterday from Baltimore announcing that George F. Beiser of Brooklyn had become heir to a vast estate there valued at $500,000. The property came through relatives who emigrated from France in the days of the Huguenots. Mr. Beiser is an accountant in a Fulton street clothing house. Bruce's Law and Inquiry Agency, of Chicago, Ill., prosecuted his claim.—Louisville Courier-Journal, Nov. 27

We are Mr. Beiser's lawyers and by him seeing our advertisement, became the agent of his good fortune. If your ancestors came from the old country write to us, and enclose $1 for our list of heirs. There are more than half a billion dollars in Great Britain and Germany, unclaimed, which rightly belong to people in the United States.

BRUCE'S LAW AND INQUIRY OFFICE,
164 and 166 Randolph St.
Chicago, Ill. U. S. A.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The partnership heretofore existing between W. S. Enos and O. I. Mairs is dissolved by mutual consent

Witness our hands June 15th, 1891.

W. S. ENOS,
O. I. MAIRS.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for
Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:
Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

INDEPENDENCE
MEAT MARKET,
J. C. ROEPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

A well appointed shop, with refrigerator, ensuring the purity of meat, and every effort made to give satisfaction to patrons.
j19-tf

MONEY Beginners earn from $25 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. Can work in spare time, or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

1776 Breathes there a man with soul so dead, 1891
1776 Who never to himself hath said, 1891
1776 "This is my own, my native land!" 1891

INDEPENDENCE GLORIOUS TRIBUTE.

—TO OUR—

NATAL DAY.

Under the management of
POLETA PARLOR, N. D. C. W.
INYO PARLOR NO 142, N. S. G. W.
MT. WHITNEY PARLOR NO. 136, N. S. G. W

A CORDIAL INVITATION EXTEDNED TO ALL

Commencing with a
GRAND BALL
Friday Evening, July 3d. Grand March at 8 Sharp.
Excellent music and splendid floor. Supper in the Annex, with seating capacity for all.
BERTRAND RHINE, FLOOR DIRECTOR.
FLOOR COMMITTE:
Milt. Clark, S. A. Chapman, R. Hessian,
F. E. Denrmore, J. D. Lewis, J. E. Shepherd
Robt. Carrasco, Ben Lasky, Henry Rhine

SATURDAY, JULY FOURTH.

Grand salute . . . . . At sunrise.
Parade and Literary Exercises.
Parade forms at teddy place. Line of march direct to Pavilion.
GEORGE H. LEWIS, GRAND MARSHALL.
MISS MARGIE BELL, GODDESS OF LIBERTY.

PROGRAMME:

Prayer, Rev. H. J. Winsor.
Red, White & Blue, Choir.
Remarks, by C. W. Craig, President of the Day.
Music, by the Band.
Recitation, Miss Brockman
Hail Columbia, by Band.
Oration, F. E. Densmore
Unfurl the Glorious Banner, Miss M Mulholland,
Declaration of Independence, Miss L. Clark
America, Choir.
Benediction, Chaplain.

FUN FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS,
125 YARD FOOT RACE,
BASE BALL TOURNAMENT

MISCELLANEOUS.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.
Bee Keeper.
Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.
Independence, Inyo Co. Cal

MISCELLANEOUS.

EDWARD CHENOT
Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDIS

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.
PROVISIONS
Tobacco, Cigars,
WINES AND LIQUORS
FLOUR & GRAIN
Together with an Assortment of
DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING
ETC., ETC

Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and price before purchasing elsewhere.

E. CHENOT.
Independence, Cal., March 9, 1894.
n47tf

Lake View Hotel
Keeler, Cal.
John Barnes, Prop'r.

First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
Wines,
Liquors,
& Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.
Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

BISHOP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.
Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, from the light st to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.
O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE
BISHOP.
Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St

In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable
S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.

All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.

Customers supplied on all points

Of the C. & C. Railroad.

Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Pioneer
Livery & Feed Stables.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, patrons can be assured of finding there the best of Buggy Teams, Saddle Horses, and

Livery Accommodations

in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor.

A NEW DEAL!
LONE PINE
Livery. Feed & Sale Stable.
A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.
OPPOSITE STEWART HOUSE.

Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,
—DEALER IN—
General Merchandise,
LONE PINE,
INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.

Dealer in
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS
Supplies

PROVISIONS,
&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages, in any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, GEORGE STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R R

TAKING EFFECT

Sunday, November 16,

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1	To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Mound House	11:30 p. m.	5.50 p. m
Dayton	12:00 p. m.	5:10 p. m.
Wabuska	2.05 p. m.	2 50 p. m
Hawthorne	5 50 p. m.	11:10 a. m.
Luning	7:05 p. m.	9:55 a. m.
Soda Springs	8:05 p. m.	9:15 a. m
Belleville	9:15 p. m.	7:55a. m.
Candelaria	Ar. 10.00 p. m.	Lv. 7:20a. m.
	No. 3. Leave—	No. 4. Arrives—
Belleville	8 20 a. m	5:25 p m.
Benton	11:50 a. m	1:25 p. m.
Bisnop Creek	2:00p. m.	11:00 a. m
Alvord	2.45 p. m	10:40 a. m
Independence	4:20 p. m.	8:30 a. m
Lone Pine	5:10 p. m.	7:40 a. m
Keeler	Ar 5:55 p. m.	Lv. 7:00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (3 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's. tri-weekly stages (leavin Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver P Montezuma Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.

D A BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles
OF
Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc
AT
L. WOOL
CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries & canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

THE CASH STORE
Is Where You Get
WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE
Blacksmith Shop.
R. C. Spear, Prop'r
—ALL WORK ON—
MINING TOOLS
FARMING IMPLEMENTS
& FREIGHTING OUTFITS
—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—
HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING

All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON
KEELER, CAL.
In Lake View Hotel

BEER, WINES,
LIQUORS and CIGARS

All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.

JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.
J. C. MILLER, Lessee.
—THE BAR—
Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of
WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CGARS

The most careful attention given to the the amusement and comfort of patrons.

A FINE BILLIARD TABLE!

Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon.
sept-12 td

The brusque and fussy impulse of these days of false impression would rate down all as worthless because one is unworthy.

As if there were no motes in sunbeams!

Or comets among stars!

Or cataracts in peaceful rivers!

Because one remedy professes to do what it never was adapted to do, are all remedies worthless?

Because one doctor lets his patient die, are all humbugs?

It requires a fine eye and a finer brain to discriminate—to draw the differential line.

"They say" that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription have cured thousands.

"They say" for a weak system there's nothing better than the "Discovery," and that the "Favorite Prescription" is the hope of debilitated, feeble women who need a restorative tonic and bracing nervine.

And here's the proof——

Try one or both. If they don't help you, tell the World's Dispensary Medical Association so, and you get your money back again.

April the First appealed to the Sun:
Begged that more slowly his course he would run;
For to deal with All Fools in twenty-four hours
Was a task quite beyond the range of his powers.

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Porterfield & Losey, 838 Market street, San Francisco.

The laziest boy in school is seen closest to the head of the procession when the circus is in town.

THROUGH THE WEARY HOURS

Of many a night, made doubly long by its protracted agony, the rheumatic sufferer tosses to and fro on his sleepless coach, vainly praying for that rest which only comes by fits and starts. His malady is one which ordinary medicines too often fail to relieve, but there is ample evidence to prove that the efficient blood depurent, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, affords the rheumatic a reliable means of relief. Check the malady in its incipient stages, when the first premonitory twinges come on, with this agreeable medicine, and avoid years of torture. Whatever be the rationale of the active influence of the Bitters upon this malady, certain it is that no evidence relating to its effect is more direct and positive than that which relates to its action in cases of rheumatism. Like all sterling remedies, however, it deserves a protracted, systematic trial, and should not be abandoned because not at once remedial. It is equally efficacious in dyspepsia, indigestion and kindred diseases.

"Butter was unknown to the ancients," says a writer. Possibly; but ancient butter is not unknown to boarders.

Do you want to save money, clothes, time, labor, fuel, and health? All these can be saved if you will try Dobbins' Electric Soap. We say "try," knowing if you try it once, you will always use it. Have your grocer order.

The grammar school girl at the boarding-house may be asked to parse the butter but not to analyze it.

The Occidental Hotel, San Francisco, is universally pronounced by the public the model hotel of the Pacific Coast. Everything is perfection to the minutest detail, and guests are made to feel entirely at home. J. A. Hooper, Manager.

Use Enameline Stove Polish: no dust, no smell.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

"August Flower"

I had been troubled five months with Dyspepsia. The doctors told me it was chronic. I had a fullness after eating and a heavy load in the pit of my stomach. I suffered frequently from a Water Brash of clear matter. Sometimes a deathly Sickness at the Stomach would overtake me. Then again I would have the terrible pains of Wind Colic. At such times I would try to belch and could not. I was working then for Thomas McHenry, Druggist, Cor. Irwin and Western Ave., Allegheny City, Pa., in whose employ I had been for seven years. Finally I used August Flower, and after using just one bottle for two weeks, was entirely relieved of all the trouble. I can now eat things I dared not touch before. I would like to refer you to Mr. McHenry, for whom I worked, who knows all about my condition, and from whom I bought the medicine. I live with my wife and family at 39 James St., Allegheny City, Pa. Signed, JOHN D. COX.

G. G. GREEN Sole Manufacturer,
Woodbury, New Jersey, U. S. A.

Old Gold and Silver Bought; send your old Gold and Silver by mail to the old and reliable House of A. Coleman, 41 Third street, San Francisco; I will send by return mail the cash, according to assay; if the amount is not satisfactory will return gold.

No Fire, No Boiler, No Danger, Always Ready.

BUY THE REGAN VAPOR ENGINE

For Pumping Water or Wine, Spraying Fruit Trees, Sawing Wood, Running Lathes, Electric Light Plants, etc.

REGAN VAPOR ENGINE CO.,
221-223 First Street, S. F.

W. M. BRANDON, The Oldest Country Land Dealer in the State, 420 Montgomery St., San Francisco, Cal.

HAS FIFTY-THREE ACRES
FINEST LAND IN THE STATE,

40 in choice fruits, full bearing, cherries, apricots and bartlett pears; sell in 5 acre lots; on the San Leandro road, near Haywards, adjoining the beautiful property of Otis Webb, E. M.

DON'T BE A WALL-FLOWER If you can't dance, we can help you along. Complete self-instruction. Send for circular. JERRIS M'F'G & PUB'G CO., 834 Broadway, New York City.

THE SPLENDID SPUR.

Being Memoirs of the Adventures of Mr. John Marvel, a Servant of His late Majesty King Charles I, in the years 1642-3: written by himself.

EDITED IN MODERN ENGLISH BY "Q."

There were but six rascals besides the captain (so that Jacques must have died hard, thought I), and such a raffle of arms and legs and swollen upturned faces as they made I defy you to picture. For they were packed close as herrings, and the hut was filled up with their horses, ready saddled and rubbing shoulder to loin, so narrow was the room. It needed the open window to give them air; and, even so, 'twas not over fresh inside.

I had no mind to stay; but before leaving found myself in the way of playing these villains a pretty trick. To right and left of the window, above their heads, extended two rude shelves that now were heaped with what I conjectured to be the spoils of the larder of the "Three Cups." Holding my breath and thrusting my head and shoulders into the room, I ran my hand along and was quickly possessed of a boiled ham, two capons, a loaf, the half of a cold pie and a basket holding three dozen eggs. All these prizes I filched one by one, with infinite caution.

I was gently pulling the basket through the window hole, when I heard one of the crew yawn and stretch himself in his sleep. So, determining to risk no more, I quickly packed the basket, slung it on my right arm, and with the ham grasped by the knuckle in my left, made my way up the stream.

'Twas thus laden that I entered the dingle, and came on the sad sight therein. I set down the ham as a thing to be ashamed of, and bared my head. The girl lifted her face, and turning, all white and tragical, saw me.

"My father is dead, sir."

I stooped and piled a heap of fresh snow over the blood stains. There was no intent in this but to hide the pity that choked me. She had still to hear about her brother, Anthony. Turning, as by a sudden thought, I took her hand. She looked into my eyes, and her own filled with tears. 'Twas the human touch that loosened their flow, I think; and sinking down again beside her father she wept her fill.

"Mistress Killigrew," I said, as soon as the first violence of her tears was abated, "I have still some news that is ill hearing. Your enemies are encamped in the woods, about a half mile below this"—and with that I told my story.

"They have done their worst, sir."

"No."

She looked at me with a question on her lip.

Said I, "You must believe me yet a short while without questioning."

Considering for a moment, she nodded. "You have a right, sir, to be trusted, though I know not so much as your name. Then we must stay close in hiding?" she added, very sensibly, though with the last word her voice trailed off, and she began again to weep.

But in time, having covered the dead baronet's body with sprays of the withered bracken, I drew her to a little distance and prevailed on her to nibble a crust of the loaf. Now, all this while, it must be remembered, I was in my shirt sleeves and the weather bitter cold. Which at length her sorrow allowed her to notice.

"Why, you are shivering sore!" she said, and, running, drew my buff coat from her father's body, and held it out to me.

"Indeed," I answered, "I was thinking of another expedition to warm my blood." And promising to be back in half an hour I followed down my former tracks towards the stream.

Within twenty minutes I was back, running and well nigh shouting with joy.

"Come!" I cried to her, "come and see for yourself!"

What had happened was this: Wading cautiously down the brook, I had cause suddenly to prick up my ears and come to a halt. 'Twas the muffled tramp of hoofs that I heard, and, creeping a bit farther, I caught a glimpse, beyond the hut, of a horse and rider disappearing down the woods. He was the last of the party, as I guessed from the sound of voices and jingling of bits farther down the slope. Advancing on the hut with more boldness, I found it deserted. I scrambled up on the bank and round to the entrance. The snow before it was trampled and sullied by the footmarks of men and horses; and as I noted this, came Settle's voice calling up the slope:

"Jerry—Jerry Toy!"

A nearer voice hailed in answer.

"Where's Reuben?"

"Coming, captain—close behind!"

"Curse him for a loitering idiot! We've wasted time enough, as 'tis," called back the captain. "How in thunder is a man to find the road out of this cursed wood?"

"Straight on, cap'n—you can't miss it," shouted another voice, not two gunshots below.

A volcano of oaths poured up from Settle. I did not wait for the end of them, but ran back for Mistress Delia.

Together we descended to the hut. By this time the voices had faded away in distance. Yet to make sure that the rascals had really departed, we followed their tracks for some way, beside the stream; and suddenly came to a halt with cries of joyful surprise.

The brook had led us to a point where, over a stony fall veiled with brown bracken, it plunged into a narrow ravine. Standing on the lip, where the water took a smoother glide before leaping, we saw the line of the ravine marked by a rift in the pines, and through this a slice of the country that lay below. 'Twas a level plain, well watered and dotted here and there with houses. A range of wooded hills closed the view, and towards them a broad road wound gently, till the eye lost it at their base. All this was plain enough, in spite of the snow that covered the landscape. For the sun had burst out above, and the few flakes that still fell looked black against his brilliance and the dazzling country below.

But what caused our joy was to see, along the road, a small cavalcade moving away from us, with many bright glances of light and color, as their steel caps and sashes took the sunshine—a pretty sight, and the prettier because it meant our deliverance.

The girl beside me gave a cry of delight, then sighed; and after a minute began to walk back towards the hut, where I left her, and ran up hill for the basket and ham. On my return I found her examining a heap of rusty tools that, it seemed, she had found on a shelf of the building. 'Twas no light help to the good fellowship that afterwards united us that from the first I could read her thoughts often without words, and for this reason, that her eyes were as candid as the noonday.

So now I answered her aloud:

"This afternoon we may venture down to the plain, where no doubt we shall find a clergyman to sell us a patch of holy ground."

"Holy ground?" She looked at me awhile and shook her head. "I am not of your religion," she said.

"And your father?"

"I think no man ever discovered my father's religion. Perhaps there was none to discover; but he was no bad father"— She steadied her voice and went on: "He would prefer the hillside to your 'holy ground.'"

So, an hour later, I delved his grave in the frosty earth, close by the spot where he lay. Somehow, I shivered all the while, and had a cruel shooting pain in my wound that was like to have mastered me before the task was ended. But I managed to lower the body softly into the hole and to cover it reverently from sight, and afterwards stood leaning on my spade and feeling very light in the head, while the girl knelt and prayed for her father's soul.

And the picture of her as she knelt is the last I remember, till I opened my eyes, and was amazed to find myself on my back, and staring up at darkness.

"What has happened?"

"I think you are very ill," said a voice; "can you lean on me, and reach the hut?"

"Why, yes—that is, I think so. Why is everything dark?"

"The sun has been down for hours. You have been in a swoon first, and then talked—oh, such nonsense! Shame on me to let you catch this chill!"

She helped me to my feet and steadied me, and how we reached the hut I cannot tell you. It took more than one weary hour, as I now know; but at the time hours and minutes were one to me.

In that hut I lay four nights and four days between ague fit and fever, and that is all the account I can give of the time, save that on the second day the girl left me alone in the hut and descended to the plain, where, after asking at many cottages for a physician, she was forced to be content with an old woman reputed to be amazingly well skilled in herbs and medicines, whom after a day's trial she turned out of doors. On the fourth day, fearing for my life, she made another descent, and, coming to a wayside tavern, purchased a pint of aqua vitæ, carried it back and mixed a potion that threw me into a profuse sweat. The same evening I sat up, a sound man.

Indeed, so thoroughly was I recovered, that, waking early next morning and finding my sweet nurse asleep from sheer weariness in a corner of the hut, I staggered up from my bed of dried bracken and out into the pure air. Rare it was to stand and drink it in like wine. A footstep aroused me. 'Twas Mistress Delia; and, turning, I held out my hand.

"Now this is famous," said she; "a day or two will see you as good a man as ever."

"A day or two? To-morrow, at latest, I shall make trial to start." I noted a sudden change on her face, and added, "Indeed, you must hear my reasons before setting me down for an ingrate;" and told her of the king's letter that I carried. "I hoped that for a while our ways might lie together," said I; and broke off, for she was looking me earnestly in the face.

"Sir, as you know, my brother Anthony was to have met me—nay, for pity's sake turn not your face away! I have guessed—the sword you carry—I marked it. Sir, be merciful, and tell me!"

I led her a little aside to the foot of a tall pine; and there, though it wrung my heart, told her all, and left her to wrestle with this final sorrow. She was so tender a thing to be stricken thus that I, who had dealt the blow, crept back to the hut, covering my eyes. In an hour's time I looked out. She was gone.

At nightfall she returned, white with grief and fatigue; yet I was glad to see her eyes red and swollen with weeping. Throughout our supper she kept silence; but when 'twas over she looked up and spoke in a steady tone:

"Sir, I have a favor to ask, and must risk being held importunate"——

"From you to me," I put in, "all talk of favors had best be dropped."

"No—listen. If ever it befell you to lose father or mother or dearly loved friend, you will know how the anguish stuns— Oh, sir! today the sun seemed fallen out of heaven, and I, a blind creature, left groping in the void. Indeed, sir, 'tis no wonder; I had a father, brother and servant ready to die for me—three hearts to love and lean on; and today they are gone."

I would have spoken, but she held up her hand.

"Now when you spoke of Anthony—a dear lad!—I lay for some time dazed with grief. By little and little, as the truth grew plainer, the pain grew also past bearing. I stood up and staggered into the woods to escape it. I went fast and straight, heeding nothing, for at first my senses were all confused; but in a while the walking cleared my wits, and I could think, and thinking I could weep; and having wept, could fortify my heart. Here is the upshot, sir—though 'tis held immodest for a maid to ask even far less of a man. We are both bound for Cornwall—you on an honorable mission, I for my father's estate of Gleys, wherefrom (as your tale proves) some unseen hands are thrusting me. Alike we carry our lives in our hands. You must go forward; I may not go back. For from a king who cannot right his own affairs there is little hope; and in Cornwall I have surer friends than he. Therefore take me, sir—take me for a comrade! Am I sad? Do you fear a weary journey? I will smile—laugh—sing—put sorrow behind me. I will contrive a thousand ways to cheat the milestones. At the first hint of tears, discard me, and go your way with no prick of conscience. Only try me—oh, the shame of speaking thus!"

Her voice had grown more rapid towards the close; and now, breaking off, she put both hands to cover her face, that was hot with blushes. I went over and took them in mine.

"You have made me the blithest man alive," said I.

She drew back a pace with a frightened look, and would have pulled her hands away.

"Because," I went on quickly, "you have paid me this high compliment, to trust me. Proud was I to listen to you; and merrily will the miles pass with you for comrade. And so I say—Mistress Killigrew, take me for your servant."

To my extreme discomposure, as I dropped her hands, her eyes were twinkling with laughter.

"Dear now; I see a dull prospect ahead if we use these long titles."

"But"——

"Indeed, sir, please yourself. Only as I intend to call you 'Jack,' perhaps 'Delia' will be more of a piece than 'Mistress Killigrew.'" She dropped me a mock courtesy. "And now, Jack, be a good boy, and hitch me this quilt across the hut. I bought it yesterday, at a cottage below here"——

She ended the sentence with the prettiest blush imaginable; and so, having fixed her screen, we shook hands on our comradeship and wished each other good night.

CHAPTER VIII.

I LOSE THE KING'S LETTER.

Almost before daylight we were afoot, and the first ray of cold sunshine found us stepping from the woods into the plain, where now the snow was vanished and a glistening coat of rime spread over all things. Down here the pines gave way to bare elms and poplars, thickly dotted, and among them the twisted smoke of farmstead and cottage here and there, and the morning stir of kitchen and stable, very musical in the crisp air.

Delia stepped along beside me, humming an air or breaking off to chatter. Meeting us, you would have said we had never a care. The road went stretching away to the north west and the hills against the sky there; whither beyond we neither knew nor (being both young and one, by this time, pretty deep in love) did greatly care; but the conduct of those we met, their gruff refusals of food, their smiles and winks, caused Delia to insist that at the first opportunity I should get her a suit of boy's clothes.

On the far side of the valley we entered a wood, thinking by this to shorten our way, for the road here took a long bend to eastward. Now, at first this wood seemed of no considerable size, but thickened and spread as we advanced. 'Twas only, however, after passing the ridge and when daylight began to fail us that I became alarmed. For the wood grew denser, with a tangle of paths crisscrossing amid the undergrowth. And just then came the low mutter of cannon, shaking the earth. We began to run forward, tripping in the gloom over brambles and stumbling into holes.

For a mile or so this lasted, and then, without warning, I heard a sound behind me and looked back, to find Delia sunk upon the ground.

"Jack, here's a to-do!"

"What's amiss?"

"Why, I am going to swoon!"

The words were scarce out when there sounded a crackling and snapping of twigs ahead, and two figures came rushing towards us—a man and a woman. The man carried an infant in his arms, and though I called on them to stop, the pair ran by us with no more notice than if we had been stones. Only the woman cried, "Dear Lord, save us!" and wrung her hands as she passed out of sight.

"This is strange conduct," thought I; but, peering down, saw that Delia's face was white and motionless. She had swooned, indeed, from weariness and hunger. So I took her in my arms and stumbled forward, hoping to find the end of the wood soon. For now the rattle of artillery came louder and incessant through the trees, and, mingling with it, a multitude of dull shouts and outcries. At first I was minded to run after the man and woman, but, on second thought, resolved to see the danger before hiding from it.

The trees in a short while grew sparser, and between the stems I marked a ruddy light glowing, and then I came out on an open space upon the hillside, with a dip of earth in front, and beyond a long ridge of pines standing up black, because of a red glare behind them, and saw that this came not from any setting sun, but was the light of a conflagration.

The glare danced and quivered in the sky as I crossed the hollow. It made even Delia's white cheek seem rosy. Up amid the pines I clambered, and along the ridge to where it broke off in a steep declivity. And, lo! in a minute I looked down, as 'twere, into the infernal pit.

There was a whole town burning below, and in the streets men were fighting, as could be told by their shouts and the rattle and blaze of musketry, for a garment of smoke lay over all and hid them. Only the turmoil beat up as from a furnace, and the flames of burning thatches, and quick jets of firearms like lightning in a thunder cloud. Great sparks floated past us and over the trees at our back. A hot blast breathed on our cheeks. Now and then you might hear a human shriek distinct amid the din, and this spoke terribly to the heart.

Now the town was Marlborough, and the attacking force a body of royal troops sent from Oxford to oust the garrison of the parliament, which they did this same night, with great slaughter, driving the rebels out of the place and back on the road to Bristol. Had we guessed this, much ill luck had been spared us; but we knew naught of it, nor whether friends or foes were getting the better. So (Delia being by this time recovered a little) we determined to pass the night in the woods and on the morrow to give the place a wide berth.

Retreating, then, to the hollow (that lay on the lee side of the ridge, away from the north wind), I gathered a pile of great stones and spread my cloak thereover for Delia. To sleep was impossible, even with the will for it. For the tumult and fighting went on and only died out about an hour before dawn, and once or twice we were troubled to hear the sound of people running on the ridge above. So we sat and talked in low voices till dawn, and grew more desperately hungered than ever.

With the chill of daybreak we started, meaning to get quit of the neighborhood before any espied us, and fetched a compass to the south without another look at Marlborough. At the end of two hours, turning northwest again, we came to some water meadows beside a tiny river (the Kennet, as I think), and saw, some way beyond, a high road that crossed to our side (only the bridge was now broken down), and, farther yet, a thick smoke curling up, but whence this came I could not see. Now we had been avoiding all roads this morning and hiding at every sound of footsteps. But hunger was making us bold. I bade Delia crouch down by the stream's bank, where many alders grew, and set off towards this column of smoke.

By the spot where the road crossed I noted that many men and horses had lately passed hereby to westward, and, by their footmarks, at a great speed. A little farther and I came on a broken musket flung against the hedge, with a nauseous mess of blood and sandy hairs about the stock of it; and just beyond was a dead horse, his legs sticking up like bent poles across the road. 'Twas here that my blood went cold on a sudden, to hear a dismal groaning not far ahead. I stood still, holding my breath, and then ran forward again.

The road took a twist that led me face to face with a small whitewashed cottage, smeared with black stains of burning. For seemingly it had been fired in one or two places, only the flames had died out; and from the back, where some outbuildings yet smoldered, rose the smoke that I spied. But what brought me to a stand was to see the doorway all cracked and charred, and across it a soldier stretched—a green coated rebel—and quite dead. His face lay among the burned ruins of the door, that had wofully singed his beard and hair. A stain of blood ran across the doorstone and into the road.

I was gazing upon him and shuddering, when again I heard the groans. They issued from the upper chamber of the cottage. I stepped over the dead soldier and mounted the ladder that led upstairs.

The upper room was but a loft. In it were two beds, whereof one was empty. On the edge of the other sat up a boy 16 or thereabouts, stark naked and moaning miserably. With one hand he seemed trying to cover a big wound that gaped in his chest; the other, as my head rose over the ladder, he stretched out with all the fingers spread. And this was his last effort. As I stumbled up, his fingers closed in a spasm of pain; his hands dropped, and the body tumbled back on the bed, where it lay with the legs dangling.

The poor lad must have been stabbed as he lay asleep. For by the bedside I found his clothes neatly folded and without a speck of blood. They were clean, though coarse, so thinking they would serve for Delia, I took them, albeit with some scruples at robbing the dead, and, covering the body with a sheet, made my way downstairs.

Here, on a high shelf at the foot of the ladder, I discovered a couple of loaves and some milk, and also, lying hard by, a pair of shepherd's shears, which I took also, having a purpose for them. By this time, being sick enough of the place, I was glad to make all speed back to Delia.

She was still waiting among the leafless alders, and clapped her hands to see the two loaves under my arm.

Said I, flinging down the clothes, and munching at my share of the bread:

"Here is the boy's suit that you wished for."

"Oh, dear! 'tis not a very choice one." Her face fell.

"All the better for escaping notice."

"But—but I like to be noticed!"

Nevertheless, when breakfast was done, she consented to try on the clothes. I left her eying them doubtfully, and strolled away by the river's bank. In a while her voice called to me:

"Oh, Jack—they do not fit at all!"

"Why, 'tis admirable!" said I, returning and scanning her. Now this was a lie; but she took me more than ever, so pretty and comical she looked in the dress.

"And I cannot walk a bit in them!" she pouted, strutting up and down.

"Swing your arms more, and let them hang looser."

"And my hair. Oh, Jack, I have such beautiful hair."

"It must come off," said I, pulling the shears out of my pocket.

"And look at these huge boots!"

Indeed, this was the main trouble, for I knew they would hurt her in walking; yet she made more fuss over her hair, and only gave in when I scolded her roundly. So I took the shears and clipped the chestnut curls, one by one, while she cried for vexation; and took occasion of her tears to smuggle the longest lock inside my doublet.

TO BE CONTINUED.

The American Natural Gas Company, which is said to be backed by the Standard Oil Company, has secured a large tract of land north of Salt Lake City for the purpose of drilling for natural gas. There is a tale that the local gas company may sell out to or combine with the American Company.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding, and Itching Piles when all other Ointments have failed. It absorbs the tumors, allays the itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and Itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted. Sold by Druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price, 50c. and $1.00 per box. WILLIAMS M'F'G CO., Props., Cleveland, O.

"Have you any references from your last place?" "Yis, ma'am. But they wouldn't mek yez feel any more comfortable about takin' me."

$100 REWARD $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c.

It is the fad to faint dead away after a Russian bath.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.

No other baking powder does such work.

INFANTILE SKIN AND SCALP DISEASES CURED BY Cuticura

EVERY HUMOR OF THE SKIN AND SCALP of infancy and childhood, whether torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, scaly, crusted, pimply, or blotchy, with loss of hair, and every impurity of the blood, whether simple, scrofulous, or hereditary, is speedily, permanently, and economically cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood and Skin Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. Parents, save your children years of mental and physical suffering. Begin now. Delays are dangerous. Cures made in childhood are permanent.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston, Mass. Send for "How to Cure Skin and Blood Diseases."

Baby's skin and scalp purified and beautified by CUTICURA SOAP.

Kidney pains, backache, and muscular rheumatism relieved in one minute by the celebrated CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

WANTED SOLDIERS' HOMESTEADS The addresses of all soldiers who homesteaded a less number of acres than 160 and made final proof on the same before June 22, 1874. W. E. MOSES P. O. Box 1765. Denver, Colo. Mention this paper.

STEINWAY, Gabler and Pease Pianos Meaning the BEST PIANO MADE, and the favorite cheaper Pianos; all Musical Instruments; Bands Supplied; large stock of Sheet Music. STEINWAY HALL, 206 & 208 Post Street, MATTHIAS GRAY CO. Call and see our new rooms and new stock.

CAROLAN & CO.
Wholesale Importers of
HARDWARE, IRON, STEEL,
Mining and Mill Supplies.
BUILDERS' HARDWARE,
WROUGHT IRON PIPE AND FITTINGS
BARB WIRE, ETC.
San Francisco, - - - California.

ORIGINAL BUCKEYE MOWERS.
McCORMICK MOWERS,
BRADLEY'S WHEELED WIRE RAKES
All kinds of Hay Presses and Haying Tools.
Truman-Hooker Co.'s Bale-Ties.
Truman, Hooker & Co.,
San Francisco and Fresno.

This Picture, Panel size, mailed for 4 cents.
J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans,"
255 & 257 Greenwich St., N. Y. City.

CURE Biliousness, Sick Headache, Malaria.
BILE BEANS.

Good Wives grow fair in the light of their works, especially if they use SAPOLIO: It is a solid cake of scouring soap used for all cleaning purposes. All grocers keep it.

LOVE'S LABOR'S LOST by many a woman who strives to please her household and works herself to death in the effort. If the house does not look as bright as a pin, she gets the blame—if things are upturned while house-cleaning goes on—why blame her again. One remedy is within her reach. If she uses SAPOLIO everything will look clean, and the reign of house-cleaning disorder will be quickly over.

CUMBERLAND COAL.
HUSBAND & BROOKS' BRAND.
Absolutely Pure and Dry
This Coal is stored away from the sun and rain. Keeps proper fire. No loss of time. No loss of material from bad fires. Always reliable. Blacksmith's use this brand when they want the best.
HUSBAND & BROOKS
—IMPORTERS—
14 & 16 SPEAR ST.,
SAN FRANCISCO.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH, RED CROSS PENNYROYAL PILLS DIAMOND BRAND
THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE. The only Safe, Sure, and reliable Pill for sale. Ladies, ask Druggist for Chichester's English Diamond Brand in Red and Gold metallic boxes sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other kind. Refuse Substitutions and Imitations. All pills in pasteboard boxes, pink wrappers, are dangerous counterfeits. At Druggists, or send 4c. in stamps for particulars, testimonials, and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Name Paper. CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO., Madison Square, PHILADELPHIA, PA. Sold by all Local Druggists.

Shoot the Spy

A cough or cold is a spy which has stealthily come inside the lines of health and is there to discover some vulnerable point in the fortification of the constitution which is guarding your well-being. That point discovered the spy reports it to the enemy on the outside. The enemy is the changeable winter climate. If the cold gets in, look out for an attack at the weak point. To avoid this, shoot the spy, kill the cold, using SCOTT'S EMULSION of pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda as the weapon. It is an expert cold slayer, and fortifies the system against Consumption, Scrofula, General Debility, and all Anæmic and Wasting Diseases (specially in Children). Especially helpful for children to prevent their taking cold. Palatable as Milk.

SPECIAL.—Scott's Emulsion is non-secret, and is prescribed by the Medical Profession all over the world, because its ingredients are scientifically combined in such a manner as to greatly increase their remedial value.

CAUTION.—Scott's Emulsion is put up in salmon-colored wrappers. Be sure and get the genuine. Prepared only by Scott & Bowne, Manufacturing Chemists, New York. Sold by all Druggists.

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER CURED TO STAY CURED. WRITE TO PHAROLD HAYES, M.D. A NEW DEPARTURE BUFFALO, N.Y.

HAZELTON BROS., AND HEMME & LONG PIANOS Sold on Easy Installments. Also dealer in Sheet Music and Musical Merchandise. CHAS. S. EATON, General Agent, 735 Market St., S. F., Cal. Send for Catalogues of Pianos and Sheet Music.

BROOKLYN HOTEL Bush St., bet. Montgomery & Sansome, S. F.; conducted on both the European and American plan. This Hotel is under the management of Charles Montgomery, and is the best Family and Business Men's Hotel in San Francisco. Home comforts, cuisine unexcelled, first-class service, highest standard of respectability guaranteed. Board and room, per day, $1.25 to $2.00; single room, 50 cts. to $1.00 per night. Free coach to and from the Hotel.

OPIUM AND MORPHINE HABIT, whether used by the mouth or hypodermically. The only absolute and accredited cure is Dr. C. J. Weatherby's ANTIDOTE. Painless. Harmless and Sure. Has stood the test of 19 YEARS use on the Pacific Coast, without a failure when directions are followed. Is cheaper than the drug, and ABSOLUTELY DESTROYS ALL DESIRE FOR OPIUM in any form. Smoking Antidote $2 per bottle, or 3 bottles for $5. Individual treatment for other modes of use. All communications confidential. Write to PACIFIC MEDICINE CO., San Francisco, sole agents. Mail address, CARE BOX 2002.

BIG PRIZES. In underwear we have one line of grey mixed, nice quality of goods for men, either shirts or drawers, sizes, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, at $1.75 each.

Our 50 cent goods are not often over 42 in drawers or 44 in shirts.

Scarlet or blue grey flannel, in extra sizes and quality, drawers up to 46, and shirts to 48; the scarlet are $2.00, and the grey $1.75.

Riveted overalls, Brown Duck, extra quality, at 65 cents, to close the lot bought at a sacrifice. Waist 42, leg either 30, 31, 32 or 33 inches. Waist 40, leg either 30, 31, 32, 33 or 34 inches. Waist 38, leg either 33, 34, 35 or 36 inches. Waist 36, leg either 30, 32, 33, 34, 35 or 36 inches. Waist 34, leg either 30, 32, 33, 34 or 35 inches.

We have the largest variety of good quality overalls in extra sizes to be found in town. If out of one color in above lot will substitute another unless otherwise directed. We have one odd dozen beautiful grey color, size 38x31, at same price, formerly sold at $1.10.

Mens' cassimer pants, in neat styles for old or middle aged men, in extra sizes, as follows: Waist 40, leg 31; w. 41, l. 30; w. 42, l. 29 or 30; w. 44, l. 31 or 32; w. 46, l. 31, 32, 33, 34; w. 47, l. 30. These are true to measure. Price, $3.50 to $6.00.

Smith's Cash Store, 416 & 418 Front St. S.F.

TIGER MOWERS.

Cut 4 feet, 3inches, - - - - $75 00
Cut 5 feet, - - - - - - - 82 50
Cut 6 feet, - - - - - - - 90 00
Will cut where any other Mower can.

Baker & Hamilton
San Francisco, Cal.

GREENBACK PLUG CUT

SMOKING TOBACCO HAS JUMPED TO THE FRONT THE BEST SMOKE IN A NOVEL AND CONVENIENT PACKAGE

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again, I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. H. G. ROOT, M. C., 183 Pearl St. New York.

THE BEST

THE STRONGEST THE PUREST

Many diseases are traceable to the use of impure salt. Much butter is spoiled by gritty particles and impurities in salt.

Will it pay you to risk the health of your family and the spoiling of your butter for the sake of saving the small difference in cost to you between the common salt and the BEST?

HOLMES' EXTRA SIFTED SALT is the best because it is the purest, it is the strongest and it is free from lime, pan scales, and any insoluble matter.

It needs no sifting, consequently does not waste, and being perfectly soluable five pounds will go as far as six or seven pounds of ordinary salt, without any danger of spoiling butter by gritty undissolved particles and impurities. No injury to health can result from the use of Holmes' Extra Sifted Salt.

Packed in sacks 224 lbs., 200 lbs., 100 lbs., 50 lbs., 10 lbs., 5 lbs. each; also in cartons of 4 lbs.

Ask your grocer for it, and take no other.

C. E. WHITNEY & CO., San Francisco,
Sole Agents for the Pacific Coast.

THE GAVI
CALIFORNIA FRUIT
Female Pills.

Perfectly Harmless; a Positive Preventative for suppressed, Irregular and Painful Menstruation, no matter how weak the patient is or what the difficulty may be. Price $2.50 per box. Postpaid. Secure from observation. PROSSER BROS., 111 Grant Avenue, San Francisco, Cal.

JAMES LEFFEL WATER WHEELS
THE JAMES LEFFEL & CO. We send FREE to those desiring information, the Finest Pamphlet Published.
SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, or Liberty St., NEW YORK CITY.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor.

Independence, Cal.,

FRIDAY, JUNE 26, 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXIII. NO. 2. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JUNE 26, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1078.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.50
Three Months	1.50
One Month	50
Single Copies

THE ALUMINUM AGE.

A Metal That Will Supercede Iron.

IT IS NOT ONE OF THE LOST ARTS.

How will the Death of Fred J. Seymour Affect it?

From the tone of the lament sent up by the press throughout the length and breadth of the land, one would suppose that the cheap aluminum problem is, since the death of this one man, as far from being solved as it was in 1853, when a very poor quality of that valuable material was worth $250 per pound; on this point, however, the people are being misled.

I do not believe it to be the intention of the press to be misleading in this or any other matter, however trivial, but what one of the numerous croakers who have helped to swell the cry, "Lost, lost!" from shore to shore believes, after a moment's sober afterthought, that an invention or process necessary to the advancement of mankind could be irretrievably lost by the death of one man?

The Pompeiians could cast plaster statues whole and hollow at a single cast; nothing of the kind can be done in this day and age of the world.

The ancients understood the process of manufacturing malleable glass; cups were made in those olden times which could be dashed violently to the ground without a fracture; only dents, where, perchance, they came in contact with cobble stones or other pebbles; the dents could be hammered out just for all the world like we would hammer dents in tinware at the present day. Malleable glass is another of the lost arts. In the year 976 A. D. the Chinese emperor, Tai Tsung, came into possession of a wonderful painting of an ox, which was visible only during the night—at daylight it vanished. It was a specimen of the ancient luminous painting of which not a single example is now extant.

Above I have catalogued three representatives of the lost arts, arts which are indeed lost; but mind, dear reader, they were not lost by the death of a single individual. Cities were overwhelmed with many feet of plastic, fiery lava; whole nations were wiped off the face of the earth by frightful pestilence, and islands and continents sunken beneath the rushing waters which closed over them, making the wreck of the nation in which it thrived as complete as the loss of the art itself.

With these facts in view it is hardly possible, if the "Aluminum Age" has really been foreshadowed to the extent claimed by enthusiastic scientists and inventors, that the brilliant white metal era will forever recede from our sight. Because one man has lived his allotted days and passed to the great unknown without revealing his process of cheapening a material that will make an age as much in advance of this age of iron as the iron age is in advance of the stone age or that of prehistoric bronze, there are no reasons for considering the art lost forever. For the past two or three years many extravagant stories have been circulated regarding this peerless metal. According to a certain class of writers aluminum, so cheaply produced as to be a dangerous rival of iron and steel, was not only one of the future, near future, possibilities, but to them the era had really dawned. Overzealousness and too much faith in the inventive ingenuity of an age which has given to us the telegraph, the telephone, the phonograph, the electric motor and hundreds of other useful inventions and appliances, are the only excuses that can be offered in extenuation of these egregious epistles.—John W. Wright in St. Louis Republic.

By Rail to Jerusalem.

The British consular agent at Jaffa in his last report on the trade of his district states that a concession for a railway from Jaffa to Jerusalem has been granted by the sultan to Mr. Joseph Navon, an Ottoman subject, for seventy-one years. It is stated that a company has been formed in England and France to carry out the scheme, and that the engineers are soon expected to undertake the work. The carriage road between Jaffa and Jerusalem has been greatly improved. The government sold last year the income from the toll of the road for £2,085, as compared with £1,812 the year before last, which shows an increase in the traffic. The Jewish colonies in Palestine are greatly improving; one of them, which is called Richon le Zion, has planted about 2,000,000 vines, all promising well. The colonists are good laborers; nearly all their land is cultivated. The greater part of them are Turkish subjects, and are all subject to the laws of the country.—London Times.

Carlos I and His Father.

The late king of Portugal was a corpulent man of fifty, with a dark complexion and a grave face. An American who saw him recently says he bore a striking resemblance to ex-President Cleveland. His son, who succeeds him as Carlos I, is very different from his father physically, being very light in complexion. He is an ambitious young man, not possessing the quiet, scholarly tastes of the late Luis. He is anxious to become prominent in European politics. In all his mental characteristics he more resembles his mother than his father.—Montreal Star.

Curious Result of Cigarette Smoking.

Two young men of our town addicted to the constant smoking of cigarettes are singularly affected, not so much in mind as in body. They are becoming spotted all over their bodies, giving them the appearance of leopards. Their minds, though now apparently sound, are in imminent danger, for their nervous systems are so affected that neither of them can sleep without smoking several of these abominable cigarettes after retiring.—Harrodsburg (Ky.) Sayings and Doings.

Very Smart Babies.

An instance of premature dentition came to light yesterday. George Droescher, who is employed in the Gambrinus brewery, married, a year ago, the 18-year-old daughter of Jacob Wetterer, a brewer. Three weeks ago Mrs. Droescher was delivered of a girl baby. It was perfectly formed and weighed ten pounds. The first thing to attract attention was the fact that the little one had an unusual growth of very dark hair, the mother being a perfect blonde. The hair was nearly an inch long. The family could hardly believe it when the mother called them in and showed that the babe had also been born with the two lower incisors almost full grown, while with the finger could be felt the rest of the teeth on both jaws. Since then the upper and lower molars have made their appearance, and the babe has a full grown set of teeth in sight.

Mrs. Tibbles, of Oregon street, gave birth to a boy baby on Dec. 3. Dr. Haile, who was in attendance, found that the child, which is a fine, fully developed male, had five upper teeth in front, well through the gum. The lower teeth were just under the skin, ready to pop through. Dr. Haile then made a thorough examination of the baby's mouth, and was greatly astonished to find two molars in the upper jaw, on opposite sides, as large as the nail of the little finger of a man. They were well out of the gum and had been cut evidently some time before birth. They were as far advanced as those of a child of 6 years. Opposite these teeth, in the lower jaw, were two more molars just under the skin, through which they were ready to cut. All the other teeth were plainly visible through the gum, and it is very probable that in a few days the child will have a full set cut. The mother is a healthy woman and has had several children, all of whom, however, cut their teeth at the proper periods.—Cincinnati Telegram.

The Coming Princess Albert Victor.

I hear from a high English source that the Princess Feodore of Schleswig-Holstein, who did the Eiffel tower the other day, chaperoned by her elderly maiden aunt, Amelie, of the same house, is in all likelihood the coming Princess Albert Victor of Wales. She is a sister of the German empress and a niece of Prince Christian, the dull old husband of the best of Queen Victoria's daughters, is going on 16, looks a good sort of girl, and is almost pretty. But she is not likely to improve when the bloom of youth departs, and she wants winsome graces. Evidently she has not come to her full height. When she does, she will probably be as tall as her imperial sister.

The queen would like to secure to her the crown of Great Britain, because she is descended from her majesty's mother, the Duchess of Kent, whose first husband was Prince Leiningen. Princess Feodore has been a good deal here with a party of aristocratic English friends, some of whom are connections of her aunt-in-law on the maternal side, Countess Gleichen. Count Gleichen abandoned his high born German status to marry Laura Seymour, and is a professional sculptor, high in the queen's favor. Against German etiquette she has been latterly styling them both serene highnesses. An objection to the proposed royal match is that the young lady's mother is in a madhouse. There is already more than a touch of insanity in the royal family of England.—Paris Letter.

The Guinness Gift.

The magnificent gift of Sir Edward Guinness may be accepted without any fear that it will demoralize the class which it is intended to benefit. The £200,000 which are to be invested for the better housing of the London poor will be, in the most unfavorable event, an extension of the Peabody scheme, which has been found in practice not to have done much for the destitute population that lives upon casuality labor. The neat and comfortable tenements have been occupied by respectable and thriving artisans, and very great has been the benefit which they have received. But the object of Sir Edward Guinness is to provide decent homes for the class below them—to let the tenements at rents within the means of the poorest. Yes, but these are the persons who have no means at all—no regular means, none that will insure the periodical payment of even the smallest rent. That Sir Edward Guinness' gift will do much good cannot be denied; but it will require very cautious handling to make it do just that kind of good which is intended.—St. James Gazette.

A New Italian Coin.

A dollar is to be struck in Italy, larger in size and greater in value than the familiar five lire piece. The old Marie Therese is to be the model. Even in coins, and even in Italy, they seem to be going back to the old patterns. The Marie Therese thaler is not now so unusual as it used to be. There is a tendency in coins to locate themselves. To this day the forty franc pieces of the First Napoleon, rare in the north of France and not often met in Paris, are in free circulation on the Rivera. The new coin will, of course, have on the reverse the familiar effigy of King Humbert and be surrounded by an inscription setting forth the Italian sovereignty over its African possessions.—American Banker.

Sailors Try to Ride Down a King.

Some of the sailors from the German war ship Sophie made a dastardly attempt to injure Mataafa the other day. He was coming home from church, attended by one or two of his guard, when several German sailors, who were horseback riding, galloped near him, driving him up against a fence. He, thinking that the matter was purely accidental, did not take any notice until they turned their horses and galloped toward him again. One of them again rode close past him, when one of his guard raised his rifle and made a move to protect the king. The king ordered him not to fire, but it is needless to say the Germans decamped.—Apia Telegram in San Francisco Chronicle.

NOT A BEARD IN TOWN.

A Specimen of Southern Humor.

THE MYSTIC CIRCLE OF THE SLICK.

Compelling People to get Shaved and Have Their Hair Cut.

A stranger visiting Sylvania right now would be amazingly impressed with the similarity in appearance of all its male inhabitants, and he would have been much more amused had he witnessed the process by means of which they all reached this state of common brotherhood.

It was so dull the first part of the week that even the honorable and time honored "Sylvania Gas company" began to show signs of falling into innocuous disuse and ceased to furnish its members with the usual enlivening elixir of mirth. Of course something had to be done; so a few of the members decided that they would shave up clean and have their heads clipped. Our barber, Mr. H. R. Kemp, did the work up in rare and rapid style, and the boys were so well pleased with their new selves that they magnanimously resolved to "do" the town up likewise; so out they started on a "clipping" expedition.

The first victim who walked into the hands of the spoilers was a young man with curly hair and quite a long beard, of which he was very proud. He "kicked" and swore, but it was no use. He was escorted up stairs, and in a few minutes, by virtue of his white head and shining face, was a member of the Mystic Circle of the Slick. Then the fun commenced in real earnest. No one was spared.

Young men, old men and boys, just as they happened to come along, were gathered into the fold. Some submitted meekly to the inevitable; some pleaded piteously or threatened prosecution, some protested and struggled violently, but the same fate awaited them all alike—each came out with a slick face and a hairless head. When the "subject" became too obstreperous one of the committee took the clippers and mowed a furrow down the center of his head. This always had a very quieting effect, and the operation was then performed without any further trouble. One of our lawyers escaped several times by fast running, but finally came out and gracefully surrendered, and he, too, now wears a white head. Another lawyer outran an official of the county, and managed to save his scalp for a while.

The only man in the town who did not escape—if escape it can be called—was a young clerk who, when the canvassing committee was out on the war path, slipped upstairs and was quickly clipped, thus taking fate by the forelock, as it were. Everybody is alike down here now, and it is a rare sight to see a citizen with hair on his head. One man in this unique condition came in town yesterday, and, from the way he was stared at and followed around, one would have thought he was John L. Sullivan himself. Our barber was into the clique and did all the work for nothing. Of course he will not do anything more in the hair cutting line for several months to come, but probably he didn't think of that, or was willing to submit to the sacrifice for the fun.—Sylvania (Ga.) Cor. Atlanta Constitution.

Boycotting Paris Dressmakers.

Emperor William's sister has the poorest trousseau of all the royalties. The emperor is not exaggeratively fond of any of his sisters, and is besides perfectly incapable of seeing why he should spend his money on furbelows for a woman. Therefore he has killed two birds with one stone, and saved his money and enhanced his reputation for patriotism by obliging her to buy everything in Berlin. The German dressmakers are the cheapest and the worst anywhere in Europe, and no fashionable German ever gets her clothes anywhere save in Paris. The emperor hates this custom and hopes to break it up by forbidding his sister to follow it, but this wise young woman, having submitted with all apparent meekness to her brother's orders, has got around the difficulty by buying as few things as she can possibly get on with in Berlin and spending all the rest of her money in laces, in which she has invested more than half of the money set aside for her trousseau; then as soon as she is married and can do as she pleases she will go to Paris and get all the clothes she wants.—New York World.

The Making of Postage Stamps.

Among those who this year bid for the contract to manufacture postage stamps for the government was Charles F. Steel, of this city, and it was found that Mr. Steel's figures were lower than other competitors. The award has not yet been made, but there is little doubt that Mr. Steel will secure the contract and thus bring to this city an industry that for twenty-eight years has been in New York. Mr. Steel has been identified with the manufacture of postage stamps for thirty years. He was with Toppan, Carpenter & Co., who made the stamps in this city prior to 1861. In that year the National Bank Note company secured the contract and the work went to New York city, and Mr. Steel continued in its employ. He is the originator of the present system of keeping the stamp accounts and the check on the production. In this city he will employ 200 hands, a large number of whom will be females. The annual output will be about 140,000,000 sheets.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Hard on the Travelers.

Up in the vicinity of Schoodic lake, a man who had a new road to sell failed to make satisfactory terms with the town, and so, on the theory, "no pay, no road," felled trees across the way until the town should pay him for opening it. Travelers who recently passed through that region think the innocent passenger gets the worst of the controversy.—Lewiston Journal.

An Aeronaut's Terrible Death.

Last night Professor Higgins and Miss De Voy were announced to make a balloon ascent from the Manchester race course and to descend by means of parachutes. Miss De Voy did not make the ascent, but the professor went up, and his assistant, a man named Lennox, also ascended, but in the car attached to the balloon. Professor Higgins descended from a great height in Alexandra park, falling into the ornamental pond there, but was unhurt. The balloon then went over towards Burnage, and, suddenly collapsing, fell, Lennox being killed. The balloon is said to have burst when approaching or passing over Fallowfield. The pace at which the balloon was descending was so terrific that the sand, instead of falling earthwards, actually streamed up into the air as the balloon shot through it, and as it was flying upward it had the appearance of smoke issuing from the balloon.

A Mr. Linton, who saw the balloon pass over Fallowfield, states that at that time he saw the man Lennox out on the netting which inclosed the silk portion of the balloon, climbing up to the top of the balloon. Evidently he had then discovered that the gas was fast leaving the balloon at the top, and was making a desperate effort to remedy the injury. When the balloon had descended to a distance of some four or five hundred yards from the ground the silk portion collapsed entirely, and the balloon then presented the appearance of an elongated cigar. A few seconds later the balloon fell with a terrific thud in a field. Two or three men at once rushed to the spot and tried to get the man from beneath the car. Apparently the car had fallen straight on the ground, and the whole of the upper part of the balloon had fallen on Lennox, completely covering him. It did not take the willing helpers long to remove the silk envelope, netting, etc., from above Lennox, but when they reached his body he gave not the slightest sign of life. One of his legs was twisted and broken, and he was badly cut about the face and head. He had apparently been instantaneously killed.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Rescued Him from a Bear.

Willie Hammer, an 11-year-old son of Benjamin Hammer, had an adventure last week, while herding his father's sheep over in the White river country, that came near proving fatal. The boy had been looking for grouse with a 32-caliber gun, and had just lain down on the ground to rest, when the sheep became frightened, and on looking to see the cause of the commotion a huge cinnamon bear was a few paces away facing him. Willie fired the gun at the breast of the bear, which caused him to come for him. He turned to run, but had gone only a few steps when he stepped into a hole and fell, and on rising and looking around the bear was close to him, and, rising up on his hind legs, he seized him and commenced to squeeze him, stopping for breath, the boy all the while trying to use a knife which he pulled from his pocket, but with no success, as his arms were held tightly above the elbow.

At this critical time the dog came up and bit the bear, causing him to drop the boy, which he did with a blow on the back of the head with his huge paw, knocking him senseless. This was about 3 o'clock, and when he came to his senses it was about 5 o'clock. He then gathered up the sheep, which had become badly scattered, and went to camp, his clothes nearly torn off and covered with blood, which, by the way, came from the bear, for the boy, though very sore and with head badly swollen, did not have a scratch on him.—Castle Rock Journal.

The National Flower.

According to Dr. Charles Pickering ("Chronological History of Plants," p. 908), the first reference to Magnolia glauca was made in a report of some navigators in 1584, who, proceeding to Roanoke island (North Carolina), found "the trees that beareth rind of the black synamon, of which like Capt. Winter brought from the Streights of Magellaun." It is found from New York and New Jersey through the Atlantic states, generally near the coast, to Florida, and through the gulf states into Texas. In the southern states it sometimes becomes a large tree, sixty or seventy feet high, with a trunk three or four feet in diameter, and is an evergreen. It has been suggested by some enthusiasts that this should be chosen as the "national flower," if we must have one. But, although the exquisite beauty and fragrance of the flower make it popular and desirable wherever known, it is recognized and prized by a comparatively small number of the people.—Garden and Forest.

A Huge Contract.

The Peruvian congress is progressing speedily in the discussion of the Donoughmore contract. Five articles are already approved—the first, by which the bondholders declare the foreign debt of Peru as finally canceled; the second giving them the railways of the state for sixty-six years (the perpetual possession did not meet with approbation); the third giving them 2,000,000 tons of guano, although the entire amount now exported does not reach over 600,000 tons; the use of the road and appurtenances thereof on the Arequipa railway, and the navigation of Lake Titicaca under the national flag and in national vessels, with the Peruvian officers in uniforms. All these have been passed.—Once a Week.

Georgia's Polyglot Nonogenarian.

Col. James Edward Calhoun, one of the richest men in this section of the country, and who is said to own 99,000 acres of land, is one of the finest educated men in the south. He was once a naval officer, and acquired such a knowledge of fifteen different languages that he could speak and write them fluently. He imperfectly knew ten other languages. He has not an English book in his house, but spends all his time reading works in some foreign language. He is now 92 years old, and is in remarkably good health for his age.—Elberton (Ga.) Star.

A HAUNTED HOUSE.

A Ghost Story That Reads Like a Novel.

A YOUNG MAN'S TRAGIC DEATH.

Futile Efforts to Drive the Uncanny Thing Away.

Stories have been afloat for some time which have excited a great deal of comment among residents of the West End and which have given employment to the tongues of the gossips. It is a veritable ghost story, and while the incredulous have smiled and affected a contempt for what they term nonsense of that kind, the fact remains that the tale continues to go the rounds and to increase in interest as the days go by.

The house which is the scene of operations for his alleged ghostship stands on the south side of Chestnut street, west of Twenty-ninth, and is just such a looking place as might be selected for such a strange inhabitant. It is a dark, gloomy looking structure, rearing its solemn front above the street in strange contrast to the cheerful aspect of its neighbors. From week to week the somber shutters which hide its windows from the eyes of the curious are never opened to admit the cheerful sunshine, and no noise of laughter or prattle of children at play ever greet the passer by. An air of mystery pervades the place, and a strange, uncanny feeling comes over those who pass it.

The weird visitor is said to be the ghost of a young man who, in days gone by, blew out his brains upon the very threshold of the house. A young lady, with whom he fell in love and who had plighted him her troth, grew tired of his attentions, and broke her engagement with him. By every means within his power he sought to regain her affections, but in vain. She turned a deaf ear to his most earnest entreaties, and finally forbade his visits entirely.

Still clinging to the hope that he might in time regain her love, he sought an interview, which was denied him, and, filled with despair, he resolved to end his life. He called to see her, but finding that she had gone to visit a neighbor he repaired to the house where it was supposed she had gone, and, reaching the door, he placed a pistol to his head and coolly blew himself into eternity.

It chanced, however, that he had mistaken the house, and the story is that his spirit, which had gone in search of the lady he had loved and failing to find her, has from that time, as each recurring day brings back the hour at which he died, returned to renew the fruitless search. Inhabitants of the house were startled by strange, unearthly noises, and on more than one occasion the weird visitor was seen to ascend the steps leading up from the cellar and go wandering about the house as if vainly searching for some one. It groped its way from room to room, and after accomplishing its rounds would disappear. So thoroughly frightened did the inmates of the house become, that, overcome at last by fear, they removed to another locality and for a time his ghostship was left in sole possession of the premises. Then the property was sold and the new owner, who had heard the weird stories that were told, resolved to remodel the house with a view to driving out the unwelcome visitor. The cellar from which the phantom had arisen on the occasion of his visits was filled completely up, in the hope that when its hiding place was gone it (the ghost) would take its departure, and the interior of the house was carefully rearranged, but without avail.

The ghostly visitant still remained. It is said that it still wanders through the house, and rumors go abroad of strange sights and sounds to be seen and heard at night. However it may be, no one has been able to solve the mystery, and the inmates of the house are seldom seen. They hold themselves carefully aloof from the outer world, and maintain an air of mystery that lends credence to the tale. No one is seen to come or go across the mysterious threshold, darkened by the blood of the self murdered man, and the neighbors glance at the house significantly and relate the story with an air of general belief.

A reporter, in order to learn the exact facts, called at the house, but was denied admission. Inquiry among the neighbors, however, verified the statements here made.—St. Louis Republic.

Hard on the Advertisers.

There are tidings of great joy for the simple minded foreigner traveling upon English railways. When he expects to get to his destination he often finds himself at Pears' soap or Colman's mustard and Beecham's pills. Mr. Swetenham, M. P., is going to alter all this. He has brought in a bill for the repression of vice and profaneness at railway stations, since it provides that every station should have its name painted upon at least two sign boards, both on the up and on the down platforms. The name is to be painted in plain letters equal in size to the largest letters used in any advertisements displayed within the same station. Moreover, it is forbidden to exhibit any advertisement within ten feet of the station's name as thus notified. The bill comes rather late in the session, but, if necessary, an autumn session ought to be held on purpose to pass it.—St. James' Gazette.

Fright Restored the Voice.

A strange circumstance occurred at Rockport, W. Va., in connection with the flood disaster. Miss Sheets, a daughter of James Sheets, lost her voice last winter, and since then had not been able to speak, except in a whisper. The night of the flood the water came up around the house. In attempting to leave the house Miss Sheets stumbled and fell. She was badly frightened, of course, and tried to scream for help. Immediately she recovered her voice, and found that she could speak as well as ever.—Pittsburg Commercial Gazette.

ELISE'S BEAUTIFUL ARMS.

The Great Triumph and Tragic End of an Artist's Model in Berlin.

Two years ago Elise Kemmler, then 18 years old, was a waitress at a restaurant in the students' quarter in Berlin. She was not pretty. She was freckled, square shouldered and dumpy. She was so plain that she did not even get the usual caresses and love pats which the German waitresses almost invariably get from every man they serve. She had, however, one beauty of form—her arms. They were large, white and exquisitely molded. A young artist noticed them one day as Elise, with her sleeves rolled up, brought him his beer and roast goose. From that day on Elise was probably more sought after by young men than any other waitress in Berlin. Every artist wished her to sit for him, so that he could paint her beautiful arms.

After the young artist who discovered her arms had given their counterparts to his Hebes and Venuses and Dianas, dozens of other artists wished to reproduce them on their canvases. As a model Elise made double and treble the money that she had earned as a waitress. She spent it all upon her person and became immediately vain. By means of a bit of lacing, a free use of cosmetics, and a lot of new gowns, she made herself over into a very attractive young woman. She had lovers by the dozen. Hardly an evening passed for the next two years but that she drank wine with an artist or student in a fine Berlin restaurant, or sat beside him in some second class theatre.

A few weeks ago Elise had an engagement to sit for the young artist who discovered her. She went to his room and prepared to reveal the beautiful arms which he had wished to paint. He told her, however, that she need not take the trouble. He had found a woman with more finely molded arms than hers. She threw herself on the floor and wept. He tossed her some money to comfort her. She threw it back to him and hurried off home. There she locked herself in her rooms. For two days she refused admittance to every one and ate nothing. On the morning of the third day her landlady was attracted to her bedroom by groans. On the bed lay Elise in convulsions. She confessed that she had poisoned herself, but begged the landlady not to summon a doctor, as she wished to die. A physician who was called in considered her incurable. She was sent to the Charite hospital, where she died two days later.—New York Sun.

Seeking His Own Happiness at Last.

A tall, fine looking man of distinguished appearance and clerical air stepped into the office of Clerk of Courts Hewitt yesterday and asked with great dignity if Mr. Hewitt were the one who made folks happy. Mr. Hewitt joined him in a little blush, and shyly admitted that he sometimes distributed great chunks of happiness to young men for a consideration.

"I want a marriage license, then," the stranger remarked.

"What is the name?" asked Mr. Hewitt.

"Spratt—Rev. G. M. Spratt, of Philadelphia."

After the usual questions required by law to be asked of those who come there for tickets in the lottery, Mr. Hewitt observed: "Of course I can see that you are of age, but," in an apologetical tone, "I am required to ask your exact age."

"Certainly, certainly, sir," responded the clerical visitor. "I know how it is. I have officiated at a large number of weddings since the law went into effect. I am 75."

The bride Mr. Spratt was to lead to the altar was Mrs. Amelia Down Wheeler, of Corry, whose age is 67, so that the combined ages of the bride and groom reach the almost unprecedented age of 142 years, an even century more than the age of the average bride and groom.—Erie Gazette.

Holland's King as a Patient.

I have alluded to the trouble which the doctors have had with the king of Holland. Not only is it a fact that his temper is frequently painfully short, but during his last and most serious illness he took it into his head to make game of his medical attendants. The old king used upon occasions, with a grim and sardonic humor it is difficult to realize, to deceive his doctors by exaggerating his symptoms or even by affecting to have developed new ones.

Then just as the royal physicians were about to leave the royal chamber the patient would burst into loud laughter, or, if too weak for that, would chuckle grimly at the way in which his medical attendants had been misled by him. It can be imagined, therefore, how increasingly difficult the task of the Dutch doctors was made. Since his unexpected partial recovery—the latest account is unfavorable—it has been necessary for the old king to breathe air of one temperature, and that a rather high one, so that his apartments have to be kept heated in a manner which makes the devotion of the young queen to her wreck of a husband all the more notable.—London Truth.

Luck in Oklahoma.

A local hack driver purchased two lots on the day after the opening from men who decided that there would never be a city, and who were going away in disgust. For one he paid $10 and for the other he traded a well worn six shooter. One of the lots he has since sold for $1,100, and he is holding the six shooter lot for $1,500. The luckless boomer who exhausted his scantily filled treasury to get into the land of promise and went away empty handed, contributed by his zeal and earnestness to a boom which has already netted many neat little fortunes.—Oklahoma Cor. Globe-Democrat.

Tall Trees.

A recent discussion about the height of trees in the forests of Victoria brings from the government botanist the statement that he has seen one 525 feet high. The chief inspector of forests measured a fallen one that was 485 feet high.—Exchange.

HOUSES OF SUGAR.

The Wild Idea of Claus Spreckles.

WHAT SCIENTIFIC MEN THINK OF IT.

A Building Would Look Like a Massive Diamond.

The scheme of utilizing sugar for building purposes in place of marble, which the redoubtable Claus Spreckels declares to be feasible, has stirred up lots of interest among the sugar men as well as stone cutters.

Spreckels says his sugar experts were asked to find a means for hardening the sugar he shipped to Mexico, and they did so. It had become necessary to get a process of this kind, as the sugars dissolved and washed considerably while en route there.

The success of the new process made him think the crystals could be hardened for building purposes and made to withstand heat and water.

It has been demonstrated to his satisfaction, he declares, that the thing can be done. The tests already made show that sugar blocks for interior decoration could even now be furnished. Great blocks for the exterior of buildings, he thinks, will be eventually, and he predicts that the proposed new wing of the White House in Washington will be of that material.

A reporter talked with a lot of the trust people the other day about the new discovery. They had consulted with their experts about it, and all were at a loss to conceive of a method which might effect the desired result.

No matter how hard sugar was made water would dissolve it, and it would melt under nominal heat. There was no comparison between sugar and marble. They were composed of entirely different elements. Marble, carbonic acid and lime, which form into a compound of carbonate of lime. Water has no effect on this substance, and it would take ten minutes of a white heat temperature to disintegrate it, the experts said.

Sugar is composed of oxygen, hydrogen and carbon, a compound substance that heat, water or shock readily drives back into its elements, and no chemical substance can preserve its integrity, the sugar men conclude, and rest contented.

Of a similar opinion is Dr. Gideon F. Moore, the eminent chemist, who is constantly called upon to make sugar tests. But he does not say that a process generally unknown to science at present may not have been discovered.

He showed the reporter a block of sugar about an inch square in thickness. It was perfectly transparent. It looked hard, but could be easily cut with a knife or bitten.

"There is the natural formation of sugar crystals," the doctor explained. "The sugar is in the same state now as it was when pulverized. Just taste it; you will see it is as sweet as ever.

"Pressure could not solidify crystals more than they are now, and I know of no chemical preparation that could possibly do it.

"If a way of making sugar harder than this has been found it is something new in chemistry, and if the blocks can be made insensible to water or nominal heat the discovery is wonderful."

The statement that Spreckels made about the new building sugar, putting marble completely in the shade, because of its superior beauty, no one who studies each specimen under a magnifying instrument will doubt.

The sugar is like a rainbow, excepting that each crystal represents an irregular block.

If finely cut as marble is, a block of sugar might reflect every ray of light, making it glisten like a diamond.

There can be no question about its beauteous effects, and if it can be prepared at all, it can be gotten up much cheaper than marble.

The only difficulty to be overcome is the natural disposition of the sweet stuff to melt. The trouble now is that sugar is sugar whether soft or hard, and a piece from the corner stone of a sugar house would taste just as good to the small boy as if it were stolen from a bowl.—New York News.

Home at Last.

The old darky, an account of whose trip from Louisiana to Georgia was published in The Eagle some time ago, found his young bosses at last. He belonged to Mr. Tillman, of Tatnall, and was sold as a slave long before the war and taken to Louisiana. As the shadows of old age began to gather around him, his heart yearned for his childhood's home, and so last spring the old fellow, with his wife and children, traveled all the way back in a horse and cart. He had got to Tatnall, but found that his old boss had gone the way of all mankind, and Mr. Joseph Tillman, one of his young bosses, with that feeling that every southerner has for the good old time darky, brought the old fellow to his home in Bulloch, gave him a house and land to tend, where, with his young bosses to help him, he hopes to spend the remainder of his days in peace and contentment.—Statesboro (Ga.) Eagle.

Germany's Arctic Explorers.

Another German Arctic expedition has gone out, this time from Bremen, in charge of Drs. Walter and Kukechenthal. The explorers were last heard of from the southwest coasts of Spitzbergen, where they had encountered many gales. On the west coast, in Magdalen bay, latitude 79.35 north, they met an English sportsman, Mr. Pike, who had wintered in Spitzbergen. He reported that the winter had been mild, but sport was not very good. Encouraged by Dr. Nansen's success, the Danes will send an expedition next year to the east coast of Greenland. Seven picked men, under an officer of the Danish navy, equipped for two and a half years if needed, will go out in a whaler and explore the coast between latitude 60 and 73 north.—London Graphic.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Jno. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JUNE 26 ..... 1891.

Lord Londonderry is arranging to sell his Irish estates to his tenants on terms to be agreed upon by arbitration.

Switzerland has been visited by a terrible railway accident, which shows that model republics are not free from disaster in their railway administration.

Oakland's "solid eight" council has been broken and now it is the "solid seven." Clean politics is what the country wants, but to have a corrupt government is next to no government at all. Oakland has a hard time fighting unprincipled men.

The Ohio Prohibitionist have opened their campaign as usual, with a row. They lick each other in order to show the two wicked old parties that there is somebody they can lick. Then they lie down like a postage stamp.

In California, where fruit culture has been profitable, we have seen an exodus of city men seeking homes in the country, and alleged drawbacks of rural life have not deterred them. Agriculture is natural the pursuit of a majority of men, and only when unjust taxation and discrimination make its burdens unbearable will the furrows be deserted.

The conduct of the preliminaries for the Chicago World's Fair has been characterized throughout by bickering and hostilities. The women official set the example and the men have promptly followed. It begins to look as if the proper organization of the great affair had been entirely subordinated to an immense game of grab, in which the Chicago men intend that no outsider shall play any part.

The taxpayers of the Turlock irrigation district in Stanislaus county, who have been putting up their money to test the constitutionality of the Wright law and to educate the money lenders of San Francisco up to a realization of the value of the bonds to be issued by the districts, are beginning to see the light. Their bonds have been sold to capitalists in San Francisco and New York and a contract has been let to build the dam, which is to divert the water from the Tuolumne river onto the 175,000 acres of dry land around Turlock.

The announcement that Russia has signified her intention to repay a large sum of money borrowed from England many years ago, when Napoleon was making it warm for the Muscovite, explains one of the primary reasons for the recent heavy accumulation of gold in that country. It also indicates a determination on the part of the Czar to free himself from the monetary obligations which have for such a lengthy period hampered his foreign policy. He will be independent to a greater extent when this loan is paid off, and England, the great creditor of the European powers, will have one ally less, bound to her by chains of a heavy indebtedness.—CALL.

The Department of Agriculture at Washington has issued a bulletin for this month upon the condition of the crops in this State. It states that fruit orchards will predominate hereafter and large grain farms will pass out of existence. The statement is accurate, inasmuch as an official investigation by our State Board of Trade has revealed the remarkable fact that the yield of one acre of fruit here is equal to the value of ten acres of wheat. The bulletin comments upon the diversity of products which will be harvested in plenty this year, and states that "new ideas are constantly developed, and the favorable climate will produce almost anything to perfection." The desire for new ideas in the cultivation of fruit by our horticulturists is fostered not only by the enormous profits which result from improved methods, but also from the intelligent advice given by the State commissions upon the basis of carefully prepared data. The bulletin surmises that an over production of raisins will result in the near future on account of the annual increase in the acreage of raisin vineyards. Authorities upon the subject in this State are now at loggerheads, but the fact is ever prominent that the cry of over production of other varieties of California fruit has been raised from time, and has been drowned in the clamor from the East for as much fruit of any and all kinds as could be produced in this State.

AT THE WINDOWS OF THE MORNING.

What joy to stand at break of day,
Watching the gathering glory
Of sunlight brightening all the way,
With bird note song and story;
When the Queen of Morn comes forth with pride,
Both heaven and earth adorning;
When the Hand of God throws open wide
All the Windows of the Morning.

When low in the eastern sky afar
Hangs a molten mirror olden;
Where breezes leap from star to star,
Through sun rays growing golden;
When scenes of darkness fade and flee
Away from the hours of dawning;
When the face of the God of Day we see
Through the Windows of the Morning.

When nature smiles and weeps in turn,
But not with tears of sadness;
When morning mists from a flowing urn
Pour life and joy and gladness;
When Sol in golden chariot rides
Forth proudly without scorning;
When in the heavens his glory bides
Near the Windows of the Morning.

Inspiring thought—that when our time
Of life on earth is ended
There's promise of a world sublime
Where earth and heaven are blended;
Where day and night will be once more
Joined in a new life dawning,
When, mirrored on a shining shore,
Ope the Windows of the Morning.
—Clark W. Bryan in Good Housekeeping.

LIKE A HUMAN BEING.

Poor Jack Semester had been dead a day. From going in to look at him, with his hands folded on his breast, after the plaintive manner of the dead, we sat down in the one other room of the cabin and began to talk of similar scenes and similar experiences. For my own part I felt bad, for I had set the blast which knocked poor Jack out, and, though I was not to blame any more than a babe, I wished some other hand than mine had been the innocent instrument of his undoing.

There were Whistling Bill, Harry Handsome, Major Tokay and myself. Each man told his pathetic story of some sad happening in the mines.

"Gentlemen," said the major, "the dead man in there was my friend. We all saw him pass over the river, and we all took his last message to his old mother back in the states. The man of us who gets there first delivers it. But talking of sad deaths, I hope I do not profane poor Jack's dumb clay when I assert that the saddest death I ever witnessed was that of a baboon."

"A baboon!" exclaimed everybody together.

"Yes," answered the major, "an African baboon."

Major Tokay was the oldest man among us. He was an Englishman of the right sort. He had been an officer in the British army. When our war broke out in 1861 he came across the water, joined a New York regiment, and fought his way up from the ranks to the grade and title by which we knew him. He had been all over the world several times, and was a generous and tender hearted man. He was as brave as any Englishman, and all English blood is brave.

"Sam Simpson and I went to Zanzibar in '69. We crossed over to Bogomoyo and struck out for the interior, with the intention of shooting big game. I promised Sam's sister, Tillie Simpson, that we would bring her home a lion's hide for a rug for her room. So we were after no less spoil than the king of beasts. Poor Sam was drowned in crossing one of those turbulent streams of which the Dark Continent is full. This happened a hundred weary miles from anywhere, in the interior, among the niggers. I buried Sam under a spreading palm, rolled the largest stone I could find onto his grave, and, fashioning a kind of chisel out of a heavy knife I carried, I carved a rude inscription upon it. Sometimes God listens to a sinner, so I did the best I could toward sending up a prayer for poor Sam's soul.

"Looking up I saw a native woman. She had a baby baboon in her hands. Will you believe it? There was something in the eye of that baboon that touched my heart. Now, don't think I'm a fool. He looked like Sam. The woman held him out to me, as if to say that I could have him if I wanted him. I stretched out my hands, and the little baby baboon sprang into them as if he wished to belong to me. The first thing he did was to put his hairy arms around my neck and lay his fuzzy head against my cheek. Gentlemen, I have been affected in my time, but never before nor since as I was then. The more I wept the tighter the creature clung.

"I got out of that country as soon as I could, taking the baboon with me. The lion whose hide I was to take back to Tillie Simpson is still wearing it, and rubbing off the hair among the undergrowth in the jungles, for I gave up lion hunting, and arrived at Bogomoyo after many days of wearing marching. Gentlemen, many of you have seen lonely times on these mountain sides, and you can imagine how I began to love that baboon, the only living thing around me except the snakes and wild beasts. When we slept he curled up against my breast, and in the morning he awakened me by his antics—a way of jumping up and down he had—and by tapping my cheeks with his little hands, as like a child's as any you ever saw. When I got back to Zanzibar with my baboon, but no Sam, a man I knew said to me:

"'What have you done with your mate?'

"The baboon was afraid of this man. He wound his little arms around my neck tight, and laid his hairy head against my cheek. For all I could do I couldn't keep the tears back, so I said:

"'This is all the mate I have. I shall call him Sam, after my dead friend, who is lying under a spreading palm 100 miles inland among the niggers.'

"The man laughed, as if I were degrading poor Sam by naming a baboon after him, but I had no such thought. I loved Sam, and the way this creature had come to me at his very grave, as if his spirit were in its little body and was trying to speak, made me think it was right. I think so yet, after a lapse of more than twenty years.

"As I neared England Sam, the baboon, clung to me closer still. A good many people on shipboard would have liked to pet him, but he wouldn't have it. He would come to nobody but me, and as the northern breezes began to strike him he clung closer than ever and shivered with the cold. I showed him to Tillie Simpson in her English home and told her all. But she didn't like the idea of my calling the baboon by her brother's name. That made no difference to me, for his memory was as closely connected with my little companion as his own whitey-brown fuzz.

"One day," the major's voice dropped a little. "I came home to my lodgings in the suburbs of London, and Sam lay in his little box. He did not jump up into my arms and lay his head against my face, as was his habit whenever he saw me. His eyes were bloodshot and he was hot all over. He was ill. The first thing I thought of was that he would soon be with poor Simpson in the other world. I never saw the treasure that I would not have given as free as water to have saved the life of that innocent and affectionate creature, baboon as he was. No father ever hoped against hope when he saw his baby slowly approaching the boundaries of another world more than I did then. Sam Simpson's spirit seemed to say, 'I am going to leave you, Toke'—the name he always called me by. I prayed over that dumb brute as I prayed at poor Sam's grave.

"The cold winds and fogs of London were too much for my baboon. If there was ever a case of pneumonia he had it. He would press his little hands against his breast and sides and look at me as if to say 'Such a pain here.' The fourth day, as I was kneeling by his box, he roused himself from the stupor in which he had lain for a day and a half, looked up at me, and tried to smile. As God is my witness, he tried to smile. Then he moved and drew his little form toward me. I did not stir. Then, if ever a baboon kissed a man's hand, he kissed mine. Then he laid over on his side and closed his eyes, looking upon my face to the last. He was dead.

"Gentlemen, that poor baboon died like a human being. I have seen many a one go over, before and since, on the battlefield, in the hospital, in the jungles of Africa—where not? There was no difference. He died as a tired child goes to sleep, kissing the white hand of its mamma. The tears rained down my face. I felt"—here there was a click in the major's voice—"as if I had lost a child of my own. Young fellows may smile if you like, but I wept like a woman."

But nobody smiled, or thought of it.

"I don't blame you myself, major," said Whistling Bill, sopping out his eyes with a towel.

"Nor I," added Harry Handsome and I together.

"Yes," said the major, "that poor dumb brute of a baboon died like a human being."—Paul Duane in Chicago Times.

Monday Better Than Saturday.

A change of school holiday from Saturday to Monday is discussed among teachers of some of the private schools in the city. It has been tried in a few instances by boarding schools out of the city. The experiment so far has proved encouraging, especially in the matter of scholarship. Pupils come better prepared with lessons Tuesday morning than they formerly did when Monday recitations followed a rest. The markings, at any rate, show better up to this time.

This is the theory upon which the change is advocated. Those who go home from boarding schools or seminaries to spend Sunday, leave Friday night and return Monday morning, often late for recitations and usually unprepared. Monday morning has thus never been satisfactory to teachers or pupils at such schools. Tardy returns Monday morning seem unavoidable, not only because trains are infrequent Sunday, but also because parents do not want their children to travel that day.

With the change proposed pupils can get home as easily after school Saturday as they can Friday. Their Sunday is undisturbed, and parents are disposed to start them back to school Monday afternoon. Tuesday's lessons can thus be prepared Monday evening. In a less degree the experiment has proved beneficial also to pupils who live at or near the school. Saturday study is out of the question when that day is a holiday, and Sunday study never did find favor with pupils or parents. The new order remedies all that.—New York Times.

Formality in the Corean Army.

In battle Corean generals are always accompanied by their servants. When he rides on horseback, a general has a servant on each side of his war horse to hold him in position, and a third stands at the horse's head to hold the animal during the fight, or to lead it to the advance or retreat.

These servants accompanied General Han to the gate of the king's audience hall. They left him there, and he walked alone across the yard, with his head bent and his sword hilt toward the ground. He walked softly up the steps at the left leading into the room in which his majesty the king of Corea stood, bent down on all fours and bumped his head before him as a sign of the reverence he felt for his king.

Then, rising, he stood, with his sword uplifted, at the right of the king, while my audience took place. At the close of it he backed out from the king's presence with bended head, and so continued till outside the gate, where he again sprang into greatness, and had a whole host of servants to do him homage.

This oriental formality runs through all ranks of the Corean army. It is the ruin of the service. Corea will never have good soldiers until the officers learn military tactics by the same hard knocks that our officers do, and until they put themselves more on a level with their troops, and work with them.—Frank G. Carpenter in Youth's Companion.

Animals and Earthquakes.

The effect of volcanic phenomena on the lower animals has often been the subject of discussion. The records of most great eathquakes refer to the consternation of dogs, horses, cattle and other domestic animals. Fish and other aquatic creatures are also much disturbed at such times. In the London earthquake of 1749 thousands of fish in the canal showed evident signs of confusion and fright. During the Tokio earthquake of 1880 cats inside of houses ran about trying to escape; foxes barked and horses tried to tear down the stable which confined them. There can, therefore, be no doubt that animals know that something unusual and terrifying is taking place.

More interesting than these are the observations showing that nearly all classes of animals are agitated just before an earthquake takes place. Horses and ponies have been known to prance around in their stalls in an uneasy manner, pheasants to scream and frogs to cease croaking suddenly just before a shock, as if aware of its coming. The Japanese say that moles show their fear at such times by leaving their burrows before the shock takes place, the presence of four or five of the little creatures on the surface in a garden being sufficient to cause a panic.—St. Louis Republic.

MISCELLANEOUS.

IRWINS' SALOON

Cor Edwards and Market Streets,

Independence . Cal.

THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt and furnished in a style second to none on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.

THE BAR

Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.

JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

PALACE SALOON

LONE PINE, CAL.

—THE FINEST—

WINES,

BEER,

LIQUORS,

& CIGARS

—o—

☞ This Saloon is conducted in a strictly first-class manner, and every attention tendered my patrons. FRED. BURCKHARDT, Lessee.
jl2-tf

INDEPENDENCE

SHAVING SALOON.

Shaving, Hair-Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.

WM. H. HUFF, Prop'r

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, - Cal.

New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates.

☞ Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.

O. F. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

FORBES & TOBEY,

HAWTHORNE, NEV.,

—DEALERS IN—

LUMBER

OF ALL KINDS

DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS.
LATH.
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.

Matched and Dressed
Flooring.
sep 11-tf

BELL'S Flouring Mills,

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.

Having added Patent Rolls and other Improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out a flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

A. N. BELL.
Independence, Cal.

For Sale!

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE

Eastside Canal.

There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,

C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and
Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-Officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
☞ Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty. ☜
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
Bishop Creek, Cal.,
Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

J. W. P. LAIRD. P. H. MACK
MACK & LAIRD.
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

F. E. DENSMORE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "Independent" Building, Independence, Inyo county, Cal.

A. R. CONKLIN,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State of California and Nevada.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M. D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)
Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
☞ NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED. ☜
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.
DENTISTS.
OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSFIELD, opposite the Southern Hotel.
Prompt and careful treatment given and the easiest possible pain inflicted. Address
WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

FOR SALE CHEAP.
Two span first class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.
Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:
Saturday ..... January 24th
" ..... February 21st
" ..... March 28th
" ..... April 18th
" ..... May 23rd
" ..... June 20th
" ..... July 18th
" ..... August 15th
" ..... September 12th
" ..... October 17th
" ..... November 14th
" ..... December 12th
JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

TO ADVERTISERS
A list of 1000 newspapers divided into STATES AND SECTIONS will be sent on application—FREE.
To those who want their advertising to pay, we can offer no better medium for thorough and effective work than the various sections of our Select Local List. GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., Newspaper Advertising Bureau, 10 Spruce Street, New York.

OFFICIAL.

NOTICE OF

Sheriff's Sale,

ON FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES.

E. H. EDWARDS, Plaintiff,
vs.
WM. F. MATLOCK, Administrator of the Estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, Defendant.

Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure and Sale.

UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF AN ORDER of sale, up under decree of foreclosure and sale, issued out of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on the 12th day of June, 1891, in an action wherein E. H. Edwards was Plaintiff and Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, was Defendant, and in which said last above mentioned action, E. H. Edwards, the above named Plaintiff obtained a judgment and decree of foreclosure against Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, Defendant on the 15th day of November, 1890, for the sums of $18 0.02 and $11.143 gold coin of the United States, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $59 1.51 gold coin as aforesaid, which said decree was on the 15th day of November, 1890, recorded in Judgment Book 1 of said Court at page 284 (Wm. F. Matlock, administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, the above named Defendant, was by an order of said Superior Court duly made and entered on the 14th day of May, 1891 substituted as Defendant in said action in the place and stead of said Thomas Parker, now deceased.) I am commanded to sell, to satisfy said judgment and decree for the said sum of $1810.02, all those certain lots, pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Beginning at a point twenty chains East of the North-west Section corner of Section No. twenty-eight, in Township No. fifteen South of Range No. thirty six, East, Mt. Diablo Base and Meridian, (magnetic variation fifteen degrees and fifteen minutes East) thence South thirteen and ninety one-hundredths chains to North-west corner of Josiah G. Dodge's land; thence North, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, twenty-two and thirty-one one-hundredths chains to Brewery street in the town of Lone Pine; thence North, twenty one degrees and forty minutes West, twenty-one one-hundredths chains; thence South, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes West, eight and one one-hundredths chains; thence North eight and forty eight one-hundredths chains to North line of Section No. twenty-eight; thence West thirteen and twenty-nine one-hundredths chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing fifteen and one half acres.

Also a lot of land lying East of the last described tract and to the Wm. L. Moore tract of land North-west of the town of Lone Pine beginning at the North east corner of said last described tract, forty three and twenty-nine one hundredths chains East of the North-west corner of Section twenty-eight in Township Fifteen South of Range Thirty-six East, of Mount Diablo Meridian, at an iron post set in the ground; thence, South eight and forty-eight one-hundredth chains to the one from the last described tract of land to the town of Lone Pine; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, eight and seventy one one-hundredths chains to the East side of Brewery street in said town; thence, South twenty one degrees and forty minutes East, fifty one-hundredths chains to the North line of Corral street in said town; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, seven and eighty-seven one-hundredths chains to the West line of Main street in said town; thence, North twenty one degrees and forty minutes West, three and ninety one one-hundredths chains to Section line of said Section twenty-eight; thence, West fifteen chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing eight and seventy-five one hundredths acres.

Also lots Nos. two, three, and the North half of lot six in block No. 13, upon which is a house; and the fractional part of lots Nos. six, seven and eight in block No. 1 in the town of Lone Pine, in said County and State, as the same are known and designated on the plat of said town now on file in the Recorder's office of said County.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in anywise appertaining.

I am also commanded to sell to satisfy said judgment and decree for the sum of $115.49, all that certain lot, piece or parcel of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

The East half of the South-west quarter and the West half of the South-east quarter of Section No. twenty-one in Township No. fifteen South of Range No. thirty six, East, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in anywise appertaining.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on Monday the 6th day of July, 1891, at 12 o'clock M. of that day, in front of the Court House in the County of Inyo, I will, in obedience to said order of sale and decree of foreclosure and sale, sell separately the above described property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy said Plaintiff's judgment, with interest and costs etc., to the highest and best bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States.

Dated this 12th day of June, 1891.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff of Inyo County.
By D. HOLLAND,
Under-Sheriff.

Mack & Laird, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.
Bee Keeper.
Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.
Independence, Inyo Co. Cal

J. W. Murphy.
BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work.
Wagons and Carriages Repaired.
HORSESHOEING, $2 00 for CASH
Shop on Edwards St., opposite the Court House, Independence.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
☞ All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine.
FRED BURKHARDT

OFFICIAL.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

INYO MARBLE COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, San Francisco, California. Location of works, Magnol, Nevada.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AT A meeting of the Board of Directors, held the 26th day of May 1891, an assessment (No. 13) of Ten Cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, No. 132 California street, San Francisco, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 10th day of July 1891, will be delinquent, and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on FRIDAY, the 28th day of July, 1891, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

G. W. LUCE, Secretary.

Office, 135 California St., San Francisco, California.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Independence, California. Location of canal, near Independence, Inyo county.

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of a Board of Directors, held on the 30th day of May, 1891, an assessment (No. One) of Fifty (50) cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary at the office of the company, Independence, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 3d day of July, 1891, will be delinquent, and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Saturday, the 25th day of July, 1891 to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

By order of the Board of Directors.

P. H. MACK, Secretary.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JOHN LUCAS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased, to the Creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice to the said Administrator, at his office in the town of Lone Pine, Inyo county, Cal., the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in said Inyo county, State of California. E. H. EDWARDS,

Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased.

Dated May 5th, 1891.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

IDA C. DECKER, Plaintiff, vs. STEPHEN DECKER, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Stephen Decker, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant; that plaintiff be allowed and decreed to resume her former name of Ida C. Adams, and for general relief, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness my hand and the seal of said Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 17th day of June, A. D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
MACK & LAIRD, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

NOTICE OF SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court made for the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 6th day of June, 1891, in the matter of the Estate of John Lucas, deceased, the undersigned will sell at private sale to the highest bidder for cash, gold coin of the United States, on Saturday, the 27th day of June, 1891, at 2 o'clock P. M., at the late residence of said deceased, near the town of Lone Pine, County of Inyo, State of California, the following personal property, to wit:

117 Head of Stock Cattle.
18 Head of Horses.

Bids or offers in writing will be received at the office of the undersigned, in the said town of Lone Pine, up to and including the 26th day of June, 1891.

E. H. EDWARDS,
Administrator of the Estate of John Lucas, deceased.

Dated June 12th, 1891.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer without cost of repairs than any other machine. Has no ink or ribbon to bother the user. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. $1,000 to any operator who can equal work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Liberal inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, etc., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO.

BIG PINE!

BIG PINE

New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates.

☞ Splendid hunting and fishing district, it is a veritable paradise for pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the comfort of guests.

Thos. William[illegible]
Prop.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JUNE 26..... 1891.

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 1 03¼
Lead, 4 45
Copper, 13 70
Tin, 20 40
Sugar, .05⅛
Coffee, 20 @ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 13 @ 19.

Religious Services

Rev. H. J. Warner will preach at Lone Pine on Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m.; at Georges Creek, 2:30 p. m.; at Independence, 7:30 p. m.

Children's day exercises, July 5th.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

MONDAY, June 22, 1891.

Estate of Frank Paders, deceased—Filed petition of W. F. Mathack for Letters of Administration.

Ah Sing vs. O. H. Hill—Action for debt. Complaint filed and summons issued.

WEDNESDAY, June 24, 1891.

Joseph Fernbach vs. Anna M. Fernbach, action for divorce—Clerk's entry of default. Issued and filed subpœna.

THURSDAY, June 25, 1891.

Fernbach vs. Fernbach—Filed decree of divorce.

Estate of John R. Hughes, deceased—Filed return and account of sales of real estate.

Estate of Hiram Ayres, deceased—Filed petition. Order directing decree. Decree of distribution.

See the time table for the special to be run on the Fourth.

The Meyer Brothers have moved their cattle to Monache for the summer.

Haying is in full blast in the Valley and a heavy crop is being harvested.

Bakersfield is to have a first-class Fourth of July celebration, the first in several years past.

Geronimo, the notorious bandit and murderer, was recently killed by a posse in Arizona.

C. A. Walter will commence baling hay in a day or two for shipment to the Keeler market.

Buggies, wagons, carts, sulkies and harness to trade for hay and grain. Inquire at this office.

A. N. Bell is overhauling and repairing his Oak Creek flouring mills preparatory to a run on the new crop.

Meetings of the Lone Pine Canal Company and the Stevens Ditch Company will be held at Independence to-morrow.

Silver is again on the rise, owing, it is claimed, to the recent large deportations of gold. The latest quotation is 1 03¼.

Miss Emma Yandell has returned from Tennessee, where she has been visiting with relatives and friends for the past year.

Yesterday in the Superior Court Joseph Fernbach was granted a divorce from Anna M. Fernbach on the grounds of willful desertion.

Judge Gill has received from below a perambulator, or invalid's chair, which greatly facilitates his moving from place to place.

Neil McLain came in from Darwin last Sunday, returning next day. His team is running constantly, hauling ore from the Modock mines.

Mrs. F. Fitzgerald is visiting at Independence. She has been in poor health for some time past and is receiving medical attendance.

E. J. Reynolds came up from Keeler yesterday and experienced the pleasure of riding the I. O. O. F. goat. He returns to Keeler to-day.

The race horse High Tariff dropped dead on the track in the American Derby at Chicago last week. Superstitious people might consider it an omen.

Administrator Mathack and P. W. Forbes Esq. returned from Darwin last Sunday where they had been on business relating to the estates of various decedents in that country.

See the notice of sale of personal property to take place at Lone Pine to-morrow. There is a fine band of stock cattle and a lot of well bred young horses to be disposed of.

There is more water coming down from the mountains in the various creeks than has ever been known before at this time of year. The Sierras are still filled with snow which will ensure several good water seasons.

A telegram from Keeler to Virginia last Saturday states that a severe shock of earthquake had been felt in the latter place. The quake was preceded by a rumbling sound and the entire affair had an old time savor about it.

In this issue will be found the card of F. E. Densmore Esq., Attorney-at-Law. Frank is well known throughout the Valley and needs no introduction. He will practice in all the Courts of California and in the General Land Office.

Dr. Wasson has removed his dental office from the Norman House to the Tibbett's residence, opposite the Land Office, where he may be seen for the present. Those needing dentistry should lose no time in calling, or they will miss the opportunity.

One hundred and twenty carloads of potatoes were shipped from Los Angeles last Saturday. With a broad-gauge road to Mojave Owens Valley could compete successfully in Eastern markets for the trade. The sum of $24,000, the amount received for one day's shipment from Los Angeles, would be a big item in the annual returns of this valley.

W. R. Johnson has received an addition to his cabinet of relics in the form of an adtiquated specimen of defunct vulpes. It arrived in a sad state of disrepair and at present finds a resting place on the back fence. It is not to be supposed for a moment that the donor considered Bill "foxy" and was sending a model for a heraldic device.

A BRIGHT OUTLOOK.

There is not upon the Pacific Coast any country that possesses the great natural advantages of Owens Valley. Here is a vast acreage of land which cannot be excelled for producing general crops and is especially adapted to fruit growing. There is an abundance of water which, with a proper system of storage, would irrigate every acre. The climate as a whole cannot be excelled. There are no cyclones or violent storms; the winters are comparatively mild, both horses and cattle thriving upon pasturage, without hay, from years end to years end; the heat of summer is not excessive, a case of sunstroke being never heard of; the dry atmosphere permits labor to be performed on the hottest day without sweltering. The greatest drawback is remoteness from lines of travel. A line of railway through here from the East to Los Angeles would bring about an era of prosperity for the Valley that would be hard to over estimate. Our business connections are now with San Francisco, a city that is dead to its own advantages, and rapidly losing its great prestige as the first city on the Coast and only business center. The Oregon and Washington cities have broken away from her entirely and Los Angeles is rapidly doing the same. The latter city is filled with wide-awake business men, who are alert to reap the advantage of every passing event. It is a well known fact that the Union Pacific people are desirous of establishing a terminal point on the Pacific sea-board and are now extending west through Utah to Pioche, Nevada. The project has been under discussion for some time past to extend through Beckwith's Pass into California, but San Francisco holds out no sufficient inducements. Los Angeles is well aware of the vast benefits that would accrue from making that city the business terminus and it is quite likely that in the near future the road will be built across Nevada from Pioche, through Owens Valley and on to Los Angeles. What that city most desire is cheap coal for manufacturing purposes, which such a road would supply in unlimited quantities from the coal fields of Utah. With such a road built the numbers of people who visit Los Angeles every year could in one day's ride reach the grandest scenery on the continent, and the "Alps of America" would every year be thronged with visitors. This Valley would be on a through line of travel and would rapidly fill with settlers who can find in Los Angeles a ready market for all they could produce. This project is one of the strong probabilities of the future and we look forward hopefully toward it.

Rates of Fare and Time Table

A Special Train has been chartered and the following will be the rates for return trip tickets:

Hawthorne	$7 50
Candelaria, Belleville	6 50
Soda Springs and Rhodes	6 50
Benton	4 00
Bishop	2 50
Alvord	1 50
Lone Pine	1 00
Keeler	2 00

Following is the time table for the Fourth of July special.

Leaves	Hawthorne	6:30 a. m.	July 31.
	Luning	7:30 a. m.
	Soda	8:00 a. m.
	Rhodes	8:10 a. m.
	Belleville	8:40 a. m.
	Candelaria	9:15 a. m.
	Benton	11:50 a. m.
	Bishop	1:50 p. m.
	Alvord	2:30 p. m.
Arrives	Independence	3:50 p. m.
Leaves	Keeler	5:10 p. m.
	Lone Pine	5:40 p. m.
Arrives	Independence	6:20 p. m.
Leaves	Independence	7:45 a. m.	July 5th.
Arrives	Lone Pine	8:25 a. m.
	Keeler	8:55 a. m.
Leaves	Independence	10:10 a. m.
Arrives	Alvord	11:30 a. m.
	Bishop	12:35 p. m.
	Benton	2:15 p. m.
	Candelaria	5:00 p. m.
	Belleville	5:30 p. m.
	Rhodes	6:00 p. m.
	Soda	6:10 p. m.
	Luning	6:40 p. m.
	Hawthorne	7:40 p. m.

Committee At Work.

The Fourth of July committee of the N. S. G. W. is busily engaged in perfecting the programme and arranging details. According to all accounts received there will be a very large attendance from Hawthorne, Belleville, Candelaria, Benton and all points in Owens Valley. Arrangements are being made to secure every possible accommodation and comfort for visitors. A printed programme of sports will be circulated next week and street amusements for the children will be amply provided for. The Candelaria baseball nine have written to arrange terms for a match game and a definite conclusion is expected to be arrived at by mail to-day.

Notable Visitors.

Under the above caption the Index says: "Messrs. H. M. Yerington, R. J. Laws, John Forbes and Judge Belknap, all of Nevada, visited Independence for a few hours on Saturday last, on their return northward from a trip to Keeler. The gentlemen are all largely interested in various Inyo county enterprises, and they speak hopefully of an improved condition of affairs in this section in the near future." The gentlemen named must all be quite aware of the fact that the only hope of future prosperity for this Valley lies in a direct railway communication with Mojave.

Dr. J. B. Wasson delivered an interesting lecture at the M. E. Church last Monday evening on his travels. Leaving Memphis, Tennessee, he described graphically a journey to New York and across the Atlantic to and through Ireland, across Europe stopping at Paris, Venice and Greece, through the Holy Land and returning to Rome. The Doctor gave a vivid description of many interesting scenes and places and was listened to attentively. At the conclusion of the lecture a collection was taken up for the new church organ fund.

The Reno Gazette says: "So many soldiers are now guarding Yosemite Park and the Sequoia reservation that poor people can no longer visit those resorts. Visitors are not allowed to camp out and build fires to do their own cooking, and if they cannot afford to patronize a high priced hotel they can leave. Uncle Sam is getting very strict with his impecunious children.

A lot of beautiful souvenir programmes for the Fourth of July ball have been received and can be seen at Rhine's store. They are gotten up in fine style and will be a handsome memento of the occasion. The grand march will commence at 8 o'clock sharp and each lady in the march will be presented with a souvenir. This will be the only sure way of obtaining one.

Mr. Carl Richel has returned to Los Angeles from a visit through Owens Valley. He is favorably impressed with the the country and he and his son have invested in land here. He regards it as highly probable that we will have direct rail communication with Los Angeles in the near future.

HEIR TO $500,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A dispatch was received yesterday from Baltimore announcing that George F. Beiser of Brooklyn had become heir to a vast estate there valued at $500,000. The property came through relatives who emigrated from France in the days of the Huguenots. Mr. Beiser is an accountant in a Fulton street clothing house. Bruce's Law and Inquiry Agency, of Chicago, Ill., prosecuted his claim.—Louisville Courier Journal, Nov. 27

We are Mr. Beiser's lawyers and by him seeing our advertisement, became the agent of his good fortune. If your ancestors came from the old country write to us, and enclose $1 for our list of heirs. There are more than half a billion dollars in Great Britain and Germany, unclaimed, which rightly belong to people in the United States.

BRUCE'S LAW AND INQUIRY OFFICE,
164 and 166 Randolph St.
Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The partnership heretofore existing between W. S. Enos and O. I. Mairs is dissolved by mutual consent.

Witness our hands June 15th, 1891.

W. S. ENOS.
O. I. MAIRS.

BLACKSMITHING,

Horseshoeing, General Iron

—AND—

WAGON WORK.

PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP

Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

W. F. MATLACK.....PROPRIETOR.

Horseshoeing ..... $2 00 for Cash

For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

BOOTS AND SHOES

MADE AND REPAIRED.

THE BEST MATERIAL.

FIRST-CLASS WORK.

Repairs done Promptly.

Prices Reasonable.

A. J. DAVIS,
nov 30-tf Independence.

NOTICE

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.

Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of Caltfornia:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

INDEPENDENCE

MEAT MARKET,

J. C. ROEPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

A well appointed shop, with refrigerator, ensuring the purity of meat, and every effort made to give satisfaction to patrons.
j19-tf

P. W. FORBES. P. H. MACK.

MACK & FORBES.

Real Estate Agents,

Address, P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal. P. W. FORBES, Bishop, Cal.

1776 Breathes there a man with soul so dead, 1891
1776 Who never to himself hath said,
1776 "This is my own, my native land!" 1891

INDEPENDENCE GLORIOUS TRIBUTE.

—TO OUR—

NATAL DAY.

Under the management of

POLETA PARLOR, N. D. C. W.
INYO PARLOR NO 146, N. S. G. W.
MT. WHITNEY PARLOR NO. 136, N. S. G. W

A CORDIAL INVITATION EXTEDNED TO ALL

Commencing with a

GRAND BALL

Friday Evening, July 3d. Grand March at 8 Sharp.

Excellent music and splendid floor. Supper in the Annex, with seating capacity for all.

BERTRAND RHINE, FLOOR DIRECTOR.

FLOOR COMMITTE:

Milt. Clark, S. A. Chapman, R. Hessian,
F. E. Denrmore, J. D. Lewis, J. E. Shepherd
Robt. Carrasco, Ben Lasky, Henry Rhine

SATURDAY, JULY FOURTH.

Grand salute . . . . . At sunrise.

Parade and Literary Exercises.

Parade forms at Reddy place. Line of march direct to Pavilion.

GEORGE H. LEWIS, GRAND MARSHALL.

MISS MARGIE BELL, GODDESS OF LIBERTY.

PROGRAMME:

Prayer, Rev. H. J. Winsor. Oration, F. E. Densmore
Red, White & Blue, Choir. Unfurl the Glorious Banner, Miss M Mulholland.
Remarks, by C. W. Craig, President of the Day. Declaration of Independence, America, Choir.
Music, by the Band.
Recitation, Miss Brockman
Hail Columbia, by Band. Benediction, Chaplain.
Recitation, Miss L. Clark.

FUN FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS,
125 YARD FOOT RACE,
BASE BALL TOURNAMENT

MISCELLANEOUS.

THOMAS & HILL,

—DEALERS IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL,

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $25 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. Can work in spare time, or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDIS

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and prices before purchasing elsewhere.

E. CHENOT.

Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
n476tf

Lake View Hotel

Keeler, Cal.

John Barnes, Prop'r.

First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—

Wines,
Liquors,
& Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

BIG POP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE

BISHOP.

Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St

In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable

S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK

BREWERY,

L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.

All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.

Customers supplied on all points

Of the C. & C. Railroad.

Send orders to

L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, patrons can be assured of finding there the best of Buggy Teams, Saddle Horses, and

Livery Accommodations

in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor

A NEW DEAL!

LONE PINE

Livery, Feed & Sale Stable.

A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.

OPPOSITE SEWART HOUSE.

Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,

—DEALER IN—

General Merchandise,

LONE PINE,

INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.

Dealer in GENERAL MERCHANDISE, GROCERIES MINERS Supplies

PROVISIONS,

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages, in any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, GEORGE STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R. R

TAKING EFFECT

Sunday, November 16,

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1	To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Mound House	11:30 p. m.	5.50 p. m
Dayton	12:00 p. m.	5:10 p. m.
Wabuska	2:05 p. m.	2 50 p. m
Hawthorne	5 50 p. m.	11:10 a. m.
Luning	7:05 p. m.	9:55 a. m.
Soda Springs	8:05 p. m.	9:15 a. m
Belleville	9:15 p. m.	7:55a. m.
Candelaria	Ar. 10.00 p. m.	Lv. 7:20 a. m.
	No. 3.	No. 4.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Belleville	8 20 a. m.	5:25 p m.
Benton	11:50 a. m.	1:35 a.m.
Bisnop Creek	2:00p, m.	11:00 a. m
Alvord	2.45 p. m.	10:00 a. m
Independence	4:20 p. m.	8:30 a. m
Lone Pine	5:10 p. m.	7:40 a. m
Keeler	Ar. 5:55 p. m.	Lv. 7.00 a. m

Train 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (3 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salsbury & Co's. tri-weekly stages (leavin Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver P Montezuma Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.

D A BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles

OF

Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOLF

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries a canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE

Blacksmith Shop.

R. C. Spear, Prop'r

—ALL WORK ON—

MINING TOOLS,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS
& FREIGHTING OUTFITS

—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—

HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING

All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON

KEELER, CAL.

In Lake View Hotel

BEER, WINES.

LIQUORS and CIGARS

All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.

JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.

J. C. MILLER, Lessee.

—THE BAR—

Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of

WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS

The most careful attention given to the the amusement and comfort of patrons.

A FINE BILLIARD TABLE!

Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon. sept-23 tf

Those who believe that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will cure them are more liable to get well than those who don't.

If you happen to be one of those who don't believe, there's a matter of $500 to help your faith. It's for you if the makers of Dr. Sage's remedy can't cure you, no matter how bad or of how long standing your catarrh in the head may be.

The makers are the World's Dispensary Medical Association of Buffalo, N.Y. They're known to every newspaper publisher and every druggist in the land, and you can easily ascertain that their word's as good as their bond.

Begin right. The first stage is to purify the system. You don't want to build on a wrong foundation, when you're building for health. And don't shock the stomach with harsh treatment. Use the milder means.

You wind your watch once a day. Your liver and bowels should act as regularly. If they do not, use a key.

The key is—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One a dose.

To scatter praise or blame without regard to justice is to destroy the distinction of good and evil.

Is it probable that what a million women say after daily trial is a mistake? They say they know by test that Dobbins' Electric is most economical, purest and best. They have had 24 years to try it. You give it one trial.

We can give advice, but we cannot give conduct.

CONSUMPTION SURELY CURED.

To THE EDITOR—Please inform your readers that I have a positive remedy for the above named disease. By its timely use thousands of hopeless cases have been permanently cured. I shall be glad to send two bottles of my remedy free to any of your readers who have consumption if they will send me their express and post-office address. Respectfully,

T. A. SLOCUM M. C., 181 Pearl St., New York.

DR. AUGUST KŒNIG'S
HAMBURG BREAST TEA
(Hamburger Brusttheе)
FOR COUGHS AND COLDS
AND THE
Relief of Consumptive Patients.
☞ THE GENUINE IS NEVER SOLD BY WEIGHT.
At Druggists and Dealers, or sent by mail on receipt of 25 cts. (5 packages $1.00) in stamps.
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., Baltimore, Md.

ST. JACOBS OIL
TRADE MARK
THE GREAT REMEDY FOR PAIN

"German Syrup"

A Throat and Lung Specialty.

Those who have not used Boschee's German Syrup for some severe and chronic trouble of the Throat and Lungs can hardly appreciate what a truly wonderful medicine it is. The delicious sensations of healing, easing, clearing, strength-gathering and recovering are unknown joys. For German Syrup we do not ask easy cases. Sugar and water may smooth a throat or stop a tickling—for a while. This is as far as the ordinary cough medicine goes. Boschee's German Syrup is a discovery, a great Throat and Lung Specialty. Where for years there have been sensitiveness, pain, coughing, spitting, hemorrhage, voice failure, weakness, slipping down hill, where doctors and medicine and advice have been swallowed and followed to the gulf of despair, where there is the sickening conviction that all is over and the end is inevitable, there we place German Syrup. It cures. You are a live man yet if you take it. 6s become listless, fretful, without energy, thin and weak. But you can fortify them and build them up, by the use of

Some Children Growing Too Fast

SCOTT'S EMULSION

OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND HYPOPHOSPHITES
Of Lime and Soda.

They will take it readily, for it is almost as palatable as milk. And it should be remembered that AS A PREVENTIVE OR CURE OF COUGHS OR COLDS, IN BOTH THE OLD AND YOUNG, IT IS UNEQUALLED. Avoid substitutions offered.

DON'T BE A WALL-FLOWER If you can't dance, we can help you along. Complete self-instruction. Send for circular. JERRIS M'F'G & PUB'G CO., 884 Broadway, New York City.

THE SPLENDID SPUR.

Being Memoirs of the Adventures of Mr. John Marvel, a Servant of His late Majesty King Charles I, in the years 1642-3: written by himself.

EDITED IN MODERN ENGLISH BY "Q."

But an hour after she was laughing again, and had learned to cock the poor country lad's cap rakishly over one eye; and by evening was walking with a swagger and longing (I know) to meet with folks. For, to spare her the sight of the ruined cottage, I had taken her round through the fields and by every by path that seemed to lead westward. 'Twas safer to journey thus; and all the way she practiced a man's carriage and airs, and how to wink and whistle and swing a stick. And once, when she left one of her shoes in a wet ditch, she said "Damn!" as natural as life; and then—

We jumped over a hedge, plump into an outpost of rebels, as they sat munching their supper.

They were six in all, and must have been sitting like mice, for all I know of it is this: I had climbed the hedge first and was helping Delia over, when out of the ground, as it seemed, a voice shrieked: "Run—run!—the king's men are on us!" and then, my foot slipping, down I went on to the shoulders of a thick set man, and well nigh broke his neck as he turned to look up at me.

At first, the whole six were for running, I believe. But seeing only a lad stretched on his face, and a second on the hedge, they thought better of it. Before I could scramble up, one pair of hands was screwed about my neck, another at my heels, and in a trice there we were pinioned.

"Search the malignant!" cried one. "Question him!" called out another; and forthwith began a long interrogatory concerning the movements of his majesty's troops, from which, indeed, I learned much concerning the late encounter, but, of course, could answer nought. 'Twas only natural they should interpret this silence for obstinacy.

"March 'em off to Capt. Stubbs!"

"Halloa!" shouted a pock marked trooper that had his hand thrust in on my breast; "bring the lantern close here. What's this?"

'Twas, alas! the king's letter; and I bit my lip while they clustered round, turning the lantern's yellow glare upon the superscription.

We were marched down the road for a mile or more, till we heard a loud bawling, as of a man in much bodily pain, and soon came to a small village, where, under a tavern lamp, by the door, was a man perched up on a tub, and shouting forth portions of the Scripture to some twenty or more green coats assembled round. Our conductor pushed past these, and entered the tavern. At a door to the left in the passage he halted, and, knocking once, thrust us inside.

The room was bare and lit very dimly by two tallow candles, set in bottles. Between these, on a deal table, lay a map outspread, and over it a man was bending, who looked up sharply at our entrance.

He was thin, with a blue nose, and wore a green uniform like the rest; only his carriage proved him a man of authority.

This Capt. Stubbs listened, you may be sure, with a brightening eye to the sergeant's story; and at the close fixed an inquisitive gaze on the pair of us, turning the king's letter over and over in his hands.

"How came this in your possession?" he asked, at length.

"That," said I, "I must decline to tell."

He hesitated a moment; then, resealing himself, broke the seal, spread the letter upon the map, and read it slowly through. For the first time I began heartily to hope that the paper contained nothing of moment. But the man's face was no index of this. He read it through twice, folded it away in his breast and turned to the sergeant.

"To-morrow at 6 in the morning we continue our march. Meanwhile keep these fellows secure. I look to you for this."

The sergeant saluted and we were led out. That night we passed in handcuffs, huddled with fifty soldiers in a hay loft of the inn and hearkening to their curious talk, that was half composed of Holy Writ and half of gibes at our expense. They were beaten men, and, like all such, found comfort in deriding the greater misfortunes of others.

Before daylight the bugles began to sound, and we were led down to the green before the tavern door, where already were close upon five hundred gathered, that had been billeted about the village and were now forming in order of march—a soiled, battered crew, with torn ensigns and little heart in their movements. The sky began a cold drizzle as we set out, and through this saddening weather we trudged all day, Delia and I being kept well apart, she with the vanguard and I in the rear, seeing only the winding column, the dejected heads bobbing in front as they bent to the slanting rain, the cottagers that came out to stare as we passed; and hearing but the hoarse words of command, the low mutterings of the men, and always the monotonous tramp, tramp, through the slush and mire of the roads.

'Tis like a bad dream to me, and I will not dwell on it. That night we passed at Chippenham, a small market town, and on the morrow went tramping again through worse weather, but always amid the same sights and sounds.

Daylight was failing when the towers of Bristol grew clear out of the leaden mist in front, and by 5 o'clock we halted outside the walls and beside the ditch of the castle, waiting for the drawbridge to be let down. Already a great crowd had gathered about us, of those who had come out to learn the news of the defeat, which, the day before, some fugitives had carried to Bristol. To their questions, as to all else, I listened like a man in a trance, and recalled this only—that first I was shivering out in the rain and soon after was standing beside Delia, under guard of a dozen soldiers, and shaking with cold, beneath a gateway that led between the two wards of the castle. And there, for an hour at least, we kicked our heels, until from the inner ward Capt. Stubbs came striding and commanded us to follow.

Across the court we went in the rain, through a vaulted passage, and, passing a screen of carved oak, found ourselves suddenly in a great hall, near forty yards long (as I reckon it), and raftered with oak. At the far end, around a great marble table, were some ten or more gentlemen seated, who all with one accord turned their eyes upon us as the captain brought us forward.

The table before them was littered with maps, warrants and papers, and some of the gentlemen had pens in their hands. But the one on whom my eyes fastened was a tall, fair soldier that sat in the center, and held his majesty's letter, open, in his hand; who rose and bowed to me as I came near.

"Sir," he said, "the fortune of war having given you into our hands, you will not refuse, I hope, to answer our questions."

"Sir I have nought to tell," answered I, bowing in return.

With a delicate white hand he waved my words aside. He had a handsome, irresolute mouth, and was, I could tell, of very different degree from the merchants and lawyers beside him.

"You act under orders from the—the"— "Anti-Christ," put in a snappish little fellow on his right.

"I do nothing of the sort," said I.

"Well, then, sir, from King Charles."

"I do not."

"Tush!" exclaimed the snappish man, and then, straightening himself up, "That boy with you—that fellow disguised as a countryman—look at his boots!—he's a Papist spy!"

"There, sir, you are wrong!"

"I saw him—I'll be sworn to his face—I saw him, a year back, at Douai, helping at the mass! I never forget faces."

"Why, what nonsense!" cried I, and burst out laughing.

"Don't mock at me, sir!" he thundered, bringing down his fist on the table. "I tell you the boy is a Papist!" He pointed furiously at Delia, who, now laughing also, answered him very demurely:

"Indeed, sir"—

"I saw you, I say."

"You are bold to make so certain of a Papist"—

"I saw you!"

—"That cannot even tell maid from man!"

"What is meant by that?" asks the tall soldier, opening his eyes.

"Why, simply this, sir: I am no boy at all, but a girl!"

There was a minute during which the little man went purple in the face, and the rest stared at Delia in blank astonishment.

"Oh, Jack," she whispered in my ear, "I am so very, very sorry; but I cannot wear these hateful clothes much longer."

She faced the company with a rosy blush.

"What say you to this?" asked Col. Essex—for 'twas he—turning round on the little man.

"Say? What do I say? That the fellow is a Papist, too. I knew it from the first, and this proves it!"

CHAPTER IX.

I BREAK OUT OF PRISON.

You are now to be asked to pass over the next four weeks in as many minutes; as would I had done at the time! For I spent them in a bitter cold cell in the main tower of Bristol keep, with a chair and a pallet of straw for all my furniture, and nothing to stay my fast but the bread and water that the jailer—a sour man, if ever there were one—brought me twice a day.

One fine, frosty morning, then, when I had lain in this distress just four weeks, the door of my cell opened, and there appeared a young woman, not uncomely, bringing in my bread and water. She was the jailer's daughter and wore a heavy bunch of keys at her girdle.

"Oh, good morning," said I; for till now her father only had visited me, and this was a welcome change.

Instead of answering cheerfully, as I looked for, she gave a little nod of the head, rather sorrowful, and answered:

"Father's abed with the ague."

"Now you cannot expect me to be sorry."

"Nay," she said; and I caught her looking at me with something like compassion in her blue eyes, which moved me to cry out suddenly:

"I think you are woman enough to like a pair of lovers."

"Oh, ay; but where's t'other half of the pair?"

"You're right. The young gentlewoman that was brought hither with me, I know not if she loves me; but this I do know, I would give my hand to learn her whereabouts and how she fares."

"Better eat thy loaf," put in the girl, very suddenly, setting down the plate and pitcher.

'Twas odd, but I seemed to hear a sob in her voice. However, her back was towards me as I glanced up. And next moment she was gone, locking the iron door behind her.

I turned from my breakfast with a sigh, having for the moment tasted the hope to hear something of Delia. But in a while, feeling hungry, I picked up the loaf beside me and broke it in two.

To my amaze, out dropped something that jingled on the stone floor.

'Twas a small file; and, examining the loaf again, I found a clasp knife also, and a strip of paper, neatly folded, hidden in the bread.

DEARE JACK—Col. Essex, finding no good come of his interrogatories, hath set me at large; though I continue under his eye, to wit, with a dowager of his acquaintance, a Mistress Finch Wee dwell in a private house midway down St Thomas his street, in Redcliff; and she hath put a dismal dress upon me (Jack, 'tis hideous), but otherwise uses me not ill. But take care of thy self, my deare friend; for though the colonel be a gentleman, he is prest by them about him, and at our last interview I noted a mischief in his eye. Canst use this file?—(but take care; all the gates I saw guarded with troopers today.) This by one who hath been my friend; for whose sake tear the paper up. And believe your cordial, loving comrade, D. K.

After reading this a dozen times, till I had it by heart, I tore the letter into small pieces and hid them in my pocket. This done, I felt lighter hearted than for many a day, and (rather for employment than with any further view) began lazily to rub away at my window bar. The file worked well. By noon the bar was half severed, and I broke off to whistle a tune. Twas:

Vivre en tous cas,
C'est le grand soulas,

and I broke off to hear the key turning in my lock.

The jailer's daughter entered with my second meal. Her eyes were red with weeping

Said I, "Does your father beat you?"

"He has, before now," she replied; "but not today."

"Then why do you weep?"

"Not for that."

"For what, then?"

"For you—oh, dear, dear! How shall I tell it? They are going to—to"— She sat down on the chair, and sobbed in her apron.

"What is't they are going to do?"

"To—to—h-hang you."

"The devil! When?"

"Tut-tut-to-morrow mo-morning!"

I went suddenly very cold all over. There was silence for a moment, and then I heard the noise of some one dropping a plank in the courtyard below.

"What's that?"

"The gug-gug"—

"Gallows?"

She nodded.

"You are but a weak girl," said I, meditating.

"Ay, but there's a dozen troopers on the landing below."

"Then, my dear, you must lock me up," I decided, gloomily, and fell to whistling

Vivre en tous cas,
C'est le grand soulas.

A workman's hammer in the court below chimed in, beating out the tune and driving the moral home. I heard a low sob behind me. The jailer's daughter was going.

"Lend me your bodkin, my dear, for a memento."

She pulled it out and gave it to me.

"Thank you, and now good-by. Stop! Here's a kiss to take to my dear mistress. They shan't hang me, my dear."

The girl went out, sobbing, and locked the door after her.

I sat down for a while, feeling doleful, for I found myself extremely young to be hanged. But soon the whang! whang! of the hammer below roused me. "Come," I thought, "I'll see what that rascal is doing, at any rate," and, pulling the file from my pocket, began to attack the window bar with a will. I had no need for silence at this great height above the ground, and, besides, the hammering continued lustily.

Daylight was closing as I finished my task and, pulling the two pieces of the bar aside, thrust my head out at the window.

Directly under me and about twenty feet from the ground I saw a beam projecting, about six feet long, over a sort of doorway in the wall. Under this beam, on a ladder, was a carpenter fellow at work, fortifying it with two supporting timbers that rested on the sill of the doorway. He was merry enough over the job, and paused every now and again to fling a remark to a little group of soldiers that stood idling below, where the fellow's work lay and a great coil of rope rested by the ladder's foot.

"Reckon, Sammy," said one, pulling a long tobacco pipe from his mouth and spitting, "'tis a long while since thy last job o' the sort."

"Ay, lad; terrible disrepair this place has fallen into. But send us a cheerful heart, say I! Instead o' the viper an' owl shall henceforward be hangings of men an' all manner o' diversion."

I kept my head out of sight and listened.

"What time doth a' swing?" asked another of the soldiers.

"I heard the colonel give orders for 9 o'clock to-morrow," answered the first soldier, spitting again.

The clock over the barbican struck four, and in a minute was being answered from tower after tower down in the city.

"Four o'clock!" cried the man on the ladder; "time to stop work, and here goes for the last nail!" He drove it in and prepared to descend.

"Hi!" shouted a soldier, "you've forgot the rope."

"That'll wait till to-morrow. There's a staple to drive in, too. I tell you I'm dry and want my beer."

He whipped his apron round his waist and, gathering up his nails, went down the ladder. At the foot he picked up his bag, shouldered the ladder and lounged away, leaving the coil of rope lying there. Presently the soldiers sauntered off also, and the court was empty.

Now, up to this moment I had but one idea of avoiding my fate, and that was to kill myself. 'Twas to this end I had borrowed the bodkin of the maid. Afterwards I had a notion of flinging myself from the window as they came for me. But now, as I looked down on that coil of rope lying directly below, a prettier scheme struck me. I sat down on the floor of my cell and pulled off my boots and stockings.

'Twas such a pretty plan that I got into a fever of impatience. Drawing off a stocking and picking out the end of the yarn, I began to unravel the knitting for dear life, until the whole lay a heap of thread on the floor. I then served the other in the same way; and at the end had two lines, each pretty near four hundred yards in length, which now I divided into eight lines of about a hundred yards each.

With these I set to work, and by the end of twenty minutes had plaited a rope—if rope, indeed, it could be called—weak, to be sure, but long enough to reach the ground with plenty to spare. Then, having bent my bodkin to the form of a hook, I tied it to the end of my cord, weighted it with a crown from my pocket and clambered up to the window. I was going to angle for the hangman's rope.

'Twas near dark by this, but I could just distinguish it on the paving stones below, and, looking about the court, saw that no one was astir. I wriggled first my head, then a shoulder, through the opening, and let the line run gently through my hand. There were still many yards left that could be paid out when I heard my coin tinkle softly on the pavement.

Then began my difficulty. A dozen times I pulled my hook across the coil before it hitched, and then a full three score of times the rope slipped away before I had raised it a dozen yards. My elbow was raw, almost, with leaning on the sill, and I began to lose heart and head, when, to my delight, the bodkin caught and held. It had fastened on a kink in the rope, not far from the end. I began to pull up, hand over hand, trembling all the while like a leaf.

For I had two very reasonable fears. First, the rope might slip away and tumble before it reached my grasp. Secondly, it might, after all, prove a deal too short. It had looked to me a new rope of many fathoms, not yet cut for to-morrow's purpose; but eyesight might well deceive at that distance, and surely enough I saw that the whole was dangling off the ground long before it came to my hand.

But at last I caught it, and, slipping back into the room, pulled it after me, yard upon yard. My heart went loud and fast. There was nothing to fasten it to but an iron staple in the door, that meant losing the width of my cell, some six feet. This, however, must be risked, and I made the end fast, lowered the other out of the window again, and, climbing to a sitting posture on the window sill, thrust out my legs over the gulf.

Thankful was I that darkness had fallen before this and hidden the giddy depths below me. I gripped the rope and pushed myself inch by inch through the window, and out over the ledge. For a moment I dangled, without courage to move a hand. Then, wreathing my legs round the rope, I loosed my left hand and caught with it again some six inches lower. And so, down I went.

Minute followed minute, and left me still descending, six inches at a time, and looking neither above nor below, but always at the gray wall that seemed sliding up in front of me. The first dizziness was over, but a horrible aching of the arms had taken the place of it. 'Twas growing intolerable, when suddenly my legs, that sought to close the rope, found space only. I had come to the end.

I looked down. A yard below my feet the beam of the gallows gleamed palely out of the darkness. Here was my chance. I let my hands slip down the last foot or so of the rope, hung for a moment, then dropped for the beam.

My feet missed it, as I intended they should, but I flung both arms out and caught it, bringing myself up with a jerk. While yet I hung clawing, I heard a footstep coming through the gateway between the two wards.

Here was a fix. With all speed and silence I drew myself up to the beam, found a hold with one knee upon it, got astride, and lay down at length, flattening my body down against the timber. Yet all the while I felt sure I must have been heard.

The footsteps drew nearer and passed almost under the gallows. 'Twas an officer, for as he passed he called out:

"Sergt. Downs! Sergt. Downs!"

A voice from the guard room in the barbican answered him through the darkness.

"Why is not the watch set?"

"In a minute, sir; it wants a minute to 6."

"I thought the colonel ordered it at half past 5?"

In the silence that followed the barbican clock began to strike, and half a dozen troopers tumbled out from the guard room, some laughing, some grumbling at the coldness of the night. The officer returned to the inner ward as they dispersed to their posts; and soon there was silence again, save for the tramp, tramp of a sentry crossing and recrossing the pavement below me.

All this while I lay flattened along the beam, scarce daring to breathe. But at length, when the man had passed below for the sixth time, I found heart to wriggle myself towards the doorway over which the gallows protruded. By slow degrees, and pausing whenever the fellow drew near, I crept close up to the wall; then, waiting the proper moment, cast my legs over, dangled for a second or two swinging myself towards the sill, flung myself off, and, touching the ledge with one toe, pitched forward into the room.

The effect of this was to give me a sound crack as I struck the flooring, which lay about a foot below the level of the sill. I picked myself up and listened. Outside, the regular tramp of the sentry proved he had not heard me; and I drew a long breath, for I knew that without a lantern he would never spy, in the darkness, the telltale rope dangling from the tower.

In the room where I stood all was right. But the flooring was uneven to the foot, and scattered with small pieces of masonry. 'Twas one of the many chambers in the castle that had dropped into disrepair. Groping my way with both hands, and barking my shins on the loose stones, I found a low vaulted passage that led me into a second chamber, empty as the first. To my delight, the door of this was ajar, with a glimmer of light slanting through the crack. I made straight towards it, and pulled the door softly. It opened, and showed a lantern dimly burning, and the staircase of the keep winding past me, up into darkness.

TO BE CONTINUED

John Gilder, an old man living in Dublin, Ga., believes in preparation for death. Some years ago he had his vault built and a coffin ordered. When M. L. Jones's store was burned down, some months ago, the casket was destroyed. Some weeks ago he wrote to a friend in Macon to send him another. His friend was slow about attending to the request, and when Mr. Gilder was taken sick last week he had a telegram sent to an undertaker at Macon for a casket worth $250.

A NEW SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

Ira G. Hoitt, ex-State Superintendent of Public Instruction of California, has leased the Reddington place at Oak Grove, two miles from Millbrae, San Mateo county, and will open a boarding school for boys August 4th, 1891. There are 156 acres of land, partly covered with natural and artificial forests and partly devoted to landscape gardening and fruit, with ample play grounds. The place has its own gas and water works. For climate, beauty of surroundings, magnificence of scenery and adaptability to school purposes it cannot be surpassed on the Pacific Coast. The number of pupils will be limited, and the course of study will cover the ground from the primary grade to admission to the best university and college. Mr. and Mrs. Hoitt are well known in educational work, and may be addressed at Millbrae, Cal.

Spend your time in nothing which you know must be repented of.

THROUGH THE WEARY HOURS

Of many a night, made doubly long by its protracted agony, the rheumatic sufferer tosses to and fro on his sleepless coach, vainly praying for that rest which only comes by fits and starts. His malady is one which ordinary medicines too often fail to relieve, but there is ample evidence to prove that the efficient blood depurent, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, affords the rheumatic a reliable means of relief. Check the malady in its incipient stages, when the first premonitory twinges come on, with this agreeable medicine, and avoid years of torture. Whatever be the rationale of the active influence of the Bitters upon this malady, certain it is that no evidence relating to its effect is more direct and positive than that which relates to its action in cases of rheumatism. Like all sterling remedies, however, it deserves a protracted, systematic trial, and should not be abandoned because not at once remedial. It is equally efficacious in dyspepsia, indigestion and kindred diseases.

Luxury, like wine, both stimulates and weakens.

$100 REWARD $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
☞ Sold by Druggists, 75c.

We may wonder the wide world over,
But we find as we gayly roam
There is nothing so sweet, or nice to eat,
As a good square meal at home.

Use Enameline Stove Polish: no dust, no smell.

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation permanently. For sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all druggists.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

HE MASTERED FATE.

It's a hard thing sometimes to struggle against fate, yet in many instances man possesses the power to so direct the future that fate has not much to do with it. It may be fate for a man to get killed in an accident, but it is not always fate for him to die by disease. It requires judgment to shape the future. Mr. Orville Welling, an employe of the Oakland Gaslight and Heat Company, is a gentleman who possesses such judgment. He is a gasfitter and resides at 866 Castro street, Oakland, Cal.

He realized that he was a sick man. He would arise in the mornings feeling tired; his nerves were unstrung, and there was a perceptible absence of ambition. He could not eat or sleep well, and began to go into a decline. He preferred good health to sympathy, and instead of waiting until the was past human aid visited the Cosmopolitan Dispensary. His case was one of general debility. He took four weeks' treatment, and was discharged a perfectly cured man. He mastered fate. Mr. Welling has lived in Oakland for four years, and is a very popular man. He will gladly corroborate this statement.

His case is simply one of hundreds which the Cosmopolitan Dispensary has cured.

Drop a line to some of the following, whom they have cured, and learn for yourself: Mrs. S. G. Smith, 1708 Market street, David Williams, 379 Shotwell street, William P. Kane, 1713 Post street, Charles Hempler, 502 Davis street, Andrew McWilliam Martin, 48 Ridley street, L. M. D. Wright, 1324 Florida street, Peter A. Anderson, 1300½ Stockton street, Alexander Wood, 956 Seventh street, H. E. Snook, 1021 Market street, all of San Francisco; A. Astorg, San Rafael Cal.; Frederick Brown, Union Copper Mine, Copperopolis, Cal.; James J. Walsh, 510 Clementina street, San Francisco; Miss Pauline Voss, 2010 Manchester street, San Francisco; C. F. Eckert, Gilroy, Cal.; Miley Dolan, 126 Ivy street, San Francisco.

THE COSMOPOLITAN DISPENSARY, with its staff of eminent specialists, was founded and chartered to bring help to the afflicted. If you prefer help and health to sickness and sympathy, call and consult them. Consultation, advice and thorough examination free to patients. A friendly talk may save you thousands of dollars or years of suffering, and perhaps your life. Young, middle-aged or old men suffering from the effects of follies or excesses restored to perfect health, manhood and vigor. Each visitor seen privately, and all communications received in sacred confidence. The staff of physicians at the Cosmopolitan Dispensary cannot cure you no power on earth can. Every character of disease treated. Sufferers from Rheumatism, Asthma, Consumption, Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Scrofula, Female Weakness, Deafness, any Sexual Diseases, Lost Manhood, Malaria, Urinary Troubles, Piles, Bowel Troubles or any other disease, should call at once. Low charges, within the reach of all, combined with the best Medical and Surgical skill.

COSMOPOLITAN (chartered) DISPENSARY, corner Stockton, Market and Ellis Streets, San Francisco, Cal.

Out-of-town patients treated with unfailing success through correspondence; one visit desirable, but not necessary. Medicine sent safely and free from observation to any part of the country. Write for prospectus or send for symptom blank to fill out, and a letter explaining your disease, giving advice, etc., will be returned free. Open daily from 8 A. M. to 9 P. M. Sunday office hours, 9 to 4. Send 10c for the book, "Sexual Secrets," a work every man should read.

THE GAVI
CALIFORNIA FRUIT
Female Pills.

Perfectly Harmless; a Positive Preventative for Suppressed, Irregular and Painful Menstruation, no matter how weak the patient is or what the difficulty may be. Price $2.50 per box. Postpaid. Secure from observation. PROSSER BROS., 111 Grant Avenue, San Francisco, Cal.

ORIGINAL BUCKEYE MOWERS.
McCORMICK MOWERS,
BRADLEY'S WHEELED WIRE RAKES
All kinds of Hay Presses and Haying Tools.
Truman-Hooker Co.'s Bale-Ties.
Truman, Hooker & Co.,
San Francisco and Fresno.

WANTED SOLDIERS' HOMESTEADS The addresses of all soldiers who homesteaded a less number of acres than 160 and made final proof on the same before June 22, 1874. W. E. Moses P. O. Box 1765, Denver, Colo. Mention this paper.

S. F. N. U. No. 466. New Series No. 21

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted. Sold by druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

My lady love more pious is
Than other girls, for she
In Lent gave up her youthful heart
And dainty hand to me.

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Porterfield & Lossey, 838 Market street, San Francisco.

Patience is the gold we get by going through the fire of trial.

The Occidental Hotel, San Francisco, is universally pronounced by the public the model hotel of the Pacific Coast. Everything is perfection to the minutest detail, and guests are made to feel entirely at home. J. A. Hooper, Manager.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.

No other baking powder does such work.

INDISPENSIBLE TO HOUSEKEEPERS. Ask Your Dealer for it. Write for Circular.
AMERICAN OIL CO., Agts. 11 to 15 Main St. San Francisco, California.

Fresno and Tulare Lands.

Homes on easy terms in the Level Orchard Land Colony. Two canals through the tract. Terms, 15 per cent. down, balance on five years' time. Our lands are adopted to the Orange, Raisin and Deciduous Fruit. Apply to

D. T. CURTIS,
REEDLEY, - - - Fresno County, Cal.

ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER CURED TO STAY CURED. WRITE TO HAROLD HAYES, M.D. A NEW DEPARTURE BUFFALO, N.Y.

STEINWAY, Gabler and Pease Pianos
Meaning the BEST PIANO MADE, and the favorite cheaper Pianos; all Musical Instruments; Band Supplies; large stock of Sheet Music. STEINWAY HALL, 206 & 208 Post Street, MATTHIAS GRAY C Call and see our new rooms and new stock.

FOR MEN ONLY!
VIGOR AND STRENGTH For LOST or FAILING MANHOOD General and NERVOUS DEBILITY Weakness of Body and Mind, Effect of Errors or Excesses in Old or Young. Robust, Noble MANHOOD fully Restored. How to enlarge and strengthen WEAK, UNDEVELOPED ORGANS & PARTS OF BODY. Absolutely unfailing HOME TREATMENT—Benefits in a day. Men testify from 50 States, and Foreign Countries. Write them. Descriptive Book, explanation and proofs mailed (sealed) free. Address ERIE MEDICAL CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

GIN GONG Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Strictures. Mfd only by THE EVANS CHEMICAL CO. CINCINNATI, O. U. S. A. Trade Mark. Big G is the acknowledged leading remedy for all the unnatural discharges and private diseases of men. A certain cure for the debilitating weakness peculiar to women. I prescribe it and feel safe in recommending it to all sufferers. A. J. STONER, M.D., DECATUR, ILL. Sold by Druggists. PRICE $1.00.

YOUNG MEN! The Specific A No. 1 Cures all unnatural discharges of Men, no matter of how long standing. Prevents strictures. It being an internal remedy. Cures when everything else has failed. Circular on application, when everything is free or sent on receipt of price, $1.00. Sold by Druggists. MEDICINE CO., San Jose, Cal. PRICE $3.00

PISO'S REMEDY FOR CATARRH.—Best. Easiest to use. Cheapest. Relief is immediate. A cure is certain. For Cold in the Head it has no equal.

CATARRH

It is an Ointment, of which a small particle is applied to the nostrils. Price 50c. Sold by druggists or sent by mail. Address: E. T. HAZELTINE, Warren, Pa.

CUMBERLAND COAL.
HUSBAND & BROOKS' BRAND.
Absolutely Pure and Dry

This Coal is stored away from the sun and rain. Keeps proper fire. No loss of time. No loss of material from bad fires. Always reliable. Blacksmith's use this brand when they want the best.

HUSBAND & BROOKS
IMPORTERS
14 & 16 SPEAR ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

This Picture, Panel size, mailed for 4 cents.
J. F. SMITH & CO.,
Makers of "Bile Beans,"
255 & 257 Greenwich St., N. Y. City.

CURE Biliousness, Sick Headache, Malaria.
BILE BEANS.

Before you buy anything, ask two questions: "Do I really want it?" "Can I do without it?"
HONESTLY ANSWERED.
these questions may make you rich: but they will never prevent you from buying SAPOLIO
Its uses are many and so are its friends; for where it is once used it is always used. To clean house without it is sheer folly, since it does the work twice as fast and twice as well.

Cuticura Soap
FOR BAD COMPLEXIONS, RED ROUGH HANDS AND BABY HUMORS

BAD COMPLEXIONS, WITH PIMPLY, blotchy, oily skin, Red, Rough Hands, with chaps, painful finger ends and shapeless nails, and simple Baby Humors prevented and cured by CUTICURA SOAP. A marvelous beautifier of world-wide celebrity, it is simply incomparable as a Skin Purifying Soap, unequalled for the Toilet and without a rival for the Nursery. Absolutely pure, delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed, CUTICURA SOAP produces the whitest, clearest skin, and softest hands and prevents inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, and most complexional disfigurations, while it admits of no comparison with the best of other skin soaps, and rivals in delicacy the most noted and expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. Sale greater than the combined sales of all other skin soaps.

Sold throughout the world. Price, 25c.
Send for "How to Cure Skin and Blood Diseases."
Address POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Proprietors, Boston, Mass.

Aching sides and back, weak kidneys, and rheumatism relieved in one minute by the celebrated CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER, 25c.

GREENBACK PLUG CUT

SMOKING TOBACCO HAS JUMPED TO THE FRONT
THE BEST SMOKE
IN A NOVEL
AND CONVENIENT PACKAGE

TIGER MOWERS.

Cut 4 feet, 8inches,	$75 00
Cut 5 feet,	82 50
Cut 6 feet,	90 00

Will cut where any other Mower can.

Baker & Hamilton
San Francisco, Cal.

GOOD TIMES
FOR FARMERS! FOR EVERYBODY!

We intend to stand up for the bread winners of all classes. Not for one class, or for one association or organization, but for the whole community of producers.

Table Peaches, very fine, per doz.,		$2.10,	$2.25
Table Plums,	"	1.40,	1.50
Table Grapes,	"	1.35,	1.50
Table Bartlett Pears,	"	2.10,	2.25
Table Fruit, assorted, all kinds		1.75,

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor.

Independence, Cal.,

FRIDAY, JULY 3, 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXIII. NO. 3. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JULY 3, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1079.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

C. MULHOLLAND, - - - Proprietor

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.52
Three Months	1.50
One Month	50
Single Copies

A TALE OF WOE.

How two Prospectors Escaped Death.

FOLLOWED FOR MILES BY MOSQUITOS.

Plenty of Gold, but Nothing to Eat.—Begging for Death.

The British Columbia mail today brings the following terrible tale of starvation in the Yukon district, which is clipped from the Victoria Times: "Chilcott, Alaska, Oct. 1.—Three detachments of men have returned this fall from Yukon. The second brought word that they passed a boat lying on the beach with no one to be found near it, but it was thought to belong to four men who started from Forty Mile Creek to come out on July 6. It was known that they had but a small supply of food with them, and it was supposed they had taken to the woods in search of game. Thus it proved to be, and yesterday two men tottered down the mountain side to this place, whose emaciated faces and trembling limbs showed that they had survived an experience that few men would have lived through. One of them was J. W. Sperry, of Portland, Ore. He is fifty years of age, with hair as white as the driven snow. The other man, R. C. Rose, also from Portland, is twenty years younger, and this youth alone saved Sperry from filling an unmarked grave in the valley of the Yukon.

"Three weeks after starting on their homeward journey, their supply of provisions was entirely exhausted, and they soon became so weak that they could not pull their boat, which they finally abandoned, and took to the hills in search of game. Occasionally a squirrel was shot and quickly eaten by the men, who were now ravenous, and wild berries became their only means of subsistence. Their trail was followed by clouds of mosquitos and flies, that lit upon them in swarms, and which they had to fight continually, and their faces and hands soon became raw and bleeding sores. In their weakened condition, Ingram and F. C. Young, from San Diego, Cal., others of the party, were unable to fight off the pests, which preyed upon their eyelids until they became so inflamed that they lost all power to open or close them, and they became totally blind.

"The dread of death by starvation and fear of being hopelessly lost in that strange country soon told upon the minds of these two, and Ingram repeatedly begged his companions to shoot him. Finally he lay down, refusing to move, and when his companions saw he was about gone they left him, almost dragging Young along. The next day Young succumbed, a victim to starvation and the torments of pests which swarmed about them day and night. They left him lying upon the ground to die, how far from where the foot of man has ever trod they do not know.

"Another day brought them to some dried salmon caught by Indians for winter use, and they were now able to retrace their steps to the boat, and soon a party of Indians came along from whom they obtained food enough to enable them to reach the first white settlement this side of the Yukon. On their way back to the boat they came to the spot where Ingram was left, but found the mosquitos and flies singing a requiem over their comrade. He was left with but a stone to mark his resting place, and his blanket and a few branches of hemlock spread over him for a shroud. They could not find where Young was, but they are satisfied that strength or reason never returned sufficient to allow him to move from the spot.

"On their way out the party discovered a ledge having a clearly defined vein of rich ore, showing free gold, and at its base found liberal quantities of gold in every pan. Location notices were hurriedly put up, and the anticipation of rich results in another year, when they all hoped to return, buoyed up their spirits for a time and spurred them on to renewed efforts to escape their impending doom. The pangs of hunger soon destroyed all hopes of future riches, and their only thought was for something to eat. Notwithstanding their terrible experience the two survivors intend to return to the Yukon the coming spring."

British Columbia advices say that the steamer George W. Elder has arrived at Victoria on her way down from Alaska, with several Yukon miners on board. The miners complain bitterly of the provisions sold to them, upon which they have entirely to depend, by the Alaska Commercial company. The miners say that they were obliged to take eighty pounds of putrid bacon, as it was all they could get. Out of the lot they could only use four pounds.

Another party driven by hunger were obliged to eat it with the result that four of them died. The prices asked are enormous, yet the miners had to submit and pay what was asked or starve to death. They say they had one or two alternatives, either to go without the provisions offered for sale by the Alaska company and starve, or to purchase them and run the chance of being poisoned to death.—Ottawa (Ont.) Dispatch in Louisville Courier-Journal.

Where Fife and Bride Are.

Duff house, where the duke and duchess of Fife are now staying, has been closed for many years, except during its owner's annual autumn visit, which never exceeded a month. The house is an immense quadrangular edifice, which was built about a century ago. The style is Roman Corinthian, the principal rooms are very large, and there is a fine collection of pictures. The grounds, which are very extensive, are undulating and well wooded, and are bordered by the Deveron, on the banks of which, one mile farther up the river, is Mountcoffer, the dower house of the Fife family. Duff house stands on the outskirts of the towns of Banff and Macduff, which are separated by the Deveron estuary.—London Truth.

KANSAS IS ALL RIGHT.

A Railroad Traveling Agent Tells a Reporter About Arkansas Valley.

Every one who comes to Kansas City from Kansas these days has his own particular stock of stories to tell about the wonderful crops in that state. Among the Sunflower pilgrims who landed in the city Saturday was Charley Barrett, the good looking and talkative traveling passenger agent of the Missouri Pacific. He had spent four or five days in southern Kansas, and his mouth was going at the rate of 500 revolutions a minute about crops when he was flagged by a Times man on Main street.

"Wheat!" he exclaimed. "You never saw the like! The farmers down in southern Kansas had to rent the public roads to get room enough to stack the wheat. Wasn't room enough in the fields to hold the stacks. I saw one"——

"How is the fruit crop?"

"Fruit! You never saw the like! Apples as big as cannon balls growing in clusters as big as haystacks. I saw one apple that"——

"Don't the trees break down?"

"Trees! You never saw the like! The farmers planted sorghum in the orchards, and the stalks grew up like telegraph poles and supported the limbs. I saw one stalk of sorghum that was two feet"——

"How is the broom corn crop?"

"Broom corn! You never saw the like! There hasn't been a cloudy day in southern Kansas for a month. Can't cloud up. The broom corn grew so high that it kept the clouds swept off the face of the sky as clean as a new floor. They will have to cut the corn down if it gets too dry. Some of the broom corn stalks are so high that"——

"How is the corn crop?"

"Corn! You never saw the like! Down in the Neosho and Fall River and Arkansas bottoms the corn is as high as a house. They use stepladders to gather roasting ears."

"Aren't stepladders pretty expensive?"

"Expensive! Well, I should say so, but that isn't the worst of it. The trouble is that the children climb up into the cornstalks to hunt for eagles' nests, and sometimes fall out and kill themselves. Fourteen funerals in one county last week from that cause. I attended all of them. That is why I am so sad. And, mind you, the corn is not more than half grown. A man at Arkansas City has invented a machine which he calls 'The Solar Corn Harvester and Child Protector.' It is inflated with gas like a balloon and floats over the corn tops, and the occupants reach down and cut off the ears of corn with a cavalry saber. Every Kansas farmer has a cavalry saber and"——

"Do they make much cider in Kansas?"

"Cider? You never saw the like! Oceans of it! Most of the farmers in Crowley county have filled their cisterns with cider. A proposition was made a few days ago to the water works company of Arkansas City to supply the town with cider through the mains, but the company was compelled to decline because they were afraid the cider would rust the pumps. They were sorry, but they said they would have to continue to furnish water, although it cost more. I saw one farmer who"——

"How is the potato crop?"

"Potatoes! You never saw the like! A man in Sedgwick county dug a potato the other day that was so big he used the cavity it grew in for a cellar. I saw one potato that"——

"The people must be happy over their big crops?"

"Happy! You never saw the like! I know men in the Arkansas valley who were too poor this time last year to flag a bread wagon, and now they have pie three times a day. One fellow that"——

But the reporter just at this point had a pressing engagement elsewhere.—Kansas City Times.

To Preserve Dead Bodies.

There is a man in Denver who has an idea that the country ought to give up the present method of disposing of dead bodies and adopt one which he suggests. He does not advocate cremation, nor anything else which, so far as is known, appears to have been suggested by any other person. His scheme is to freeze the dead body in water, take the block of ice in which the body has been frozen and carry it to the north and deposit it on the shores of one of the Arctic seas. He says that he has already made some favorable progress, and that an English syndicate is considering the establishment of an international cemetery on the shores of Baffin's bay, where he says that future generations may go to find the faces of their ancestors of the Nineteenth century as natural as life.—New York Sun.

An Immigrant's Fortune.

Thomas Monahan, an Irish millionaire, who lived in Melbourne for half a century, died recently. He was one of the 360 poor Irish immigrants who sailed for Australia in 1839, and the ship was in such a terrible sanitary condition that ninety of them died on the voyage. Monahan shrewdly invested his little earnings in land about Melbourne, with the result that blocks for which he paid £500 in those early days are now worth £250,000 each. His aggregate wealth is estimated at £2,000,000.—Exchange.

A Twin Watermelon.

Aleck West, colored, we believe, is entitled to the ginger cake for the greatest curiosity this season in the way of a watermelon. He exhibits two perfect melons joined together. Both melons were fully developed and the meat was juicy and sweet—just like an ordinary melon. Aleck states that he first noticed that the runners from the vine grew double. They moved side by side and the result was the double melon. It was certainly a curiosity.—Greensboro (Ga.) Journal.

A brass ring was sent from Germany to a New Yorker the other day which was seized by the customs officers. The tax due to the government was three cents, and it cost the United States something like $15 to collect that sum.

AFRICAN CURIOS.

A Peep at the Trophies of Herbert Ward.

BEAUTIFUL SPECIMENS OF CARVING

The Savage Idea of Ornament.—A New Race.

A few privileged friends were asked recently to meet Mr. E. J. Glave, of London, at the Tremont house, and at the same time to see the many curiosities which Mr. Herbert Ward brought from Africa with him. These articles are not exhibited at the lecture, but are shown privately to friends. Mr. Glave, who has charge of them, is a young Englishman with a taste for adventure, who has been into the interior of Africa with both Mr. Stanley and Mr. Ward, and has achieved a decided reputation as a successful hunter. It is most interesting to hear his descriptions of the life among the savages, and he speaks modestly of his own prowess, referring only to the deeds of other men, until some straightforward question brings an answer that he cannot help giving.

The world has grown accustomed to eastern curios. China, India and Japan are no longer unknown lands, and the arts and industries from those countries are almost as well known as those of Europe and America; but in the curiosities shown by Mr. Glave one is brought face to face with a new people and a hitherto unknown land. The first sensation which one has is a wonder how these people learned to do so many things. They work in iron and other metal, they weave a cloth from fiber, they carve in wood and ivory, and their straw or cane weaving is wonderful from its fine workmanship, its beauty of design and perfect finish. This was best shown in the shields, which are long and narrow, covering the whole body when held in front of it. It resembles more than anything the fine cane work of the East Indies. It is smooth and glossy, and some of the fibers are as fine as thread. Black and white fibers are used, the design being wrought in black on the white ground and is even more beautiful on the back side than on the front. Of course, all this work is done by hand, and it is as even and regular as if made by machine.

The ornaments worn by the women are barbaric in design; still they have a beauty of shape that is unsurpassed by anything modern. Copper is a great deal used by them, and also iron; the first is to ornament almost entirely, and the latter is used for money, as well as for the cruel implements of war. Among the most interesting trophies are the axes and bows and arrows used by the nation of dwarfs, a newly discovered people, who have given Stanley a great deal of trouble during his last trip.

They are a small people, only about four feet in height, with small frames and short necks, a most repulsive looking people, and very savage and fierce; they are not physically strong, but are very quick in their movements, and have a less degree of intelligence than most of the other tribes. The axes are short handled, broad bladed, ugly looking affairs; the bows are very small, almost like toy bows, with correspondingly small arrows, which are poisoned at the sharp iron tips. Small as these are, they are deadly, if they strike, as the poison is very powerful and quick in its action.

The savage idea of ornament is shown in the waist belts, bracelets, earrings and anklets worn by the women; these constitute the entire costume, but the richer and more powerful a man is, the more heavily he loads his wives with these tokens of his esteem and their worth. The more of this kind of ornament a woman has, the higher is her financial value. After all, civilization and barbarism are not so far apart as it would seem at the first glance.

A spoon carved of wood is in a graceful and unique pattern, that might be copied with advantage by silversmiths who are in search of something new and artistic. This is simply wood carving, but the shape is very graceful and beautiful. Some of the spoons carved in ivory were not unlike those of mediæval Europe, and it makes one wonder anew how ideas could have grown among people who know literally nothing of a life beyond that one in this savage land. It certainly proves that those ideas must be common to the whole human race, and that some of the very best of our civilization came with us from barbarity.

A beautifully wrought copper collar worn by an African chief was as finely engraved as some of the specimens of Benares brass work. There are also some fine specimens of etching on some of the knives. It is perfectly impossible to give anything like an adequate idea of the novelty of this exhibition or of its completeness, but it is certainly one of the most interesting that has ever been given in the city. It gives one an idea as nothing else can of the condition of the people in the "dark country," of which so little has been known.—Boston Herald.

A Minute Watch.

At the Paris exposition a Florentine friar shows a watch only a quarter of an inch in diameter. It has not only the two regular hands, but a third, which marks the seconds, and a microscopic dial which indicates the days, week, month and years. It also contains an alarm and on its front lid or cover an ingeniously cut figure of St. Francis. On the back cover, by aid of a powerful glass, you can distinctly see and read two verses of the "Te Deum."—New York Telegram.

Fresh Water Freshness.

The hazing of freshmen seems to be confined to what are known as the fresh-water colleges of late. The older and larger colleges have pretty thoroughly outgrown this species of barbarism. The sooner the smaller institutions catch up with the times the better for all concerned.—Boston Herald.

THE MYSTERY OF THE SUN.

What Is Sought to Be Discovered at the Eclipse in December.

The number of astronomical parties that are preparing to go to convenient points in the track of the total solar eclipse in December, and the completeness of the equipments they propose to take with them for observation, make the prospects for good results unusually hopeful. The comparatively infrequent opportunities for studying this species of solar phenomena, and the brief time that is available under the most favorable circumstances for observation, make each event of great importance to astronomical science, particularly as at no other time can so much evidence be obtained for determining the real character of the sun and its appendages.

Long as the science of astronomy has flourished and great as has been its advance, it is only within a few years that, by the aid of the spectroscope and photography, the nature of the sun and its surroundings has been established with anything like certainty, and even now the most widely different theories are held as to the character of the sun's activity. It has long been known that around the black disk of the moon in total solar eclipses a halo of light is seen, bright next to the sun, but fading away more or less gradually into the blackness around it. This was supposed by the generality of astronomers as late as 1870 to be due either to the effects produced by our own atmosphere or by the moon's atmosphere. It was not till later that astronomers were convinced that this halo or corona was a part of the sun itself, and that from it must be derived the most important clews for settling the mysteries of the sun's heat and light.

From the observations of eclipses made recently it is now well known that the sun as ordinarily visible to us, bounded by the photosphere, is only a part of the sun. Just outside the photosphere is a comparatively thin layer of gas, mainly hydrogen, called the chromosphere, around this is the corona, thousands of miles thick, and around the corona, especially along the equator, there is a considerable extension of matter about which little is known. The general theory which has been built up from a knowledge of these facts and from the observations of such phenomena as sun spots and prominences is that the chemical elements are being continually tossed about in the enormous atmosphere of the sun and never getting out of it. The outer layers of the atmosphere are recognized as much cooler than the inner. Cool or comparatively cool masses of matter are produced by condensation in the upper regions from the hot ascending vapors of the lower atmosphere. These masses of matter, having gathered weight, come under the influence of gravitation over twenty-five times as great as ours, and fall with almost incredible rapidity toward the center. It is supposed that these terrific rains of cooled matter upon the sun produce what are known as sun spots.

We know how small meteorites in our own cold atmosphere are heated to incandescence by friction. Their kinetic energy is transformed into heat. It is not difficult to imagine, therefore, that these masses of matter darting down from a great height above the photosphere of the sun, creates great disturbances near the photosphere, such as sun spots indicate, and that masses falling into the inner and greatly heated atmosphere should be broken up in the heat generated by their own kinetic energy into hot vapors, producing such expansion that the down rush is transformed into an up rush, which would carry the chemical elements back to the cooler air, where they would gradually condense again and repeat the operation of falling into the chromosphere. The effect of such an up rush is supposed to be indicated by the prominence observed. The matter is supposed to be thrown up like the water of a fountain and like it thrown back, only to be tossed up again, but on so great, so terrific a scale that the imagination is unable to form a picture of it.

If this is the correct theory of the sun's existence, it is impossible to conceive of any limit to it. Elements which we can only heat into a glowing mass are there reduced to a vapor, and by expansion thrown 100,000 miles or more away, only to cool and pelt back again toward the center of attraction, there to be thrown off again. But effective as the theory is in explaining solar phenomena, it is by no means generally held, and among those holding it there are great differences of opinion. The evidence is little better than circumstantial, and it is only by the industrious work of astronomers, with improved appliances, that the mystery can approach solution. The study of the sun is to us the most important study in astronomy. It affects us directly. To better understand this center of life and heat is to better understand our own surroundings, and it is from the observations of those sent out to view the occasional total eclipses of the sun that light must come.—Providence Journal.

He Knew No English.

About one month ago a young man named Joe Harpster was struck on the back of the head with a pair of brass knuckles by a footpad, knocking him senseless, and for more than a month he lay unconscious. A few days ago he suddenly recovered his senses, but when he did he was able to converse intelligently only in the German language. He was born of American parents, who spoke German, and that was the language he first learned. He gave that up, however, and learned English, using it at all times, entirely forgetting his German. Now he can remember nothing of English. Scientists are wrestling with the problem.—St. Louis Republic.

A New York physician tried an experiment with Dr. Brown-Sequard's elixir upon a cat with perfect success. The doctor stupefied the cat with half pound of ether and then applied the elixir hypodermically, and in a moment the cat was dancing around the room, the stupor of the ether having entirely disappeared.

WASHINGTON MONUMENT.

Precautions Taken to Complete its Security.

STRON ENOU TO STAND FOR AGES.

People Have a Mania for Writing Names on it.

At the time the government decided to take hold and complete the Washington monument which had stood for years in an unfinished state, and when in the centennial year congress made an appropriation for the work, the question suggested to the minds of engineers and others was whether or not the foundation was secure and safe for the superstructure. The many years that had elapsed since the commencement of the work, and those that had passed during which it had been left unprotected to face the storms, winds and changes of temperature, caused the opinion to exist that the base of the shaft did not have as strong and durable a resting place as it required.

In the outset, and upon the resumption of the work, it was decided not to carry the monument to the height first contemplated in the plans and it was reduced a number of feet. This change was made in order that the weight the foundation had been laid to carry would be reduced in proportion according to the feet taken off and make it that much more secure to support the remainder.

Competent and experienced engineers made a thorough examination and several tests of the ground walls, extensive excavations were opened up to permit the closest possible inspection, and a report was submitted to the effect that the foundation was in prime condition, strong and durable. But to make it doubly sure the earth was removed from about the lower walls for some distance, and every crack in the foundation plugged and walls braced by another wall composed of broken stone and cement.

The monument was carried to completion despite the fears and predictions of the timid and weak hearted, who were on the watch to see it tumble. It is not known whether they are now on the lookout, but the shaft still stands and is likely to for ages. The engineer in charge, the custodian, and the subordinates employed about it are all cognizant of the statements made regarding its likelihood to get out of plumb. They style them the dreams of old women, and scout the idea of anything of that kind occurring.

Constant vigilance has been and is still observed to note the slightest depression or sinking of any kind, and only this week Capt. Mount informed a Post reporter that he had been unable to discover at any point any indication that would lead to the belief that the shaft had sunk the smallest fraction since the work done about the foundation. If such a thing had taken place it would be easy to detect, and manifest itself immediately in the working of the machinery, especially in the movements of the elevator car. It would show as well in the walls at the apex, and fissures would become visible. None of these evidences have appeared, and the employes are very confident that they will not.

The safety of everything about the monument is guaranteed with confidence, as the custodian keeps in operation a thorough system of inspection, permitting no part of it to be neglected. Of course the elevator and stairway are the principal points to be looked after, and when it is known that over 50,000 persons have traveled to the top of the monument since the 1st of last September by the car and stairs, the importance of paying this attention to insure the safety of the people will be understood and appreciated.

The work of the vandals has been almost entirely discontinued. Beyond the ambition of some people to have their names appear in high places and pencilling, the defacement of the monument by vandals has been suppressed, and the only disfigurements lately have been made by the penciling of their names by visitors. As soap and water readily remove the writing, this is not considered serious enough an offense to warrant the prosecution of the offenders.—Washington Post.

A Rector and His Club.

The rector of Gwaenysgon, in Wales, is a man of more than ordinary energy and enterprise. In an attempt to collect the tithes due him, and which the people are not disposed to pay, he headed a party of bailiffs who were sent to protect the auctioneer in an attempt to distrain. The auctioneer had been driven off three times while making similar attempts, and when it became known that he proposed again to enter the farms, assisted by the bailiffs and the rector himself, a large crowd, armed with sticks, assembled and made a desperate attack upon the distinguished party. The rector fought nobly in defense of his rights, and with a heavy club, which he wielded with great dexterity, he felled four of his flock to the earth. The bailiffs, however, showed less grit and fled with the auctioneer from the field, so that the enterprising rector was forced to yield. He now declares that he might as well turn pirate out and out as attempt to collect the tithes due him from the stubborn Welsh farmers.—London Letter.

Dr. Talmage.

When the last tabernacle was built, Dr. Talmage was receiving a salary of $7,000 a year, and his plan for the new edifice was considered so pretentious that it was feared he could not fill it. He entered into an agreement with the trustees, which was, in effect, that if he did not succeed in filling the tabernacle every Sunday during the year, he would not claim a cent of salary. His success was so great that the huge edifice was absolutely crowded at every service, and his salary was raised to $12,000 a year. People even sat in the aisles until the fire commissioners passed a special resolution forbidding this dangerous practice.—Once a Week.

Whiskers.

"You may shave them off—all, all," said a stout man with a wealth of brown beard, as he settled down into the red plush depths of a barber chair in the Burnet House and sighed feelingly as the barber picked up the glittering shears. "I have been worried to death by my beard," the stout man explained, "and I'm tired of it. You may give me a clean shave." He had been referred to so often as "Whiskers" that it had made him tired. That was why he bought a clean shave and sacrificed his beautiful hirsuite chest protector. It seems to be true that a more exasperating epithet than "Whiskers!" cannot be applied to a man. He resents the use of a word which describes his personal adornments a thousand times more indignantly than he would a word of brutal and insulting significance. The word whiskers has become so thoroughly identified with slang that its use in any way at all by a comedian nowadays is sure to call out a howl of laughter from an audience.

Men who wear whiskers are often guyed by the small boys in the street, particularly if the wind is strong. The ridicule of the mob, however, seems to be based on sensible ground. There is a certain amount of attractiveness about a well trimmed and symmetrical mustache, and a look of martial dignity is often imparted by a mustache and imperial. Men wear close trimmed and gracefully fashioned beards with good effect, and the beards are often a great protection to delicate throats. But there is no reason except misguided vanity for the cultivation and nurture of long side whiskers, which are always in the way, and invariably make a man look like an amiable caricature of the late lamented Lord Dundreary.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

All Around the House.

There is upon the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad, just below Conewago, the connecting station of the Lebanon railroad, a house standing near the broad steel belt, of which every side can be seen when the landscape slides by as the train speeds over the rails. This is an historic old mansion of stone, which has withstood the winds and winters of a century. Just as the train turns the sharp curve below Conewago station the eastern side of the mansion looms into view, and as the distance narrows the southern walls and windows seem to turn toward the eye.

In another instant, as the curve still winds, the western end takes the place of the southern, and while the iron horse speeds on in its rapid passage the train gives another turn and brings the northern side of the house into plain view. This is regarded as a curiosity by railroad men, and though few of the thousands who travel between the east and the west know of this curious location, it is always interesting to hear the engineer talk through the noise and rattle of the train to his fireman, telling him for the thousandth time that "that 'ere crazy house is looming up before."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Why People Like Each Other.

One of the first and longest steps of progress toward intimate acquaintance is made by the discovery of some point of agreement. No matter how small it may be it serves to a certain extent. Jones, who does not like butter, may find that Brown has a similar distaste for it. Immediately a gleam of friendly recognition shoots from the eyes of each. However slight and weak, there is a link of human sympathy between them. They may even remember each other, although they never meet again, simply because neither likes butter. Then, if it should transpire that there are other points of agreement, the delighted surprise and confidence deepens; Brown and Jones are cronies for life.

Or it may not be Brown and Jones, it may be John and Arabella; then more may come of it, as in the case of the pair in the "Story of an African Farm," wherein the lady asks the swain, "Did you ever have convulsions when you were a baby?" "Yes," said the young man. "Strange," said she; "I had convulsions too; wonderful that we should be so much alike!" And agreement progresses to matrimony.—Boston Transcript.

When Knowledge Is Valuable.

The faculty of having one's mind pigeon holed is of great value. Some people have their mental bookcases and storerooms piled up with a mass of material, all valuable, perhaps, in its way, but jumbled up and piled together so that when any one thing is wanted it is not to be had without overhauling ten times as much other material, which, however valuable it may be in itself, has no particular use at the moment of search. Other people can lay their mental hands on any particular fact or fancy at a moment's notice, and can keep on pulling out other facts and fancies of the same general character until they have told or found all they know. There is such a thing as an embarrassment of riches in one's mental treasury as well as in matters material.—New York Continent.

Hard Work Will Count.

An able man, himself a hard worker, has said, "Fourteen hours' hard work a day will make any man a genius," and in this has added a new epigram to the world's store. It is the plodder who "gets there." This is to be considered no argument in favor of "puttering," for puttering and plodding are as far apart as night and morning. It is simply a point in recognition of the merits of pertinacity as a virtue.—New York Continent.

KITCHEN ECONOMIES.

The Traditional American Extravagance.

THE COST OF LIVING HERE AND IN EUROPE

Something That Requires Much Experience and Study.

Again and again do we hear it reiterated that the people of these United States live extravagantly, and right roundly are they abused therefor by the domestic economists. In part we may admit the general truth of this accusation, but we must be permitted to make some reservations. We do live expensively, but that does not of itself mean extravagance. If we look into the matter carefully we may find that there are abundant and good reasons for this, as it appears on the surface, extravagance in living expenses.

Comparisons between the cost of living here and abroad are apt to be deceptive, for the reason that there is no common basis from which to start the consideration of the topic. The average American makes more money than the average man abroad, and, as an inevitable consequence, in accordance with the laws of demand and supply, to preserve the natural equilibrium, he must pay more for house rent, for food, for servants' wages, for fuel, for clothes. And, of course, he is financially able to do this.

Taking these things into consideration, it is an open question whether this large cost of living, as compared with that of other people, is, after all, extravagant. I have lived among a Latin people where oranges were sixty for a cent, bananas ten cents a bunch, and other food in proportion. The kitchen economy there would astound a New York housewife. Twenty cents worth of food would make a meal for a large family, and an excellent meal it would be, for the cook was sure to be an adept. But wages there were from ten to thirty cents a day, and a big income was $1,000 a year. The cost of living had to be low, and, besides that, time was of so little consequence that it could be very profitably expended in planning economies and in studying how to make the soup bone go the farthest for the dining table.

The essence of real economy is not always in the economy that is most superficially apparent. You cannot have an inexpensive table unless you make a study of the subject. You must take time to think out your bills of fare; you must learn the relative values of food products as nutritive elements; you must understand the science of cooking; you must know meats, vegetables, fruits as you know your alphabet; you must frequent the markets and learn when to buy, where to buy and how to buy. Now, when you have done all this, you will, no doubt, be abundantly able to set a table that will be the delight of your most dainty epicurean neighbor, and the source of plentiful satisfaction to your own pocketbook.

But what has this cost you? You will find that it has consumed a great part of your time; it has absorbed your attention in all your leisure time—nay, in even more than your leisure time. Now, true it is that time is money, and you will suddenly discover that while you have saved at one end you have wasted at another. That is, where one's earning power is large, it is decidedly a false economy to spend time in small saving, and thereby lose more in lessened income than is saved in these retrenchments. It is only the very rich who have plenty of time to spare and can indulge in the kitchen as a pastime, or the very few whose time is of little worth and whose circumstances compel to the most rigid economy, who can afford to give the requisite attention to this matter. The time of the average American is too valuable, either for business or pleasure, to warrant him in this pursuit of economical living and saving. For every dollar saved he would lose two in wasted opportunities.

So, the talk and argument of all theorists to the contrary notwithstanding, we shall probably, at least the most of us, continue to live along about as we have been and are now doing. Our bills of fare will be large and substantial, even if they lack many niceties of touch. We shall not spend our time in planning for our dinners, but we shall probably have just as good a time as though we did that, will have quite as much money left in the end, and, on the whole, be quite as happy and as long lived.

Alexander Dumas used to boast that no one could excel him in making a salad, but probably even he, with all his leisure, scarcely would have cared to spend all his time over the kitchen range. Few men care to haunt the markets, even if they have the time, and most of us prefer to have our wives as sometime companions, rather than always cooks and housekeepers.—W. H. L. in New York Star.

Literary and Intellectual.

Carl is a shrewd observer and something of a philosopher as well, as you will see from the following choice bit of discrimination:

"Papa," he said to his father one day, after scanning reflectively his father's scholarly face, "papa, are you a literary man or an intellectual man?"

"What do you call an intellectual man, and what is a literary man?" asked the father.

"Well," said Master Carl, thinking it out slowly as he went along, "a literary man is a man who writes, and an intellectual man is a man who thinks."

Which is often sadly true, the more's the pity.—New York Evening Sun.

Look Out for the Menagerie.

First Broker—Hard times, aren't they? Hope you will be able to keep the wolf from the door.

Second Broker—I'm afraid not. We can't keep the bear from the street now.—Kate Field's Washington.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JULY 3 ..... 1891.

J. DeB. Shorb of Stockton will be appointed Chief of the Horticultural Department of the World's Fair.

Visitors to Los Angeles would do well to visit the exhibition at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce. The display is interesting as well as instructive. It shows at a glance the varied resources of this section of the State, and cannot fail to impress intelligent observers with a sense of the great future that awaits Southern California.

The San Francisco CHRONICLE received a dispatch last week from New York from T. E. Clark, chairman of the Kern and Tulare irrigation district, saying that he had sold $350,000 worth of bonds of that district, being half of the total issue, none of which had been sold heretofore. It is believed that this is only the beginning of the placing of these bonds in New York.

The death of ex Senator Joseph E. McDonald, of Indiana,, removes one of the most noted of the old school of Democratic statesmen. His life was full of honors, and there was at one time a prospect that he would be the choice of his party for the Presidency. Upon the tariff and financial questions his views were more in line with those of Republicans than with the attitude of the Democratic party of late years. Mr. McDonald lived to a ripe old age, and leaves an enviable record.

Closely following Premier Salisbury's statement that "it begins to look as if there was not enough gold in sight to satisfactorily financier the business of the world', comes the declaration of the London DAILY NEWS that "the continued drain of gold is gradually tending to the inevitable adoption of a virtual silver standard. Good crops may succeed in recovering a portion of the $12,000,000 of gold already exported this year, but every year brings it nearer the time when silver certificates will be forced into circulation.

The indications are that Southern California is to do an enormous business in the future in the shipping of potatoes and other vegetable products to the markets of the East. The increase of shipping facilities and the enlargement of distributing agencies will enable the truck farmers to supply hundreds of Eastern towns and cities with early vegetables. The great point is to get the shipments off as fast as possible, as it is necessary to market the vegetables in advance of the maturity of Eastern products of the same description. With ample facilities for prompt transportation and distribution, and due energy and activity on the part of growers and shippers, there would be scarcely any limit to the quantity of vegetables that could be profitably produced and sent forward from Southern California. Vegetables are far less perishable than deciduous fruits, and the rapid growth in the volume of shipments of such fruits from this State indicates what is likely to happen in the case of early garden truck and root crops produced in this part of the State for the Eastern market. Florida is doing an immense business in this line of production.

Warner Miller's mission to this Coast may now be regarded as fairly successful. He asked for an investment of a million dollars by California capitalists in the Nicaragua Canal stock, and also for the investment of a similar amount by capitalists of the other sections of the Pacific Coast. He has become convinced that every dollar of the amounts he has solicited will be in the treasury of his company in good time, and he is speeding Eastward with a light heart. The subscriptions already aggregate $200,000—a very fair start. The Chamber of Commerce has appointed a committee to solicit subscriptions until the full amount is made up. It is only necessary to mention the names of the gentlemen composing the committee to give general assurance of the acknowledgment by our financiers of their confidence in the success of the great canal project. The committee is: W. L. Merry, Louis Sloss, George C. Perkins, George K. Porter, John Rosenfeld, L. L. Baker and J. B. Stetson. The right class of citizens have interested themselves in seconding Mr. Miller's effort to accomplish the gigantic enterprise, and failure to secure the necessary co-operation on this Coast is almost out of the question now.—S. F. Post.

HOW TO REACH OLD AGE.

DR. MILBURN TELLS HOW A PUNY BOY BECAME A STRONG MAN.

How to Breathe—How a Blind Man Exercises—Sun Cure for Baldness—Wonderful Vaseline Baths—Story of a Man Who Was an Unpromising Child.

Born apparently into the lap of consumption! Blind and sickly at twenty-one! Weak and feeble at thirty-five! The picture of health at threescore and ten!

It reads like a patent medicine advertisement, but it is the story of the Rev. Dr. Milburn, the noted blind chaplain of the house of representatives. The blind parson told it in a voice as strong as that of a boy. Said he:

"For fifteen years I was one of the most fragile of men you can imagine. I had to hold a book at the end of my nose with my hand above to shade the page, and by moving the book continuously along I managed, by seeing one letter at a time, to read and to spell my way through school and college. The result was that when a very young man I found myself afflicted with curvature of the spine, a curvature of the breast bone and a disease of the heart, and there seemed absolutely no prospect of my ever becoming a healthy man.

"I was also extremely delicate, and when between nineteen and thirty-five years old my weight ranged from 107 to 115 pounds. I was working hard, however, all this time, and paying attention to all sorts of things except the laws of health and life. I went to England when thirty-four, and got some hints from there. In those days very little attention was paid to hygiene, and after returning I began to put into practice what I had learned, and ever since that time I have increased in weight and size.

I increased my chest measure twelve inches, and my weight from fifty to sixty pounds. My weight increased steadily from the time I was thirty-five, and you will be surprised to know that this was done without my ever going into a gymnasium or adopting any of the practices which are prescribed for such purpose.

HOW TO BREATHE.

"I could only use the means within the reach of a blind man, and one of the principal means of increasing my size and weight which I adopted was air, taking a larger and larger quantity into the lungs. I have cultivated breathing as the basis of life, so that now I suppose I can inhale and exhale as large a quantity of atmosphere as any living man. That is the secret of the development of physique—to take into your lungs the whole amount of air which your lungs are intended to receive, and that is, in the case of a man of fair chest proportions, 330 cubic inches. The well built men in this country do not take in 200 inches.

"The first thing you do when you awake in the morning be sure you have a current of fresh air passing through your room. Remove the heavy bedclothes from your person, leaving only a sheet over you; lie as nearly flat as you can, draw up the knees and relax the muscles of the abdomen. Then, with your mouth closed and your chin raised, in order to relieve all constraint about your breast, draw in all the air you can without violence, doing it gradually and without painful effort.

"Hold the air as long as you can, and breathe it out through the mouth or nose, in the former case with effort. Close your lips as soon as all is out, and practise doing all your inhalations through your nostrils, never, under any circumstances, inhaling through the mouth.

"I would rather drink the water left in a finger bowl at the close of a White House dinner than to take in one spoonful of Washington air through my mouth. Do this breathing while in bed in the morning for five or ten minutes. This has been my constant habit for a number of years.

AIR, SUN AND EXERCISE

"Air is my first prescription," continued Dr. Milburn. "The sun is my next. I often walk about with my hat off in the sun, and it was a practice of Goethe to do this for an hour at noon. He said it stimulated his intellect, and that there was a vital and quickening power in the sun's rays. Thirty years ago I began to be bald. My father and younger brother were as bald as the palm of your hand when they were forty; but I told them when they informed me that I was getting bald that I would never be so. I had resolved to prevent it, and I did. I never wear a hat when I can help it, and I am not as barefooted today on the top of my head as I was in 1860. I wash my hair whenever I wash my face and hands.

"I have a muscular exercise—a light dumbbell exercise," Dr. Milburn went on, "and have often used Indian clubs, and in addition have some gymnastic movements for the arms, chest, legs, etc. As to the massage treatment, I suppose I am the most expert massage operator in this country, and I am also the best groomed animal in this respect. Immediately after getting out of bed I take a cold, tepid or warm bath and rub down vigorously, and I spend from one to two hours every day in grooming my venerable carcass.

"I used to be brought constantly in contact with Henry Ward Beecher and other prominent characters of large physique thirty years or so ago, and they were always bantering me about my small vitality. 'Why don't you laugh and grow fat?' they would say. 'Well,' I would reply, 'I laugh enough, but don't know how to grow fat.' Since I have changed my plan of life I have buried them all.

"I use horsehair mats in rubbing down," he continued, "and then put on vaseline or oil and rub into all parts of my body. The oil taken up by the skin in this way is as good as food, and it keeps the cuticle in excellent condition. This use of oil was common among the Greeks and Romans, and you will find it among many savage tribes."—Washington Cor. New York World.

A Valuable Set of Vestments.

A famous old set of vestments now in the cathedral sacristy was a gift to the late Archbishop Hughes. On these vestments, which were of the finest gold cloth, was worked the archbishop's coat of arms. They were embroidered in gold and incrusted with jewels. This set comprises vestments for twelve priests besides the archbishop. It is valued at $20,000, and was imported from Lyons. Archbishop Corrigan wears these vestments occasionally.—New York Herald.

The Broadway of the Business Man.

The business man knows Broadway as a street blocked with moving drays and wagons, with pavements which move with unbroken lines of men, and that are shut in on either side by the tallest of tall buildings. It is a place where no one strolls, and where a man can as easily swing his cane as a woman could wear a train. Pedestrians do not walk steadily forward here or in a straight line, but dodge in and out like runners on a football field. They all seem to be trying to reach the bank to have a check cashed before 3 o'clock. The man who stops to speak to a friend or to gaze into a shop window is jostled and pushed and shouldered to one side. Every one seems to be trying to catch up to the man just in front of him, and every one has something to do, and something on his mind to think of, too, if his face tells anything.

So intent are they on their errands that they would not recognize their own wives if they passed them by. This is a spot where the thermometer marks fever heat. It is the great fighting ground of the city, where the battle of business goes on from 8 o'clock in the morning until 3 in the afternoon, at which time the work flags a little and grows less and less hurried until 5, when the armies declare an armistice for the day, and march off up town to plan a fresh campaign for the morrow.

The armies begin to arrive before 8, and gather from every point of the compass. The ferryboats land them by thousands and hurry back across the river for thousands more; the elevated roads marshal them from far up town, gathering them by companies at each station, where they are unloaded and scattered over the business districts in regiments. They come over the Brooklyn bridge by tens of thousands in one long, endless procession, and cross the City Hall park at a quick step. It is one of the most impressive sights the city has to offer.—Scribner's.

How Aerated Water Is Produced.

In the neighborhood of the extinct Eifel volcano, near the Rhine, in Germany, are found springs of mineral waters which give off large volumes of natural carbonic acid gas. This natural gas becomes thoroughly purified in passing up through some two or three hundred feet of water, which of course means a considerable pressure upon the gas. This gas, being duly collected on the surface, is subjected by means of pumps to the pressure of five or six hundred pounds per square inch, condensing it into a clear transparent liquid, which is forthwith stored in steel or wrought iron cylinders of special construction and exceptional strength.

The manufacture of aerated waters is now readily carried on by means of these tubes, which are easily transported in a manner at once simple, rapid and inexpensive, no machinery whatever being required. The apparatus consists simply of a closed copper vessel of any required size, nearly filled with ordinary pure water and connected with a tube of compressed gas.

On turning a tap on the table the liberated gas rushes under high pressure into the copper vessel, becomes thoroughly incorporated with the water, and produces forthwith the aerated mineral water which is so largely consumed and so justly appreciated at the present day. The aerated water can now be drawn off for immediate consumption or bottled for future use. Mineral water thus produced is stated to be entirely free from any flavor of chemicals, sometimes discernible in that which has been prepared from artificial carbonic acid gas.—Chambers Journal.

Once Too Often.

A recent German paper tells the story of an elderly man who had for a wife one of those trying persons who, according to their own ideas, are always in the right, and who make it a point of conscience to prove every one else in the wrong.

The poor man was never allowed to make any statement without having it instantly disputed by his accurate but irritating spouse. She had acquired such a habit of correcting and contradicting him that, according to the story, she one day made a mistake which gave her suffering husband a chance to laugh at her.

"Do you remember, my dear," he said in a retrospective mood, "the letter case embroidered with pearl beads that you made for me with your own hands, when we became engaged? It was worn out years ago, but I can still see it very plainly. On one side there was embroidered a beautiful butterfly, and"——

"The butterfly was on the other side!" interrupted his wife, in her most dejected tone.

And she always complained that Mr. Underfeld "was fond of telling stories without any point," whenever he referred to this conversation afterward.

Weighing Machines.

Weighing machines and scales of some kind were in use 1800 B. C., for it is said that Abraham at that time "weighed out" 400 shekels of silver, current money, with the merchant to Ephron the Hittite, as payment for a piece of land, including the cave and all the standing timber "in the field and in the fence." This is said to be the earliest transfer of land of which any record survives, and that the payment was made in the presence of witnesses.

The original form of the weighing scale was probably a bar suspended from the middle, with a board or shell suspended from each end, one to contain the weight, the other to contain the matter to be weighed. The steelyard was probably so called from the material of which it was made and from its former length. It is also known as the Roman balance, and is of great antiquity.—St. Louis Republic.

When Horses Fight.

The herds of horses on a western ranch, roaming over so large a space, rarely encounter one another. When they do the mares evince only the smallest possible amount of curiosity, but join and graze. Different is it with the stallions. With but a moment's preparation, they rush wildly at one another like mad bulls, neighing in what seems the mockery of a neigh, and with head in air and tail curving proudly they rush and plunge and rear, kicking and biting, stamping one on the other until the ground and horses are covered with blood, and exhaustion of one forces a surrender and retreat. As I have said, the fickle mares march off with the conqueror at their head, while the defeated lags wearily behind.—Harper's Weekly.

MISCELLANEOUS.

IRWINS' SALOON

Cor. Edwards and Market Streets,

Independence . Cal.

THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt an furnished in a style second to no one on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.

THE BAR

Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.

JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

PALACE SALOON

LONE PINE, CAL.

—THE FINEST—

WINES,

BEER,

LIQUORS,

& CIGAR

—o—

☞ This Saloon is conducted in a strictly first-class manner, and every attention tendered my patrons. FRED. BURCKHARDT, jl2-tf Lessee.

INDEPENDENCE

SHAVING SALOON.

Shaving, Hair Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.

WM. H. HUFF, Prop'r

NORMAN HOUSE,

Independence, - Cal.

New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates.

☞ Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.

O. I. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

FORBES & TOBEY,

HAWTHORNE, NEV.,

—DEALERS IN—

LUMBER

OF ALL KINDS.

DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS,
LATH,
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.

Matched and Dressed Flooring.
sep11-tf

BELL'S Flouring Mills,

A. N. BELL, Prop.

TRY BELL'S

EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.

Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

A. N. BELL,
dependence, Cal.

For Sale!

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE

Eastside Canal.

There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,

C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and
Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
☞ Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty. ☜
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
Bishop Creek, Cal.,
Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

J. W. P. LAIRD. P. H. MACK.

MACK & LAIRD.
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

F. E. DENSMORE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

A. R. CONKLIN,
Attorney-at-Law
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State of California and Nevada.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)

Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
☞ NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED. ☜
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.

DENTISTS.
OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSfield, opposite the Southern Hotel.
Prompt and careful treatment given and the easiest possible pain inflicted. Address
WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

FOR SALE CHEAP.
Two span first class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.
Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday ..... January 24th
" ..... February 21st
" ..... March 21st
" ..... April 18th
" ..... May 23rd
" ..... June 20th
" ..... July 18th
" ..... August 15th
" ..... September 12th
" ..... October 17th
" ..... November 14th
" ..... December 12th

JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

TO ADVERTISERS
A list of 1000 newspapers divided into STATES AND SECTIONS will be sent on application—FREE.
To those who want their advertising to pay, we can offer no better medium for thorough and effective work than the various sections of our Select Local List. GEO. P. ROWELL & CO.,
Newspaper Advertising Bureau,
10 Spruce Street, New York

OFFICIAL.

NOTICE OF

Sheriff's Sale,

ON FORECLOSURE OF MORTGAGES.

E. H. EDWARDS, Plaintiff,
vs.
WM. F. MATLACK, Administrator of the Estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased Defendant.

Order of Sale and Decree of Foreclosure and Sale.

UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF AN ORDER of sale, upon a decree of foreclosure and sale, issued out of the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, on the 12th day of June, 1891, in an action wherein E. H. Edwards was Plaintiff and Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, was Defendant, and in which said last above mentioned action, E. H. Edwards, the above named Plaintiff, obtained a judgment and decree of foreclosure against Thomas Parker, as Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, Defendant, on the 15th day of November, 1890, for the sums of $1810.02 and $4171.49, gold coin of the United States, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $5981.51, gold coin as aforesaid, which said decree was, on that 15th day of November, 1890, recorded in Judgment Book 1 of said Court at page 281 (Wm. F. Matlack, Administrator of the estate of Charles D. Begole, deceased, the above named Defendant, was by an order of said Superior Court duly made and entered on the 14th day of May, 1891 substituted as Defendant in said action in the place and stead of said Thomas Parker, now deceased.) I am commanded to sell, to satisfy said judgment and decree for the said sum of $1810.02, all those certain lots, pieces or parcels of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

Beginning at a point twenty chains East of the North-west Section corner of Section No. twent-eight, in Township No. fifteen South of Range No. thirty six, East, Mt. Diablo Base and Meridian, (magnetic variation fifteen degrees and fifteen minutes East) thence south thirteen and ninety one-hundredths chains to North-west corner of Josiah G. Dodge's land; thence North, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, twenty two and thirty-one one-hundredths chains to Brewery street in the town of Lone Pine; thence North, twenty-one degrees and forty minutes West, twenty-one one hundredths chains; thence South, sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes West, eighty and ten one-hundredths chains; thence North eight and forty eight one hundredths chains on the North line of Section No. twenty-eight; thence West thirteen and twenty-nine one-hundredths chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing fifteen and one-half acres.

Also a lot of land lying East of the last described tract and on the Wm. L. Moore tract of land North-west of the town of Lone Pine beginning at the North east corner of said last described tract, thirty three and twenty-nine one-hundredths chains East of the North-west corner of Section twenty-eight in Township Fifteen South of Range Thirty-six East, of Mount Diablo Meridian, at an iron post set in the ground; thence, South eight and forty-eight one-hundredths chains to the same from the last described tract of land to the town of Lone Pine; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, eight and seventy one one-hundredths chains to the East side of Brewery street in said town; thence, South twenty one degrees and forty minutes East, fifty one-hundredths chains to the North line of Corral street in said town; thence, North sixty-eight degrees and twenty minutes East, seven and eighty-seven one hundredths chains to the West line of Main street in said town; thence, North twenty-one degrees and forty minutes West, three and ninety-one one-hundredths chains to Section line of said Section twenty-eight; thence, West fifteen chains following the North line of said Section to the place of beginning. Containing eight and seventy-five one hundredths acres.

Also lots Nos. two, three, and the North half of lot six, in block No. 13, upon which is a house; and the fractional part of lots Nos. six, seven and eight in block No. 1 in the town of Lone Pine, in said County and State, as the same are known and designated on the plat of said town now on file in the Recorder's office of said County.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining.

I am also commanded to sell to satisfy said judgment and decree for the said sum of $4171.49, all that certain lot, piece, or parcel of land situate in the County of Inyo, State of California, and bounded and described as follows, to wit:

The East half of the South-west quarter and the West half of the South-east quarter of Section No. twenty-one, in Township No. fifteen South, of Range No. thirty six, East, Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.

Together with all and singular the tenements, hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in any wise appertaining.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on Monday the 6th day of July, 1891, at 12 o'clock M. of that day, in front of the Court House in the County of Inyo, I will, in obedience to said order of sale and decree of foreclosure and sale, sell separately the above described property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy said Plaintiff's judgment, with interest and costs etc., to the highest and best bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States.

Dated this 12th day of June 1891.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff of Inyo County.
By D. HOLLAND,
Undersheriff.

Mack & Laird, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.

Bee Keeper.

Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.

Independence, Inyo Co. Cal

J. W. Murphy.

BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work.

Wagons and Carriages Repaired.

HORSESHOEING, $2.00 for CASH

Shop on Edwards St., opposite the Court House, Independence.

FRED BURCKHARDT

Watchmaker & Jeweler

LONE PINE, CAL.

Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.

☞ All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine.

FRED BURCKHARDT.

OFFICIAL.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

STEVENS DITCH COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Independence, California. Location of Ditch, near Independence.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AT A meeting of the Board of Directors, held the 27th day of June 1891, an assessment (No. 6) of Twenty (20) Cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, at Independence, Cal.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 1st day of August 1891, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on MONDAY, the 24th day of August, 1891, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

P. H. MACK,
Secretary.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.

LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Independence, California. Location of canal, near Independence, Inyo county.

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of a Board of Directors, held on the 30th day of May, 1891, an assessment (No. One) of Fifty (50) cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary at the office of the company, Independence, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 3d day of July, 1891, will be delinquent, and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Saturday, the 25th day of July, 1891 to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

By order of the Board of Directors.

P. H. MACK, Secretary.

NOTCE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JOHN LUCAS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased to the Creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his office in the town of Lone Pine, Inyo county, Cal., the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in said Inyo county, State of California. E. H. EDWARDS,

Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased.

Dated May 5th, 1891.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

IDA C. DECKER, Plaintiff, vs. STEPHEN DECKER, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Stephen Decker, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant; that plaintiff be allowed and decreed to resume her former name of Ida C. Adams, and for general relief, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 17th day of June, A. D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
MACK & LAIRD, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

NOTICE OF SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court in and for the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 6th day of June, 1891, in the matter of the Estate of John Lucas, deceased, the undersigned will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, on Saturday, the 27th day of June, 1891, at 2 o'clock P. M., at the late residence of said deceased, near the town of Lone Pine, County of Inyo, State of California, the following personal property, towit:

117 Head of Stock Cattle.
18 Head of Horses.

Bids or offers in writing will be received at the office of the undersigned, in the said town of Lone Pine, up to and including the 26th day of June, 1891.

E. H. EDWARDS,
Administrator of the Estate of John Lucas, deceased.

Dated June 12th, 1891.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer without cost of repairs than any other machine, Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

BIG PINE HOTEL.

BIG PINE - CAL.

New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates

☞ Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in act, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.

Special attention given to the wants of every guest.

Thos. Williams,
Proprietor.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JULY 3 ..... 1891.

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 1.03¼
Lead, 4 45
Copper, 13.70
Tin, 20 40
Sugar, .05¼
Coffee, 20 @ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 13 @ 19.

Religious Services.

Rev. H. J. Winsor will preach at Lone Pine on Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m.; at Georges Creek, 2:30 p. m.; at Independence, 7:30 p. m.

Children's day exercises, July 5th.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

FRIDAY, June 26, 1891

W. H. Uhlmeyer vs Sylvania Mining Co.—Filed Summons.

TUESDAY, June 30, 1891.

In the matter of the estate and guardianship of Oren C. Johnson, Albert H. Johnson and Mary L. Johnson, minors.—Filed various papers in case.

Mrs. Geo. L. Drake of Bishop is visiting at Independence.

Tickets for ball to-night can be obtained at Rhine's store. Price, $3.

J. C. Crocker has returned to Bakersfield from a trip through Arizona.

Marshall Naylor and W. Shalton were down from Big Pine early in the week.

Pittsburg, Kansas, offers a purse of $30,000 for a fight between Sullivan and Slavin.

A telegram from Hawthorne states there are three on the special coming down today.

Jerry Fitzgerald came in from Darwin on yesterday morning's train to take in the Fourth.

There will be a larger attendance at the ball to-night than at any ever given in the town.

Independence has assumed a festive appearance. Bunting is floating to the breeze everywhere.

John E. Jones, Jr. and Charley Hilton of Round Valley arrived in town yesterday to spend the Fourth.

Look out for your fire-crackers, boys. A very small boy and a very small cracker may start a very large fire.

Dan Cofer has leased the Densmore orchard and is prepared to fill all orders for fruit. Shipments will be made promptly.

At San Francisco last Monday the thermometer registered 99 degrees in the shade. On the same day it registered 98 at Independence.

At half past two o'clock yesterday morning the thermometer registered 89 degrees at Independence. This is a most unusual occurrence.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelligan and family arrived from Reno last Monday on a visit to the parents of Mrs. Nelligan, Mr. and Mrs. James Malone of Camp Independence.

The little seven year old daughter of Governor and Mrs. Markham died at Sacramento last Saturday morning. The remains were taken to the Governor's home at Pasadena for burial.

A man named Murphy was arrested last week at Pigeon Spring, near Piper's ranch, and convicted of selling whisky to Indians. He was sentenced to two years in the State Prison at Carson, the full extent of the law in Nevada.

It is reported that all but two of the men employed on the Union mine at Cerro Gordo have been set to work on another claim owned by the same company where a couple of chloriders recently made a rich strike.

Letters received from John Baxter lately are not encouraging. The doctors have not yet removed the cause of his original illness, and he has lately been afflicted with chills and fever. He will remain in San Francisco for some time yet.

At the last meeting of the Board of Supervisors of Sacramento County the rates of advertising were fixed at $1.50 per square for first insertion, and $1.00 each subsequent insertion, this being the rate agreed on by the Editorial Association of California.

The coinage of silver dollars has been been suspended at the Mint at Carson. Five of the lady adjusters have been discharged, and four workmen in other departments have been laid off. This will no doubt be followed up by the suspension of others in the course of the coming month, and the Mint will only rank as an assay office. It is a blow to Carson.

There are sheep on a thousand hills, and thousands of sheep on a hill in this county this summer, and License Collector Hays will probably collect close to $10,000 for licenses on sheep and cattle. This, with a slightly increased assessment roll will be acceptable, particularly in the face of that "heavy indemnity."—Chronicle Union.

Following are the names of the players in the match game of baseball tomorrow: Bishop, J. Tracy, catcher, Ed Ober' pitcher, F. Bulpit, Jos. McNally, Grant Clark, Ira Clark, Geo, Clarke Geo. Drake, W. McCrosky, Deby, and Somers. Independence, A. L. Conklin, catcher, W. Ober, pitcher, H. Hamilton, F. Sherrer, C. Hamilton, D. Holland, Ed. Shepherd, Geo. Lewis, W. M. Richard and Henry Rhine. The game is to be five innings for $75 a side.

A Good Showing.

A visit to the ranch of W. L. Hunter of Georges Creek will show what can be done by labor and water. On land that two years ago was sage-brush and sand, a cutting of alfalfa has just been made that would be a revelation to settlers in less favored localities. A lot of new land was seeded this year and is now bearing a fine crop of grain. A young orchard set out a few years ago is thriving and in time will be the most valuable adjunct of the farm. Any intending settler should visit this place and see for himself what can be accomplished on desert land.

Rates of Fare and Time Table.

A Special Train has been chartered and the following will be the rates for return trip tickets:

Hawthorne	$7 50
Candelaria, Belleville	6 50
Soda Springs and Rhodes	6 50
Benton	4 00
Bishop	2 50
Alvord	1 50
Lone Pine	1 00
Keeler	2 00

Following is the time table for the Fourth of July special.

Leaves	Hawthorne	6:30 a. m.	July 3d.
	Luning	7:30 a. m.
	Soda	8:00 a. m.
	Rhodes	8:10 a. m.
	Belleville	8:40 a. m.
	Candelaria	9:15 a. m.
	Benton	11:50 a. m.
	Bishop	1:50 p. m.
	Alvord	2:30 p. m.
Arrives	Indep'dence	3:50 p. m.
Leaves	Keeler	5:10 p. m.
	Lone Pine	5:40 p. m.
Arrives	Indep'dence	6:20 p. m.
Leaves	Indep'dence	7:45 a. m.	July 5th.
Arrives	Lone Pine	8:25 a. m.
	Keeler	8:55 a. m.
Leaves	Indep'dnce	10:10 a. m.
Arrives	Alvord	11:30 a. m.
	Bishop	12 35 p. m.
	Benton	2:15 p. m.
	Candelaria	5:00 p. m.
	Belleville	5:30 p. m.
	Rhodes	6:00 p. m.
	Soda	6:10 p. m.
	Luning	6:40 p. m.
	Hawthorne	7:40 p. m.

In the Cooler.

On Wednesday Constable Drake arrived from Bishop with Charles L. Johnson, booked for one hundred days in the county jail for selling whisky to Indians. Drake made the arrest on the 28th and took his man before J. E. Dunlap, J. P. He entered a plea of guilty and was sentenced to a fine of $100, and directed to be confined in the county jail one day for each dollar of the fine until payment is made or the time has expired. Sheriff Gorman promptly paid out his private purse the reward of $10 which he offers for the arrest and conviction of every one guilty of the crime of selling whisky to Indians Mr. Gorman is determined to break up this nefarious traffic if possible, and he is in a fair way to succeed. A drunken Indian is getting to be a rare occurrence. In every case where such conviction occurs the magistrate should promptly give the offender the full limit of the law. It is eminently necessary that this law be enforced to its full extent, more especially since the recent outrage in Mono county. "Scratch a Russian and you find a Tartar." Provide an Indian with whisky and all his pseudo civilization vanishes and he betrays the Savage he will always remain. A number of Indian outrages occurred in the past year and in every case whisky played a prominent part. Fortunately they kept the killing among themselves, but they are filled with a blood thirsty instinct and it does not pay to take chances.

Bound To Get Him.

Discussing the killing of the Chinaman at Bridgeport recently by Walker Lake Indians the Homer Index says:

"Yesterday we had a long conversation with an intelligent Indian who was present at the affair. He speaks English fluently and is quite competent to form an opinion. He said: 'The Reservation Indians were bound to have that Chinaman, no matter who got hurt, and the squaws nagged them on. Most all had guns and plenty of ammunition. If the Sheriff had started a fight the squaws would have set fire to the town in a hundred places while the fight was going on. Cody couldn't do anything. The whole town couldn't stop them. That's all there is to it.'"

This fact emphasizes the recent effort to raise a company of National Guard in Owens Valley. If one Indian talks so "sassy" it is reasonable to suppose that others feel so. A company sufficiently equipped with arms and ammunition should be organized at once.

A Rich Strike.

A letter received from Darwin yesterday states that a rich strike of ore has recently been made in the Promontory mine. In past years this mine has yielded thousands of dollars and there is a strong belief that the present strike will be as valuable as any discovery yet made. A short time ago Mr. Waterman sent two men there to do assessment work. They went down the old incline twenty feet and started to drive toward the foot-wall. After going in about four feet they struck a fine body of lead ore two and a half feet thick. It assays 130 ounces silver and 50 per cent lead per ton. The new ledge dips about ten degrees more vertical than the old incline. If this new strike realizes the expectations of its discoverers it will make lively times in Darwin. The Promontory is owned by Messrs. Waterman, P. Reddy, J. S. Gorman and the Eddy estate.

Another Railroad Rumor.

The Salt Lake Tribune is still publishing railroad rumors. The latest is the following:

It is stated now from good authority that the Servier Valley extension of the Rio Grande Western means a California line, and that the Santa Fe is backing it. The line may go through Beckwith Pass, and then again it may go farther south. One thing is evident, viz, a line other than the Central Pacific is sadly needed between this city and San Francisco, and it cannot come too soon.

Hope for Him.

"I don't know that you will be able to do much with him," said a father to a principal of a school, to whom he had brought his son as a pupil, "he is so full of mischief."

"Does he tell the truth?" asked the principal. "Can I always depend upon his word?"

"Oh, yes," said the father, "he is honest; he will tell the truth, even when it is against himself; you may depend upon that."

"Then we can manage him," said the principal. "He will make a reliable, manly man."—Christian Leader.

NOTICE.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE Board of Supervisors of Inyo county, State of California, will meet as a

BOARD OF EQUALIZATION

—ON—

MONDAY, JULY SIXTH, 1891,

At the office of the said Board, in the town of Independence, to examine the assessment book and equalize the assessment of property in said County for the year 1891, and will continue in session for that purpose until the business of equalization is disposed of.

J. N. YANDELL,
Clerk of the Board of Supervisors.

HEIR TO $500,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A dispatch was received yesterday from Baltimore announcing that George F. Beiser of Brooklyn had become heir to a vast estate there valued at $500,000. The property came through relatives who emigrated from France in the days of the Huguenots. Mr. Beiser is an accountant in a Fulton street clothing house. Bruce's Law and Inquiry Agency, of Chicago, Ill., prosecuted his claim.—Louisville Courier-Journal, Nov. 27

We are Mr. Beiser's lawyers and by him seeing our advertisement, became the agent of his good fortune. If your ancestors came from the old country write to us, and enclose $1 for our list of heirs. There are more than half a billion dollars in Great Britain and Germany, unclaimed, which rightly belong to people in the United States.

BRUCE'S LAW AND INQUIRY OFFICE,
164 and 166 Randolph St.,
Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The partnership heretofore existing between W. S. Enos and O. I. Mairs is dissolved by mutual consent.

Witness our hands June 15th, 1891.

W. S. ENOS.
O. I. MAIRS.

BLACKSMITHING,

Horseshoeing, General Iron

—AND—

WAGON WORK.

PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP

Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

W. F. MATLACK.....PROPRIETOR.

Horseshoeing .....$2.00 for Cash

For particulars, call and see

W. F. MATLACK.

BOOTS AND SHOES

MADE AND REPAIRED.

THE BEST MATERIAL.

FIRST-CLASS WORK.

Repairs done Promptly.

Prices Reasonable.

A. J. DAVIS,
nov-30-tf Independence,

NOTICE

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

A. W. Eibeshutz

Independence, Cal.

—DEALER IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for

Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of Caltfornia:

Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

INDEPENDENCE

MEAT MARKET,

J. C. ROEPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including

Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.

A well appointed shop, with refrigerator, ensuring the purity of meat, and every effort made to give satisfaction to patrons. j19-tf

P. W. FORBES. P. H. MACK.

MACK & FORBES.

Real Estate Agents,

Address, P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal. P. W. FORBES. Bishop, Cal.

1776 Breathes there a man with soul so dead, 1891
1776 Who never to himself hath said, 1891
1776 "This is my own, my native land!" 1891

INDEPENDENCE GLORIOUS TRIBUTE.

—TO OUR—

NATAL DAY.

Under the management of

POLETA PARLOR, N. D. G. W.
INYO PARLOR NO. 165, N. S. G. W.
MT. WHITNEY PARLOR NO. 136, N. S. G. W

A CORDIAL INVITATION EXTEDNED TO ALL

Commencing with a

GRAND BALL

Friday Evening, July 3d. Grand March at 8 Sharp.

Excellent music and splendid floor. Supper in the Annex, with seating capacity for all.

BERTRAND RHINE, FLOOR DIRECTOR.

FLOOR COMMITTE:

Milt. Clark, S. A. Chapman, R. Hessian, F. E. Denrmore, J. D. Lewis, J. E. Shepherd Robt. Carrasco, Ben Lasky, Henry Rhine

SATURDAY, JULY FOURTH.

Grand salute . . . . . At sunrise.

Parade and Literary Exercises.

Parade forms at Reddy place. Line of march direct to Pavilion.

GEORGE H. LEWIS, GRAND MARSHALL.

MISS MARGIE BELL, GODDESS OF LIBERTY.

PROGRAMME:

Prayer, Rev. H. J. Winsor. Oration, F. E. Densmore
Red, White & Blue, Choir. Unfurl the Glorious Banner, Miss M Mulholland,
Remarks, by C. W. Craig, President of the Day. Declaration of Independence,
Music, by the Band. America, Choir.
Recitation, Miss Brockman Benediction, Chaplain,
Hail Columbia, by Band. Recitation, Miss L. Clark.

FUN FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS,
125 YARD FOOT RACE,
BASE BALL TOURNAMENT

Wheelbarrow race	$5 00
Footrace, girls under 12 years	3 00
16 years	5 00
Footrace, boys under 12 years	3 00
15 years	5 00
Sack race	5 00

MISCELLANEOUS.

THOMAS & HILL,

—DEALERS IN—

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL,

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $25 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. Can work in spare time or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EDWARD CHENOT

Independence, Cal.,

INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of

GENERAL MERCHANDIS

....Consisting of....

GROCERIES.

PROVISIONS

Tobacco, Cigars,

WINES AND LIQUORS

FLOUR & GRAIN

Together with an Assortment of

DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING

ETC., ETC

Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and price before purchasing elsewhere.

E. CHENOT.
Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
n47tf

Lake View Hotel

Keeler, Cal.

John Barnes, Prop'r.

First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR

—Is constantly supplied with the finest—

Wines,
Liquors,
& Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.

Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.

The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the

LARGEST AND BEST STOCK

of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.

PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.

All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.

Address orders and packages to

HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,

m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

BIG 10P ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.

Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.

O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE

BISHOP.

Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St

In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable

S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK

BREWERY,

L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.

All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.

Customers supplied on all points

Of the C. & C. Railroad.

Send orders to

L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Pioneer

Livery & Feed Stables.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, patrons can be assured of finding there the best of Buggy Teams, Saddle Horses, and

Livery Accommodations

in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.

O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor.

A NEW DEAL!

LONE PINE

Livery. Feed & Sale Stable.

A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.

OPPOSITE SLWART HOUSE.

Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,

—DEALER IN—

General Merchandise,

LONE PINE,

INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,

BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.

Dealer In GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS
Supplies

PROVISIONS,

&c., &c., &c.

A. K. EUGLEY,

Big Pine, Cal.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, GEORGE STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R. R

TAKING EFFECT

Sunday, Novembe 16,

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1	To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Mound House	11:30 p m.	5.50 p. m
Dayton	12:00 p. m.	5:10 p. m.
Wabuska	2.05 p. m.	2.50 p. m
Hawthorne	5 50 p. m.	11:10 a. m.
Luning	7.05 p. m.	9.55 a. m.
Soda Springs	8:05 p. m.	9:15 a. m
Belleville	9:15 p. m.	7:55a. m.
Candelaria	Ar. 10.00 p. m.	Lv. 7:20 a. m.
	No. 3.	No. 4.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Belleville	8 20 a. m	5:25 p m.
Benton	11:50 a m	1:35 a.m.
Bishop Creek	2:00 p. m.	11:00 a. m
Alvord	2.45 p. m.	10:00 a. m
Independence	4:20 p. m.	8:30 a. m
Lone Pine	5:10 p. m.	7:40 a. m
Keeler	Ar 5:55 p. m.	Lv. 7:00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

At HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (3 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

At LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's. tri-weekly stages (leavin Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville Grantsville and Belmont.

At CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver P Montezuma Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.

R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.

D A BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles

OF

Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies'
Wear, etc., etc

AT

L. WOOLF

CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries a canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

THE CASH STORE

Is Where You Get

WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE

Blacksmith Shop.

R. C. Spear, Prop'r

—ALL WORK ON—

MINING TOOLS,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS
& FREIGHTING OUTFITS

—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—

HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING

All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON

KEELER, CAL.

In Lake View Hotel

BEER, WINES,

LIQUORS and CIGARS

All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.

JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.

J. C. MILLER, Lessee.

—THE BAR—

Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of

WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CGARS

The most careful attention given to the the amusement and comfort of patrons.

A FINE BILLIARD TABLE!

Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon. sept-12 td

Copyright, 1890.

He who waits for an inactive liver to do its work, exposes himself to all the diseases that come from tainted blood. Don't wait! Languor and loss of appetite warn you that graver ills are close behind. You can keep them from coming; you can cure them if they've come—with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It's the only blood and liver medicine that's guaranteed, in every case, to benefit or cure. Your money back if it doesn't. Thus, you only pay for the good you get. Can you ask more? It cleanses the system and cures pimples, blotches, eruptions and all skin and scalp diseases. Scrofulous affections, as fever-sores, hip-joint disease, swellings and tumors yield to its superior alterative properties.

Take care of the poor Indians and the poor Indians will take hair of you.

THROUGH THE WEARY HOURS

Of many a night, made doubly long by its protracted agony, the rheumatic sufferer tosses to and fro on his sleepless coach, vainly praying for that rest which only comes by fits and starts. His malady is one which ordinary medicines too often fail to relieve, but there is ample evidence to prove that the efficient blood depurent, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, affords the rheumatic a reliable means of relief. Check the malady in its incipient stages, when the first premonitory twinges come on, with this agreeable medicine, and avoid years of torture. Whatever be the rationale of the active influence of the Bitters upon this malady, certain it is that no evidence relating to its effect is more direct and positive than that which relates to its action in cases of rheumatism. Like all sterling remedies, however, it deserves a protracted, systematic trial, and should not be abandoned because not at once remedial. It is equally efficacious in dyspepsia, indigestion and kindred diseases.

A man is always ready to listen to words of wisdom when he is speaking them himself.

$100 REWARD $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Does advertising pay? Well, Mr. Barnum died worth about $5,000,000.

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Porterfield & Losey, 838 Market street, San Francisco.

Be not deceived by the grease on the slide of folly; there are slivers under it.

For 24 years Dobbins' Electric Soap has been imitated by unscrupulous soap makers. Why? Because it is best of all and has an immense sale. Be sure and get Dobbins' and take no other. Your grocer has it, or will get it.

Beauty is only skin deep, but it will get a seat in the horse car every time.

Use Enameline Stove Polish; no dust, no smell.

USE St. Jacobs Oil
The Great REMEDY FOR PAIN
CURES
Sprains & Strains
Burns Scalds
Stiffness.
Stiff Neck, Soreness
also Sore Throat
Wounds, Cuts, Swellings
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., Baltimore, Md.

SCOTT'S EMULSION
DOES CURE
CONSUMPTION
In Its First Stages.
Be sure you get the genuine.

CREOSOZONE
THE GREATEST
Flea & Chicken Lice Killer.
Ask your dealer for it, or send for Free Circular to Petaluma Incubator Co., Petaluma, Cal.

THE SPLENDID SPUR.

Being Memoirs of the Adventures of Mr. John Marvel, a Servant of His late Majesty King Charles I, in the years 1642-3: written by himself.

EDITED IN MODERN ENGLISH BY "Q."

My chance was, of course, to descend, which I did on tiptoe, hearing no sound. The stairs twisted down and down, and ended by a stout door with another lamp shining above it. After listening a moment I decided to be bold, and lifted the latch. A faint cry saluted me.

I stood face to face with the jailer's daughter.

The room was a small one, well lit, and lined about the walls with cups and bottles. 'Twas, as I guessed, a tap room for the soldiers; and the girl had been scouring one of the pewter mugs when my entrance startled her. She stood up, white as if painted, and gasped:

"Quick—quick! Down here behind the counter for your life!"

There was scarce time to drop on my knees before a couple of troopers lounged in, demanding mulled beer. The girl bustled about to serve them, while the pair leaned their elbows on the counter, and in this easy attitude began to chat.

"A shrewd night!"

"Ay, a very freezing frost! Lucky that soldiering is not all sentry work, or I for one 'ud ensue my natural trade o' plumbing. But let's be cheerful, for the voice o' the turtle is heard i' the land."

"Hey?"

The man took a pull at his hot beer before explaining.

"The turtle signifieth the Earl o' Stamford, that is to-night visiting Col. Essex in secret; an' this is the import—war, bloody war. Mark me."

"Stirring, striving times!"

"You may say so! 'A hath fifteen thousand men, the earl, no farther off than Taunton—why, my dear, how pale you look, to be sure!"

"'Tis my head that aches," answered the girl.

The men finished their drink and sauntered out. I crept from under the counter and looked at her.

"Father'll kill me for this!"

"Then you shall say: Is it forward or back I must go?"

"Neither." She pulled up a trap close beside her feet and pointed out a ladder leading down to the darkness. "The courts are full of troopers," she added.

"The cellar?"

She nodded.

"Quick! There's a door at the far end. It leads to the crypt of St. John's chapel. You'll find the key beside it and a lantern. Here is flint and steel." She reached them down from a shelf beside her. "Crouch down, or they'll spy you through the window. From the crypt a passage takes you to the governor's house. How to escape then, God knows! 'Tis the best I can think on."

I thanked her and began to step down the ladder. She stood for a moment to watch, leaving the trap open for better light. Between the avenue of casks and bins I stumbled towards the door and lantern that were just to be discerned at the far end of the cellar. As I struck steel on flint I heard the trap close, and since then have never set eyes on that kind hearted girl.

The lantern lit, I took the key and fitted it to the lock. It turned noisily, and a cold whiff of air struck my face. Gazing round this new chamber I saw two lines of squat pillars, supporting a low, arched roof. 'Twas the crypt beneath the chapel, and smelt vilely. A green moisture trickled down the pillars, and dripped on the tombs beneath them.

At the end of this dreary place was a broken door, consisting only of a plank or two, that I easily pulled away; and beyond, a narrow passage, over which I heard the tread of troopers plainly, as they paced to and fro; also the muffled note of the clock, sounding 7.

The passage went fairly straight, but was blocked here and there with fallen stones, over which I scrambled as best I could. And then, suddenly, I was near pitching down a short flight of steps. I held the lantern aloft and looked.

At the steps' foot widened out a low room, whereof the ceiling, like that of the crypt, rested on pillars. Between these every inch of space was piled with barrels, chests and great pyramids of round shot. In each corner lay a heap of rusty pikes. Of all this the signification was clear. I stood in the munition room of the castle.

But what chiefly took my notice was a great door, studded with iron nails, that barred all exit from the place. Over the barrels I crept towards it, keeping the lantern high, in dread of firing any loose powder. 'Twas fast locked.

I think that, for a moment or two, I could have wept. But in a while the thought struck me that with the knife in my pocket 'twas possible to cut away the wood around the lock. "Courage!" said I, and, pulling it forth, knelt down to work.

Luck in life has always used me better than my deserts. At an hour's end there I was, hacking away steadily, yet had made but little progress. And then, pressing the knife deep, I broke the blade off short. The door upon the far side was cased with iron.

Tramp! tramp!

'Twas the sound of a man's footfall, and to the ear appeared to be descending a flight of steps on the other side of the door. I bent my ear to the keyhole; then stepped to a cask of bullets that stood handy by. I took out a dozen, felt in my pocket for Delia's kerchief that she had given me, caught up a pike from the pile stacked in the corner, and, softly blowing out my light, stood back to be concealed by the door when it opened.

The footsteps still descended. I heard an aged voice muttering:

"Shrivel my bones—ugh! ugh! Wintry work—wintry work! Here's an hour to send a grandfatherly man a-groping for a keg o' powder!"

A wheezy cough closed the sentence, as a key was with difficulty fitted in the lock.

"Ugh! ugh! Sure, the lock an' I be a pair, for stiff joints."

The door creaked back against me, and a shaft of light pierced the darkness.

Within the threshold, with his back to me, stood a gray bearded servant, and tottered so that the lantern shook in his hand. It shamed me to lift a pike against one so weak. Instead, I dropped it with a clatter and leaped forward. The old fellow jumped like a boy, turned and faced me with dropped jaw, which gave me an opportunity to thrust four or five bullets, not over roughly, into his mouth. Then, having turned him on his back, I strapped Delia's kerchief tight across his mouth and took the lantern from his hand.

Not a word was said. Sure, the poor old man's wits were shaken, for he lay meek as a mouse, and stared up at me while I unstrapped his belt and bound his feet with it. His hands I trussed up behind him with his own neckcloth; and, catching up the lantern, left him there. I locked the door after me, and slipped the key into my pocket as I sprang up the stairs beyond.

But here a light was shining, so once more I extinguished my lantern. The steps ended in a long passage, with a handsome lamp hanging at the uttermost end, and beneath this lamp I stepped into a place that filled me with astonishment.

'Twas, I could not doubt, the entrance hall of the governor's house. An oak door, very massive, fronted me; to left and right were two smaller doors that plainly led into apartments of the house. Also to my left, and nigher than the door on that side, ran up a broad staircase, carpeted and brightly lit all the way, so that a very blaze fell on me as I stood. Under the first flight, close to my left shoulder, was a line of pegs with many cloaks and hats depending therefrom. Underfoot, I remember, the hall was richly tiled in squares of red and white marble.

Now, clearly, this was a certain place wherein to be caught. "But," thought I, "behind one of the two doors, to left or to right, must lie the governor's room of business; and in that room—as likely as not—his keys." Which door, then, should I choose? For to stay here was madness.

While I stood pondering, the doubt was answered for me. From behind the right hand door came a burst of laughter and clinking of glasses, on top of which a man's voice—the voice of Col. Essex—called out for more wine.

I took a step to the door on the left, paused for a second or two with my hand on the latch, and then cautiously pushed it open. The chamber was empty.

'Twas a long room, with a light burning on a square center table, and around it a mass of books, loose papers and documents strewn, seemingly without order. The floor, too, was littered with them. Clearly this was the colonel's office.

I gave a rapid glance around. The lamp's rays scarce illumined the far corners; but in one of these stood a great leathern screen, and over a fireplace near it a rack was hanging, full of swords, pistols and walking canes. Stepping towards it, I caught sight of Anthony's sword, suspended there amongst the rest (they had taken it from me on the day of my examination), which now I took down and strapped at my side. I then chose out a pistol or two, slipped them into my sash and advanced to the center table.

Under the lamp lay his majesty's letter, open.

My hand was stretched out to catch it up, when I heard across the hall a door opened and the sound of men's voices. They were coming towards the office.

There was scarce time to slip back and hide behind the screen before the door latch was lifted and two men entered, laughing yet.

"Business, my lord—business," said the first (twas Col. Essex); "I have much to do to-night."

"Sure," the other answered, "I thought we had settled it. You are to lend me a thousand out of your garrison"——

"Which on my own part I would willingly do. Only I beg you to consider, my lord, that my position here hangs on a thread. The extreme men are already against me. They talk of replacing me by Fiennes"——

"Nat Fiennes is no soldier."

"No; but he's a bigot—a stronger recommendation. Should this plan miscarry and I lose a thousand men"——

"Heavens alive, man! It cannot miscarry. Hark ye; there's Ruthen of Plymouth will take the south road with all his forces. A day's march behind I shall follow—along roads to northward—parallel for a way, but afterwards converging. The Cornishmen are all in Bodmin. We shall come on them with double their number—ay, almost treble. Can you doubt the issue?"

"Scarcely, with the Earl of Stamford for general."

The earl was too far occupied to notice this compliment.

"'Twill be swift and secret," he said, "as Death himself—and as sure. Let the fact that Hopton is all at sixes and sevens since the marquis shipped for Wales, and at daggers drawn with Mohun."

Said the colonel slowly, "Ay, the notion is good enough. Were I not in this corner, I would not think twice. Listen now: only this morning they forced me to order a young man's hanging, who might if kept alive be forced in time to give us news of value. I dared not refuse."

"He that you caught with the king's letter?"

"Ay—a trumpery missive, dealing with naught but summoning of the sheriff's posse and the like. There is more behind, could we but wait to get at it."

"The gallows may loosen his tongue. And how of the girl that was taken too?"

"I have her in safe keeping. This very evening I shall visit her and make another trial to get some speech. Which puts me in mind"——

The colonel tinkled a small hand bell that lay on the table.

The pause that followed was broken by the earl.

"May I see that letter?"

The colonel handed it, and tinkled the bell again, more impatiently. At length steps were heard in the hall, and a servant opened the door.

"Where is Giles?" asked the colonel. "Why are you taking his place?"

"Giles can't be found, your honor."

"Hey?"

"He's a queer oldster, your honor, an' may be gone to bed wi' his aches and pains."

(I knew pretty well that Giles had done no such thing; but be sure I kept the knowledge safe behind my screen.)

"Then go seek him, and say— No, stop, I can't wait. Order the coach around at the barbican in twenty minutes from now—twenty minutes, mind, without fail. And say—'twill save time—the fellow's to drive me to Mistress Finch's house in St. Thomas street—sharp!"

As the man departed on his errand the earl laid down his majesty's letter.

"Hang the fellow," he said, "if they want it; the blame, if any, will be theirs. But, in the name of heaven, colonel, don't fail in lending me this thousand men! 'Twill finish the war out of hand."

"I'll do it," answered the colonel slowly.

"And I'll remember it," said the earl. "To-morrow, at 6 o'clock, I set out."

The two men shook hands on their bargain and left the room, shutting the door after them.

I crept forth from behind the screen, my heart thumping on my ribs. Thus far it had been all fear and trembling with me, but now this was changed to a kind of panting joy. 'Twas not that I had spied the prison keys hanging near the fireplace, nor that behind the screen lay a heap of the colonel's riding boots, whereof a pair, ready spurred, fitted me choicely well; but that my ears tingled with news that turned my escape to a matter of public welfare, and also that the way to escape lay planned in my head.

Shod in the colonel's boots I advanced again to the table. With sealing wax and the governor's seal, that lay handy, I closed up the king's letter and, sticking it in my breast, caught down the bunch of keys and made for the door.

The hall was void. I snatched down a cloak and heavy broad brimmed hat from one of the pegs and, donning them, slipped back the bolts of the heavy door. It opened without noise. Then, with a last hitch of the cloak, to bring it well about me, I stepped forth into the night, shutting the door quietly on my heels.

My feet were on the pavement of the inner ward. Above, one star only broke the blackness of the night. Across the court was a sentry tramping. As I walked boldly up he stopped short by the gate between the wards and regarded me.

Now was my danger. I knew not the right key for the wicket, and if I fumbled the fellow would detect me for certain. I chose one and drew nearer; the fellow looked, saluted, stepped to the wicket and opened it himself.

"Good night, colonel!"

I did not trust myself to answer, but passed rapidly through to the outer ward. Here, to my joy, in the arched passage of the barbican gate, was the carriage waiting, the porter standing beside the door; and here also, to my dismay, was a torch alight, and under it half a dozen soldiers chatting. A whisper passed on my approach—"The colonel"—and they hurried into the guard room.

"Good evening, colonel!" The porter bowed low, holding the door wide.

I passed him rapidly, climbed into the shadow of the coach and drew a long breath.

Then ensued a hateful pause, as the gates were unbarred. I gripped my knees for impatience.

The driver spoke a word to the porter, who came round to the coach door again.

"To Mistress Finch's, is it not?"

"Ay," I muttered; "and quickly."

The coachman touched up his pair. The wheels moved; went quicker. We are outside the castle.

With what relief I leaned back as the castle gates closed behind us! And with what impatience at our slow pace I sat upright again next minute! The wheels rumbled over the bridge, and immediately we were rolling easily down hill through a street of some importance; but by this time the shutters were up along the shop fronts and very few people abroad. At the bottom we turned sharp to the left along a broader thoroughfare, and then suddenly drew up.

"Are we come?" I wondered. But no, 'twas the city gate, and here we had to wait for three minutes at least till the sentries recognized the colonel's coach and opened the doors to us. They stood on this side and that, presenting arms as we rattled through; and next moment I was crossing a broad bridge, with the dark Avon on either side of me and the vessels thick thereon, their lanterns casting long lines of yellow on the jetty water, their masts and cordage looming up against the dull glare of the city.

Soon we were between lines of building once more—shops, private dwellings and warehouses intermixed; then passed a tall church, and in about two minutes more drew up again. I looked out.

Facing me was a narrow gateway landing to a house that stood somewhat back from the street, as if slipping away from between the lines of shops that wedged it on either hand. Over the grill a link was burning. I stepped from the coach, opened the gate, and, crossing the small court, rang at the house bell.

At first there was no answer. I rang again, and now had the satisfaction to hear a light footfall coming. A bolt was pulled and a girl appeared holding a candle high in her hand. Quick as thought I stepped past her into the passage.

"Delia!"

"Jack!"

"Hist! Close the door. Where is Mistress Finch?"

"Up stairs, expecting Col. Essex. Oh, the happy day! Come." She led me into a narrow back room, and, setting down the light, regarded me. "Jack, my eyes are red for thee!"

"I see they are. To-morrow I was to be hanged."

She put her hands together, catching her breath; and very lovely I thought her, in her straight gray gown and Puritan cap.

"They have been questioning me. Didst get my letter?"

The answer was on my lip when there came a sound that made us both start.

'Twas the dull echoing of a gun firing, up at the castle.

"Delia, what lies at the back here?"

"A garden and a garden door; after these a lane leading to Redcliff street."

"I must go, this moment."

"And I?"

She did not wait my answer, but, running out into the passage, she came swiftly back with a heavy key. I opened the window.

"Delia! De-lia!" 'Twas a woman's voice calling her, at the head of the stairs.

"Ay, Mistress Finch."

"Who was at the door?"

I sprang into the garden and held forth a hand to Delia. "In one moment, mistress!" called she, and in one moment was hurrying with me across the dark garden beds. As she fitted her key to the garden gate I heard the voice again.

"De-lia!"

'Twas drowned in a wild rat-a-tat! on the street door and the shouts of many voices. We were close pressed.

"Now, Jack—to the right, for our lives! Ah, these clumsy skirts!"

We turned into the lane and raced down it. For my part, I swore to drown myself in Avon rather than let those troopers retake me. I heard their outcries about the house behind us as we stumbled over the frozen rubbish heaps with which the lane was bestrewn.

"What's our direction?" panted I, catching Delia's hand to help her along.

"To the left now—for the river."

We struck into a narrow side street, and with that heard a watchman bawl:

"Past nine o' the night, an' a!"——

The shock of our collision sent him to finish his say in the gutter.

"Thieves!" he yelled.

But already we were twenty yards away, and now in a broader street, whereof one side was wholly lined with warehouses. And here, to our dismay, we heard shouts behind, and the noise of feet running.

About half way down the street I spied a gateway standing ajar, and pulled Delia aside into a courtyard littered with barrels and timbers, and across it to a black, empty barn of a place, where a flight of wooden steps glimmered, that led to an upper story. We climbed these stairs at a run.

"Faugh! What a vile smell!"

The loft was piled high with great bales of wool, as I found by the touch, and their odor enough to satisfy an army. Nevertheless I was groping about for a place to hide when Delia touched me on the arm and pointed.

Looking, I descried in the gloom a tall quadrilateral of purple, not five steps away, with a speck of light shining near the top of it, and three dark streaks running down the middle, whereof one was much thicker than the rest. 'Twas an open doorway; the speck, a star framed within it; the broad streak, a ship's mast reaching up; and the lesser ones two ends of a rope, working over a pulley above my head, and used for lowering the bales of wool on shipboard.

Advancing, I stood on the sill and looked down. On the black water, twenty feet below, lay a three masted trader, close against the warehouse. My toes stuck out over her deck, almost.

At first glance I could see no sign of life on board, but presently was aware of a dark figure leaning over the bulwarks, near the bows. He was quite motionless. His back was towards us, blotted against the black shadow; and the man engaged only, it seemed, in watching the bright splash of light flung by the ship's lantern on the water beneath him.

I resolved to throw myself on the mercy of this silent figure, and put out a hand to test the rope. One end of it was fixed to a bale of wool that lay, as it had been lowered, on the deck. Flinging myself on the other, I found it sink gently from the pulley, as the weight below moved slowly upwards; and sinking with it, I held on till my feet touched the deck.

Still the figure in the bows was motionless.

I paid out my end of the rope softly, lowering back the bale of wool; and, as soon as it rested again on deck, signaled to Delia to let herself down.

She did so. As she alighted, and stood beside me, our hands bungled. The rope slipped up quickly, letting down the bale with a run.

We caught at the rope, and stopped it just in time; but the pulley above creaked vociferously. I turned my head.

The man in the bows had not moved.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

One of the Richest Sovereigns.

The little princess of the Netherlands, when she becomes queen of Holland, will be one of the richest sovereigns, if not the richest sovereign, in Europe. The civil list of Holland, which is secured on the revenues of Borneo, is very large—£3,000,000 per annum, it is said. The duchy of Luxembourg passes to the grand duke of Nassau, and then becomes a portion of the German empire, but the kingdom of Holland, not coming under the operations of the Salic law, descends to the king's little daughter. She is a bright, intelligent, clever child, with a good deal of character and determination. The marriage of the king and queen, despite the disparity of age, has been a very happy one.—London World.

Commenting on the postponement of the lottery case the New York World says:

The Supreme Court has postponed the hearing until autumn in order that the case may be determined by a full Bench, but the briefs are in, and a careful reading of them is not very reassuring to those who desire to see some effective restraint placed upon this legalized gambling. The argument of the Lottery lawyers upon the constitutional questions involved is very strong; that of Assistant Attorney-General Maury for the Government seems much weaker than a really capable Attorney-General would have made it. If the law lies with the right in the case we must depend upon the Court to discover the fact without much help from the Attorney-General's office as at present manned.

This is scarcely just to the Attorney-General's Office. Mr. Maury has made the best case that was possible for the Government in this controversy, and has, presumably, acted in full harmony with Attorney-General Miller, who has been prevented by illness from preparing the brief in person. The trouble is that the Government has not much of a case on the face of the papers. The measure which the Louisiana Lottery Company challenges before the Supreme Court can be defended only on the ground of moral expediency. Undoubtedly it is, as an abstract proposition, an invasion of the liberty of the press and an infringement of personal rights. Theoretically, if Congress may deny the use of the mails to newspapers containing lottery advertisements, it may with equal propriety take similar action in the case of liquor advertisements, playing-card advertisements, bucket-shop advertisements or any other which the party in the majority at the moment may choose to regard as immoral and pernicious. There is, indeed, no end to the mischief and oppression to which such a principle, once established, may not lead. It is but natural, therefore that the Constitution should repudiate it in a general way, and that it should be destitute of support in precedent. We can readily see that the Attorney-General's office may have found it impossible to defend the law on any but moral, and to a certain extent, sentimental grounds. As we see it, the question is not whether the Government can find any defense in laws already existent, but whether the Supreme Court will, in view of the gravity of the case, originate a law to fit this particular emergency. The strictures on Mr. Maury strike us as unjust. He has no case and he virtually confesses as much. What his brief means is that the Supreme Court should make a case for him.—Washington (D. C.) Critic-Record.

The New York World comments on the above as follows:

Why did not the Attorney-General then discover the limitations of power and see that the bill was so framed as to be constitutional? The World urgently pointed out the necessity for such caution at the time, and the reply uniformly was that the Attorney-General's office had thoroughly considered that matter. How comes it, then, that the moment the law is questioned the best the Attorney-General can do is to confess that he has no case and pray the Court "to make a case for him?"

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation permanently. For sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all druggists.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

"August Flower"

Biliousness, Constipation, Stomach Pains.

"I have been afflicted with biliousness and constipation for fifteen years; first one and then another preparation was suggested to me and tried but to no purpose. At last a friend recommended August Flower. I took it according to directions and its effects were wonderful, relieving me of those disagreeable stomach pains which I had been troubled with so long. Words cannot describe the admiration in which I hold your August Flower—it has given me a new lease of life, which before was a burden. Such a medicine is a benefaction to humanity, and its good qualities and wonderful merits should be made known to everyone suffering with dyspepsia or biliousness

Jesse Barker, Printer, Humboldt, Kansas.

G. G. GREEN, Sole Man'fr, Woodbury, N.J.

BROOKLYN HOTEL Bush St., bet. Montgomery & Sansome, S. F.; conducted on both the European and American plan. This Hotel is under the management of Charles Montgomery, and is the best Family and Business Men's Hotel in San Francisco. Home comforts, cuisine unexcelled, first-class service, highest standard of respectability guaranted. Board and room, per day $1.25 to $2.00; single room, 50 cts. to $1.00 per night. Free coach to and from the Hotel.

Old Gold and Silver Bought; send your old Gold and Silver by mail to the old and reliable house of A. Coleman, 41 Third street, San Francisco; I will send by return mail the cash, according to assay; if the amount is not satisfactory will return gold.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding, and Itching Piles when all other Ointments have failed. It absorbs the tumors, allays the itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and Itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted. Sold by Druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price, 50c. and $1.00 per box. WILLIAMS M'F'G CO., Props., Cleveland, O.

If the devil didn't offer very big wages to begin with he would have a hard time in getting his work done.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.

Sold by druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

"What is repentance?" asks a contemporary. As a rule, repentance is being sorry when it is too late to do any good.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.
A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.
Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.
No other baking powder does such work.

HAY FEVER & ASTHMA CURED TO STAY CURED. We want the name and address of every sufferer in the U. S. and Canada. Address P. Harold Hayes, M.D., Buffalo, N.Y.

No Fire, No Boiler, No Danger. Always Ready.
BUY THE REGAN VAPOR ENGINE
For Pumping Water or Wine, Spraying Fruit Trees, Sawing Wood, Running Lathes, Electric Light Plants, etc.
REGAN VAPOR ENGINE CO., 221-223 First Street, S. F.

FOR MEN ONLY! VIGOR AND STRENGTH For LOST or FAILING MANHOOD, General and NERVOUS DEBILITY; Weakness of Body and Mind, Effects of Errors or Excesses in Older Young. Robust, Noble MANHOOD fully Restored. How to enlarge and Strengthen WEAK, UNDEVELOPED ORGANS & PARTS OF BODY. Absolutely unfailing HOME TREATMENT—Benefits in a day. Endorsed by Press, Clergy, Physicians, Mothers, Nurses. Sent sealed, in plain envelope, to all Adults. Illustrated Pamphlet, 50 cts. Consult free. Address ERIE MEDICAL CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

YOUNG MEN! The Specific A No. 1 cures all unnatural discharges of Men, no matter of how long standing. Prevents stricture, if taking internal remedy. Cures when everything else has failed. Circular on application. Sold by druggists, or sent on receipt of price by THE A. SCHUMERT MEDICINE CO., San Jose, Cal. PRICE $3.00

BIG G Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Big G is the acknowledged leading remedy for all the unnatural discharges and private diseases of men. A certain cure for the debilitating weakness peculiar to women. I prescribe it and feel safe in recommending it to all sufferers. Sold by Druggists. PRICE $1.00. Manufd only by THE EVANS CHEMICAL CO. CINCINNATI, O. U. S. A. Trade Mark.

EVERY SKIN AND SCALP DISEASE whether torturing, disfiguring, humiliating itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, or blotchy, with loss of hair, from pimples to the most distressing eczemas, and every humor of the blood, whether simple, scrofulous, or hereditary, is speedily, permanently, and economically cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood and Skin Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. This is strong language, but true. Thousands of grateful testimonials from infancy to age attest their wonderful, unfailing and incomparable efficacy.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston, Mass.

Send for "How to Cure Skin and Blood Diseases."

Pimples, Blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Rheumatism, Kidney Pains, and Muscular Weakness relieved in one minute by the CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

GREENBACK PLUG CUT

SMOKING TOBACCO HAS JUMPED TO THE FRONT
THE BEST SMOKE IN A NOVEL AND CONVENIENT PACKAGE

TIGER MOWERS.

Cut 4 feet, 3inches,	$75 00
Cut 5 feet,	82 50
Cut 6 feet,	90 00

Will cut where any other Mower can.

Baker & Hamilton
San Francisco, Cal.

GOOD TIMES
For Farmers! For Everybody!

Table Peaches, very fine, per doz.,		$2.10,	$2.25
Table Plums,	"	1.40,	1.50
Table Grapes,	"	1.35,	1.50
Table Bartlett Pears,	"	2.10,	2.25
Table Fruit, assorted, all kinds		1.75,	1.85
Pie Fruit, assorted, per doz.,		1.00,	1.25

Order by the can, dozen, case, or carload.

SMITH'S CASH STORE,
416-418 FRONT STREET, San Francisco.

WANTED SOLDIERS' HOMESTEADS The addresses of all soldiers who homesteaded a less number of acres than 160 and made final proof on the same before June 22, 1874. W. E. MOSES P. O. Box 1765, Denver, Colo. Mention this paper.

STEINWAY, Gabler and Pease Pianos
Meaning the BEST PIANO MADE, and the favorite cheaper Pianos; all Musical Instruments; Bands Supplied; large stock of Sheet Music. STEINWAY HALL, 206 & 208 Post Street, MATTHIAS GRAY Call and see our new rooms and new stock.

S. F. N. U. No. 467. New Series No. 22

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH, RED CROSS DIAMOND BRAND
PENNYROYAL PILLS
THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE. The only Safe, Sure, and reliable Pill for sale. Ladies, ask Druggist for Chichester's English Diamond Brand in Red and Gold metallic boxes sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other kind. Refuse Substitutions and Imitations. All pills in pasteboard boxes, plink wrappers are dangerous counterfeits. At Druggists, or send 4c. in stamps for particulars, testimonials, and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Name Paper. CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO., Madison Square, PHILADELPHIA, PA. Sold by all Local Druggists.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION
Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Pleasant and agreeable to the taste. Children take it without objection. By druggists.
25 CTS 25 CTS

CUMBERLAND COAL.
HUSBAND & BROOKS' BRAND.
Absolutely Pure and Dry
This Coal is stored away from the sun and rain. Keeps proper fire. No loss of time. No loss of material from bad fires. Always reliable. Blacksmiths use this brand when they want the best.
HUSBAND & BROOKS —IMPORTERS— 14 & 16 SPEAR ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

THE OLD RUT
and old methods are not the easiest by far. Many people travel them because they have not tried the better way. It is a relief from a sort of slavery to break away from old-fashioned methods and adopt the labor-saving and strength-sparing inventions of modern times. Get out of old ruts and into new ways by using a cake of SAPOLIO in your house-cleaning.

JAMES LEFFEL WATER WHEELS
THE JAMES LEFFEL & CO. We send FREE to those desiring information, the Finest Pamphlet Published.
SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, or Liberty St., NEW YORK CITY.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

Independence, Cal.,

FRIDAY, JULY 10, 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXIII. NO. 4. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JULY 10, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1080.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$1.00
Six Months	2 25
Three Months	1.50
One Month	.50
Single Copies	10

ALL THE WAY BY WATER.

A Family Trip From New York to Florida.

SIX MONTHS ON A STEAM YACHT.

The Route They Will Take.—A Beautiful Resort.

There are at least four people in the city who can laugh at stern winter's fiercest onslaughts. Most likely some of you will say to yourselves, "There's nothing strange about that. These four persons have probably got good, warm overcoats or sacques, as the case may be; or may be they've got in an extra supply of coal." But the reason is they are not going to be in Buffalo or anywhere where winter can get at them.

The four persons referred to in the foregoing are Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Bradley and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jones, all of this city. For some months past arrangements and preparations have been making by this party for a proposed six months' pleasure trip aboard a steam yacht. The arrangements and preparations have now reached a stage of comparative completion. The yacht, a pretty little craft 55 by 9 feet, lies in the Coit slip near the foot of Erie street, ready to start on her long voyage to Florida and back.

Mr. Jones was seen last week by an Express reporter, who questioned him in regard to the proposed trip.

"Do you expect to go all the way by water?" he was asked.

"Yes, that's what we expect," answered he.

"How will you do it—what route will you take?"

"Well, here, I've just received this sort of guide as to how to get there by water. We did intend to go to Philadelphia after arriving at New York by way of Erie canal and Hudson river, and have the yacht shipped from New York to us; but we've changed our plans, as you'll see by reading this over. We've decided to take this as our route. These directions were sent to us by a friend of Mr. Bradley's, Mr. John Carey, of Rochester, who is going in company with us, but with another party—about four, I think. He and his party will have a yacht of their own, but the two yachts will cruise together."

Here is the route: From Buffalo to Albany through the Erie canal, down the Hudson to New York, through the Kill von Kull to the Raritan river, up the Raritan to the Delaware canal, down the canal to Philadelphia. After stopping at Philadelphia for a day or two the voyage will be resumed down the Delaware river to Chesapeake bay, down Chesapeake bay to Hampton roads and James river, across James river and up the Elizabeth river to Norfolk, Va. Another short stop will be made here before continuing up the Elizabeth river and through the Dismal Swamp canal to the Pasquotank river at Elizabeth City, N. C. From Elizabeth City they will pass down the Pasquotank to the Albemarle sound, across the sound to Croatan sound, through Croatan sound to Roanoke marshes, from Roanoke marshes down Pamlico sound to Juniper bay, across Juniper bay to the Pamlico sound again, down the sound, passing Brant island, to the mouth of Club Foot creek, up Club Foot creek to Club Foot canal, to Harlem creek, to Newport, to Beaufort, N. C., down Bogue sound to Bogue sound inlet, to Bear inlet at Swansborough, N. C. From here they go outside on the Atlantic and follow the coast of North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida down, going inland and coming out again at intervals until they come to St. Augustine, Fla. Here they will stop a week or so, taking in all the points of interest there. From St. Augustine they go down through Matanzas river eighteen miles to Matanzas inlet, then out on the Atlantic again and down forty-five miles to Mosquito inlet, through Mosquito lagoon to Indian river, down the Indian river 150 miles to Jupiter inlet, through the inlet to the Atlantic again, down the Atlantic to Lake Worth inlet, then south twenty miles on Lake Worth.

This is as far south as the voyagers will go. They calculate that they will reach there in about thirty days. This may seem something like pretty fast time, but Mr. Bradley claims that the yacht which he has engaged (the Sassacus) has a speed of about fourteen miles an hour.

The party expect to spend about three or four months in Florida fishing, hunting and having a general good time. Among the places of interest they will visit is the Silver Springs. Mr. Bradley, who has made a number of such trips as this, says that the water of the springs is so clear that you can see a pin through eighty-five feet of it. Said he: "I was down there one time and I had a nickel with a hole in it with me. Of course I couldn't squander it in any way, so, just for fun, I dropped it out of the boat. You could see it sink rather slowly to the bottom, and there it was on the bottom as plain as day to be seen—hole and all."—Buffalo Express.

Temperature of Living Rooms.

There is a change of late years in the winter heat of American homes. With almost universal substitution of better forms of heaters for old time stoves, and better understanding of ordinary health law by the people, has come a cooling down of the suffocating temperature that made our homes dry forcing houses and sent our people out into wintry cold about as well fitted to face it as if they were naked. Except in rooms where sick are or aged persons, mercury should never rise above 70 degs., nor fall below 65 degs. A narrow range truly, but within such strict limits lies the zone of health.

Foreigners coming here in cold weather used to find our houses insupportably hot, and more than one visiting medical man has said to me: "Now I see one of the causes at work to produce American nervousness."—Dr. Hutchinson in American Magazine.

TO HAVE A "HEALTHERIES."

A Company Formed in New York to Look After the Food Offered for Sale.

New York is to have a "healtheries." It is to be modeled after the London healtheries, and is to exercise just about the same general influence, its projectors say, over the public health. When it is in good working order it will keep New York informed concerning what it ought to eat, if it has any partiality for pure food. It is already incorporated, and offices have been selected near the Fifth Avenue hotel.

The scheme is an outcome of the food exhibition at the Lenox Lyceum. In fact, the company is headed by the same gentlemen who made that enterprise so glorious a success as the greatest free luncheon the world has ever seen. That energetic fair promoter and manager, A. B. De Frece, is the president and general manager, G. F. Bussing is treasurer and business manager, and Edward Ralph is the secretary. The prospectus of the company promises a lot of good things, Mr. De Frece particularly being emphatic in his declarations of the immense benefits the public is to derive from it.

The American Healtheries company intend as the chief end of its existence to establish and maintain just such exhibitions on this side of the ocean as have proved such great successes in England. It intends, its circulars say, to "illustrate and explain, both by practical exposition and publication, all manner of food and drink, as well as generally investigating all such appliances and methods as may be in the line of health and comfort. By exact chemical and microscopical analysis the company will ascertain and make public the true condition of the food and drink offered to the public, and will inform the individual consumer upon application of any information in this particular he may desire."

It is expected by the incorporators of the company that they will not have to charge for the information they have occasion to give out. The food exhibition gave a net profit of $10,000, and this company believes that it can do quite as well as this, if not better, with its annual exhibitions. Thus the expenses of the venture will be paid, the surplus being devoted to the erection of a building that may be used as the permanent home of the company.

Besides the board of management, whose members have been already mentioned, there will be a board of chemists, composed of three of the most widely known chemists of this city. All analyses will be made by them, and the reports of the company will be signed by them. In this way the corporation will act as a sort of supplemental board of health, the chief advantage of it being that it will devote all of its time and energy in a single direction.

In addition to all of these good things this company will publish either a weekly or monthly periodical, in which will be given announcements of the new food in the market, with carefully prepared analyses of their composition, and warnings or advice to the public. The income of the "Healtheries," after its expenses have been paid, its building fund given a certain percentage and so on, will be distributed to some worthy charity.

Thus, say the gentlemen at the head of the enterprise, the "Healtheries" will be in every sense a beneficent institution, inasmuch as it is an assurance to the public that its health is being looked after, so far as food is concerned, but it will act also as a dispenser of charity.—New York Herald.

A Safety Lamp for Mines.

A new safety lamp for mines—a rectangular box of ebonite containing accumulators of the Pollak system, and resting on a metal plate—is described in a London journal, with the statement that, with the mode experimented with and weighing some 1,800 grams, a perfectly constant light of 0.7 to 0.8 candle power was given forth for twelve hours. In this device an ebonite lid serves as support for a glow lamp inclosed in a cylinder of thick glass, the whole covered with a metal top fixed closely by means of pins, the junction being made hermetic by a leaf of soft caoutchouc introduced between the top and the box.

Into the lid are inserted rods of an inoxidizable metal, which pass through it, and support at their bases contacts of platinum, these meeting the platinum contacts of the accumulators, and having at their summits springs, one of which is in metallic connection with a foot of the lamp; the other foot of the lamp is insulated and can be brought in contact with a pole of the accumulator by means of a needle introduced into a horizontal channel made in the lid.

As the contacts are in the interior of the box and the lid, neither the opening nor the closing of the current can cause an explosion, hence the lamp can be either ignited or extinguished in an inflammable atmosphere. Again, the advantage presents itself that, if the system or arrangement is dismounted, or if the glass globe of the glow lamp is broken, the lamp is extinguished.

How Romans Made Their Wills.

In Rome wills were unknown before the enaction of the laws of the twelve tables, and subsequently no one but a Roman citizen was competent to make a will, or witness it, or inherit under it. Sometimes the Roman testator wrote the whole of his will with his own hand, and it was then called "holographum," but generally a lawyer was employed to draw it up. Whoever wrote another's will, whether he were lawyer or not, was forbidden to write down any legacy for himself, and the entire instrument was only legal if written in Latin. A bequest conveyed in Greek, for instance, would be invalid. A Roman might disinherit any or all of his children and appoint whomsoever he pleased to be his heir.—All the Year Round.

Often the Case.

She—Did you succeed in mastering French while abroad?

He—Nearly. I did not succeed in making the Frenchmen comprehend me, nor could I make out what they were driving at, but I got so that I could understand myself when I talked French.—Exchange.

Fresh Light on Ancient History.

"Mine," said the gardener, "is the most ancient of callings. Adam, you know, was the first gardener."

"An' bedad, moine's jist about as ould," added the lady who presided over a street fruit stand. "Wasn't Eve the first apple woman, eh?"—Life.

Quite Seemly.

Jennie—Just think of it! They're building a natatorium alongside of our church.

Jack—Nothing could be more proper.

Jennie—How so?

Jack—Cleanliness should be next to godliness.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Disagreeable moisture of the hands may be overcome by rubbing the hands several times a day with the following mixture: Tincture of belladonna, half an ounce; eau de cologne, four ounces.

PIANO HAND ORGANS.

How the Popular Instruments are Made.

DELICATE PIECES OF MECHANISM.

Retuned Every two Weeks.—Talk With a Manufacturer.

Their musical merits aside, the mechanical pianos trundled about the streets by the re-established peripatetic performers are remarkable affairs. The principle on which they are made is, of course, well known. They are enlarged music boxes, the hammers that strike the wires being set in action by coming in contact with minute pegs set in a cylinder that extends the whole length of the frame, or, popularly, the key board. In the largest of these pianos the cylinder is pegged to play ten tunes, and it takes one complete revolution of the cylinder to finish one tune. After that the performer may continue to grind out the same tune again, or by moving a lever push the cylinder forward by as much as the width of one peg, and so bring out a different piece.

These pegs are not nearly as broad as a pin head, and the fact that, unpleasant as the machines are to a trained ear, they rarely if ever strike false notes, is evidence of the care and nicety employed in their construction. For, in a machine pegged for ten tunes, the cylinder is simply black with the pegs, and the slightest inaccuracy in placing them would bring out a wrong note somewhere.

The relation of the pegs to the hammers may be understood if one plays his two hands side by side upon the table, palms down. The fingers and thumb may represent the pegs, each peg playing its part in the different tunes. The space between the levers which one peg lifts is just wide enough to pass nine other pegs. It happens, of course, that the same note does not occur in every one of the ten tunes; in that case no peg would be driven in in the line of ten when it came to setting the cylinder for this especial piece.

A manufacturer in Elizabeth street makes most if not all of the mechanical pianos heard on the streets in this neighborhood. He makes everything in his own establishment.

"There," said he, pointing to a pile of lumber, "are well seasoned boards that are being kept for working into frames and other parts of the piano. There is the machine for making the wires. And all through the house are materials for the various parts of the instruments and the tools for putting them into shape. Now, the piano that was played in front of The Sun office immediately after the aldermen rescinded their order forbidding street music was one of the best we ever made. If kept within doors and played moderately, like a house, piano it would remain in good tune for many weeks; in fact, as long as the swell instruments. Played out of doors, it gets out of tune more quickly. The exposure to the weather and the rumbling over rough pavements, as well as constant playing, brings this about. The men who have pianos in use bring them in here on an average of once in two weeks to get them retuned. Of course, another influence to put them out of tune is the extreme force with which the wires are struck."

"How is music adjusted to the cylinder?"

"It requires not only a musician but a man who understands the mechanism of the machine to do this. The first thing after selecting the composition is to buy the piano score. Then the musician takes a sheet of paper just large enough to cover the cylinder entirely and writes the piece upon it in dots. The dots correspond to the pegs. The musician, of course, knows the mechanism, so that he can tell where to place a dot to bring out the corresponding tone. When he has marked the paper over, a mechanic uses it for a chart, and drives pegs into the cylinder exactly on the spots indicated by the dots. But the musician's part is by no means limited to a mere transfer of the composition from one style of notation, as it were, to another. If that were done the effect would be feeble and utterly uninteresting. The mechanical piano has its own characteristics, and the musician must understand them so that he can double notes in a chord, and even quadruple them, in order to make the sound tell in the open air. As a matter of fact, a piece played on a mechanical piano is substantially the same as if it were arranged for eight hands on two pianos.—New York Sun.

How an Oregon Horse Prayed.

Recently, as a train load of circus was coming into town over the West Side road, a short distance south of town a car containing some of the elephants was derailed. No damage was done, but two of the elephants were obliged to walk into the city. They were very indignant, either at being thrown off the track or at having to walk, and as they passed South Portland they were waving their trunks wildly, while their drivers were what an old bull whacker called "socking the gad to them," and, as he swore, driving six inches through their hide at every blow, a horse hitched by the side of the street through which the elephants passed was so scared that he sat down on his haunches and folded his fore feet across his breast in an attitude of prayer, and sat and trembled till the horrid monsters were out of sight.—Portland Oregonian.

Thirty-five Million Visitors.

The Paris exposition, nearly every one knows, is drawing a greater crowd than our own, but scarcely any one realizes how much greater. The centennial had 9,857,625 visitors; the Paris exposition is in a fair way to have 35,000,000, and has had 32,000,000, and it has 100,000 exhibitors against 60,000 here. The Philadelphia exposition, to the surprise of every one, equaled the figures in Paris in 1867. The next American exposition ought to equal the visitors of the Paris exposition of 1889.—Philadelphia Press.

A PIN.

Oh, I know a certain woman who is reckoned with the good,
But she fills me with more terror than a raging lion would.
The little chills run up and down my spine whene'er we meet,
Though she seems a gentle creature and she's very trim and neat.

And she has a thousand virtues and not one acknowledged sin,
But she is the sort of person you could liken to a pin.
And she pricks you, and she sticks you, in a way that can't be said—
When you seek for what has hurt you, why, you cannot find the head.

But see fills you with discomfort and exasperating pain—
If anybody asks you why, you really can't explain.
A pin is such a tiny thing—of that there is no doubt—
Yet, when it's sticking in your flesh, you're wretched till it's out!

She is wonderfully observing—when she meets a pretty girl
She is always sure to tell her if her "bang" is out of curl.
And she is so sympathetic: to her friend, who's much admired,
She is often heard remarking, "Dear, you look so worn and tired!"

And she is a careful critic, for on yesterday she eyed
The new dress I was airing with a woman's natural pride,
And she said, "Oh, how becoming;" and then softly added, "it
Is really a misfortune that the basque is such a fit."

Then she said, "If you had heard me yestereve,
I'm sure, my friend,
You would say I am a champion who knows how to defend."
And she left me with the feeling—most unpleasant, I aver—
That the whole world would despise me if it had not been for her.

Whenever I encounter her, in such a nameless way
She gives me the impression I am at my worst that day.
And the hat that was imported (and that cost me half a sonnet)
With just once glance from her round eyes becomes a Bowery bonnet.

She is always bright and smiling, sharp and shining for a thrust—
Use does not seem to blunt her point, nor does she gather rust.
Oh! I wish some hapless specimen of mankind would begin
To tidy up the world for me, by picking up this pin.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox in The Century.

What He Had in His Basket.

He was one of those long, thin, dried up fellows, with a parchment skin and sharp eyes, and a sharp nose, who are always prying into things. It was on the Sausalito boat, and a fellow came on board with a basket and sat down near him. There was something very important in the basket, for the fellow kept peering in all the time and looking to see if the lid was securely fastened. The sharp nosed man began to feel an interest, and his curiosity kept rising higher and higher, until when the fellow had peeped into the basket for the fiftieth time he couldn't stand it any longer.

"I beg your pardon, but you're so interested in that basket you really excite me. What have you got in it?"

The fellow looked at him a moment.

"I'll tell you, certainly. You won't give it away?"

"I give you my word."

"Well, it's a mongaroo."

"A mongaroo! And what is a mongaroo?"

"You don't know what a mongaroo is? A mongaroo is an animal found in Africa that lives entirely on snakes."

"And how are you going to get snakes for it to eat?"

"Oh, you see I'm taking it to my brother. He's a confirmed drinker, and"——

"But I don't see"——

"Well, he's always seeing snakes and I'm going to"——

"But how can this animal live on imaginary snakes?"

"Oh, this is an imaginary mongaroo."

Then the sharp nosed man went into the cabin and sat down opposite a girl who is supposed to be in Sausalito for change of air, but comes over here four days out of the week.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Power of Imagination.

A lawyer driving along a country road asked a woman who was walking in the same direction which way he had to turn to reach B——. The woman gave him directions and added that she was going in that direction and would point out the way. "All right, good woman," said the lawyer, "jump up; better bad company than none." After jogging some miles further the woman descended and thanked him for the drive. "Have I much further to go ere I reach the B—— road?" asked the limb of the law. "Oh, you passed it some two or three miles back," was the answer, "but as I thought bad company better than none I brought you on."—Unidentified.

"Tip 'Em a Little Latin."

"Yes," said Mr. Mally sadly, "I lost my case—lost it by the injudicious language of my lawyer, Mr. Lally."

"Why, how was that, Mr. Mally?"

"Why, when my lawyer was closing his argument he thought to make a good point by saying: 'Let justice be done though the heavens fall.'"

"I shouldn't think that would have injured your case."

"It did, for the lawyer on the other side in closing said: 'Fiat justitia, ruat cælum.' That settled the business with the jury, and I had to pay damages."—Boston Courier.

A New Livery.

"What does this rig mean, Sambo?"

"Well, massa, I heard so much 'bout servants wearin' ribbery that I jis done bought one at a second hand store. How yo' like 'em?"—Texas Siftings.

A Condensed Novel.

Twenty beaux in fine clothes
Wooed Miss de la Manches.
Her old dad ducats had—
Stocks, mines, railroads, ranches.

One fine day passed away
All De Manches' rhino;
Not a beau came, ah no,
Save Paul Pencil Shino.

Reportaire—inky hair—
Was this constant lover.
Manches' gold once more rolled.
Paul now munches clover.

—New York Journal.

FRESH MUMMIES FOR ALL.

Bill Nye Regrets the Decadence of Old Relics.

THE MUMMY MINES OF EGYPT EXHAUSTED

Those of American Manufacture not up to the Standard.

Among the many letters of inquiry received during the past week is the following: "Last year I made a trip abroad, and among other trophies of my visit to the Old World I secured a fine specimen of a mummy, for which I paid seventy-five scudi. While showing it to a friend last week I discovered that the air of Illinois is detrimental to it and that disintegration is taking place. Can you tell me what is the cause and what I had better do in order to preserve the specimen intact?"

You have no doubt paid at least seventy-four scudi too much for your mummy, as mummies go. Nothing is more disheartening than the discovery that one's mummy is not standing our harsh American climate. But the chances are that you have the modern style of mummy, made especially for Americans by the trade. He is not an antique, and before August you will have to decide whether to cast him aside or let him run the house. The genuine mummy has been ground up for fertilizing purposes during the past twenty years to such an extent that we are running short, and spurious mummies made of coarse people who have died recently are flooding the market. A friend of mine purchased a varnished king, supposed to be over 2,000 years old, for which he gave 150 scudi and a silk umbrella. In May of last year he began to assert himself—the king did—and to enter more and more into the home life of his owner till it was decided to have a coat of shellac put on him. A house, sign and carriage painter came up to the house, and while refitting and refurnishing the royal relics discovered on the forearm a dark blue Goddess of Liberty in India ink and the legend, "Richard Maginnis, Valparaiso, Ind., 1853." A mummy that has to be kept in the refrigerator is a bitter, bitter disappointment, and no doubt yours is of that class. The modern methods of preserving people do not in all cases prove satisfactory, and I do not know of anything more pitiful or more humiliating than while explaining your mummy to a coterie of friends in the library to have him explode on your hands and reveal his true identity. Should disintegration continue in the case of your own mummy, a private funeral is the best thing I could suggest. Let it be a plain affair, opening with a select reading or recitation, followed by a vocal solo and a set-to between some good artist and the piano. You could charge a small admission fee, perhaps, which would go toward defraying expenses, and close with a parade and torrent of grief at the grave.

The wanton destruction of mummies and their wholesale importation to this country where they have been ground up and used as fertilizers, is going to make good mummies scarce and high. When a nation becomes so haughty and exacting that it demands rhubarb pies, stimulated by the gentleman who furnished corn to Joseph during the dry spell, and expects to promote its asparagus by means of dead monarchs and the dust of heirs presumptuous to the throne of Egypt, you can safely predict that mummies will be mummies before snow flies again. You can't eat your cake and keep it, too. Neither can you turn out a mummy in Connecticut in two days which will take the place of the real thing. A judge of those things will tell you at once that the bouquet is different. There is not the same nut brown flavor and odor of poorly ventilated lineage about the Connecticut made mummy that there is about the Egyptian job. The Egyptians had a way of curing their people a good deal the same as our physicians have now, viz.: by filling them with high priced drugs. Our physicians, however, begin on a man before he dies, while the Egyptians, instead of printing bulletins about this people, showing what their respiration and temperature were, and a large amount of sick room gossip, which a man hates to read after he has recovered, just waited around until the gentleman had been permitted to die quietly in his own way, surrounded by his family, and then they came in and cured him, so that on the morning of the resurrection a tooth brush and a Turkish bath would make him look like a new man.

A SPURIOUS MUMMY.

The American bison and the Egyptian mummy are fading away. The day will soon come when those who have slaughtered whole herds of buffalo for their tongues and fertilized their timothy sod with the dust of dynasties will go hungry. We may think that an Egyptian cemetery has no bottom to it and that a true fissure vein of these people is practically inexhaustible, but some day the foreman working on the lower level will come to the surface and state in hoarse accents that the pay streak has pinched out. The difference between a gas well, for instance, and a deposit of emperors, is that the latter is not self-sustaining. A gas well may continue to give down or give up, as the case may be, for hundreds of years, but you cannot dig up kings and queens forever. Some day you are certain to dig below their set and strike another strata of society.

Embalming is a process worthy of the dark ages. It is expensive, foolish, useless and highly injurious to the complexion. I am bitterly opposed to it. My own notion about it is that the man who embalms me will have to climb over my dead body to do so.—Bill Nye in New York World.

Concerning Our Naturalization Law.

"I have had a vote for a great many years," said an up town barber the other day, "and I did not discover it until it was too late to register. The facts ought to be made known. My father was a naturalized citizen. He was born in Germany. I was born there also, though I have lived here a great many years. It happened that I was under 18 years old when my father took out his naturalization papers, and that gave me a right to vote, though I have never known it. It seems that when a father takes out his papers it not only gives him a vote, but entitles all of his sons under the age of 18 at that time to the duties and rights of citizenship, even if they are born out of this country. They must, however, be in the United States before they are 18 years of age."—New York Sun.

For the best results there needs be the longest waiting. The true harvest is the longest in being reached. The failures come first, the success last. The unsatisfactory is generally soonest seen.—Current Literature.

The Women of Japan.

The better class of Japanese women are by no means uneducated. They receive, I am told, a better training than the women of any other Oriental nation, and they are better treated than those of any other Asiatic nation. The Japanese girl can, as a rule, read and write Japanese. She learns all about household matters, and she takes the whole charge of the household. This is her sphere, and she is known as the honorable mistress of the household. Her husband has no right to be meddling with the cooking stove. She pays the servants and the market bills. In the case of the poorer merchants she often acts as one of the clerks in the stores and takes the place of the husband when he is not present. In the country you will find her often working in the fields, and at Nikko I saw great numbers of women who acted as the leaders of pack horses carrying copper and goods up and down the mountains. Still, I think the women here have an easier time than those of the lower classes of Germany or Holland, and you see fewer labor hardened faces among the other sex here than you do in many of the countries of Europe.

The wife is, however, after all but little better than the servant of the husband, and the ties of marriage and divorce are here so loose that he can dispense with her at pleasure. Marriage in Japan is not attended with the solemnity and religious ceremony of the American wedding. It is a civil contract, and the negotiations for it go on, as a rule, through the parents. The young man and woman have no preliminary courtship, and the seeing one another for one or two times is the only chance they have of deciding whether there is any compatibility of temperament.—Frank G. Carpenter.

Thought It Was the Tariff.

Old Uncle Peter Simonson was, in his day, one of the richest of ante-bellum planters. He owned and worked more than 300 slaves, and nearly all of the river bottom lands along the Ocmulgee river between Hawkinsville and Macon, Ga., were tended by his men.

He was quite a sportsman and spent the greater portion of his time hunting about his plantations or fishing up and down the river. He had been born and raised of poor parents right upon the Indian frontier, when the Creeks held the greater portion of Georgia, and had lived there all his life. He usually had a negro boy along with him when he hunted to carry home his game for him.

One day in the latter part of the year 1836, while hunting in the swamps about six miles below Macon, his attention was attracted by a singular noise. He hastened to the river bank, when something, the like of which he had never seen in his life, came slowly around the bend below him with fire and smoke and much puffing. He lumped for his gun and climbed the nearest poplar tree.

"Skin up that ar tree, Sambo," old Peter yelled to the little darkies.

"All right, massa; what is it?"

"One of them ar tariffs I've hearn congress hev been threatening to send down to destroy our craps and eat us up, feathers en all." He sat upon a limb with his rifle in his hand until the "thing" went out of sight around the next point above him. It was the first steamboat that came up the Ocmulgee as far as Macon.—Detroit Free Press.

She Swallowed the Car Fare.

If there is any one thing that makes the horse car conductors mad it is the custom of some folks of using their mouths as purses for the car fares. It is a great nuisance in summer during travel on the open cars where the conductor has a full complement of passengers. A Lewiston conductor says that children are the worst. Some of them disgorge a handful of change, and he has to accept it. One day a very pretty young lady who was a guest in Auburn from a Massachusetts town, was coming down from the lake. She was one of a gay party of half a dozen, and they made merry on the down trip. When he was one seat from her in his tour of the car he looked over at her. She was so pretty he couldn't help it. Just as he looked he was pained to notice a fearful change in her countenance. Her cheek blanched and she seemed to choke. Her laugh died on her lips, too, and she joked no more. When he got along to the party the young lady's eyes were bedewed with tears. "I—I had some money"—— The conductor with infinite tact says that he just passed it along, saying: "I know all about it. You've swallered it. I see you do it." The young lady blushed and the car rattled along. A child with five coppers in its mouth is a fearful picture for the conductor, but what do you think of one with 24 cents in its cheeks? Better buy the youngsters 10 cent purses.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Steel Bead Ornaments.

As the swell girl goes down Broadway, fur trimmed and soft as to visible surface, a chink chink of metal is sometimes heard. That noise is made by the impact of her bead embroidered stockings. It is a new freak to have our hosiery heavily ornamented with steel beads on the ankles and calves. Now don't go to suggesting that we might wear circlets of something just above our hoofs like those put on horses to keep them from "interfering." We want to interfere with the heart of man. Many a time have you read in novels how the frou-frou of a dainty skirt or the swish of mysterious draperies have set a chap to fluttering sentimentally. Well do we know that nice little assaults on the masculine ear draw the masculine eye. Well, that is the principle of the clinking stockings. It is as yet a genteel device. Of course, it will be quickly vulgarized, as the metal heeled gaiters were, and there are women in New York naughty enough to put not only bells on their toes, but castinets on their ankles and cymbals on their knees, if thereby they could command attention.—Clara Belle.

Playing Cards.

The first pack of playing cards of which any copy is preserved was in use in Venice in 1125, and contained seventy-eight cards in all, twenty-two of which were picture cards of very quaint character. One picture card represented the devil, another death, a third the moon, a fourth the sun, while the fifth depicted the judgment day. The Venetians called it the game of tarots, and it was no doubt the original parent of the modern card pack, with its kings, queens, knaves, etc. The French developed the game greatly, and it became the standard pastime of all the royal courts of the Sixteenth century. Cards became so prominent a feature of social life in France that when the revolution came new card packs were devised in which kings and queens were done away with, philosophers and popular heroes and heroines taking their places.—Boston Globe.

IN MALE ATTIRE.

The Romance of an English Girl.

FOLLOWING A LOVER OVER THE OCEAN.

Beating the Railroad.—Arrested as a "Vag."

Judge Lawler glanced curiously at one of the defendants in the police court dock, and the latter shrank from his gaze. At first sight the prisoner appeared to be a pale lad who had suffered from hunger and neglect. After a closer scrutiny his honor inquired what charge was against the defendan.

"He is charged with vagrancy," replied Prosecuting Attorney Mott, who called Officer Adams to the stand.

The officer testified that the lad, who gave his name as Edward White, had been noticed roaming around the water front of late without visible means of subsistence. When questioned he could give no satisfactory reason for idling, and, finding him asleep in a lumber yard on Thursday night, Officer Adams had placed him under arrest.

"What have you to say in answer to this testimony?" asked the judge.

The lad nervously walked to the stand and asked if he could speak to the court privately. His honor said he need not be afraid to make any statement which might clear him of the charge made against him.

White leaned forward, and The Examiner reporter caught the words, "I am a woman."

During recess the girl consented to narrate why she was disguised in the hope that her object in life would be attained by this means.

"I am a native of Cornwall, England," she began, "and I was born in a little town called Redruth. I am 22 years old, and my real name is Mabel Tregenza. My father was at one time very poor; then he became suddenly rich by some of the tin mines in which he was interested cutting some rich lodes. Further speculation, however, reduced him to his former condition, and he died in poverty.

"When I was about 19 years old a party of Hungarian musicians came to my native town. The leader, whose name was Franz Helbing, was a handsome, dashing fellow, and soon half the girls in the town were infatuated with him. I was no stronger or wiser than the rest. First I admired him and then loved him.

"It was at this time that my father's luck was in the ascendant. I was then considered a pretty girl, for I had a luxuriant growth of hair, and my cheeks were as rosy as those of other girls born in that healthy part of the country. It isn't a difficult matter to get an introduction in the country if one is bent upon it, so it was not long before Franz and I were well enough acquainted to go walking together in the country lanes in the evenings, he adding another conquest to his list, and I hoping that his words were true.

"It was then summer time, when fetes caused the musicians to be in great demand, and for three months I was supremely happy. I knew, however, that it was hopeless to expect that my father would consent to my marrying a strolling player, as he was too puffed up with pride at that time in consequence of becoming wealthy so rapidly.

"Finally the musician left Redruth, and like many another foolish girl I was left lamenting. We corresponded surreptitiously, however, while he was in England, and at last he wrote me that he was going to America, and if he succeeded there he would send for me. I next heard from him in New York, but he did not like that city, and wrote me that he was going west, to see if he could make a fortune in the Montana silver mines. Then his letters ceased.

"My father's reverses came and his death followed. I was left to make my way in life as best I might. Something of the roving spirit of my absent lover seemed to possess me, and with the little money I had left I crossed the ocean. In New York I found it inconvenient to be a friendless woman, and, coming to the conclusion that I could take care of myself better by wearing men's clothes, I donned them, cut my hair and started out in search of Franz.

"My money did not suffice to purchase a through ticket to Montana, and I had no especial accomplishments by which I could earn money, so I determined to trust to fate.

"Half way across the continent my funds gave out, and I had to beat my way. Finding that my disguise was effectual, I felt no alarm, and in fact, the excitement and change proved a stimulus to me. I boarded the cars and tried my skill at beating the American railway system. It was difficult, but far from impossible. There were plenty of folks in the emigrant car who are always ready to assist or conceal an unfortunate fellow traveler, so I got all the food I needed.

"I succeeded in this way in reaching Butte City, M. T. I lost no time in making inquiries about Franz, who, I knew, had stayed at that camp. From acquaintances I made while working in a milling establishment there I found that on account of his musical talents he had been well known. I also learned that after making considerable money he had left there to go to San Francisco.

"What disheartened me most was hearing that he was accompanied by a dashing girl, who passed as his wife. I hated to believe it, but I determined that, no matter what might result, I would follow him to San Francisco, and, if I found him, to see whether he still loved me, or whether the stories told me were true.

"I came here and realized, in a short time, that my search was hopeless. I became despondent, and my health was affected by my feelings. So I have wandered around aimlessly until at last I was arrested and brought here. The judge thinks that the publication of my story will lead, if anything will, to my learning the whereabouts of Franz, if he is still living and wants to see me again. If I do not hear from him I don't care what becomes of me."

Later in the day Miss Tregenza was again seen by a reporter, but by that time she had discarded her masculine attire, having received pecuniary assistance from the judge and several other charitable persons who had heard her story.—San Francisco Examiner.

There are 3,500 watches made every day in the United States, and yet they are never a drug in the market. A watch has become as necessary as a pair of suspenders.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JULY 10 ..... 1891.

Ex-Vice President Hannibal Hamlin died at Bangor, Maine last, Sunday, aged 82 years. He was elected Vice President of the United States in 1860 and presided over the Senate during the war period, 1861—4. The deepest regret is felt throughout the Nation.

Among the many huge irrigation enterprises now projected in Southern California that of the Lake Elsinore reservoir company promises to be one of the most important. It is a bold scheme, involving eventually an immense expenditure of money, as it provides for the irrigation of hundreds of thousands of acres of land in San Diego, San Bernardino, Orange and Los Angeles Counties. It is proposed to convert Lake Elsinore into an immense storage reservoir, the largest in the world, having twice the capacity of the far-famed Australian reservoir. The lake has a watershed of about 1,000 square miles, exclusive of the Bear Valley irrigation system, which empties into the above watershed. Some of the leading capitalists of Southern California are interested in this mammoth project and they are sanguine of success.

Considering the amount of attention that is now being given the subject of irrigation, it is probable that the coming generation will regard the present time as the most active in the irrigation era in the West. The development of education in the matter of preserving water supplies and constructing artificial ways has reached near enough to perfection to enable our engineers and capitalists to plan and carry out enterprises which must be regarded with wonder and admiration. The benificient results of irrigation in localities where land would not have been accepted as a gift have rendered possible the conversion of every inch of desert into the best kind of farm and orchard land.

Such is the rapid growth of interest in the matter of irrigation that a convention will be held at Salt Lake City next September to discuss and adopt measures by which the arid lands in the Western states and territories may be reclaimed. Governor Thomas of Utah has called the convention and has requested the Governors of these states and territories to select delegates. Governor Markham has already forwarded his assurance that California will be well represented. The call states that the object of the convention is to consider matters referring to the "reclamation of the arid public lands of West, and to petition Congress to cede to each state and territory the arid lands within its borders for the purpose of reclamation, for the support of public schools and for such other purposes as the Legislatures of each state and territory may respectively determine."

The Itata is at anchor in San Diego bay. Captian Remy of the Charleston has turned his prize over to the Customs officers, and is now training for any other emergency by practising with his big guns upon a target on Coronado islands. This is a most satisfactory termination of the Charleston's first practical work. The Itata is returned to the jurisdiction of the United States courts from which it had been forcibly and illegally rescued. Those courts will be competent to decide all controversial points respecting the ownership of the vessel and the violation of neutrality law at San Diego. In this complex affair the government has acted with firmness, courage and diplomatic tact, and the affront to the American flag at San Diego has been redressed. The pursuit of the Itata on the high seas was a most unusual act, for which there are few precedents; but after accepting the Geneva award the United States was in a position to introduce a new rule of the high seas, if one were needed, for the maintenance and enforcement of neutral obligations. The main effect of the Itata controversy will be to enlarge the scope of that "due diligence" which has been established as the moral duty of a neutral maritime nation in time of war. If the pursuit of the Itata had involved a naval battle in Chilean waters serious complications wauld have arisen and the attention of foreign governments would have been diverted from the real points at issue. But the prompt and determined action of the United States in the affair has proved to the world that the American navy has become a solid supporter of the foreign policy of our government.

GRANDMOTHERS' DAYS.

In our grandmothers' days, when a cabin rude,
Unfinished and bare, held the little all
Of the pair who were building the household fire,
The light of it falling on window and wall,
Was there less of happiness then than now?

In our grandmothers' days, when the kettle swung
On the sooty crane in the chimney wide,
And the spitted fowl, that sputtered and sung,
Swung gently from side to side,
Was there less of happiness then than now?

In our grandmothers' days, when the broad stone hearth
Was the trysting place of the lovers dear,
And the high backed settle reflected the glow
Of the firelight on faces suggestively near,
Was there less of happiness then than now?

In our grandmothers' days, when the children came,
And the humble home was filled with glee,
As, clothed in their garb of homespun, they roamed
And frolicked like birds and butterflies free,
Was there less of happiness then than now?

In our grandmothers' days, when the cradle stood
In sound of the burring, whirring wheel,
And the baby crooned and clapped his hands
At each click of the swiftly revolving reel,
Was there less of happiness then than now?

In our grandmothers' days, when trouble came,
And sometimes even the wolf, to the door,
The home was their castle and love lent it grace,
And if oft times the battle of life was full sore,
Was there less of happiness then than now?

—Mrs. M. W. Blacker in Good Housekeeping.

WHO DID THE WOOING?

It somehow leaked out in the Big Creek section that Martha Ann Todd proposed to Jim Simpkins.

How the story got afloat no one exactly knew, for Martha certainly never told it herself, and as for James, he was never known in the whole course of his existence to have told anything. Anyhow, the report got afloat, and soon every one far and near was talking about it, and at every candy pull and "sugarin' off" some one was bound to bring up the subject, and then the question was asked, "Did Martha Ann really propose?"

The facts in the case were that Martha Ann and James were engaged. Both Mrs. Todd and Mrs. Simpkins had given this news to the world at Aunt Jane Wormley's meeting of the Big Creek Ladies' aid. It was further generally agreed that James never had spunk enough to speak for himself, so it really became an oppressive mystery to the good people of the section.

But all these wonderings and suppositions would have been cleared up had they been able to look into the generous heart of Martha Ann as she sat by the western window of the kitchen doing crochet work, and looking ever and anon over across the snow fields to the Simpkins farmhouse, behind which a sturdy figure could be seen lustily swinging an ax.

And this was James.

Martha Ann was as comely a girl as any in the district, and as Uncle Billy Nason, the master of the postoffice and village emporium, averred, "by far the likeliest."

Martha Ann was good to look at. She was not handsome. She was not pretty. Her eyes were neither bright black nor soft blue. Her hair had no poetic tendencies. Her figure was neither statuesque nor petite; nevertheless, Martha Ann was a mighty pleasant girl to see. She seemed to have a way of growing on one, for her voice was always musical, and her smile ever cheerful and encouraging.

She was now probably twenty-seven years of age—perhaps younger—it doesn't matter. She was a woman, healthy, energetic, a farmer's daughter who had worked all her life and was proud of it, who had twice taken first prize at the county fair for bread, and had won a medal at the same institution for a patchwork quilt. She had made all her own clothes since the day she was sixteen, and besides that she could play an organ all round the other girls.

That was a big day in the life of Martha Ann when her father came home with a six stop organ on the wood sleigh. Such a beauty as it was, too, with elegant bracket trimmings and a cute little rack on top for books and music. It wasn't five minutes after that organ struck the parlor before "Coronation" and "The Battle of Waterloo" were rolling through the house with so sublime and altogether magnificent a tone that Mother Todd dropped right down on the haircloth sofa, all in her old clothes, too, and cried, refusing to be comforted until Martha Ann played a few bars of "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

But self confident as Martha Ann was, she had for five years now been floating on a sea of conjecture as to what Jim Simpkins really meant by coming over to the house and talking politics with her father, and "seeing" her home from church every Sunday night. She somehow could not locate James in her list of certainties.

For a long time Martha Ann seriously doubted whether he loved her or not, and it was not till she felt in her heart that she was all in all to him that she began to scheme how to make it easy for James to propose.

For months she labored over this problem. Every once and awhile of a Sunday evening, as they strolled home together by the creek, she would throw out a "feeler," but he never understood. During all this time she made herself as attractive as she knew how, and played her sweetest pieces on the organ, with no further result than getting him used to sitting on a haircloth chair without desiring to tip it back against the wall, as was his custom with the kitchen furniture.

Although all her schemes came to naught Martha Ann never lost heart. She was sure of one thing, and that was that James was dying to ask her, but couldn't. So she looked at it as perfectly proper that she should help him out.

The nearest he had ever come to saying something vital was on a day in the preceding fall when he had come over to help her pick some grafted apples. These apples were so large and precious that the greatest care had to be taken in gathering them. On this occasion James was up amid the branches of the tree on a stepladder, and Martha Ann stood on the ground, catching each apple, one by one, in her apron.

Whether looking up so continuously heightened her coloring or not, James thought she had never looked so beautiful and altogether womanly before, and he registered an oath in his heart, for he never swore, that, "So help him Uncle John Rogers, he would ask her the minute he got down." He even got quite brilliant up there on the ladder, and actually joked, while Martha Ann beamed one continuous smile.

Finally he gathered all the apples in his reach, and so had to come down to get a new position. But with each downward step, down went his courage, and it was only by a superhuman effort that he managed to say:

"You're lookin' purtier'n all git out, Martha Ann."

Martha Ann blushed crimson at so direct a compliment, for she felt that the hour had come.

"You're always a-flatterin' me, James," she said.

"Couldn't say too much for—you—know—you—know— Guess I'd better move the ladder ter the south side the tree, wouldn't you?"

Martha Ann could have cried then and there. James said no more, and the apple gathering went on in silence.

But now, at the time I am writing about, they were actually engaged, and the reader will probably come to the conclusion that Martha Ann must have proposed, just as the worthy gossips of the Big Creek section figured. The facts are as follows:

Martha Ann decided firmly on a climax. Either James or she must speak. If she could induce him to declare his love, all well and good; if not, she must draw him out. If he would not draw, she must tell him the old story herself. No strategist could have planned a finer campaign.

It was the evening of Easter Sunday. The day had been bright and sunny. The services at the church had been inspiring, and James had come home with her for supper.

After a meal which would have warmed the heart of a cynic, let alone a healthy farmer like our hero, all the folks retired to the parlor, where a rosy fire was glowing in the grate, the dry maple logs burning slowly but determinedly, and every coal which dropped holding its color for an hour.

The organ was opened, and first the pieces sung by the choir that day were played over, as Martha Ann said, "just ter hear how they sounded at home."

Father Todd sat near the hearth, one knee overlapping the other, his eyes looking clean up through the ceiling, past the bedroom on the second floor, past the stars in the keen spring sky, past the boundaries of space into that "beautiful land of pure delight, where saints immortal reign," which Martha Ann was singing about.

Mother Todd sat in her rocker near him, her arms folded on her motherly bosom, her round, fair, good old face beaming with perfect rest and peace.

James stood by the side of the singer and joined in the chorus now and then, for he had a robust bass voice, which "might'd amounted ter something," Martha Ann said, "had he only had the high trainin' of the choir."

And so the early evening passed, and pretty soon the old people went to sleep in a fitful way until the worthy sire "allowed it might do fer young folks to set up, but fer as he was concerned, guess he'd crawl off ter bed." He was soon followed by his faithful partner, and the field was ready for the action to begin.

Martha Ann concluded she would not sing any more, for her throat was getting choked up, and with the greatest sang froid drew the sofa up before the fire and sat down, leaving James to look out for himself.

This move put him in a bad fix. If he sat down anywhere in the room but in one place her back would be toward him. He hemmed a little and wandered aimlessly about, tried to get interested in a picture of Mrs. Todd's grandmother, and finally sat down on the organ stool.

Martha Ann paid no attention. She sat with her face in her hands looking in the fire, as if oblivious of his presence.

There was a silence of intense and painful presence in the room. Now and then a spark shot upward from the burning logs or a stick fell from the dogs into a heap of crimson coals.

James actually suffered. He had no more idea what to do under the circumstances than the traditional child unborn. But when the stillness began to actually ache, Martha Ann roused up, and turning to him said: "Why, James, don't set over there alone. Come and sit on the sofa here by me and watch the flickerin'. I jes' see the prettiest little home you ever heard tell of. Come and I'll tell you."

He blushed crimson at this. Was it possible? Was this really Martha Ann? Was he Jim Simpkins? "Come and set down right aside o' her and watch the flickerin'—well, I'll be etarnally!" was what instantly passed through his brain. And she had turned again to the fire.

He coughed a little, made as if to get up, but subsided. He turned all colors. And there sat Martha Ann looking so cozy.

A look of heroism came into his eyes. He arose, pulled down his trousers, and sat down again, got up once more, and the first thing he knew he was actually sitting on the same sofa with her, and she, never moving from her place near the middle, continued her weird stare into the fire.

"James," she said, "I never see such a buildin' of palaces and a makin' of stories as there is in the fire there tonight."

"Can't say as I see much, Martha Ann."

"Look there, right side the dog. Can't you see the little house there and the vines a-trailing up over the roof and the door wide open and the children a-playin' about, and the old well there—see it, James, bucket, beam, everything jes' as natural as life; and what's them bendin' over the well? They may be lovers, James, a-bendin' over the water jes' as we are over the fire."

"You got tarnal good eyes, Martha Ann, ter see all them things. P'raps I ain't no imagination, but I can't see nothing but some coals a-breathing sorter like as if they hated ter give in."

Martha Ann continued her rapt attention of the drama in the fire, and James began to get to home on the sofa.

By and by she lifted her hand and brushed back her hair, and then let it descend in a careless way till it fell on that of her companion.

"What a great, strong hand you have," she said slowly. "Do you know the marks in the hand? Let me show you. See this longest one curving around the thumb. That's for long life. You will live to be very old. And see this little one here, next it. That's for riches, and this one here—wonder what it's for? See mine, jes' the same mark. Oh! I know now; I remember."

"What is it fer?"

"It's fer love."

The Websterian catalogue was too limited for the bashful young farmer to find anything to say to this, and so they sat in silence, her hand still resting almost caressingly on his. Out in the sitting room could be heard the measured, solemn tick-tock of the great oaken clock, and outside the wind breathing through the trees added a certain weirdness to the Sabbath repose. Every now and then the sound of the old dog in the woodshed turning over restlessly could be heard, and all the while the man's heart was demanding that he should express himself, a commission the tongue refused to obey.

Finally Martha Ann, without raising her head, said, dreamily:

"Do you know, James, I've often wondered why you didn't ever git married. You see, I have always looked upon myself as a sister to you, wishin' always fer your welfare and happiness, and I have asked myself agin and agin, 'Now why don't he find some good, true girl and marry her? You'd make some woman a good husband, James; I know you would, you're so good and stidy and home lovin', and sech men ain't plentiful. It ain't fer you to be spending your Sunday evenings with me, who is only your true friend, fer you'd ought to be findin' a sweetheart an' gettin' married and settled in life."

"Oh, Martha Ann!" he found courage to say.

She continued as if not noticing the interruption.

"A man as has reached your age ought ter be lookin' round him, and there's a-plenty of girls would have you, too, a-plenty of them. Now, there's Mary Gibson—she's a good girl as ever lived, a splendid housekeeper, and religious. Or Sally Stevens, or Esther Lapum, any of them would jump at the chance to become Mrs. Simpkins."

James groaned in spirit. The perspiration trickled down his forehead and settled in a drop on the tip of his nose, as if undecided whether or not it were best to fall.

"Oh, Martha Ann!" he said again plaintively, "how could yer think of sech a thing?"

She removed her hand from his and turned her face, now flushed warm by the fire, until her eyes met his and asked, as if with the greatest wonder:

"Why not?"

"It's you I want, Martha Ann"—his tongue was getting into line—"it's you as I have been a-planning this year or more to ask, but somehow you was allers so sweet lookin' and so quiet that I somehow couldn't do it." Surely the unruly vocal powers were getting very obedient. "I've loved yer from a little girl—I've—I've"——

The machinery stopped suddenly here, and it was as much as half a minute before he continued.

"You see, I don't know how to tell it, but I love you. I love you with all my heart, and allers have, and I've wished and wished I could tell you, but I couldn't, bein' so stupid; but I've told you now, and I'm glad, fer I ain't no room in my heart for no one else."

He was quite choked up with emotion now, yet in his eyes were a new boldness, a new inspiration, and he leaned eagerly forward for her answer.

It was now her turn to be confused. The wily Martha Ann forgot her cunning of speech, forgot her well laid plan, and the first she knew the tears were rolling down her cheeks. She had no words to say.

She allowed her head to sink slowly toward his breast, and hiding her face there with his strong arms about her, she gave herself up to the soft passion of tears.

And then he raised her tenderly and kissed her over and over again—how he never knew and will never be able to explain to himself, for he had no need to be told she loved him and was his for all time.

And so they sat silently, while the fire flickered and grew passionate in turn, and the old clock ticked with a gladder tone, and even the breathing of the god of night in the lilacs became subdued. And so, heart beating against heart, and hand clasping hand, they sat, too full of the spirit of love to say aught.

And this is how they became engaged. Yet still the people of the Big Creek section are wondering, "Did Martha Ann really propose?"—Fred Warner Shibley in Boston Globe.

The Usurer's Only Hope.

"In St. Louis," said the drummer, "is a firm to whom I sell goods once in a great while. The senior partner is a regular shark. Not long ago he loaned some money to a church society for the purchase of a new organ. When payment of the loan was made he charged the society 9 per cent. This was refused, and the principal was not paid. Finally one of the deacons of the church was sent to talk with the usurer.

"'You have acted very badly,' said the pillar of the church.

"'How's that?'

"'Six per cent. was enough interest.'

"'Nine is fair.'

"'When the Lord looks down on that 9 he will put a long black mark against your name.'

"This staggered the old fellow for a moment, but suddenly recovering, he replied, 'When the Lord looks down on that 9 he will think it's a 6.'"—Chicago Herald.

Trades in France.

In trades properly so called the apprenticeship is regulated by contract, and in most cases French nationality is indispensable. The limit of hours of work for women is fixed by law at eleven daily after eighteen and at ten for children under thirteen. There are seventeen institutions in Paris alone for the teaching of different trades. Those that are dangerous to health are forbidden to young children. The term of apprenticeship naturally varies according to the nature of the employment. Some trades are very intermittent in their times of work.—New York Sun.

Universal Brick Press.

A machine has been designed for making bricks and tiles on the semi-dry process. The clay or material to be formed into bricks is fed into a hopper in a loose and granulated state. The finish is delivered as the charger returns to refill the empty mold. Each brick receives four distinct presses, whereby the air is thoroughly expressed. All the labor required is one man to tip the clay into the grinding pan, and one boy to take off the bricks as the machine delivers them.

Among the various purposes for which this machine is employed, besides brick and tile making, are the forming of purple ore, or "blue billy," into briquettes for the smelting furnace, the forming of nickel oxide into cakes for the assaying furnace, the forming of dry cement compound into blocks ready for clinkering and the pressing of coal and coke briquettes.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Numerals That Inform.

Perhaps the most ingenious use of numbers to convey information is due to Mr. Melvil Dewey, state librarian of New York. He has divided literature into ten great departments and given each of them one of the ten numerals. History, for instance, is represented by nine, and every historical work has nine for the first figure in its number.

The second figure denotes the subdivision of history to which a work belongs; seven as a second figure is marked upon volumes treating of North America. Another and similar step gives three as a third figure for histories of the United States.

The works of Mr. George Bancroft, as Mr. Dewey would classify them, would bear the numerals 973. After that number would come the figures pointing out the shelf on which the volumes were to be found. To avoid disarrangement, it is usual in large libraries to leave ample room for new additions in each department; the shelves are not permitted to become quite full.—Youth's Companion.

Pronouncing Modern Greek.

As many may know the pronunciation of the modern Greek language is by accent, and not by quantity, as in England and America has been the custom with ancient Greek ever since the time of Erasmus, the Dutch precursor of Martin Luther. Of late years the American schools have been pronouncing more and more by accent, and the custom has even invaded England and Germany. Now it seems that the German scholars in Athens, noticing the interest taken by the young emperor in matters of education, have petitioned him to make the pronunciation in German schools conform to the usage of the modern Greeks. Were this done it would be much easier for a German in Greece to understand the spoken language, which he can read easily in the newspapers, but cannot comprehend when he hears it at his hotel.—Boston Advertiser.

Remembering His Enemies.

Mr. Edward Wortley Montagu, son of the famous Lady Mary, endeavored to be very sarcastic in his last will and testament. After some insignificant bequest "To my noble and worthy relation the earl of ——," he adds: "I do not give his lordship any further part of my property, because the best part of that he has contrived to take already. Item—To Sir Francis —— I give one word of mine, because he never had the good fortune to keep his own. Item—To Lord M. I give nothing, because I know he will bestow that on the poor. Item—To Sir Robert W. I leave my political opinions, never doubting he can well turn them into cash who has always found such an excellent market for his own."

MISCELLANEOUS.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING SALOON.
Shaving, Hair Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.
WM. H. HUFF, Prop't

IRWINS' SALOON
Cor Edwards and Market Streets,
Independence . Cal.
THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt and furnished in a style second to no one on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.
THE BAR
Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.
JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

P. W. FORBES. P. H. MACK.
MACK & FORBES.
Real Estate Agents,
Address, P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal. P. W. FORBES, Bishop, Cal.

BOOTS AND SHOES
MADE AND REPAIRED.
THE BEST MATERIAL.
FIRST-CLASS WORK.
Repairs done Promptly.
Prices Reasonable.
A. J. DAVIS,
nov 30-tf Independence,

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.
Bee Keeper.
Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.
Independence, Inyo Co. Cal

J. W. Murphy.
BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work.
Wagons and Carriages Repaired.
HORSESHOEING, $2.00 for CASH
Shop on Edwards St., opposite the Court House, Independence.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW,
NOTARY PUBLIC.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
—BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.—
The obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
Bishop Creek, Cal.,
Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

J. W. P. LAIRD. P. H. MACK.
MACK & LAIRD.
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE CAL.

F. E. DENSMORE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)
Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED.
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.
DENTISTS.
OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSFIELD, opposite the Southern Hotel.
Prompt and careful treatment given and the least possible pain inflicted. Address
WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

FOR SALE CHEAP.
Two span first class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday ..... January 24th
" ..... February 21st
" ..... March 21st
" ..... April 18th
" ..... May 23rd
" ..... June 20th
" ..... July 18th
" ..... August 15th
" ..... September 12th
" ..... October 17th
" ..... November 14th
" ..... December 12th

JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine.
FRED BURKHARDT

OFFICIAL.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE
STEVENS DITCH COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Independence, California. Location of Ditch, near Independence.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AT A meeting of the Board of Directors, held the 27th day of June 1891, an assessment (No 6) of Twenty (20) Cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, at Independence, Cal.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 1st day of August 1891, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on MONDAY, the 24th day of August, 1891, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

P. H. MACK,
Secretary.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE.
LONE PINE CANAL COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Independence, California. Location of canal, near Independence, Inyo county.

Notice is hereby given that at a meeting of a Board of Directors, held on the 30th day of May, 1891, an assessment (No. One) of Fifty (50) cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary at the office of the company, Independence, California.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 3d day of July, 1891, will be delinquent, and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on Saturday, the 25th day of July, 1891 to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale.

By order of the Board of Directors.

P. H MACK, Secretary.

NOTCE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of JOHN LUCAS, Deceased.

Notice is hereby given by the undersigned, Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased to the Creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his office in the town of Lone Pine, Inyo county, Cal., the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in said Inyo county, State of California. E. H. EDWARDS,

Administrator of the estate of John Lucas, deceased.

Dated May 5th, 1891.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

IDA C. DECKER, Plaintiff, vs. STEPHEN DECKER, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Stephen Decker, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant; that plaintiff be allowed and decreed to resume her former name of Ida C. Adams, and for general relief, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 17th day of June, A. D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
MACK & LAIRD, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

NOTICE OF SALE OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN pursuance of an order of the Superior Court in and for the County of Inyo, State of California, made on the 6th day of June, 1891, in the matter of the Estate of John Lucas, deceased, the undersigned will sell at private sale, to the highest bidder, for cash, gold coin of the United States, on Saturday, the 27th day of June, 1891, at 2 o'clock p. m., at the late residence of said deceased, near the town of Lone Pine, County of Inyo, State of California, the following personal property, towit:

117 Head of Stock Cattle.
18 Head of Horses

Bids or offers in writing will be received at the office of the undersigned, in the said town of Lone Pine, up to and including the 26th day of June, 1891.

E. H. EDWARDS,
Administrator of the Estate of John Lucas, deceased.

Dated June 12th, 1891.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.
$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.
It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer without cost of repairs than any other machine. Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.
Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.
For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address
ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

BIG PINE HOTEL.
BIG PINE - CAL.
New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in act, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
Thos. Williams,
Proprietor.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JULY 10..... .....1891.

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 1.03¼
Lead, 4 45
Copper, 13.70
Tin, 20 40
Sugar, .05¼
Coffee, 20 @ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 13 @ 19.

Religious Services.

Rev. H. J. Winsor will preach at Lone Pine on Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m.; at Georges Creek, 2:30 p. m.; at Independence, 7:30 p. m.

Children's day exercises at Lone Pine.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

MONDAY, July 6, 1891.

Estate of Frank Paderes, deceased—Filed petition for Letters of Administration.

TUESDAY, July 7, 1891.

Estate of John Lucas, deceased—Filed various claims.

Estate of John R. Hughes, deceased—Filed order confirming sale of real estate.

WEDNESDAY, July 9, 1891.

W. R. Johnson vs. O. I. Mairs—Filed complaint and issued summons.

August Stecker vs. Andrew Fyfe et als—Filed notice of time appointed for arguing demurrer.

W. H. Russell vs. S. P. Smith and Emily J. O'Neal—Filed complaint.

THURSDAY, July 10, 1891.

W. R. Johnson vs. O. I. Mairs—Filed summons.

BORN.

SAMUELS—At San Francisco, July 1st, to Mr. and Mrs. F. Samuels, a son.

CONKLIN—At Georges Creek, July 7th, to Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Conklin, a daughter.

J. J. Gunn is expected on to-day's train.

P. H. Mack, Esq. left for Darwin yesterday.

J. A. McKenzie came in from Darwin on Tuesday.

The State Fair will be held from September 8th to 19th inclusive.

P. P. Keough was down from Bishop a day or two this week.

L. F. J. Wrinkle and T. C. Boland came up from Keeler Tuesday.

Miss Katie Reddy of Darwin has been visiting friends in town this week.

John Baxter returned home from San Francisco last Monday much improved in health.

George Clarke came down from Bishop on Wednesday and returned yesterday morning.

Mrs. C. H. Parsons and Miss Jessie Parsons visited at Independence several days this week.

Bert Rhine went to Bishop yesterday to attend an installation of the I. O. O. F. lodge there.

Miss Elsie and Master Julian Eibeshutz have returned to San Francisco where they are attending school.

A. Spencer of Bishop visited the Southern end of the valley during the week, going as far as Keeler.

Hon. P. Reddy and E. A. Reddy are at Darwin. The latter will remain in charge of the Defiance mine.

John A. Hannah has been appointed Justice of Peace for Independence Township, vice John Baxter, resigned.

Miss Maggie Gorman started for Santa Rosa yesterday morning. She will remain there attending private school.

Mrs. E. Reinhackel, Miss Lena Reinhackel and Miss Laura McMurray of Big Pine were in town on Wednesday, returning next day.

Mrs. J. W. P. Laird and family started for Bakersfield yesterday to join Mr. Laird who has established a very successful law practice at that place.

Dr. J. B. Wasson left for Big Pine yesterday morning. We recommend him to the people of that place as a very skilful dentist. He operated very successfully here.

J. C. Roeper and family started for the lower country yesterday. Mrs. Roeper has been in very poor health for some time past and is in hopes that a change of climate may benefit her.

Geo. H. Bailey returned on Thursday morning from a trip to the other side. He says there is a great deal of excitement about Coyote Holes in regard to the killing of Powers and McCoy. The whites are constantly under arms. A posse of about thirty men is now after the Indian murderers and will wreak summary vengeance on them. It is thought that the slayer of Frank Paderes is with the gang.

The recent inrush of the ocean to the depression of the Colorado Desert in the vicinity of Salton, Cal., is an event of universal interest. Those who would like to know more about this strange section of our State will find considerable light on the problem of its past and future, in an article by Steven Bowers, Ph. D., a leading archeologist, in the July number of the Pacific Monthly. The article is on the Cahuilla Indians, who have inhabited this mysterious region for centuries.

Sent To Stockton.

On Wednesday Frank Murray was examined in the Superior Court on a charge of insanity and committed to the asylum at Stockton. Sheriff Gorman and Deputy Bunney started below with him yesterday. Murray had been working in the mines at Modock and it is thought that the heat affected his brain. He began to act strangely and came in to Lone Pine last week. While there he became violently deranged and was brought to Independence. A medical examination was conducted by Drs. Woodin, and he was pronounced dangerously insane.

SUPERVISORS' PROCEEDINGS.

MONDAY, July 6, 1891.

The Board of Supervisors met on the above day, all the members being present. Minutes of preceding meeting read, corrected and approved.

George L. Drake was appointed Constable in the First Township.

The Board then adjourned until 2 o'clock of July 7th. They met as a Board of Equalization the same evening but transacted no business.

TUESDAY, July 7, 1891.

Board of Equalization met at 9 o'clock a. m., same members present, and proceeded to examine assessment roll.

Assessment on Inyo Academy was reduced from $2,600 to $2,100.

Assessment on land of Mrs. Malone reduced from $500 to $400.

Board of Supervisors met at 2 o'clock p. m. A petition was granted for building bridge across Bishop Creek near John Bourland's dwelling and $250 appropriated. Supervisors Love and Watterson were appointed to superintend the construction.

WEDNESDAY, July 24, 1891.

Board of Supervisors met at 9 o'clock a m., same members present.

Petition of J. H. Bulpit et als. for right of way on Owens River considered.

John Shepherd was appointed Road Overseer for District No. 5½.

Resignation of Samuel Booda accepted.

Resignation of John Baxter as Justice of Peace for Third Township accepted and John A. Hannah appointed to succeed him.

On petition the name of Bishop Creek school district was changed to Bishop School district.

Rates on Deep Spring Valley toll road were fixed the same as last year.

The following claims were allowed.

I. J. Woodin	$ 66 60
J. D. Blair	83 35
A. C. Harvey	10 00
I. J. Woodin	50 00
Independence Water Co	13 00
Mrs. Keppler	30 00
J. N. Yandell	2 40
J. S. Gorman	3 75
A. W. Eibeshutz	53 13
W. F. Matlack	1 50
P. A. Chalfant	352 30
W. A. Chalfant	29 50
J. W. Murphy	4 50
L. Wood	8 10
W. F. Matlack	51 25

The Board adjourned until 2 o'clock p. m., at which hour it reassembled, the same members present. The following claims were allowed:

Geo. L. Drake, $102 90, allowed	$ 62 60
J. J. Moore	2 00
A. Carlisle & Co	156 05
H. Levy	5 00
C. W. Craig	39 00
Geo. M. Gill	7 00
W. F. Matlack, $43 75, allowed	41 75
I. H. Mulholland	2 25
Walter James	12 00
H. Evans	76 50

Reports of Overseers of Road Districts Nos. 1, 3 and 6 approved and bills allowed as follows: No 1, $33 00; No. 3, $131 75; No. 6, $115 00.

Whereupon the Board adjourned until 10 a. m. of Thursday.

THURSDAY, July 9, 1891.

Board of Equalization met and adjourned.

Board of Supervisors met in regular session, same members present.

The following claims were allowed:

N. Rhine	$ 20 41
I. H. Mulholland	20 50
Mrs. M. Lewis	628 11
O. I. Mairs	5 00

Reports of Overseers of Road Districts Nos. 2, 4 and 5 accepted and approved and claims allowed as follows: No. 4, $88 00; No. 5, $172 63; No. 2, $77 79.

Funds were transferred from the General Road Fund as follows: To No. 4, $63 54; No. 2, $53 37; No. 5½, $50 00.

Board adjourned until 2 o'clock p. m., at which hour it reassembled, same members present.

Ordinance No. 38, making Owens River a public highway from Mono county to the bridge at Laws, was passed.

D. J. Hessian was appointed Justice of Peace in Second Township.

Board adjourned until 9 o'clock a. m. of Friday.

The Fourth.

The Fourth of July celebration at Independence was an unqualified success. All guests were hospitably entertaned and amused. The ball was the largest ever had, the pavilion being filled to overflowing. The exercises on Saturday morning were admirably arranged. The Liberty Car with its goddess and load of little girls presented a beautiful sight. The various literary exercises were highly interesting and entertaining. In the afternoon a baseball game was played between the Independence and Bishop clubs and was won by the latter in hollow style. A number of small games and races for the children completed the sports. The committee deserves great credit for the active manner in which the entire affair was conducted. They assumed large responsibilities and paid every dollar of indebtedness incurred. By dint of nerve and perseverance an enjoyable and successful celebration was carried through.

Modock Mines.

The June output of ore from the Modock mines amounted to $6,014.47. A full force of men will be worked all summer in the main tunnel. Two shifts of men are now at work at the 300 foot point in ten inches of ore that goes 235 ounces silver per ton. Surface work will be discontinued until September 1st because of the scarcity of water. The property never looked better than at present.

A Quick Cure For Rheumatism.

In many cases persons subject to rheumatism, have got prompt relief from pain by applying Chamberlain's Pain-Balm. The relief it affords is alone worth many times its cost, which is but 50 cents, and its continued application effects a complete cure. For sale by A. K. EUGLEY, Big Pine.

The sum of $3,000,000 has been raised by the Terminal Railroad of Los Angeles for the purpose of extending roads from that city. Beyond all question Owens Valley will have railroad connection with Los Angeles within the next two years. The Terminal road is an extension of the U. P. to Rattlesnake Island.

HEIR TO $500,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A dispatch was received yesterday from Baltimore announcing that George F. Beiser of Brooklyn had become heir to a vast estate there valued at $500,000. The property came through relatives who emigrated from France in the days of the Huguenots. Mr. Beiser is an accountant in a Fulton street clothing house. Bruce's Law and Inquiry Agency, of Chicago, Ill., prosecuted his claim.—Louisville Courier-Journal, Nov. 27

We are Mr. Beiser's lawyers and by him seeing our advertisement, became the agent of his good fortune. If your ancestors came from the old country write to us, and enclose $1 for our list of heirs. There are more than half a billion dollars in Great Britain and Germany, unclaimed, which rightly belong to people in the United States.

BRUCE'S LAW AND INQUIRY OFFICE,
164 and 166 Randolph St.
Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

Well Merited Praise.

In almost every neighborhood there is some one or more persons whose lives have been saved by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, or who have been cured of chronic diarrhœa by it. Such persons take special pleasure in recommending the remedy to others. The praise that follows the introduction and use makes it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by A. K. EUGLEY, Big Pine.

A Suggestion.

If you are troubled with rheumatism or a lame back, allow us to suggest that you try the following simple remedy. Take a piece of flannel the size of the two hands, saturate it with Chamberlain's Pain-Balm and bind it over the seat of pain. It will produce a pleasant warmth and relieve you of all pain. Many severe cases have been cured in this way. The Pain-Balm can be obtained from

A. K. EUGLEY
Big Pine.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The partnership heretofore existing between W. S. Enos and O. I. Mairs is dissolved by mutual consent.

Witness our hands June 15th, 1891.

W. S. ENOS.
O. I. MAIRS.

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.

PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK.....PROPRIETOR.

Horseshoeing .....$2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

A. W. Eibeshutz
Independence, Cal.
—DEALER IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE

Agent for
Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of Caltfornia:
Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

INDEPENDENCE
MEAT MARKET,
J. C. ROEPER, Prop.

Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including Beef, Mutton, Pork, Sausage.

A well appointed shop, with refrigerator, ensuring the purity of meat, and every effort made to give satisfaction to patrons.
j19-tf

NOTICE

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For Sale!

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE

Eastside Canal.

There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,

C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

BELL'S Flouring Mills,
A. N. BELL, Prop.
TRY BELL'S
EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.

Having added Patent Rolls and other Improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out a flour that is fully

Equal to the Best

Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.

dependence, Cal. A. N. BELL,

NORMAN HOUSE,
Independence, - Cal.
New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates.
Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.
O. I. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL.

We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.

THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $25 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. Can work in spare time, or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FORBES & TOBEY,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.,
—DEALERS IN—
LUMBER
OF ALL KINDS.

DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS,
LATH,
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.

Matched and Dressed Flooring.
sept 11-tf

PALACE SALOON
LONE PINE, CAL.
—THE FINEST—
WINES,
BEER,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS
—o—
This Saloon is conducted in a strictly first-class manner, and every attention tendered my patrons. FRED. BURCKHARDT, Lessee.
j12-tf

TO ADVERTISERS

A list of 1000 newspapers divided into STATES AND SECTIONS will be sent on application—FREE.

To those who want their advertising to pay, we can offer no better medium for thorough and effective work than the various sections of our Select Local List. GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., Newspaper Advertising Bureau, 10 Spruce street, New York

EDWARD CHENOT
Independence, Cal.,
INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of
GENERAL MERCHANDIS
....Consisting of....
GROCERIES.
PROVISIONS
Tobacco, Cigars,
WINES AND LIQUORS
FLOUR & GRAIN
Together with an Assortment of
DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING
ETC., ETC

Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and price before purchasing elsewhere.
E. CHENOT.
Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
n476tf

Lake View Hotel
Keeler, Cal.
John Barnes, Prop'r.

First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.

THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
Wines,
Liquors,
& Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.
Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.
—o—
The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the
LARGEST AND BEST STOCK
of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.
PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.
All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.
Address orders and packages to
HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

BIG 10P ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.
Harness Maker.

Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.
O. H. Hill, Prop'r.

A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE
BISHOP.
Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St

In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable
S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.

All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.

Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Pioneer Livery & Feed Stables.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, patrons can be assured of finding there the best of Buggy Teams, Saddle Horses, and
Livery Accommodations
in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.
O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor.

A NEW DEAL!
LONE PINE
Livery, Feed & Sale Stable.
A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.
OPPOSITE SEWART HOUSE.
Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,
—DEALER IN—
General Merchandise,
LONE PINE,
INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,
BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.

Dealer In GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS
Supplies

PROVISIONS,
&c., &c., &c.
A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages, in any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, GEORGE STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.

CARSON & COLORADO R R
TAKING EFFECT
Sunday, November 16,

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1	To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Mound House	11:30 p. m.	5.50 p. m
Dayton	12:00 p. m.	5:10 p. m.
Wabuska	2:05 p. m.	2 50 p. m
Hawthorne	5 50 p. m.	11:10 a. m.
Luning	7:05 p. m.	9:55 a. m.
Soda Springs	8:05 p. m.	9:15 a. m
Belleville	9:15 p. m.	7:55a. m.
Candelaria	Ar. 10.00 p. m	Lv. 7:20 a. m.
	No. 3.	No. 4.
	Leave—	Arrives—
Belleville	8 20 a. m.	5:25 p m.
Benton	11:50 a. m.	1:25 a m.
Bishop Creek	2:00p. m.	11:00 a. m
Alvord	2 45 p. m.	10:00 a. m
Independence	4:20 p. m.	8:30 a. m
Lone Pine	5:10 p. m.	7:40 a. m
Keeler	Ar. 5:55 p. m.	Lv. 7:00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. & C. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (35 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's. tri-weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville, Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stages for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Peak, Montezuma, Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.
D A BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles
OF
Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc.
AT
L. WOOLS
CASH STORE

A small stock of fresh groceries a canned goods constantly renewed.

Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.

CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!

THE CASH STORE
Is Where You Get
WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE
Blacksmith Shop.
R. C. Spear, Prop'r
—ALL WORK ON—
MINING TOOLS,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS
& FREIGHTING OUTFITS
—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—
HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING
All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON
KEELER, CAL.
In Lake View Hotel
BEER, WINES.
LIQUORS and CIGARS

All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.
JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.
J. C. MILLER, Lessee.
—THE BAR—
Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of
WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS
The most careful attention given to the the amusement and comfort of patrons.
A FINE BILLIARD TABLE
Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon. sept-12 tf

Patent medicines differ—One has reasonableness, another has not. One has reputation—another has not. One has confidence, born of success — another has only "hopes."

Don't take it for granted that all patent medicines are alike. They are not.

Let the years of uninterrupted success and the tens of thousands of cured and happy men and women, place Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription on the side of the comparison they belong.

And there isn't a state or territory, no — nor hardly a country in the world, whether its people realize it or not, but have men and women in them that're happier because of their discovery and their effects.

Think of this in health. Think of it in sickness. And then think whether you can afford to make the trial if the makers can afford to take the risk to give your money back as they do if they do not benefit or cure you.

The now bounty of $5 per scalp on coyotes is awakening some enterprising minds to the great possibilities involved therein, and according to the Express of of that place a young man of Merced has eight young coyotes shut up in a pen and is feeding them from a bottle. There will be money in their scalps in time.

Reduced to a Skeleton by disease, and Restored to Health with Dr. Pardee's Remedy.

Wilson, Niagara Co., N. Y.

GENTLEMEN:—In April, 1883, I was prostrated by a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism and was confined to my bed four months. I was attended by the best medical skill, but rapidly grew worse until I was reduced to a mere skeleton.

The disease had gone to my lungs and to the region of my heart and I was finally given up by the physicians, who said I could live but a few hours at most and that all they could do was to make me as easy as possible by killing the pain by frequent injections of morphine. I was finally advised by a friend to take Dr. Pardee's Rheumatic Remedy. Upon being asked as to giving it to me, the physician said "I have no faith in patent medicines, but give it to him; it will not hurt him."

I was then so near dead that my limbs were cold below the knees, and a numb sensation began to creep over my body, and I suffered with great pain in my chest and about my heart. After I had taken the first few doses I experienced more pain than before, for it seemed to drive the pain from the vital parts toward the extremities. I continued to take it according to directions. Four days after the physicion who gave me up called to see me, and said I was much better. In about four weeks I could sit up; I then gained very fast and became as well as ever. CHAS. O. BARNUM.

Brother of D. C. Barnum, Attorney, 126 Powers' Block, Rochester, to whom persons can refer.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

GENTS:—For the past winter I have been very badly afflicted with rheumatism. About six weeks ago was confined to my bed, and whenever I was able to get around was obliged to use cruches. All the time I had the best medical attendance.

After one week's use of Dr. Pardee's Remedy, I was able to walk with a cane. I continued its use and can now move around without assistance of any kind, and am better in health than I have been for years. It has effected a permanent cure and I take pleasure in recommending it. C. R. FINNEGAN, Supt. Fire Alarm Telegraph, City Building, Front Street.

Send for pamphlet to Pardee Medicine Co.

Nearly all the large cigar factories at Key West, Fla., are closed. Four thousand cigarmakers are out of employment.

The Bagging Committee of the South Carolina Alliance claim to have bagged the jute men, who have come to the farmers' terms.

THAT'S IT.

St. Jacobs Oil The Great Remedy CURES RHEUMATISM.

18 Hill Street, San Francisco, Cal., April 23, 1890.

"Having been sorely afflicted with rheumatism, my mother and daughter with sore throat, we have, by the use of St Jacobs Oil, been cured." LOUIS IMHAUS.

—FOR— PAIN,

CURES NEURALGIA.

Ellenville, N. Y., Jan. 6, 1890.

"I suffered with neuralgia, bought a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil and soon recovered. I treated a sprained ankle with same results." THOS. M. VAN GORDER.

CURES SCIATICA.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 19, 1889.

I suffered a long time with sciatic pains in the hips; found no relief till I tried St. Jacobs Oil, which completely cured me. CHAS. A. FULDA.

ALSO CURES

Promptly and Permanently

LUMBAGO, SPRAINS, BRUISES.

MORNING SCHOOLS, AT SEA-SIDE,

JUNE 16— —JULY 31

Greek, German, Mathematics, English Literature, Physics Chemistry, taught by College Professors. 4 P. M. Bible Study, Free! Evening Lectures Free. Warm Salt-water Bathing in TWIN LAKES.

LORENZO D. INSKEEP, Santa Cruz, Cal.
Sec'y California Baptist Resort.

HAZELTON BROS., AND HEMME & LONG PIANOS

Sold on Easy Installments. Also dealer in Sheet Music and Musical Merchandise. CHAS. S. EATON, General Agent, 735 Market St., S. F., Cal. Send for Catalogues of Pianos and Sheet Music.

THE SPLENDID SPUR.

Being Memoirs of the Adventures of Mr. John Marvel, a Servant of His late Majesty King Charles I, in the years 1642-3: written by himself.

EDITED IN MODERN ENGLISH BY "Q."

CHAPTER X.

CAPT. POTTERY AND CAPT. SETTLE.

"Now either I am mad or dreaming," thought I; for that the fellow had not heard our noise was starkly incredible. I stepped along the deck towards him; not an inch did he budge. I touched him on the shoulder.

He faced round with a quick start.

"Sir," said I, quick and low, before he could get a word out—"Sir, we are in your hands. I will be plain. To-night I have broke out of Bristol Keep, and the colonel's men are after me. Give me up to them, and they hang me to-morrow; give my comrade up, and they persecute her vilely. Now, sir, I know not which side you be, but there's our case in a nutshell."

The man bent forward, displaying a huge rounded face, very kindly about the eyes, and set a-top of the oddest body in the world; for, under a trunk extraordinary broad and strong, straddled a pair of legs that a baby would have disowned, so thin and stunted were they, and (to make it queerer) ended in feet the most prodigious you ever saw.

As I said, this man leaned forward, and shouted into my ear so that I fairly leaped in the air:

"My name's Pottery—Bill Pottery, cap'n o' the Godsend—an' you can't make me hear, not if you bust yourse'f!"

You may think this put me in a fine quandary.

"I be as deaf as nails!" bawled he.

'Twas horrible; for the troopers, I thought, if anywhere near, could not miss hearing him. His voice shook the very rigging.

"An' o' my crew the half ashore gettin drunk, an' the half below in a very accomplished state o' liquor; so there's no chance for 'ee to speak!"

He paused a moment, then roared again:

"What a pity! 'Cos you make me very curious—that you do!"

Luckily at this moment Delia had the sense to put a finger to her lip. The man wheeled round without another word, led us aft over the blocks, cordage and all manner of loose gear that encumbered the deck to a ladder that towards the stern led down into darkness. Here he signed to us to follow, and, descending first, threw open a door, letting out a faint stream of light in our faces. 'Twas the captain's cabin, lined with cupboards and lockers; and the light came from an oil lamp hanging over a narrow deal table. By this light Capt. Billy scrutinized us for an instant; then, from one of his lockers, brought out pen, paper and ink, and set them on the table before me.

I caught up the pen, dipped it, and began to write

I am John Marvel, a servant of King Charles, and this night am escaped out of Bristol castle. If you be—

Thus far I had written without glancing up, in fear to read the disappointment of my hopes. But now the pen was caught suddenly from my fingers, the paper torn in shreds, and there was Master Pottery shaking us both by the hand, nodding and becking, and smiling the while all over his big red face.

But he ceased at last, and opening another of his lockers, drew forth a horn lantern, a mallet and a chisel. Not a word was spoken as he lit the lantern and passed out of the cabin, Delia and I following at his heels.

Just outside, at the foot of the steps, he stooped, pulled up a trap in the flooring and disclosed another ladder stretching, as it seemed, down into the bowels of the ship. This we descended carefully, and found ourselves in the hold, pinching our noses twixt finger and thumb.

For indeed the smell here was searching to a very painful degree, for the room was narrow and every inch of it contested by two puissant essences, the one raw wool, the other bilge water. With wool the place was piled, but also I noticed, not far from the ladder, several casks set on their ends, and to these the captain led us.

They were about a dozen in all, stacked close together; and Master Pottery, rolling two apart from the rest, dragged them to another trap and tugged out the bungs. A stream of fresh water gushed from each and splashed down the trap into the bilge below. Then, having drained them, he staved in their heads with a few blows of his mallet.

His plan for us was clear. And in a very few minutes Delia and I were crouching on the timbers, each with a cask inverted over us, our noses at the bungholes and our ears listening to Master Pottery's footsteps as they climbed heavily back to deck. The rest of the casks were stacked close round us, so that, even had the gloom allowed, we could see nothing at all.

Soon I heard the noise of feet above, and a string of voices speaking one after another, louder and louder. And next Master Pottery began to answer up and drowned all speech but his own. When he ceased, there was silence for some minutes; after which we heard a party descend to the cabin, and the trampling of their feet on the boards above us. They remained there some while discussing; and then came footsteps down the second ladder, and a twinkle of light reached me through the bunghole of my cask.

"Quick!" said a husky voice; "overhaul the cargo here!"

I heard some half dozen troopers bustling about the hold and tugging out the bales of wool.

"Hi!" called Master Pottery; "an' when you've done rummaging my ship put everything back as you found it."

"Poke about with your swords," commanded the husky voice. "What's in those barrels yonder?"

"Water, sergeant," answers a trooper, rolling out a couple.

"Nothing behind them?"

"No; they're right against the side."

"Drop 'em, then. Plague on this business! 'Tis my notion they're a mile away, and Cap'n Stubbs no better than a fool to send us back here. He's grudging promotion, that's what he is! Hurry, there—hurry!"

Ten minutes later the searchers were gone, and we in our casks drawing long breaths of thankfulness and strong odors. And so we crouched till, about midnight, Capt. Billy brought us down a supper of ship's biscuit, which we crept forth to eat, being sorely cramped.

He could not hear our thanks, but guessed them.

"Now, say not a word! To-morrow we sail for Plymouth sound; thence for Brittany. Hist! We be all king's men aboard the Godsend, though hearing nought I say little. Yet I have my reasoning heresies, holding the Lord's Anointed to be an anointed rogue, but nevertheless to be served; just as aboard the Godsend I be Cap'n Billy an' you plain Jack, be your virtues what they may. An' the conclusion is—damn all mutineers an' rebels! Though, to be sure, the words be a bit lusty for a young gentlewoman's ears."

We went back to our casks with lighter hearts. Howbeit 'twas near 5 in the morning, I dare say, before my narrow bed chamber allowed me to drop asleep.

I woke to spy through my bunghole the faint light of day struggling down the hatches. Above, I heard a clanking noise, and the voices of the men hiccoughing a dismal chant. They were lifting anchor. I crawled forth and woke Delia, who was yet sleeping, and together we ate the breakfast that lay ready set for us on the head of a barrel.

Presently the sailors broke off their song, and we heard their feet shuffling to and fro on deck.

"Sure," cried Delia, "we are moving!"

And surely we were, as could be told by the altered sound of the water beneath us, and the many creakings that the Godsend began to keep. Once more I tasted freedom again and the joy of living, and could have sung for the mirth that lifted my heart. "Let us but gain open sea," said I, "and I'll have tit for tat with these rebels!"

But alas! before we had left Avon mouth twenty minutes 'twas another tale. For I lay on my side in that dark hold and longed to die, and Delia sat up beside me, her hands in her lap and her great eyes fixed most dolefully. And when Capt. Billy came down with the news that we were safe and free to go on deck we turned our faces from him and said we thanked him kindly, but had no longer any wish that way—too wretched, even, to remember his deafness.

Let me avoid, then, some miserable hours, and come to the evening, when, faint with fasting and nausea, we struggled up to the deck for air, and looked about us.

'Twas gray—gray everywhere, the sky lead colored, with deeper shades towards the east, where a bank of cloud blotted the coast line; the thick rain descending straight, with hardly wind enough to set the sails flapping; the sea spread like a plate of lead, save only where, to leeward, a streak of curdled white crawled away from under the Godsend's keel.

On deck, a few sailors moved about, red eyed and heavy. They showed no surprise to see us, but nodded very friendly, with a smile for our strange complexions. Here again, as ever, did adversity mock her own image.

But what more took our attention was to see a row of men stretched on the starboard side, like corpses, their heads in the scuppers, their legs pointed inboard, and very orderly arranged. They were a dozen and two in all, and over them bent Capt. Billy with a mop in his hand and a bucket by his side, who beckoned that we should approach.

"Arrayed in order o' merit," said he, pointing with his mop like a showman to the line of figures before him.

We drew near.

"This here is Matt. Soames, master o' this vessel—an' he's dead."

"Dead?"

"Dead drunk, that is. O the gifted man! Come up!" He thrust the mop in the fellow's heavy face. "There now! Did he move? did he wink? 'No,' says you. O an accomplished drunkard!"

He paused a moment, then stirred up No. 2, who opened one eye lazily, and shut it again in slumber.

"You saw? Opened one eye, hey? That's Benjamin Halliday. The next is a black man, as you see; a man of dismal color, and hath other drawbacks natural to such. Can the Ethiop shift his skin? No, but he'll open both eyes. See there—a perfect Christian, in so far as drink can make him."

With like comments he ran down the line.

To be brief, 'twas not till the fourth afternoon (by reason of baffling head winds) that we stepped out of the Godsend's boat upon a small beach of shingle, whence, between a rift in the black cliffs, wound up the road that was to lead us inland. The Godsend, as we turned to wave our hands, lay at half a mile's distance, and made a pretty sight; for the day, that had begun with a white frost, was now turned sunny and still, so that looking north we saw the sea all spread with pink and lilac and hyacinth, and upon it the ship lit up, her masts and sails glowing like a gold piece. And there was Billy, leaning over the bulwarks and waving his trumpet for "Good by." Thought I, for I little dreamed to see these good fellows again, "what a witless game is this life! to seek ever in fresh conjunctions what we leave behind in a handshake."

We followed the road after this very moodily; for Delia, whom I had made a sharer of the rebels' secret, agreed that no time was to be lost in reaching Bodmin, that lay a good thirty miles to the southwest. Night fell and the young moon rose, with a brisk breeze at our backs that kept us still walking without any feeling of weariness. Capt. Billy had given me at parting a small compass, of new invention, that a man could carry easily in his pocket; and this from time to time I examined in the moonlight, guiding our way almost due south, in hopes of striking into the main road westward. I doubt not we lost a deal of time among the byways; but at length happened on a good road bearing south, and followed it till daybreak, when, to our satisfaction, we spied a hill in front, topped with a stout castle, and under it a town of importance, that we guessed to be Launceston.

By this my comrade and I were on the best of terms again; and now drew up to consider if we should enter the town or avoid it to the west, trusting to find a breakfast in some tavern on the way. Because we knew not with certainty the temper of the country, it seemed best to choose this second course; so we fetched around by certain barren meadows, and thought ourselves lucky to hit on a road that, by the size, must be the one we sought, and a tavern with a wide yard before it and a carter's van standing at the entrance, not three gunshots from the town walls.

"Now Providence hath surely led us to breakfast," said Delia, and stepped before me into the yard, towards the door.

I was following her when, inside of a gate to the right of the house, I caught the gleam of steel, and turned aside to look.

To my dismay there stood near a score of chargers in this second court, saddled and dripping with sweat. My first thought was to run after Delia; but a quick surprise made me rub my eyes with wonder.

'Twas the sight of a sorrel mare among them—a mare with one high white stocking. In a thousand I could have told her for Molly.

Three seconds after I was at the tavern door, and in my ears a voice sounding that stopped me short and told me in one instant that without God's help all was lost.

'Twas the voice of Capt. Settle speaking in the tap room, and already Delia stood, past concealment, by the open door.

"——And therefore, master carter, it grieves me to disappoint thee, but no man goeth this day towards Bodmin. Such be my Lord of Stamford's orders, whose servant I am, and as captain of this troop I am sent to exact them. As they displease you, his lordship is but twenty-four hours behind; you can abide him and complain. Doubtless he will hear—Ten million devils!"

I heard his shout as he caught sight of Delia. I saw his crimson face as he darted out and gripped her. I saw, or half saw, the troopers crowding out after him. For a moment I hesitated. Then came my pretty comrade's voice, shrill above the hubbub:

"Jack—they have horses outside! Leave me—I am ta'en—and ride, dear lad—ride!"

In a flash my decision was taken for better or worse. I dashed out around the house, vaulted the gate and, catching at Molly's mane, leaped into the saddle.

A dozen troopers were at the gate and two had their pistols leveled.

"Surrender!"

"Be hanged if I do!"

I set my teeth and put Molly at the low wall. As she rose like a bird in the air the two pistols rang out together, and a burning pain seemed to tear open my left shoulder. In a moment the mare alighted safe on the other side, flinging me forward on her neck. But I scrambled back, and with a shout that frightened my own ears dug my heels into her flanks.

Half a minute more and I was on the hard road, galloping westward for dear life. So also were a score of rebel troopers. Twenty miles and more lay before me, and a bare hundred yards was all my start.

CHAPTER XI.

I RIDE DOWN INTO TEMPLE.

And now I did indeed abandon myself to despair. Few would have given a groat for my life, with that crew at my heels; and I least of all, now that my dear comrade was lost. The wound in my shoulder was bleeding sore—I could feel the warm stream welling—yet not so sore as my heart. And I pressed my knees into the saddle flap and wondered what the end would be.

The sorrel mare was galloping, free and strong, her delicate ears laid back, and the network of veins under her soft skin working with the heave and fall of her withers; yet—by the mud and sweat about her—I knew she must have traveled far before I mounted. I heard a shot or two fired, far up the road; though their bullets must have fallen short; at least, I heard none whiz past. But the rebels' shouting was clear enough and the thud of their gallop behind.

I think that, for a mile or two, I must have ridden in a sort of swoon. 'Tis certain, not an inch of the road comes back to me; nor did I once turn my head to look back, but sat with my eyes fastened stupidly on the mare's neck. And by and by, as we galloped, the smart of my wound, the heartache, hurry, pounding of hoofs, all dropped to an enchanting lull. I rode, and that was all.

For, swoon or no, I was lifted off earth, as it seemed, and on easy wings to an incredible height, where were no longer hedges, nor road, nor country round; but a great stillness, and only the mare and I running languidly through it.

"Ride!"

Now, at first, I thought 'twas some one speaking this in my ear, and turned my head. But 'twas really the last word I had heard from Delia, now after half an hour repeated in my brain. And as I grew aware of this the dullness fell off me, and all became very distinct. And the muscles about my wound had stiffened—which was vilely painful; and the country, I saw, was a brown, barren moor, dotted with peat ricks; and I cursed it.

This did me good; for it woke the fighting man in me, and I set my teeth. Now for the first time looking back, I saw, with a great gulp of joy, I had gained on the troopers. A long dip of the road lay between me and the foremost, now topping the crest. The sun had broke through at last, and sparkled on his cap and gorget. I whistled to Molly (I could not pat her) and spoke to her softly; the sweet thing pricked up her ears, laid them back again, and mended her pace. Her stride was beautiful to feel.

She was going her best, but the best was near spent. The sweat was oozing, her satin coat losing the gloss, the spume flying back from her nostrils. "Soh!" I called to her—"Soh! my beauty; we ride to save an army." The loose stones flew right and left, as she reached out her neck, and her breath came shorter and shorter.

A mile, and another mile, we passed in this trim, and by the end of it must have spent three-quarters of an hour at the work. Glancing back, I saw the troopers scattered; far behind, but following. The heights were still a weary way ahead; but I could mark their steep sides ribbed with bowlders. Till these were passed, there was no chance to hide. The parties in this race could see each other all the way, and must ride it out.

And all the way the ground kept rising. I had no means to ease the mare, even by pulling off my heavy jackboots, with one arm (and that my right) dangling useless. Once she flung up her head and I caught sight of her nostril, red as fire, and her poor eyes starting. I felt her strength ebbing between my knees. Here and there she blundered in her stride. And somewhere, over the ridge yonder, lay the Army of the West, and we alone could save it.

But sweet, gallant Molly must have held on, for the next thing I woke up to was a four holed cross beside the road, and soon after we were over the ridge and clattering down hill.

A rough tor had risen full in front, but the road swerved to the left and took us down among the spurs of it. Now was my last lookout. I tried to sway less heavily in the saddle, and with my eyes searched the plain at our feet.

Alas! Beneath us the waste land was spread, mile upon mile; and I groaned aloud. For just below I noted a clump of roofless cabins, and beyond, upon the moors, the dotted walls of sheep cotes, ruined also, but in all the sad colored leagues no living man, nor the sign of one. It was done with us. I reined up the mare—and then, in the same motion, wheeled her sharp to the right.

High above, on the hillside, a voice was calling.

I looked up. Below the steeper ridge of the tor a patch of land had been cleared for tillage; and here a yoke of oxen was moving leisurely before a plow ('twas their tinkling bells I had heard, just now); while behind followed by the wildest shape—by the voice, a woman.

She was not calling to me, but to her team, and as I put Molly at the slope, her chant rose and fell in the mournfulest sing-song.

"So-ho! Oop Comely Vean! oop, then—o-oop!"

I rose in my stirrups and shouted.

At this and the sound of hoofs, she stayed the plow and, hand on hip, looked down the slope. The oxen, softly rattling the chains on their yoke, turned their necks and gazed. With sunk head Molly heaved herself up the last few yards and came to a halt with a stagger. I slipped out of the saddle and stood, with a hand on it, swaying.

"What's thy need, young man—that comest down to Temple wi' sword a-danglin'?"

The girl was a half naked savage, dressed only in a strip of sacking that barely reached her knees and a scant bodice of the same, laced in front with pack thread that left her bosom and brown arms free. Yet she appeared no whit abashed, but leaned on the plow tail and regarded me easy and frank, as a man would.

"Sell me a horse!" I blurted out. "Twenty guineas will I give for one within five minutes, and more if he be good! I ride on the king's errand."

"Then get thee back to thy master an' say no horse shall he have o' me—nor any man that uses horseflesh so." She pointed to Molly's knees, that were bowed and shaking and the bloody froth dripping from her mouth.

"Girl, for God's sake sell me a horse! They are after me and I am hurt." I pointed up the road. "Better than I are concerned in this."

"God nor king know I, young man. But what's on thy saddle cloth there?"

'Twas the smear where my blood had soaked, and, looking and seeing the purple mess caked with mud and foam on the sorrel's flank, I felt suddenly very sick. The girl made a step to me.

"Sell thee a horse? Hire thee a bedman, more like. Nay, then, lad"——

But I saw her no longer; only called "oh—oh!" twice, like a little child, and, slipping my hold of the saddle, dropped forward on her breast.

Waking, I found myself in darkness—not like that of night, but of a room where the lights have gone out, and felt that I was dying. But this hardly seemed a thing to be minded. There was a smell of peat and bracken about. Presently I heard the tramp of feet somewhere overhead, and a dull sound of voices that appeared to be cursing.

The footsteps went to and fro, the voices muttering most of the time. After a bit I caught a word—"Witchcraft;" and then a voice speaking quite close—"There's blood 'pon her hands, an' there's blood yonder by the plow." Said another voice, higher and squeaky, "There's scent behind a fox, but you don't dig it up an' take it home." The tramp passed on, and the voices died away.

By this I knew the troopers were close and seeking me. A foolish thought came that I was buried, and they must be rummaging over my grave; but indeed I had no wish to inquire into it; no wish to move even, but just to lie and enjoy the lightness of my limbs. The blood was still running. I felt the warmth of it against my back, and thought it very pleasant. So I shut my eyes and dropped off again.

Then I heard the noise of shouting far away, and a long while after that was roused by the touch of a hand, thrust in against my naked breast over my heart.

"Who is it?" I whispered.

"Joan," answered a voice, and the hand was withdrawn.

The darkness had lifted somewhat, and though something stood between me and the light, I marked a number of small specks, like points of gold dotted around me.

(TO BE CONTINUED.

WONDERFUL DENTISTRY.

Painless Extraction of Teeth That has Stood Four Years Test.

Four years ago the world was surprised when Dr. Geo. W. Leek of 6 O'Farrel Street, San Francisco, made a public demonstration of his ability to extract any number of teeth painlessly, without the use of any deadly dental gasses, such as laughing gas, nitrous oxide, vitalized air or Colton gas.

Many reporters wrote flattering reports of the exhibition and called it a superhuman method. After four years trial and millions of teeth have been removed painlessly by its use it is still a secret, (we are sorry), kept by it's discoverer.

However, Dr. Leek promises that within two years he will make it public; till then he will keep it to himself, and require all who wish his method to visit his office and be operated on by himself.

We will state that nineteen expert dentists are employed by Dr. Leek in his many operating rooms, and in his mechanical laboratory where he manufactures the patented bridge-work or teeth without plates, a style of artificial teeth never before made by any dentist. No filthy plates are used in this late style of inserting artificial teeth.

We do not wish to boom any man, business or style; it is our duty to inform the public of such a benefactor as Dr. Leek, who is at least a century ahead of his fellow dentists in his wonderful discoveries in the science of medicine, and in the mechanical appliances in dentistry, and we take great pleasure in stating that he possesses other qualities not found in all great men. The doctor is a man fond of his family, temperate in his habits, a great lover of fast horses, many of California's fastest have been owned by him. He is a staunch lover of the gun, and has the honor of being the vice-president of the State Sportsmen's Association, and one of the leading lights of the California Athlete Club, where the manly art is dealt out in the square and on the square.

The above are guarantees enough to any person who wishes to have superior dental work done at a reasonable price.

There never was a man who failed in business who did not claim it was because he was too honest.

ACROSS THE DEEP, TO THE FAR WEST,

On steamboats, cars and stage-coaches, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is carried as the most important item in the materia medica of the traveling public. It deprives vitiated, brackish water of its hurtful properties and execrable flavor, counteracts the pernicious effects upon the stomach of bad or indigestible food, remedies cramps, heartburn and wind upon the stomach. It is a fine defense against malarial disorders, nullifies the effects of excessive heat, cold and damp, relieves sick-headache, and is an incomparable cure for costiveness and biliousness. The fatigue of travel often tells most disastrously upon invalids and convalescents, occasionally to such an extent as to jeopardise life. Persons in feeble health, apprehensive of bad effects from travel, will, if provided with the Bitters, be far less likely to have their fears realized.

A runaway horse and a mad dog have no conscience. Never dispute the right-of-way with either.

$100 REWARD $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by Druggists, 75c.

"There are born liars as well as born poets," but the former comes easier to a man.

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Porterfield & Losey, 828 Market street, San Francisco.

How small, of all that human hearts endure,
That part which lords or kings can cause or cure.
Still to ourselves, in every place consign'd,
Our own felicity we make or find.

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation permanently. For sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all druggists.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

"German Syrup"

For Throat and Lungs

Hemorrhage Five Years. "I have been ill for "about five years, "have had the best "medical advice, "and I took the first "dose in some doubt. This resulted in a few hours easy sleep. There "was no further hemorrhage till next "day, when I had a slight attack "which stopped almost immediately. By the third day all trace of "blood had disappeared and I had "recovered much strength. The "fourth day I sat up in bed and ate "my dinner, the first solid food for "two months. Since that time I "have gradually gotten better and "am now able to move about the "house. My death was daily expected and my recovery has been "a great surprise to my friends and "the doctor. There can be no doubt "about the effect of German Syrup, "as I had an attack just previous to "its use. The only relief was after "the first dose." J. R. LOUGHHEAD, Adelaide, Australia.

BROOKLYN HOTEL Bush St., bet. Montgomery & Sansome, S. F.; conducted on both the European and American plan. This Hotel is under the management of Charles Montgomery, and is the best Family and Business Men's Hotel in San Francisco. Home comforts, cuisine unexcelled, first-class service, highest standard of respectability guaranteed. Board and room, per day $2.50 to $2.00; single room, 50 cts. to $1.00 per night. Free coach to and from the Hotel.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted.....

Sold by druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco

Tommy—Paw, what is "fame"? Mr. Figg—Fame, my son, is something a man makes money out of after he is dead.

There are people using Dobbins' Electric Soap to-day who commenced its use in 1865. Would this be the case were it it not the purest and most economical soap made. Ask your grocer for it. Look out for imitations. Dobbins'.

Never put yourself in the power of a man who will kick a dog for fun.

A Sore Throat, Cough, or Cold, if suffered to progress, results in serious pulmonary affections, often-times incurable. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" reach directly the seat of the disease, and give instant relief.

The moment humility undertakes to carry a bag it kills itself.

Use Enameline Stove Polish; no dust, no smell.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder.

A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.

No other baking powder does such work.

Children always Enjoy It.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

of pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda is almost as palatable as milk. Children enjoy it rather than otherwise. A MARVELLOUS FLESH PRODUCER it is indeed, and the little lads and lassies who take cold easily, may be fortified against a cough that might prove serious, by taking Scott's Emulsion after their meals during the winter season.

Beware of substitutions and imitations.

Fresno and Tulare Lands.

Homes on easy terms in the Level Orchard Land Colony. Two canals through the tract. Terms, 15 per cent. down, balance on five years' time. Our lands are adopted to the Orange, Raisin and Deciduous Fruit. Apply to

D. T. CURTIS,
REEDLEY, - - - Fresno County, Cal.

FOR MEN ONLY!

VIGOR AND STRENGTH For LOST or FAILING MANHOOD, General and NERVOUS DEBILITY; Weakness of Body and Mind, Effects of Errors or Excesses in Older or Young, Robust, Noble MANHOOD fully Restored. How to enlarge and strengthen WEAK, UNDEVELOPED ORGANS & PARTS OF BODY. Absolutely unfailing HOME TREATMENT—Benefits in a day. Men testify from 50 States, and Foreign Countries. Write them. Descriptive Book, explanation and proofs sealed (sealed) free. Address ERIE MEDICAL CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

BIG G Cures in 1 TO 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Mfd only by THE EVANS CHEMICAL CO. CINCINNATI, O. U. S. A. Trade Mark

Big G is the acknowledged leading remedy for all the unnatural discharges and private diseases of men. A certain cure for the debilitating weakness peculiar to women. I prescribe it and feel safe in recommending it to all sufferers. A. J. STONER, M.D., DECATUR, ILL. Sold by Druggists. PRICE $1.00.

YOUNG MEN!

The Specific No. 1 cures all unnatural discharges of Men, no matter of how long standing. Prevents stricture, if taken as directed. Circulars free on application. Sold by Druggists, or sent prepaid on receipt of price by THE A. SCHUMANN MEDICINE CO., San Jose, Cal. PRICE $3.00

HUMORS OF THE BLOOD, SKIN, AND Scalp, whether itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, blotchy, or copper-colored, with loss of hair, either simple, scrofulous, hereditary, or contagious, are speedily, permanently, economically, and infallibly cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood and Skin Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. CUTICURA REMEDIES are the only infallible blood and skin purifiers, and daily effect more great cures of blood and skin diseases than all other remedies combined.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston, Mass. Send for "How to Cure Blood and Skin Diseases."

Pimples, blackheads, chapped and oily skin prevented by CUTICURA SOAP.

Backache, kidney pains, weakness, and rheumatism relieved in one minute by the celebrated CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c.

HAY FEVER & ASTHMA CURED TO STAY CURED. We want the name and address of every sufferer in the U. S. and Canada. Address P. Harold Hayes, M.D., Buffalo, N.Y.

GREENBACK PLUG CUT

SMOKING TOBACCO HAS JUMPED TO THE FRONT THE BEST SMOKE IN A NOVEL AND CONVENIENT PACKAGE

TIGER MOWERS.

Cut 4 feet, 3inches,	$75 00
Cut 5 feet,	82 50
Cut 6 feet,	90 00

Will cut where any other Mower can.

Baker & Hamilton

San Francisco, Cal.

GOOD TIMES

For Farmers! For Everybody!

Table Peaches, very fine, per doz.,	$2.10,	$2.25
Table Plums, " "	1.40,	1.50
Table Grapes, " "	1.35,	1.50
Table Bartlett Pears, "	2.10,	2.25
Table Fruit, assorted, all kinds	1.75,	1.85
Pie Fruit, assorted, per doz.,	1.00,	1.25

Order by the can, dozen, case, or carload.

SMITH'S CASH STORE,

416-418 FRONT STREET, - San Francisco.

WANTED SOLDIERS' HOMESTEADS The addresses of all soldiers who homesteaded a less number of acres than 160 and made final proof on the same before June 22, 1874. W. E. MOSES, P. O. Box 1765, Denver, Colo. Mention this paper.

STEINWAY, Gabler and Pease Pianos Meaning the BEST PIANO MADE, and the favorite cheaper Pianos; all Musical Instruments; Band Supplies; large stock of Sheet Music. STEINWAY HALL, 206 & 208 Post Street, MATTHIAS GRAY Call and see our new rooms and new stock.

INDISPENSIBLE TO HOUSEKEEPERS. Ask Your Dealer for It. Write for Circular. AMERICAN OIL CO., Agts. 11 to 15 Main St., San Francisco, California.

PISO'S REMEDY FOR CATARRH.—Best. Easiest to use. Cheapest. Relief is immediate. A cure is certain. For Cold in the Head it has no equal.

CATARRH

It is an Ointment, of which a small particle is applied to the nostrils. Price 50c. Sold by druggists or sent by mail. Address: E. T. HAZELTINE, Warren, Pa.

CUMBERLAND COAL. This Coal is stored away from the sun and rain. Keeps proper fire. No loss of time. No loss of material from bad fires. Always reliable. Blacksmith's use this brand when they want the best.

HUSBAND & BROOKS' BRAND.

Absolutely Pure and Dry HUSBAND & BROOKS —IMPORTERS— 14 & 16 SPEAR ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

"I wept when I was born, and every day shows why," said House-keeper — who didn't use SAPOLIO

Sapolio is a solid cake of scouring soap used for all cleaning purposes

"Ah! Ah!" Cried the housewife, "The Secret I know, no DIRT can resist SAPOLIO."

"Oh! Oh!" Cried the DIRT, "At length I must go, I cannot withstand SAPOLIO."

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

Independence, Cal.,

FRIDAY, JULY 17, 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXIII. NO. 5. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JULY 17, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1081.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2.25
Three Months	1.50
One Month	.50
Single Copies	.10

THEOREMATIC DREAMS.

Warning Received by Farmer and his Wife.

DREAMING OF A RAID OF BANDITS.

The Neighbors Couldn't Understand Why the Farmer Moved.

Impending perils may cast a shadow persistently ignored in a waking state, while the mind is under the influence of a self deluding optimism—the wish that is father to the belief in the significance of the threatening danger. But in sleep the voice of the monitor cannot be silenced by such illusions, and warning forebodings often take the form of distinct visions, repeated with a vividness and frequency which at last cannot fail to influence the actions of the individual, in spite of all waking sophisms.

DREAMED IT TWICE.

I remember the instance of an American family that had settled in the northern uplands of Cameron county, Texas, but before the end of a year removed to the vicinity of a larger settlement and sold their half completed home for reasons that remained a mystery to their upland neighbors.

"We had selected that building site after a good deal of prospecting," the first proprietor of that house told me a few years later, "and at first it seemed a puzzle to me that nobody had pre-empted it long ago. It was a broad hill with a fine prospect east and south; we had an abundance of timber, fine range, two good springs, and a ledge of soft limestone within a thousand yards of the house, where you could shape out building stone with a common saw. I never could hope to find better neighbors; they actually got up a picnic to celebrate our arrival, so glad they were to have English speaking folks within visiting distance.

"We had every prospect of getting an improved road and a postoffice, and three months after our first entry I would not have sold that homestead for ten times my direct expenses. But about half a year after that ranch seemed a haunted place and I didn't feel at rest night or day, though people that know me are not likely to call me superstitious. I never was afraid of darkness even when I was a boy and a swarm of ghosts would not scare me worth a cent. But one night, about a week after I had got home from a trip to Brownsville Landing, I dreamt our house was tackled by a band of Greaser bushwhackers (Mexican bandits) and that they shot me down and killed my little boy with a club, and then loaded their horses with everything they could move.

"Two nights after I had exactly that same dream over again, and I could see every stick and stone in our yard, when I tried to make a break for our next neighbor and was shot down just as I rushed through the gate. I noticed the very horses and saddles of that gang and could have recognized every one of them if I had met them in daylight, and I now do believe that I did see them somehow or other on that trip to the landing.

THE WIFE'S WARNING.

"The idea began to haunt me when that dream had come back for the third time, though I never said a word; but one morning my wife seemed uneasy till all our farm hands had started to work, and then asked me to come out in the garden for a minute.

"'Do you think there are any robbers in this neighborhood?' she asked me when we were quite alone.

"'Why, did you see or hear anything suspicious?' I asked her back.

"'No, but I had such a strange dream last night,' said she, with a sort of a shudder. 'I dreamt a gang of Mexicans came to our house and made me run for my life, and just before I got through the door I saw them knock down little Tommy with a club.'

"'Didn't I help you?' I laughed.

"'I don't know,' she said. 'I saw you collar one of them, and I kept calling for you in English to save yourself, but just as you dashed through the gate I heard the crack of a shotgun and then I fainted.'

"I made no reply, but that minute I felt that we couldn't stay any longer, and two weeks after I made up my mind to move to Indianola. There were no Mexicans in our immediate neighborhood at that hill farm, and no serious robbery had happened anywhere nearer than Casa Blanca, but I felt that I had to look for a new home if I expected to get an hour's peace, and it often seemed to me that I was doing a sin if I let my little boy out of sight for ten minutes. So we made up an excuse about schools and postoffice and managed to sell our pretty place for a few hundred. The neighbors thought I must be half crazy, but I couldn't help it; and just ten weeks after we were gone we got the news of that Pancho Parras massacre. The whole neighborhood had been sacked and outraged, and as I know my boy, I am now morally certain that he would have stood his ground and got himself killed if he had seen any brute lay his hands on his mother."

The very homeliness of that account impressed me with a conviction of its absolute truth, and on the whole I consider it the most characteristic instance of what Artemidoros would have called "theorematic dreams."—Felix L. Oswald, M. D., in The Open Court.

A Fuller Explanation.

"Pa," plaintively pleaded petit Pierre, popularly known as "Petey," the other morning, "I really cannot go to school today. I ache all over."

"Then you may stay at home," kindly responded Petey's father, who, despite his rough exterior, had a warm heart beating in his breast.

"So you lied to me, you young rascal," fiercely exclaimed Petey's father when he saw petit Pierre fishing in the creek.

"Don't hit so hard, pa," pleaded Petey between the whacks; "it was this I was aching for—to go fishing."—Albany Express.

Contagious Diseases.

The French government has made a grant of $25,000 a year to defray the expenses of the Pasteur institute, in Paris, the cost of founding which—several hundred thousand dollars—was contributed by various governments and private individuals. The purpose of this institute is, as all know, the prosecution of experimental research with a view to the cure of hydrophobia—in any country a very rare disease. Diphtheria, scarlet fever, typhoid fever, measles, yellow fever, cholera and other preventable diseases, on the other hand, count their victims by thousands; yet there is in no country a special establishment in which any one of them can be scientifically studied, and better means arrived at for their prevention or their cure, and arrest from spreading All contagious diseases are preventable. For their development two things are required: First, the special germ which produces them; second, suitable bodily conditions to allow it to flourish.

If we could destroy their germs, they would cease. But to do this would necessitate universal co-operation on the part of all individuals in the community, which is practically impossible. The better way is to secure such bodily conditions as will prevent their development. The success that has attended vaccination for smallpox, and is now attending vaccination for hydrophobia, points to the likelihood of achieving this by some process of vaccination for diphtheria, typhoid fever, scarlet fever, etc. Why will not some large minded and philanthropic person or persons endow an institute or institutes in this country, as individuals and governments have done in France, for the purpose of studying these more fatal and common diseases, which kill their tens of thousands where hydrophobia carries off a single case? In so good and eminently practical a work America should not lag behind.—Boston Herald.

Strange Animals.

It cannot be denied that "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet," but certainly it would not be as available for poetry if called by some pretentious, scientific term. Indeed, the names of science, when heard by ears unfamiliar with their meaning, have often a terrifying sound.

Two young men were studying, under the microscope, the bacteria found in ditch water, and one of them proposed that they should take their work home from the class room, after the usual hour for remaining there. One of them, who lived with a maiden aunt, said that he was sure she would allow them to use her dining room table, where they would have plenty of light, and on arriving at the house he made his request.

"Why don't you look at your live things at school, and leave them there?" she inquired, with manifest distaste for the whole subject.

"Because we've found such beauties today, we can't bear to stop looking," said her nephew. "Let us have the table, won't you?"

"Ye-yes, you may have the table," was the somewhat grudging response, and the young men, wondering why auntie was so peculiar, set to work. Presently she appeared again, this time holding her skirts gingerly about her ankles, that they might not touch the floor.

"Boys," said she, taking a careful glance in every direction, "do be careful of those things, won't you?"

"What, the bacteria?"

"Yes. Don't let any of the creatures get out, and hide about the room, so that you can't catch them."—Youth's Companion.

What He Would Have Said.

A certain lady in Paris gives periodical dinners, at which assemble most of the best known wits and literati of the day. The rule of the mansion is that while one person discourses no interruption whatever can be permitted. It is said that M. Renan once attended one of these dinners, and, being in excellent vein, talked without a break during the whole repast. Toward the end of the dinner a guest was heard to commence a sentence, but he was instantly silenced by the hostess. After they had left the table, however, she at once informed the extinguished individual that, as M. Renan had now finished his conversation, she would gladly hear what he had to say. The guest modestly declined; the hostess insisted. "I am certain it was something of consequence," she said. "Alas, madame," he answered, "it was, indeed; but now it is too late. I should have liked a little more of that iced pudding."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Burned at the Stake.

What a little way we are, after all, from the dark ages! How many of my readers are aware that it is only 100 years this month since the last criminal was burned at the stake in London—and that criminal a woman? Here is the account of that event which a correspondent has sent me: "On the 18th of March, 1786, nine wretches were executed at Newgate—four for burglary, one for theft and three men and one woman for coining. After the men were 'turned off,' as the phrase went, the wretched woman was brought out, tied to a stake, and burned to ashes, after the form of strangling her had been gone through by removing the stool whereon she stood and so throwing her weight on the cord which bound her throat to the stake. Christian Murphy was (so far as I can discover) the last woman burned alive in London, though possibly a later victim may have been executed in some country town."—London Truth.

The Most Valuable Metal.

"If I gave you a pound of metal and ordered you to make the most out of it, what kind of metal would you select?" asked a well known jeweler. "Gold, of course," was the prompt reply. "I'd prefer a pound of steel," said the jeweler, "and I'd have it made into hair springs for watches. A pound of such springs would sell for an even $140,000."—Buffalo Express.

NO CURE FOR BALDNESS.

What a Tonsorial Artist Says About it.

WHO CAN SOLVE THE RIDDL ?

A Fortune in it.—A Mystery to the Doctors.

"Can hair be made to grow on bald heads?" Said a fashionable hairdresser, in response to a reporter's query: "Yes—and no. If a person becomes bald owing to illness the hair can be made to grow again. In fact, it will grow again without making, but it can be aided and stimulated in its growth by tonics. But if a person is deprived of his or her hair by natural loss of vitality, it will not grow again, and nothing has ever been compounded that will restore it. Natural baldness comes on gradually, and the awful day of its complete triumph over the hair's existence may be postponed by the use of tonics, but the final catastrophe can't be prevented. Long experience has taught me that fact, although years ago I had the personal opinion of the renowned Dr. Bazin, of Paris, to that effect. I have dressed heads for more than a quarter of a century. I have lamented with hundreds of my patrons from whose heads not only the hand of time but the indiscretions and carelessness of youth were gradually but persistently plucking the natural and often luxuriant covering, and have anointed, drenched and plastered their too apparent polls with lotions, tonics and pomatums, and rubbed and kneaded and manipulated their failing scalps until, if there had been one ember of hair life left slumbering there, it must surely have been brought back to its wonted fire and vigor, and have given it up at last and handed them the card of the wigmaker. If I have used one hair restorative I have used 500, and every one was warranted to not only prevent baldness but to restore to bald heads their sometime hirsute glory. Look at me. See what a remarkable growth and youthful gloss of hair I have. It has not changed in twenty-five years. Why?"

The hair dresser seized his soft brown hair with both hands, and with a vicious jerk removed it from his head. It was a costly wig, and his head was as white and bare as a billiard ball.

"That is why!" he murmured bitterly. "And I am not only a hair dresser, but one skilled in every tonsorial art! If there were help for baldness other than the skill of the wig maker, do you suppose for a moment that I, of all men, would not know it, and knowing it, would not only have rescued myself, but have saved to myself hundreds of my most profitable customers? If that is not proof enough that a man once bald is always bald, just call to mind doctors of your own acquaintance who are bald as glass globes They are learned in the mysteries of drugs and their preparation. They know what result their combination and application will produce. If any one living were capable of curing baldness some one among these experts in the science of medicine ought to be. You never had occasion to go to a doctor to get a prescription for baldness. I have.

"'Come to me for a cure for anything else,' my medical adviser said. 'Anything else,' said he, 'and I will cure you. But baldness! Why, my dear sir, Esculapius himself was as bald as—as bald as—well, as bald as I am!'

"And he was bald, this doctor of mine. An onion has more hair than he had! No, my son. If there lurked anywhere in all the materia medica, of not only this age but of past ages, the name of one little herb or drug, or whatever you may call it, that could bid even one hair to grow where there had been ten before, there would be no bald doctors nor bald hairdressers, and the discoverer of this boon would live longer in the hearts of men than would the much spoken of individual who is expected to reach the summit of all greatness some day by making two blades of grass grow where only one grew before."—New York Mail and Express

The Meanest Man in Creation.

A man in Clay, who owes us over two years' subscription, put his paper back in the postoffice last week marked "refused." We have heard of many mean men. There is the man who used the wart on his neck for a collar button, the one who pastured a goat on his grandmother's grave, the one who stole coppers from a dead man's eyes, the one who got rich by giving his five children a nickel each to go to bed without supper and then stealing the nickel after the children were asleep; but for pure, downright meanness the man who will take a paper for years, mark it "refused," and then stick it back into the postoffice, is entitled to the first premium.—Lineville (Ala.) Democrat.

Testing Horses' Feet.

J. C. Henry, of San Diego, Cal., through the columns of The Scientific American, suggests a novel means of testing the condition of horses' feet. Take a battery or magnetic machine, one that gives a light current, say such as can only be felt with moist hands. Attach one terminal to the animal's bit, the other to the shoe. If the horse suffers from the shoe or nails, he will squirm under the test. If there be no irritation, he will pay no attention to it. A little electrical science in the blacksmith shops would locate much suffering.—True Flag.

A Child Was Singing.

A well known pastor states that he spent an afternoon in climbing the tenement stairs of Edinburgh. The squalor was appalling. He saw only sin and misery and death. Never was he so sick at heart. Never did his faith receive so great a blow. For the moment he was tempted to exclaim: "There is no God." Soon, in the very midst of this hell he heard a note of faith—a child was singing. At once the cloud lifted, the heaven opened, and Christ spoke.—Rev. W. F. Taylor.

THOUGHT HE'D TAKE A DAY OFF.

A Northern New York Elder's Reply to a Committee of Church Folks.

A leading railroad man of Cincinnati gave a dinner party. Around the board were several New Yorkers who, toward the end of the feast, told stories out of their religious experiences.

"Up in Lawrence county," said a grim looking party, grizzly of hair, square of jaw and deliberate, as if addressing a jury, "there was once a worthy elder of the church named Joe Parker. Joe was a God fearing man, a good husband and father, upright in his business as a farmer and a most respectable citizen every way. One day he hitched his team, loaded it with produce and went to Potsdam. Night fell, but Joe did not come. His family were greatly alarmed. His son posted with all haste to Potsdam, only to learn that his father sold his beans and potatoes and started off homeward a little before dusk.

"Search proved unavailing, but the next afternoon up drove Joe's horse to the gate, broken winded and all of a lather. His master slowly descended to the ground, a sorry spectacle—his clothes torn, his face badly bruised, part of his front scalp missing. With unsteady steps Joe found his room. Next day the minister and the other elders of the church called upon him.

"'Brother Parker,' said the man of God, 'we visit you to have some explanation of the extraordinary events which have overtaken you this week.'

"'How long hev I bin a member of the church, boy and man?'

"'Forty-six years, my brother.'

"'Ain't I walked in the ways of the Lord pooty perpendickler doorin' that time?'

"'Yes, my brother; few have been privileged to serve the Lord so well.'

"'Six and forty year is a pooty good while, ain't it?'

"'Yes, my brother.'

"'Wall, I thought so, too, and so I kinder thought I'd take a day off.'"

The story teller was Thomas G. Shearman, the whilom superintendent of Plymouth Sunday school.—New York Sun.

Why She Wrote It.

Some of the most stimulating hymns have been "songs of the night." The whispered slanders of gossips begot the hymn, "I Love to Steal Awhile Away," which has been the consoler of thousands of tried men and women.

Phebe Brown, its author, a wife and mother living in poverty, used to stroll away at dusk to a neighboring grove, where she could meditate and pray.

The village gossips put their own coarse construction upon these evening walks. One of them, a woman whose house adjoined the grove, said to her, with a tone and manner more irritating than the words:

"Mrs. Brown, why do you come up at evening so near our house, and then go back without coming in?"

That evening Mrs. Brown, grieved in spirit, sat in the kitchen, rocking her babe and weeping. Then she laid the infant in its cradle, and gave expression to her feelings in nine stanzas of verse, which she entitled, "My Apology for My Twilight Rambles, Addressed to a Lady."

Several years afterward she prepared it as a hymn, suppressing four stanzas and altering a few expressions.—Youth's Companion.

Left His Names Behind Him.

When Baron von Seidletz-Leipe, Brewer Ehret's son-in-law, arrived at the Hoboken pier of the North German Lloyd Steamship company recently he was met by Capt. Hamelman, formerly of the steamer Werra, and now in charge of the company's piers. "What is your name?" asked the captain of the noble stranger, preparing to enter the reply in his record. The baron began to enumerate his various titles and Christian names, but had only got half through when the captain interrupted him with: "Oh, hang it, you left all those in Germany. You're in America now. What's your last name?" The baron, who was exceedingly taken aback, gave the desired information and hastily passed on to meet his friends.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Where a Hen Lays.

Not long since a New Hampshire committeeman was examining an infant school class. "Can any little girl or boy give the definition of the word 'average?'" he asked. For some time no one replied, but finally a little girl hesitatingly replied, "It is a thing a hen lays an egg on, sir." "No, that's not right." "Yes, sir, my book says so;" and she trotted up to her questioner and pointed to this sentence in her reading book, "A hen lays an egg every day on an average."—Every Other Saturday.

Comfort Anyway.

Farmer Aiken, of Venango county, Pa., aged 80, started to Pittsburg on his first railroad ride. The rattle of the train terrorized him, and he got off at the first stop and took to the mud roads. He hired a conveyance and went to Pittsburg overland at an expense which would have secured him a palace car all to himself. Some people do not care for expenses when comfort is involved.—Exchange.

Undesirable.

Mrs. Tiptop—Who is the gentleman who has been so attentive to you this evening?

Miss Tiptop—He belongs to one of the oldest families in this country, and is descended from the English nobility.

Mrs. Tiptop—Avoid him. He is probably poor.—New York Weekly.

LETTERS BY PHONOGRAPH.

How Messages will be Sent to Mexico.

FOR PEOPLE WHO CANNOT READ OR WRITE.

"Wizard" Edison's Latest Idea.—What Diaz Thinks of it.

Lawyer Edwin M. Fox returned on Friday from Mexico, whither he went in the interest of Thomas Edison to arrange the legal features of a contract with the government for the general introduction of the phonograph in the postoffices of that country. He gave yesterday some details of his mission, which, as already announced, was successful, and of the enterprise of which it was a preliminary.

The contract was obtained for a company which John M. Ceballos, of 80 Wall street, is now forming. It gives the proposed company the exclusive right for fifteen years to place phonographs in the postoffices of the republic for the use of people who cannot read or write. The charge for a single phonographic message has not yet been fixed; it may be but a medio, or six and a half cents, and it may be a real, or thirteen cents. To this charge must be added one of ten cents for postage, which is the rate at which letters are carried from one part of Mexico to another, although a letter may be sent from Mexico to this country for only five cents. The higher charge seems moderate when it is known that the sender of a message will be entitled to talk a thousand words into the phonograph.

When he has said his say, the cylinder containing his message will be inclosed in a paper box, addressed by a postoffice clerk to its destination, and, after being stamped, will be mailed like an ordinary letter. The recipient of the cylinder can either have the message spoken out to him by the phonograph in the nearest postoffice, or he can have it transcribed on paper for future reference. If every patron of the phonograph sends thousand word messages and every recipient insists on having them transcribed, the Edison Phonograph company of Mexico will lose money, but it is calculated that the messages will average certainly not anything like the tenth and perhaps not even the twentieth part of the limit. The persons who are expected to use the phonographs now employ scriveners to write their letters for them. The scriveners will probably have to do something else when the phonographs are set up.

By the terms of the contract the company is to take care of the machines and keep them in order. This will not involve its having an agent at each postoffice at which there is a phonograph, for it is bound to instruct one of the postoffice clerks in the use of the machine, and the time consumed in this way and in sending and receiving messages is to be allowed for. The company is to get a rental for the use of the machines, and what remains of the proceeds after deducting a small percentage for the government. As already intimated, all expenses are to be borne by the company, so that whatever the government gets will be clear gain. Only the large postoffices will at first be provided with phonographs, but it is expected that in the course of time the use of the instruments will become quite general.

The machines are to be made at Mr. Edison's factory in Orange and sent to Mexico as wanted, but there will also have to be a local establishment in the city of Mexico where repairs will be made and business connected with the enterprise transacted. As the company expects to sell many of the machines to the general public, a salesroom will be part of this establishment.

Mr. Fox took three phonographs to Mexico with him, one as a present for President Diaz, which poured out the instrumental and other music which Mr. Edison had poured into it at the laboratory in Orange, where concerts are still given, with phonographs for auditors, several times a week. President Diaz was quick to learn how to use the machine, and he sent back by Mr. Fox a cylinder containing a message in Spanish congratulating Mr. Edison on his great invention and himself that Mexico was to get the benefit of it.—New York Sun.

What Is a Valuable Invention.

The patentee of a machine by which tin horses raced one another around a ring recently sought to enjoin an infringement of the patent. It appeared that the only use to which the machines had been applied was to place them in saloons, bar rooms and other drinking places, where frequenters of such places make wagers as to which of the toy horses would stop first. Judge Blodgett, of the circuit court, has decided in this case (National Automatic Device company against Lloyd) that the laws of the United States only authorize the use of a patent for a new and useful invention; that a useful invention is one that may be applied to some beneficial use in society, in contradistinction to an invention which is injurious to the morals, health and good order of society; that the patent is not a useful device in that meaning of the word, its use so far having been pernicious and hurtful; and so the injunction was denied.—New York Telegram.

Never to Go Again.

A fact in relation to the death of Washington, not generally known, may be stated. The day after his death the clock in the Masonic lodge in Alexandria, of which he was a member, was set at the hour and minute of his demise. Then the clock was stopped, and it has never been permitted to run, nor have the hands been moved since.—Washington Star.

Tall Fuchsia.

Miss Sarah Rollins has a fuchsia which is nearly seven feet tall, and is still growing. It has made this remarkable growth since the 1st of December. It is watched as eagerly as was ever Jack's beanstalk.—Dexter Gazette.

How Passover Bread Is Made.

In the preparation of the Jewish Passover bread the kneading is done in the ordinary way. Pure gunpowder water is the only component added. The time for the dough to be baked is reduced to the minimum. It is broken into flat cakes and then run between rollers into very thin sheets. Over these a workman rolls a pronged steel to perforate the dough, so that air holes may be seen in the baked cakes. A steel hoop cuts the dough into round, flat sheets, which are then ready for the oven. The baker stands with a paddle attached to a very long handle. With the aid of a boy he thrusts the cakes into the brick compartment, and in half a minute pulls them out ready for use. A matzath cake is round, about four feet in diameter, somewhat browned and having slight air hole projections or its surface. They have a rather pleasant taste, not unlike that of crackers, and make a good substitute for bread. In some places there is a demand throughout the entire year for the unleavened cakes by dyspeptics. About eight cakes weigh a pound, which in large quantities sell at eight cents. The cakes are very brittle, and their pieces are ground up into fine meal. This is the substitute for wheat flour in the household during the Passover.—Baltimore Sun.

Couldn't Fool the Barber.

Three young fellows were having a heap of fun with themselve a few days ago, aided by a twenty-dollar bill. About 2:30 in the afternoon this trio went into a barber shop up on North Clark street and got shaved. When the tonsorial act had been completed one of the young fellows produced a twenty-dollar bill and told the barber to get his pay out of that. The barber asked politely if the gentleman had nothing smaller, saying at the same time that he had no change. At this one of the chaps very foolishly laughed, and stated that that bill had been as good as a gold mine to them, for they had come all the way up Clark street from the bridge and had had all they wanted to eat and drink on that bill because no one could change it. This made the barber hot, and he said: "Vell, you wasentt peat me like dot; you vas pay for dose shaves, I pet me," and he called his darky, saying to him: "Go over by the South Side und got some changes for dot pill, und you vasen't hurry too." The colored man understood the situation perfectly, for at 7 o'clock in the evening the three young men still sat there in the barber shop waiting for their $19.70.—Chicago Herald.

When Davis Left Fortress Monroe.

George Alfred Townsend, who saw Davis leave Fortress Monroe for Richmond, says: "His pictures heroized him and gave him a classical profile and an eye of ruling decision, which now he did not show. Still, in this setting of Hampton Roads, the man could not be else than the central figure. The great law of association made him the personage to which everything in view was subservient—the old fort which was the entering wedge into the late Confederacy; the yellow barrack peeping over the parapet where he had been imprisoned; the wrecks of the frigates sunk in the roadstead by his navy; the opposite cape where lurked that morning terrible as ever the superstition of the iron monster which had emerged thence for the deliberate work of destruction at the command of his will. And now he was the riddle and perplexity of his conquerer; this thin old man, just permitted to feel the breath of liberty, whose name for fear or wonder had gone round the world and earned from a cool head, even like Gladstone, the opinion that 'Jefferson Davis had made a nation.'"—De Fontaine.

An Honest Showman.

Lord Stowell, who went to see every exhibition, provided it did not cost more than a shilling, once presented himself at the door of a show where a snake of some more or less gaudy color was on view. But the sight of so good a customer was too much for the conscience of the showman, who exclaimed, like Mrs. Cluppins, "My lord, I will not deceive you. It's only the old snake with a new coat of paint." The showman doubtless meant well, but he certainly acted ill. Harmless pleasures are not so common in life that even successful lawyers ought to be deprived of them without a cause. Lord Stowell would have gratified the lust of his eyes without risking the salvation of his soul if only he had been permitted to gaze upon a skin where nature had been eclipsed by art. A certain amount of wholesome ignorance is necessary to the enjoyment or even to the toleration of existence.—The Saturday Review.

Jerrold's Joke.

The familiar inquiry, "Is it true that the first apple was eaten by the first pair?" is far fetched, but one cannot deny the humor of it. Again, in the conundrum, "Why is blindman's buff like sympathy?" "Because it is a fellow feeling for a fellow creature," there is a direct application which is also unquestionably humorous. Then, as another example of a pun which is absurdly apparent, there was Douglas Jerrold's remark about a man to whom he had repeatedly written in vain for some money. "I have written him," said Jerrold to an acquaintance, "but got nothing." "Strange," said the other, "for he is a man full of kindness." "Yes," rejoined Jerrold, "unremitting kindness."—All the Year Round.

Beecher's Country Place.

Boscobel, the country place of the late Henry Ward Beecher at Peekskill on the Hudson, has been sold to Mr. Butler, of New York, for $75,000. The house cost Mr. Beecher $70,000, and he is said to have spent $200,000 on the grounds. The larger part of this sum was spent on trees. Mr. Beecher planted over 8,000, including every variety native to the temperate zone. The whole place was subsoiled and drained, and his trees, which protected his garden from the northwest winds, enabled him to have fruits and vegetables two or three weeks ahead of his neighbors.—Harper's Bazar.

A REMARKABLE CAREER.

How a Slave Acquired his Freedom.

HE BECOMES WEALTHY AND BUYS A WIFE

A Useful Citizen Who had the Friendship of all.

Here is the story of the life of Solomon Humphries, a most remarkable negro, who lived in Macon during the pioneer days of the town, and who was in his day not only the wealthiest negro in the south, but commanded the respect and esteem of all the white people.

Sol belonged to a rich planter, one of the old time sort, who lived in Jones county, which adjoins this. Being allowed more privileges than the other hands, and having more intelligence than the average negro, Sol managed to make an odd "thrip," and every one was laid up for the purpose of purchasing his freedom.

This was done in 1825, two years after Macon was made a town, and, with a nest egg of money given to him by his kind master, he came to Macon and opened a little store on the east side of the river, that being really the town in those days. Although he could neither read nor write he was a natural mathematician, working his sums mentally. His politeness, neatness and good business habits soon began to have good effect, and he became one of the largest merchants in the country.

In those days there were no steamboats here, and freight was brought up the river on flat towboats from Darien, then an important seaport. These boats were manned by negroes, six on a side, who handled the oars with singular skill. When they neared the bend in the river near Macon these dozen hands would strike up with a song, and on a still clear night the musical strains from these loud lunged singers came floating over the water as sweetest music. They would remain here a few days to unload the goods for the merchants, and then return to Darien with some four to five hundred bags of cotton on each boat. The bulk of the goods and cotton belonged to Solomon Humphries.

After a few years of successful business Sol began to take life easy. He purchased a place of ten acres near town and erected thereon a fine home. The gentlemen who went by on their hunting trips never failed to stop and get some of Sol's buttermilk. His house was always open to his white friends, and frequently he gave dinners that were really royal feasts. At these dinners Sol was never known to sit at the table. The guests were seated and it was Sol's pleasure to wait on the table. The dignitaries of the state broke bread with him, and one who was the most frequent visitor and enjoyed Sol's hospitality the most was the late Governor Charles J. McDonald, between whom and Sol a great friendship existed. According to the laws of Georgia at that time a free negro was compelled to have a trustee, and McDonald, who was then the first solicitor general of this circuit, afterward judge and then governor, held the position of trustee for Sol.

On one occasion, when Sol was on his way north to purchase goods, he was arrested in Charleston as a fugitive, and was lodged in jail, in spite of his entreaties, to wait until his trustee could be communicated with. That was before the days of telegraphy, and mails were slower than now. There was Sol, whose credit was good in New York for $50,000 and in Macon for as much more, penned up in the jail at Charleston as a runaway negro. Governor McDonald lost no time in forwarding the proper certificates and the message that if it was necessary he would go on to Charleston and certify to his being free in person. He was then released and proceeded on his way to New York, being careful not to come back by way of Charleston.

Sol's trade grew larger and larger. In 1833, when steamboats began to run on the Ocmulgee river, the consignments to him were larger than those of any other merchant. In 1838 he married. His wife's name was "Patsey," and she was also purchased by him. She was a member of the Presbyterian church in Macon, and worshiped with the whites. So great was the respect in which she was held by the pastor and members that she was admitted to the communion table, and though she was a negro, living in the south where slavery was rampant, she was shown every respect and kindness by her white friends. But with all this there never was a time when "Patsey" or Sol attempted to overstep the bounds. Sol became a member of the church, and every Sunday morning the pair could be seen in their pew in the little church, presenting rather a strange picture to the northerner who came south.

Several citizens of Macon, both of wealth and enterprise, attained their early business education as clerks from Sol Humphries. One of them became the merchant prince of the state, one became president of a bank, afterward president of a railroad, and now lives in New York, an old citizen and wealthy; and still another is a prominent merchant of Savannah. These gentlemen went to work for him when they were boys. As they grew up they went in business on their own accounts.

In 1853 Sol's luck began to change. His wife died, parties for whom he had indorsed failed, and soon his wealth melted away. In 1856 he died, and though he was then only in moderate circumstances, no funeral of those times was so largely attended. All citizens of every class turned out to pay the last tribute to his memory, and a most impressive sermon was delivered by the pastor of the Presbyterian church.

Such is the story of a free negro in times when the south knew nothing but slavery.—Macon (Ga.) Cor. New York Herald.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JULY 17..... 1891

Buckley says he is out of politics, but the Examiner has its doubts and advises the Democratic party to take such precautions as will make it impossible for him to again enter.

The wheat crop of the Pacific Northern States this year will be very large, and there will be an immense surplus for export. The Northwest is in big luck with a big crop and big prices certain.

Those who so persistently insisted that execution by electricity was cruel, and more torturing than the rope, must now accept defeat. The four New York murderers were dispatched practically instantaneously, and, according to the testimony of physicians present, painlessly.

There is just a bare possibility that the Kaiser will visit America. We shall all be glad to see him and help make his visit pleasant and instructive. A visit to the United States would do the Kaiser much good, and would certainly not prejudice the case of the American Hog.

That indignant woman at Fresno, who finding her husband drunk in a wine cellar turned all the spigots in an endeavor to drown him and succeeded in flooding the neighborhood with wine, had a proper idea of the way to celebrate the glorious Fourth. Of course the celebration was a howling success. It could not well be anything else—as every Indian in town got drunk on the overflow.

It is about time the civilized powers put an end to the bloody travesty of popular government in Hayti. The black republic seems to be steadily relapsing into barbarism. In the interests of humanity the civilized powers should concert together and put a stop to the horrible atrocities now being perpetrated there. That beautiful and fertile island, which excited the raptures of Columbus, has been transformed into a hell on earth. Hayti furnishes a melancholy example of African self rule.

An Eastern Democratic paper finds four Democrats in the West who might be supported in case the Cleveland-Hill contest in New York becomes too warm. One of these is John C. Carlisle of Kentucky, who belongs rather to the West than the South; another, James E. Campbell, in the event of his election this fall as Governor of Ohio; a third, Horace Boies of Iowa, also contingent upon success this fall, and a fourth, Isaac P. Gray of Indiana, whose nomination would go far to secure that doubtful State for the Democracy. But the mention of these names is met by the objection that the Democrats cannot do without New York, and cannot carry New York with a Western candidate.

The protection which the last legislature afforded to the coyote industry bids fair to bankrupt the state treasury. Only eleven counties have been heard from at the State Controller's office for the first quarter and yet the claims for scalps reach about $11,000. If the rest of the counties show up as well as the eleven that have reported, we shall pay for the support of this infant industry $56,000 for the quarter. That will be at the rate of $224,000 a year, a very handsome plum for the benefit of the coyote hunters of California and the adjacent territories. Such legislation as this should not only reach the scalps of the coyotes, but should induce the taxpayers to go after the scalps of the men and the party responsible for it.

President Diaz of Mexico has been interviewed by an American newspaper correspondent upon the subject of reciprocity with this country. He states that a reciprocity treaty is possible if the two countries are willing to make mutual and equitable concessions. He leaves the impression that Mexico favors better trade relations with the United States, but has no intention as yet of taking active measures to secure the advantages. It is probable that Mexico will develop a livlier interest in the benefits of reciprocity as she perceives the benefits which other American republics are and will be enjoying through quickened commercial intercourse with this country. She will then be inclined to petition for admission into the charmed circle.

Backley says he is out of politics. A fish is never safely out of water while he dangles on the hook over the stream.

A PRECIPITATE LOVER.

Young, brave, intelligent, Ferreol lacked for nothing, was well off in the goods of the world, burned his candles from start to finish, joked at the past, laughed at the future.

At Paris he encountered Angele. Charming Angele! He loved her, and told her so. She listened. He pressed her. She resisted. He insisted. She mentioned marriage.

Logical even with himself, he was not astonished.

Angele was good as pretty.

Why not marriage?

"Have you a family?" said Ferreol to her.

"A father, yes."

"Where is he?"

"Brest."

"What doing?"

"Refitting vessels."

"I go at once, then," said Ferreol calmly.

"Wherefore?"

"To demand your hand of monsieur your father. It is thus with me always. For tomorrow, nothing. Consider, buy. * * * I love you, you love me. You do love me?"

"Yes."

"Good! The train leaves at 8 this evening. At 11 tomorrow I land at Brest. Thirty minutes later arrive at the dock. See your father. Ask him the question, receive consent, at 3 p. m. resume the train, and day after tomorrow, at 7 in the evening, say to you, 'Angele, thou art mine!'"

She blushed, smiled coyly, and softly murmured:

"Go, then!"

Ferreol took a fiacre to more quickly reach the station. The driver was drunk.

It did not astonish him.

In the waiting room his valise was stolen.

Nothing astonishing in that.

In the wagon of the train one Englishman alone occupied all the four corners—the first with his person, the second with his glass, the third with his umbrella, the fourth with his Baedeker.

Ferreol was not astonished at this, either.

Then the train ran off the track. Pooh! child's play.

Ferreol had his nose half broken.

Ridiculous obstacle!

Briefly, with missed connections and many hours' delay, it was not till the third day after his departure from Paris that Ferreol debarked at Brest, and swift as a startled zebra threaded his way through the Rue de Siam.

"The ship refitting shops?"

"Rue de Penfeld, third building to the left."

Ferreol was totally ignorant of the geographical identity of the Penfeld, but a man like him makes no demand for explanations. Straight before him he plunged, as if he knew it like A B C, turned toward Saint Sauveur, struck the Gabon gate, rebounded upon the Madeleine, cannoned against the Chateau, saw on a street lamp "Quai de la Penfeld," and divining that he was on the right road at last took it.

Yes, took it at top speed to make up for lost time, scraping his shins on chains and tarred ropes, tripping himself up with links and anchors, receiving thumps and bumps from bales and boxes—to presently halt before a building on which, in black letters on a tobacco ground, was the magic word:

REFITTERS.

This chance astonished him no more than all the rest. Before him was a door. He knocked, entered, perceived a gloomy hall, a dingy camp bed, on that camp bed a sailor smoking a cob pipe. Hairy, tarry, weather beaten—a type of the old sea wolf.

"Monsieur Kenezek?" said Ferreol civilly.

"Not in."

"Where is he, then?"

"At work, of course."

"Where, I say?"

"Yonder, or maybe below."

And the sailor designated with his thumb a vague topography some distance away.

"Ah, well! then I'll go and find him at work."

"Then, my chicken?"

"Why not?"

"It would be"——

"Bah! no phrases! Speak to M. Kenezek I must, on business that admits of no delay, and I will speak to him at once if I have to go to the bottom to do it."

The sailor rose instantly, shifted pipe and quid from right to left, and cried out admiringly:

"Then too, then, art of the craft, my chicken?"

Ferreol comprehended nothing, but his principles dictated his answer.

"Parbleu! yes," said he, turning with decision.

"Come on, then; I'll show you myself. Two steps away only, but you'll dress yourself here."

Dress himself, and here? Any one but Ferreol would have let escape him at least a gesture of surprise. But he—never! After all, to present himself to a future father-in-law, perhaps it was more expedient to assume a black coat.

"So be it!" replied he.

The sailor moved a step to the door, but stopped thoughtfully, turned, unhooked from the wall a greasy placard, and with a mumbled "No humbug this, you see?" began to read and to question Ferreol as follows:

"You are not in a state of intoxication, you?"

"I!" said Ferreol indignantly; then restraining himself, "No, not even a glass of water in the stomach."

"And—more than an hour since you've eaten?"

"Three hours, pre . . ."

"You are not in a perspiration?"

"Dry as a fish bone."

"And your health is good?"

"Sound as cast iron."

"Nerves and temper calm and equable?"

"As a clam at high water."

"Good! All as it should be!"

And replacing the placard on its nail, the sailor wheeled and threw open the door of a cell to the left.

"Hurry!" said he; "begin; undress yourself!"

Ferreol, up to this date, had asked no one in marriage, but sharp as he was, he had never supposed that this act—important, it was true—would be accompanied by such formalities. One of those, however, whom nothing amazed, he did not flinch, but proceeded to strip himself.

Decidedly obscure in this closet, Ferreol was reduced to conjectures, smell and feeling; still, it was distinctly an undervest, drawers and shoes that the sailor drew from a locker and laid before him.

"With these," said he, "you can defy the perspiration."

"In truth I can!" said Ferreol, covering himself with the articles, which exhaled a singular odor of mingled tar and salty grass wrack. Upon which the other added to the costume a vest and breeches with feet and jacket of thick waterproof stuff, and bidding him be seated, assisted him with the skill of a retired valet de chambre to lace the great shoes, put on the breeches, thrust his arms, one after the other, into the sleeves of the jacket, and to slip his neck into a leathern collarette that exactly adapted itself to his shoulders.

On his back then he placed a cushion, and on that a metal pelerine that resembled a cuirass, reciting by rote meanwhile, after the fashion of the corporal's manual:

"Push each button of the pelerine into the corresponding hole of the collarette. Adjust the copper valves and turn the screw nuts. Close the latter till the joining of garments, pelerine," etc.

It was long, but Ferreol was patient and said only:

"You are sure I shall find M. Kenezek there?"

"Certain sure," responded the sailor with a grin; "he can't get away." Adding contentedly, "Nothing but the helmet lacking now; that we'll put on yonder."

And, followed by Ferreol, he tucked under his arm a sort of elongated ball in a leather envelope, and took up the march for the front.

Ferreol's costume reminded him as he scanned it of the striped clothes used upon criminals. Never before, he told himself, had a condemned seen the headsman bearing his head under his arm while leading a victim to the scaffold. A strange lover's travesty, which he must bear with patience.

Presently, turning to right and left, they reached a jetty advancing into the bay some ten to twenty meters. At the end of it the round crown of a building from which, at a shout from his conductor, came running a second sailor, who placed himself without a word behind Ferreol's back.

"All ready?" said the first.

"All ready," responded Ferreol.

"You see the slate and the pencil hung to your side?" queried the other again.

"Slate and pencil both," assented Ferreol amiably.

It was the last word he spoke.

Click! clack! rattle!

The helmet was over his head, bolted to his shoulders, the screw-nuts hard and fast.

Parbleu! At last a flash of enlightenment! Blinded, stifled, one single instant nature rebelled against his principles. Too late, however, and protestations inopportune.

For now he felt himself lifted, carried a pace, suspended in space; then a strange sensation of cold mounting from feet to waist and from waist to shoulders.

He opened wide his eyes, and through the helmet's "peepers" saw a fish flit past him.

Preliminaries decidedly not commonplace!

He continued to descend with relative rapidity. Soon the sandy bottom was underfoot, and there before him a monster with huge head and enormous eyes, who advanced to meet him, seized the slate at his belt and began to scratch upon it. Ferreol, whose head buzzed like a sawmill, stooped and read:

"I am Kenezek; who are you?"

The moment was solemn. Ferreol drew a long breath, to which the complaisant pump above him lent itself willingly, then with full lungs and grateful soul reflected.

This was Kenezek! This toiler of the sea, upon whom depended the happiness of his life. They must come to an understanding somehow. A sea diver as a father-in-law was not inadmissible.

The situation had grown unique.

He seized the pencil and took his turn at the slate, awkwardly at first, but still succinctly.

"I am Ferreol," responded he; "live at Paris; income, 10,000 livres; love Angele, your daughter, and have the honor to ask of you her hand in marriage!"

There was a growl under the father's helmet, and he wrote on the slate anew:

"Marry her if you like. I"——

"Consent?" cried Ferreol ardently, at once ravished and uneasy at the reply.

"Consent? Yes," penciled Kenezek; "good riddance too. But quick begone—begone, I say; I've work to finish!"

Ferreol delightedly sought to kneel before the paternal scaphandrier, but his inflated clothes held him erect. That act of respectful homage was forbidden him.

Meanwhile, seeing him hesitate, Angele's father repeated his order, but Ferreol, not knowing what to do in order to mount, and not hurrying enough to suit his temper, he pulled five times, according to the rules, the cord of recall, and Ferreol shot aloft like a rocket through a company of scudding dorades.

"If I'd been you," said the sailor, who received him, and to whom he benevolently proffered a glass of rum, "I'd have waited ten minutes. Kenezek quits work, you know, every day at 5 o'clock."

Ferreol looked at his watch. Ten minutes to 5.

"No," said he, "a man like me never waits a minute."

And he promptly returned to Paris——

"To marry the charming Angele?"

No. Fifty odd hours late in returning, the charming but impatient Angele had married the other fellow.

And Ferreol was not surprised at that.—Translated from La Vie Moderne by E. C. Waggoner for "Short Stories."

To Circumvent Moths.

This is the season when our innocent looking little enemies, the moths, do their destructive work—at least this is the beginning. The small, cream colored moths flying around should be destroyed. They do the mischief, depositing numbers of eggs in woolen and fur garments, carpets, curtains, upholstered furniture—nothing escapes them, and before we know the danger frequently our most cherished garment is riddled by these little pests.

The great trouble comes from not putting things away clean and free from the moth eggs. Articles slightly soiled are certain to attract moths. It is therefore well to wash everything that can be washed, like flannels and stockings. Coats, cloaks, furs and similar things should be cleaned and beaten and aired several times before finally putting away for the summer. When carpets are kept down during the summer, tar paper should be laid under the edges and the room swept carefully with a stiff broom once in a while, particularly the edges of the carpet, corners and seams.—Chicago News.

TALKING WITH MOLTKE.

EX-PRESIDENT ANDREW D. WHITE'S DESCRIPTION OF HIM.

He Met Him at a Reception in Berlin on the Occasion of the Golden Wedding of the Old Emperor William—Baron Nothomb's Felicitous Introduction.

By many people ex-President Andrew D. White, of Cornell university, ex-minister to Germany, is regarded as one of the best authorities on German affairs in the United States. Years of patient study and observation give great weight to his views on the new Germany of today.

Regarding the great German soldier and strategist the ex-president says:

I first saw Von Moltke just after my arrival at Berlin at the festivals attendant upon the golden wedding of the old Emperor William. The first of these was a great theatrical representation at the Royal Opera house, at which the emperor and empress and very nearly all the crowned heads of Germany, with representatives of the various royalties of Europe, were present, and besides these, attracting even more attention, Bismarck, Von Moltke and the leading generals of the Franco-Prussian war.

The appearance of these people comes back before me very vividly, but no one is more distinctly present to me than Von Moltke. He seemed absolutely different from every other personage in that great hall. He was a tall, spare man, his face a mixture of determination and kindliness, his whole appearance, as more than one person has said at various times, being that of an intelligent, kindly college professor or schoolmaster.

There was something singularly gentle about his whole bearing, yet it was impressive. He sat very quietly, exchanging some little conversation with his next neighbor, Manteuffel, the dreaded viceroy of Alsace-Lorraine. The contrast between the two was very marked—Manteuffel, apparently, all keenness and severity, Von Moltke firm, but gentle.

INTRODUCED BY BARON NOTHOMB.

When I next saw him it was at an evening gathering where there was not a large number present, and where I had the opportunity to converse with him. I was introduced to him by the dean of the diplomatic corps, Baron Nothomb, sometimes called "the father of constitutional liberty in continental Europe," a man of very wide political knowledge and who more than once, as I sat at the table, gave me accounts of his conversations with Talleyrand and other men of the first Napoleonic period.

Baron Nothomb in presenting me to Von Moltke took advantage of a little sketch published in one of the German newspapers, and said: "Sir Field Marshal, I wish to make you acquainted with a gentleman who was born in Homer, who lives in Syracuse and who has aided in founding a university at Ithaca."

At this Von Moltke laughed pleasantly, and evidently did not understand the allusion, whereupon I told him that in the earlier days of this country we had a way of naming our townships and villages after noted heroes of antiquity, but at present we did better, naming them after the great men of these times, and telling him that no doubt in the newer states he would find his own name and that of Bismarck attached to some of our younger towns. He seemed interested in this and talked on very pleasantly.

I look back to that evening as one of the most interesting during my stay in Germany.

MOLTKE IN PARLIAMENT.

At various other times I met Von Moltke, but do not recall anything of especial interest. No man was more free from the slightest tincture of vanity. As he walked through the streets and in the parks, going to and from the office of the general staff, he was undistinguishable save by his tall, scholarly form from the crowd of military men about him. He evidently wore just as little in the shape of orders and decorations as was permissible.

At court he was expected, of course, to appear in more splendid attire, but even then there was always the same quiet modesty and simplicity. He seemed to me in some respects "the noblest Roman of them all."

But perhaps his most impressive appearance was as a member of the imperial parliament. From time to time as I happened in to hear the discussions I saw him in his seat, quiet, imperturbable; but on two occasions I heard him speak, and on each of these his subject was the necessity of larger votes of money and men to maintain the military supremacy of Germany.

Nothing could be better in their way than these speeches of his. He looked and spoke as I could imagine Julius Cæsar looked and spoke in the Roman senate. Nothing could be more simple and yet nothing more effective. He was listened to by men of all parties with the utmost respect.

He seemed to stand in a sense aloof from all parties, and to be guided simply and solely by what he considered the best interests of the German empire. On hearing him speak one could not resist this conclusion, and as his manner was simple, voice good and statements very clear, direct and strong, but without the slightest tendency to exaggeration, his words carried great weight.

I remember hearing him say in substance in one of these speeches that Germany must be prepared for any emergency, and must maintain the very highest condition of military efficiency possible for at least fifty years. And I remember, too, with what a sort of solemnizing effect these words, quietly uttered, but evidently the result of conviction based on knowledge, had upon the audience. They seemed to carry a sense of responsibility to the heart of every person present.—New York Herald.

Unfortunate.

"The effect of Rev. Mr. Harkin's sermon on the terrors of hades was lost."

"How so?"

"The church was as cold as a barn, and the prospect he held out was rather agreeable."—Epoch.

Railway Clerks with Long Days.

The hours on duty of a booking clerk are usually ten a day; but they are at very irregular times. This is on account of trains starting to run as early as 5 a. m. and continuing till midnight. There must be always some one to book the passengers; and as there are nineteen hours to cover, and in many cases only two clerks, they have to work as best they can that both may have time for their meals.—Chambers' Journal.

A SHARP TRICK.

Yet It Shook the Faith That Two Young Boys Had in Their Older Sister.

Anna Mowry was left in charge of her two younger brothers one summer while her parents went to California. She was with them in a farmhouse on the Massachusetts coast, and frequently lectured them on questions of morals and manners. One evening she talked to them on the subject of honesty. "I have often read in the papers," she said, "of young men who are first led into extravagance and then rob or defraud their employers. If a brother of mine was to be guilty of such dishonesty I would never forgive him—never! I would not acknowledge him as my brother!"

The boys had never been tempted to steal, and the suggestion that temptation and fall were possible, together with their sister's threat, startled and impressed them. The next day, while the question of honesty was still fresh in their minds, Anna came in, eager and excited.

"I hear," she said, "that a woman in the neighborhood has some fine old Satsuma ware. Her husband was a sea captain and brought it to her fifty years ago. Come with me. I am going to try to buy a piece of it."

The house, when they reached it, was a meager, forlorn little cottage. The woman was old; her lean, pale face lightened when she saw Anna. She was poorly clad. Here was a chance of earning money!

"Lookin' for rooms, ma'am?" she said. "I have some good ones to let."

"No," said Anna, carelessly. "We just stopped for—a glass of water."

"Why, sister!" exclaimed Bob, astonished at the deception.

She shook her head angrily at him to be silent, and when the woman left the room she whispered, "If she knew what I came for she would charge twice as high for the ware." Then she followed her hostess, who was opening a cupboard.

"You have some nice glasses there," she said.

"Yes; cost a dollar a dozen."

"Very neat pattern indeed."

Anna turned the cheap, ugly shaped goblet in her hand, while her keen eye scanned the recess of the cupboard.

"Queer looking old china cup, that," she said. "May I see it? Thank you. What is it?"

"Some foreign kind of crockery. My husband brought it to me. I've been told it was worth considerable money."

"Ah? I shouldn't like to give much for it. It's a dingy looking bit of china. I think I would give seventy-five cents for it—just for the oddity."

"I couldn't let it go for less than a dollar," said the woman anxiously. "My husband gave it to me, but I do need money."

Anna laid the cup down, declaring that it was "dingy," but after some higgling she bought it for a dollar. She hurried away with it, her cheeks flushed and her eyes shining.

"Cousin Bell gave twenty-five dollars for not half so good a specimen!" she cried exultantly, when they were on the road.

"Is this worth so much?" asked Bob gravely.

"It is worth more, but she did not know it."

"That was a pretty sharp trick of yours, Anna," said Tom thoughtfully, after a pause.

Anna laughed complacently. "Yes, I think so," she said.

When the lads were alone that night Bob said: "Anna said she would not acknowledge us as brothers if we stole money. Didn't she the same as steal that cup from the old woman if it was worth twenty-five dollars? If the old woman had known it she would not have let it go for a dollar. Anna took advantage of her ignorance. She really stole it."

"It looks like that," replied Tom.

"Well, then, I guess Anna wouldn't mind sharp tricks in business if we were men, Tom, would she?"

"No," said Tom.

The seed was planted which would reach a deadly growth hereafter, and Anna's talk about dishonesty was always thought of with derision.—Youth's Companion.

Intelligence in Mice.

The organs of hearing and smelling in mice are very efficient; but their eyesight is, we believe, poor. Their intelligence is, we should think, low, as might be expected from the paucity of convolutions in their brains. We suspended a tin of flour at such a height from the ground that our little friends could not quite jump into it, though the smell of the food made them very persevering in their endeavors to do so. We then arranged a string so that by a detour they could get at the good stuff that way.

One mouse by following that course attained to the desired goal, but evidently by chance, for being startled out of the tin, it continued for a long while to make futile efforts to recover its lost position by jumping up, never again seeking the road which had led it before to the object of its desire. For hours we have lain in bed watching mice trying in vain to spring into the tin of flour, none of them ever perceiving that there was a feasible road leading thereto.—Chambers' Journal.

Forgot to Carry.

A township treasurer in Ohio forgot to carry "9" in adding up his accounts, and the committee to look over his books found him $750 short, and nearly broke up his family before it was discovered where the error lay. The surprising thing about it is that he didn't "carry" the whole boodle to Mexico or somewhere else.—Detroit Free Press.

J. W. Murphy.

BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work.

Wagons and Carriages Repaired.

HORSESHOEING, $2.00 for CASH

Shop on Edwards St., opposite the Court House, Independence.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-Officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.
Re obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

W. H. GEORGE, M. D.,
Physician and Surgeon,
Bishop Creek, Cal.,
Offers his professional services to the people of Bishop Creek and vicinity. Office and residence opposite Andrew Clark's.

J. W. P. LAIRD. P. H. MACK.
MACK & LAIRD.
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE CAL.

F. E. BEAUMORE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "Independent" Building, Independence, Inyo County, Cal.

IRVING J. WOODIN, M. D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)
Louise L. Woodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED.
Office and residence at the Reddy place, Independence.

J. C. WASSON. J. B. WASSON.
DENTISTS.
OFFICE OVER THE BANK OF BAKERSFIELD, opposite the Southern Hotel.
Prompt and careful attention given and the least possible pain inflicted. Address
WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

FOR SALE CHEAP.
Two span first class work horses. Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.
Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M. for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge Room at Independence as follows:
Saturday ..... January 24th
" ..... February 21st
" ..... March 21st
" ..... April 18th
" ..... May 23rd
" ..... June 20th
" ..... July 18th
" ..... August 15th
" ..... September 12th
" ..... October 17th
" ..... November 14th
" ..... December 12th
JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.
Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated. Satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine.
FRED BURKHARDT

OFFICIAL.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE

STEVENS DITCH COMPANY.

Location of principal place of business, Independence, California. Location of Ditch, near Independence.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AT A meeting of the Board of Directors, held the 27th day of June 1891, an assessment (No. 6) of Twenty (20) Cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, at Independence, Cal.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 1st day of August 1891, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on MONDAY, the 24th day of August, 1891, to pay the delinquent assessment together with costs of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

P. H. MACK,
Secretary.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

IDA C. DECKER, Plaintiff, vs. STEPHEN DECKER, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Stephen Decker, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant; that plaintiff be allowed and decreed to resume her former name of Ida C. Adams, and for general relief, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 17th day of June, A. D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
MACK & LAIRD, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer without cost of repairs than any other machine, Has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

MISCELLANEOUS.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING SALOON.
Shaving, Hair Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.
WM. H. HUFF, Prop'r

IRWINS' SALOON
Cor. Edwards and Market Streets,
Independence, Cal.
THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt and furnished in a style second to none on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.
THE BAR
Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.
JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

P. W. FORBES. P. H. MACK.
MACK & FORBES.
Real Estate Agents,
Address,
P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal.
P. W. FORBES, Bishop, Cal.

BOOTS AND SHOES
MADE AND REPAIRED.
THE BEST MATERIAL.
FIRST-CLASS WORK.
Repairs done Promptly.
Prices Reasonable.
A. J. DAVIS,
nov 30-tf Independence.

BIG PINE HOTEL.
BIG PINE - CAL.
New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in fact, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
Thos. Williams,
Proprietor.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JULY 17.....1891.

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 1.00¼
Lead, 4 45
Copper, 13 70
Tin, 20 40
Sugar, .05¼
Coffee, 20 @ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 13 @ 19.

Religious Services.

Rev. H. J. Winter will preach at Lone Pine on Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m.; at Georges Creek, 2:30 p. m.; at Independence, 7:30 p. m.

Children's day exercises at Lone Pine.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

SATURDAY, July 11, 1891.

W. H. Uhlemeyer vs. Sylvania Mining Co.—Filed Summons.

Estate of B. F. Theban, deceased—Filed petition for order of sale.

MONDAY, July 13, 1891.

Estate of Pauline Pellegrine, deceased—Filed Petition of W. F. Matlack for letters of administration.

TUESDAY, July 14, 1891.

Estate of Ezra M. Goodale, deceased—Filed claim of John Alexander.

WEDNESDAY, July 15, 1891.

Ah Sing vs. O. H. Hill—Clerks entry of default.

THURSDAY, July 16, 1891.

O. I. Mairs vs. A. D. Gilbert—Filed satisfaction of judgment.

District Attorney Forbes is visiting at Bishop.

John Dodge of Lone Pine was in town yesterday.

T. J. Goodale was down from Fish Spring on Tuesday.

C. B. Rawson of Bishop was down from Bishop during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Conklin visited Independence during the week.

Miss Katie Reddy has returned to Darwin from a visit at Independence.

Misses Sophie and Emily Rhine returned to San Francisco yesterday from a visit at Independence.

Sheriff Gorman returned from below on Wednesday's train. He delivered Murray safely at Stockton.

A band of 2,000 range cattle sold in Idaho last week for $22 per head. Cattle are steadily going up.

Martin Moe came up from Lone Pine on Tuesday's train and will remain here a few weeks under the doctor's care.

The weather report from Keeler was missent in the mails. Hence the delay until this week for publication.

S. P. McKnight C. E. came down from Bishop yesterday and is engaged in surveying on the Eastside.

Who knows anything about the fair this year?—when will it occur, premium list, race programme etc.—Quien Sabe?

Charley Summers was down from Long Valley a few days this week. He reports the cattle men up there as doing well.

Norman Mairs returned to Independence yesterday from Los Angeles where he has been attending school for the last eight months.

George Lewis is harvesting a fine crop of grain at Camp Independence. All orders for hay and grain will be promptly attended to.

A. D. Gilbert has returned to Independence after an extended tour through the San Joaquin Valley. He has become a connoisseur on Salvation Army music.

There is considerable passenger travel on the stage line between Keeler and Mojave. With improved facilities—better and more stock used—the business could be considerably increased.

For washing calicoes that fade take a teaspoonful of sugar of lead; dissolve in a pailful of warm water a tablespoonful of salt; dip the garments in the mixture and dry before washing.

Ben Lisky returned to Beveridge last Monday. He says there are seventy tons of ore on the dumps, and about one hundred tons will be run through the mill some time in September.

J. J. Gunn arrived at Independence from San Francisco last Monday. He has gone to Modock to attend to mining interests there. Mrs. Gunn and baby are doing nicely in San Francisco.

A large quantity of fruit is being shipped from Independence station from the Symmes orchard by A. M. Given, and from the Densmore orchard by Dan Cofer. Both shippers put up their fruit in fine shape.

Keeler pursues the even tenor of its way. Teams are employed constantly on the road from Darwin and Modock and from Cerro Gordo. A large quantity of freight is handled, but nothing of special importance is happening.

Coyote scalpers must bear in mind that the scalps must have the ears and nose on to entitle them to the State bounty of $5 An Auteloper had 16 scalps rejected at the last meeting of the Board of Supervisors of Mono County—a clean loss of $80 on account of a scarcity of noses.

The population of the State of Nevada under the present census is 45,761, a decrease of 16,505, or 26.51 per cent. since 1880, when the State had a population of 62,266. In every county but two decreases are shown, owing, no doubt, to the decadence of mining interests.

A Quick Cure For Rheumatism.

In many cases persons subject to rheumatism, have got prompt relief from pain by applying Chamberlain's Pain-Balm. The relief it affords is alone worth many times its cost, which is but 50 cents, and its continued application effects a complete cure. For sale by A. K. EUGLEY, Big Pine.

SUPERVISORS' PROCEEDINGS.

FRIDAY, July 10, 1891.

The Board of Supervisors met on the above day, all the members being present. Minutes of preceding meeting read, corrected and approved.

Quarterly reports of Auditor and Treasurer accepted and approved.

The Clerk was instructed to procure two dozen copies of Road Law. Following rates were fixed for labor on roads: Road Masters, $3 per day, other labor, $2; Road Master with two horses, $5; each additional span, $2. Each days labor to consist of 8 hours actual work.

A lease of Owens river was granted to J. H. Bulpit and others for lumbering purposes. The following rates were fixed: For floating cord-wood 50 cts. per cord; booming same, 50 cts. Floating lumber, $2 per 1,000 feet; booming same, $1. For floating logs, $2 per 1,000 feet; booming same, $1; all to be reckoned as board measure. For floating fence poles or posts, 2 cts. each; booming same, 2 cts. each.

C. W. Rathbun, A. E. Janvier, H. H. Howell and Elma K. Conklin appointed members of Board of Education.

Claim of J. E. Dunlap for $18 allowed in sum of $9.

Claim of G. L. Drake reconsidered and allowed in sum of $79 70.

Ordered that $85 be appropriated for improvements on Garrettson bridge.

Warrant on Hospital Fund for $16 drawn in favor of Judson Webber.

Ordered that the sum of $175 be appropriated from the bridge fund to construct a bridge across Owens river east of Bishop in Road Dist. No. 3.

Claims of members allowed and Board adjourned.

The Coyote Holes Tragedy.

The Gazette, Bakersfield, gives the following account of the late deplorable affair near Coyote Holes:

"The Indian trouble at Sage canyon in which Constable Powers was killed, is about this: A stack of hay was burned, and it was set on fire by some one, the owner believing it to be the work of an Indian swore out a complaint and placed it in Powers' hands for execution. Powers, accompanied by Gann, left Weldon on July 24, arriving at Kiowa's rancheria on the morning of the 31. McCoy joined the officers at Coyote Holes and went with them to his death. Upon reaching the Indian camp they met Kiowa and asked him where the Indian was for whom the warrant was issued. He said he would assist them in the search, called a boy to catch his horse, which seems to have been a prearranged signal to open fire upon the constables. An Indian appeared at the door and commenced shooting, Kiowa had a six-shooter concealed in his shirt, and he drew this and commenced shooting, and the constables returned the fire. Powers and McCoy were shot, and Gann having emptied his pistol, made a break and reaching a horse mounted and started for Coyote Holes pursued by two Indians on the other horses. Gann aroused the country, and a posse reached the seat of war next morning just at daybreak. Lying in front of the house were the bodies of McCoy and Powers badly mutilated. Search being made a fresh grave was discovered and opened, and the bodies identified as old Kiowa and one of his sons. John L. Powers was a young man, a hard worker and energetic, and was very popular. Oliver McCoy was a resident of Tulare county and leaves a family.

Meteorological Summary.

Following is the report of the Signal Service Station at Keeler for the month of June, 1891.

Mean barometer.....29.722
Highest barometer.....30.03
Lowest barometer.....29.465
Mean temperature.....72.0
Highest temperature, 29th.....97.
Lowest temperature, 1st.....46.
Greatest daily range temp'ture, 27th, 32.
Least daily range temperature, 11th, 15.
Prevailing direction of wind, East.
Total movement of wind, 4679 miles.
Extreme velocity of wind, direction and date, 36 miles S. W. on 18th.
Total precipitation, 0.30 inches.
Number of days on which .01 inch or more of precipitation fell, 2.
Number of cloudless days.....18
Partly cloudy days.....6
Cloudy days.....6

H. E. WILKINSON,
Sergt., Signal Corps, Observer.

The Soda Works.

Preparations are now being made at the Soda works at Keeler to take up soda. Those vats that are filled with a sufficient quantity of soda are being drawn off, and the crude stuff will be hauled to the mill and be ground up for shipment. The vats will be filled again as rapidly as emptied, and the work continued until the season is over. This industry could readily be worked to assume vast proportions and employ a large number of laborers. It is currently reported that a movement is now on foot to change control of the works and greatly extend them.

Cone to Saline.

A Mr. Robinson, a mine expert left Big Pine on Wednesday for the Ubaheba copper mines in Saline Valley. These mines were formerly owned by A. Bierstadt and others of New York but were located some time ago by the Smith Brothers, Arlie Mairs and J. Welsh. The latter parties bonded the property to Mr. Reeves, who is taking the expert to see them. There is said to be an immense ledge, and with facilities for transportation the mines would be of great value.

A Suggestion.

If you are troubled with rheumatism or a lame back, allow us to suggest that you try the following simple remedy. Take a piece of flannel the size of the two hands, saturate it with Chamberlain's Pain-Balm and bind it over the seat of pain. It will produce a pleasant warmth and relieve you of all pain. Many severe cases have been cured in this way. The Pain-Balm can be obtained from

A. K. EUGLEY
Big Pine.

Well Merited Praise.

In almost every neighborhood there is some one or more persons whose lives have been saved by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, or who have been cured of chronic diarrhœa by it. Such persons take special pleasure in recommending the remedy to others. The praise that follows the introduction and use makes it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by A. K. EUGLEY, Big Pine.

HEIR TO $500,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A dispatch was received yesterday from Baltimore announcing that George F. Beiser of Brooklyn had become heir to a vast estate there valued at $500,000. The property came through relatives who emigrated from France in the days of the Huguenots. Mr. Beiser is an accountant in a Fulton street clothing house. Bruce's Law and Inquiry Agency, of Chicago, Ill., prosecuted his claim.—Louisville Courier-Journal, Nov. 27

We are Mr. Beiser's lawyers and by him seeing our advertisement, became the agent of his good fortune. If your ancestors came from the old country write to us, and enclose $1 for our list of heirs. There are more than half a billion dollars in Great Britain and Germany, unclaimed, which rightly belong to people in the United States.

BRUCE'S LAW AND INQUIRY OFFICE,
164 and 166 Randolph St.
Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

At the last session of Congress an act was passed that affects all dealers in cigars, but with which most of them are unacquainted. Section 2692 of the Revised Statutes says that cigars must be sold to customers direct from the properly stamped box. A dealer who takes out a handful of cigars and lays them before the buyer to choose from, or a saloon keeper who brings a cigar on a plate or in a glass makes himself liable to a fine of $100.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The partnership heretofore existing between W. S. Enos and O. I. Mairs is dissolved by mutual consent.

Witness our hands June 15th, 1891.

W. S. ENOS,
O. I. MAIRS.

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK.....PROPRIETOR.
Horseshoeing.....$2.00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

A. W. Eibeshutz
Independence, Cal.
—DEALER IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
Agent for
Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:
Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

INDEPENDENCE
MEAT MARKET,
J. C. ROEPER, Prop.
Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.
A well appointed shop, with refrigerator, ensuring the purity of meat, and every effort made to give satisfaction to patrons.
j19-tf

NOTICE
ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.
FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.
Bee Keeper.
Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.
Independence, Inyo Co. Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For Sale!
ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE
Eastside Canal.
There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,
C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

BELL'S
Flouring Mills,
A. N. BELL, Prop.
TRY BELL'S
EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.
Having added Patent Rolls and other improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully
Equal to the Best
Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.
A. N. BELL,
Independence, Cal.

NORMAN HOUSE,
Independence, - Cal.
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates.
Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.
O. I. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL.,
We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.
THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $25 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. Can work in spare time or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FORBES & TOBEY,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.,
—DEALERS IN—
LUMBER
OF ALL KINDS.
DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS,
LATH,
RUSTIC
MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.
Matched and Dressed
Flooring.
sept 11-tf

PALACE SALOON
LONE PINE, CAL.
—THE FINEST—
WINES,
BEER,
LIQUORS,
& CIGAR
—o—
This Saloon is conducted in a strictly first-class manner, and every attention tendered my patrons. FRED. BURCKHARDT, j12-tf Lessee.

TO ADVERTISERS
A list of 1030 newspapers divided into STATES AND SECTIONS will be sent on application—FREE.
To those who want their advertising to pay, we can offer no better medium for thorough and effective work than the various sections of our Select Local List. GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., Newspaper Advertising Bureau, 10 Spruce Street, New York

EDWARD CHENOT
Independence, Cal.,
INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of
GENERAL MERCHANDIS
....Consisting of....
GROCERIES.
PROVISIONS
Tobacco, Cigars,
WINES AND LIQUORS
FLOUR & GRAIN
Together with an Assortment of
DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING
ETC., ETC
Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and pric before purchasing elsewhere.
E. CHENOT.
Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
n476tf

Lake View Hotel
Keeler, Cal.
John Barnes, Prop'r.
First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.
THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
Wines,
Liquors,
& Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.
Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.
—o—
The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the
LARGEST AND BEST STOCK
of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.
PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.
All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.
Address orders and packages to
HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

BIG 10P ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.
Harness Maker.
Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View
Hotel.
O. H. Hill, Prop'r.
A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE
BISHOP.
Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St
In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable
S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
Customers supplied on all points
Of the C. & C. Railroad.
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Pioneer
Livery & Feed Stables.
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, patrons can be assured of finding there the best of Buggy Teams, Saddle Horses, and
Livery Accommodations
in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.
O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor.

A NEW DEAL!
LONE PINE
Livery. Feed & Sale
Stable.
A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.
OPPOSITE SEW ART HOUSE.
Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,
—DEALER IN—
General Merchandise,
LONE PINE,
INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,
BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.

PROVISIONS,
&c., &c., &c.
A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages, in any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, GEORGE STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.
CARSON & COLORADO R R
TAKING EFFECT
Sunday, November 16,

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1		To Mound House. No. 2.
	Leave—		Arrives—
Mound House.....	11:30 p. m.		5.50 p. m
Dayton.....	12:00 p. m.		5:10 p. m.
Wabuska.....	2 05 p. m.		2 50 p. m
Hawthorne.....	5.50 p. m.		11:10 a. m.
Luning.....	7:05 p. m.		9.55 a. m.
Soda Springs.....	8:05 p. m.		9:15 a. m
Belleville.....	9:15 p. m.		7:55 a. m.
Candelaria.....	Ar. 10 00 p. m.		Lv. 7:20 a. m.
	No. 3.		No. 4.
	Leave—		Arrives—
Belleville.....	8 20 a. m		5:25 p m.
Benton.....	11:00 a m		1:35 s m.
Bishop Creek.....	2:00p, m.		11:00 a. m
Alvord.....	2 45 p. m.		10:00 a. m
Independence.....	4:20 p. m.		8:30 a. m
Lone Pine.....	5:10 p. m.		7 40 a m
Keeler.....	Ar 5:55 p. m.		Lv. 7:00 a. m

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. & R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

At HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (3 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

At LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salisbury & Co's. tri-weekly stages (leavin Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downeyville Grantsville and Belmont.

At CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver P Montezuma Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.
D A BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles
OF
Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies'
Wear, etc., etc
AT
L. WOOLF
CASH STORE
A small stock of fresh groceries & canned goods constantly renewed.
Fresh Produce, and Grain
Flour, etc., constantly on hand.
CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!
THE CASH STORE
Is Where You Get
WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE
Blacksmith Shop.
R. C. Spear, Prop'r
—ALL WORK ON—
MINING TOOLS,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS
& FREIGHTING OUTFITS
—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—
HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING
All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON
KEELER, CAL.
In Lake View Hotel
BEER, WINES.
LIQUORS and CIGARS
All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.
JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.
J. C. MILLER, Lessee.
—THE BAR—
Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of
WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CGARS
The most careful attention given to the the amusement and comfort of patrons.
A FINE BILLIARD TABLE!
Is always at the disposal of visitors to the Palace Saloon. sept-12 tf

Too large—the old-fashioned pill. Too reckless in its way of doing business, too. It cleans you out, but it uses you up, and your outraged system rises up against it. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets have a better way. They do just what is needed—no more. Nothing can be more thorough—nothing is as mild and gentle. They're the smallest, cheapest, the easiest to take. One tiny, sugar-coated granule's a gentle laxative—three to four are cathartic. Sick Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels are promptly relieved and permanently cured.

The Dead Alive.

"Did you ever see a dead man walking about?" queried a Griswold street insurance agent of a friend the other day.

"Of course not."

"Well, there is a case of it. See that man on the corner."

"He looks pretty lively."

"Yes, but he's legally dead. Let me tell you about him. We served in the same Ohio regiment in the war. At the battle of Groveton, which took place a day or two before Second Bull Run, he was detailed as a skirmisher. The Confederates pushed forward, and as the skirmishers were running back to the lines this man stopped for a moment on a little knoll. A shell came through a gap in the Confederate lines, entered the base of the knoll, and when it exploded he was lifted twenty feet high."

"And torn to pieces?"

"We thought so, and a thousand men saw the performance. He was picked up by the Confederates, sent to a hospital and then held a year and a half as a prisoner of war. Our captain reported him dead, he was carried down the rolls as such, and even now the tangle has not been straightened out. When taken prisoner the Confederates put him down as James instead of John, and that helped mix matters."

"But was he badly wounded?"

"No. He did not lose a drop of blood, but was simply stunned, and it was six months before his hearing was fully restored. He has paid a claim agent over $500 to secure his discharge as a Union soldier, but he has not got it yet."—Detroit Free Press.

St. Jacobs Oil

A SURE CURE — A PROMPT CURE

CURES PERMANENTLY

Rheumatism
Sciatica
Back Aches
all Aches
Neuralgia.
IT HAS NO EQUAL.
IT IS THE BEST.

DON'T.

Don't cheat yourself out of a good smoke by taking a poor imitation for the genuine Seal of North Carolina Plug Cut Tobacco.

GUNS

HUNTER'S EQUIPMENTS

Fishing Tackle, Etc. Great Variety. Low Prices. Old Guns taken in trade. Send for Catalogue. GEO. W. SHREVE, 525 Kearny St., San Francisco.

"SHUFFLE BOARDS"

Manufactured by R. HERRING

450-452 Stevenson Street, bet. 4th and 5th, San Francisco, California

THE SPLENDID SPUR.

Being Memoirs of the Adventures of Mr. John Marvel, a Servant of His late Majesty King Charles I, in the years 1642-3: written by himself.

EDITED IN MODERN ENGLISH BY "Q."

"Joan—what besides?"

"Joan's enough, I reckon; lucky for thee 'tis none else. Joan o' the Tor folks call me, but may yet be Joan i' Good Time. So hold thy peace, lad, an' cry out so little as may be."

I felt a ripping of my jacket sleeve and shirt, now clotted and stuck to the flesh. It pained cruelly, but I shut my teeth; and after that came the smart and delicious ache of water, as she rinsed the wound.

"Clean through the flesh, lad—in an' out, like country dancin'. No bullet to probe nor bone to set. Heart up, sace! Thy mother shall kiss thee yet. What's thy name?"

"Marvel, Joan—Jack Marvel."

"An' marvel 'tis thou'rt Marvel yet. Good blood there's in thee, but little enow."

She bandaged the sore with linen torn from my shirt, and tied it round with sack cloth from her own dress. 'Twas all most gently done; and then I found her arms under me and myself lifted as easy as a baby.

"Left arm round my neck, Jack; an' sing out if 'tis hurtin' thee."

It seemed but six steps and we were out on the bright hillside, not fifty paces from where the plow yet stood in the furrow. I caught a glimpse of a brown neck and a pair of firm red lips, of the gray tor stretching above us, and, farther aloft, a flock of fleid fare hanging in the pale sky; and then shut my eyes for the dazzle, but could still feel the beat of Joan's heart as she held me close and the touch of her breath on my forehead.

Down the hill she carried me, picking the softest turf, and moving with an easeful swing that rather lulled my hurt than jolted it. I was dozing, even, when a strange noise awoke me.

'Twas a high protracted note, that seemed at first to swell up towards us, and then broke off in half a dozen or more sharp yelps. Joan took no heed of them, but, seeing my eyes unclose, and hearing me moan, stopped short.

"Hurts thee, lad?"

"No." 'Twas not my pain, but the sight of the sinking sun that wrung the exclamation from me—"I was thinking," I muttered.

"Don't; 'tis bad for health. But bide thee still awhile, and shalt lie 'pon a soft bed."

By this time we had come down to the road, and the yells were still going on, louder than ever. We crossed the road, descended another slope, and came all at once on a low pile of buildings that a moment before had been hid. 'Twas but three hovels of mud, stuck together in the shape of a headless cross, the main arm pointing out towards the moor. Around the whole ran a battered wall patched with furze, and from this dwelling the screams were issuing:

"Joan!" the voice began, "Joan—Jan Tergagle's a-clawin' my legs—Gar-rout, thou hell cat—Blast thee, let me zog! Pull'n off, Joan—Jo-an!"

The voice died away into a wail; then broke out in a racket of curses. Joan stepped to the door and flung it wide. As my eyes grew used to the gloom inside, they saw this:

A rude kitchen—the furniture but two rickety chairs, now tossed on their faces, an oak table, with legs sunk into the earth, a keg of strong waters, tilted over and draining upon the mud floor, a ladder leading up to a loft, and in two of the corners a few bundles of bracken strewn for bedding. To the left, as one entered, was an open hearth, but the glowing peat turves were now pitched to right and left over the hearthstone and about the floor, where they rested, filling the den with smoke. Under one of the chairs a black cat spat and bristled; while in the middle of the room, barefooted in the embers, crouched a man. He was half naked, old, and bent, with matted gray hair and beard hanging almost to his waist. His chest and legs were bleeding from a score of scratches; and he pointed at the cat, opening and shutting his mouth like a dog, and barking out curse upon curse.

No way upset, Joan stepped across the kitchen, laid me on one of the bracken beds and explained:

"That's feyther; he's drunk."

With which she turned, dealt the old man a cuff that stretched him senseless, and, gathering up the turves, piled them afresh on the hearth. This done, she took the keg and gave me a drink of it. The stuff scalded me, but I thanked her. And then, when she had shifted my bed a bit to ease the pain of lying, she righted a chair, drew it up and sat beside me. The old man lay like a log where he had fallen and was now snoring. Presently the fumes of the liquor or mere faintness mastered me and my eyes closed. But the picture they closed upon was that of Joan, as she leaned forward, chin on hand, with the glow of the fire on her brown skin and in the depths of her dark eyes.

CHAPTER XII.

HOW JOAN SAVED THE ARMY OF THE WEST.

But the pain of my hurt followed into my dreams. I woke with a start, and tried to sit up.

Within the kitchen all was quiet. The old savage was still stretched on the floor; the cat curled upon the hearth. The girl had not stirred; but, looking towards the window hole, I saw night outside, and a frosty star sparkling far down in the west.

"Joan, what's the hour?"

"Sun's been down these four hours." She turned her face to look at me.

"I've no business lying here."

"Chose to come, lad; none axed thee, that I knows by."

"Where's the mare? Must set me across her back, Joan, and let me ride on."

"Mare's in stable, wi' fetlocks swelled like puddens. Chose to come, lad; an' choose or no, must bide."

"'Tis for the General Hopton, at Bodmin, I am bound, Joan; and wound or no, must win there this night."

"And that's seven mile away; wi' a bullet in thy skull, and a peat quag thy burial. For they went south, and thy road lieth more south than west."

"The troopers?"

"Ay, Jack; an' work I had this day wi' those same bloody warriors; but take a sup at the keg, and bite this manchet of oat cake while I tell thee."

And so, having fed me, and set my bed straight, she sat on the floor beside me (for the better hearing), and in her uncouth tongue told how I had been saved. I cannot write her language; but the tale, in sum, was this:

When I dropped forward into her arms, Joan for a moment was taken aback, thinking me dead. But (to quote her) "'no good,' said I, 'in cuddlin' a lad 'pon the hillside, for folks to see, though he have a-got curls like a wench; an' dead or 'live, no use to wait for others to make sure.'"

So she lifted and carried me to a spot hard by that she called the "Jew's Kitchen;" and where that was, even with such bearings as I had, she defied me to discover. There was no time to tend me, whilst Molly stood near to show my whereabouts; so she let me lie, and went to lead the sorrel down to stable.

Her hand was on the bridle when she heard a whoop! up the road, and there were half a dozen riders on the crest, and tearing down hill towards her. Joan had nothing left but to feign coolness, and went on leading the mare down the slope.

In a while up comes the foremost trooper, draws rein, and pants out, "Where's he to?"

"Who?" asks Joan, making out to be surprised.

"Why, the lad whose mare thou'rt leadin'!"

"Mile an' half away by now."

"How's that?"

"Freshly horsed," explains Joan.

The troopers—they were all around her by this—swore 'twas a lie, but luckily, being down in the hollow, could not see over the next ridge. They began a string of questions all together, but at last a little tun bellied sergeant called "Silence!" and asked the girl, "did she loan the fellow a horse?"

Here I will quote her again:

"'Sir, to thee,' I answered, 'no loan at all, but fair swap for our Gray Robin.'

"'That's a lie,' he says; 'an' I won't believe thee.'

"'Might so well,' says I; 'but go to the stable an' see for thysel'.' (Never had gray horse to my name, Jack; but, thinks I, that's his'n lookout.)"

They went, did these simple troopers, to look at the stable, and, sure enough, there was no Gray Robin. Nevertheless, some amongst them had logic enough to take this as something less than proof convincing, and spent three hours and more ransacking the house and barn, and searching the tor and the moors below it. I learned, too, that Joan had come in for some rough talk—to which she put a stop, as she told me, by offering to fight any man Jack of them for the buttons on his buff coat. And at length, about sundown, they gave up the hunt, and rode away over the moors toward Warleggan, having (as the girl heard them say) to be at Braddock before night.

"Where is this Braddock?"

"Nigh to Lord Mohun's house at Boconnoc, seven mile away to the south, and seven mile or so from Bodmin, as a crow flies."

"Then go I must," cried I; and hereupon I broke out with all the trouble that was on my mind, and the instant need to save these gallant gentlemen of Cornwall, ere two armies should combine against them. I told of the king's letter in my breast and how I found the Lord Stamford's men at Launceston; how that Ruthen with the vanguard of the rebels, was now at Liskeard, with but a bare day's march between the two, and none but I to carry the warning. And, "Oh, Joan!" I cried, "my comrade I left upon the road. Brighter courage and truer heart never man proved, and yet left by me in the rebels' hands. Alas! that I could neither save nor help, but must still ride on; and here is the issue—to lie struck down within ten mile of my goal—I, that have traveled two hundred. And if the Cornishmen be not warned to give fight before Lord Stamford comes up, all's lost. Even now they be outnumbered. So lift me, Joan, and set me astride Molly, and I'll win to Bodmin yet."

"Reckon, Jack, thou'd best hand me thy letter."

Now, I did not at once catch the intent of these words, so simply spoken; but stared at her like an owl.

"There's horse in stall, lad," she went on, "though no Gray Robin. Tearaway's the name and strawberry the color."

"But, Joan, Joan, if you do this—feel inside my coat here, to the left—you will save an army, girl; may be a throne! Here 'tis, Joan, see—no, not that—here! Say the seal is that of the governor of Bristol, who stole it from me for a while; but the handwriting will be known for the king's, and no hand but yours must touch it before you stand before Sir Ralph Hopton. The king shall thank you, Joan, and God will bless you for't."

"Hope so, I'm sure. But larn me what to say, lad, for I be main thick witted."

So I told her the message over and over, till she had it by heart.

"Sha'n't forgit now," she said at length, "an' so hearken to me for a change. Bide still, nor fret thysel'. Here's pasty an' oat cake, an' a keg o' water that I'll stow beside thee. Pay no heed to feyther, an' if he wills to get drunk an' fight wi' Jan Tergagle—that's the cat—why, let'n. Drunk or sober, he's no 'count."

She hid the letter in her bosom and stepped to the door. On the threshold she turned.

"Jack, forgot to ax; what be all this bloodshed about?"

"For church and king, Joan."

"H'm; same knowledge ha' I o' both—an' that's nought. But I dearly loves fair play."

She was gone. In a minute or so I heard the trampling of a horse; and then, with a scurry of hoofs, Joan was off on the king's errand, and riding into the darkness.

Little rest had I that night, but lay awake on my bracken bed and watched the burning peat turves turn to gray, and drop, flake by flake, till only a glowing point remained. The door rattled now and then on the hinge, out on the moor the light winds kept a noise persistent as town dogs at midnight; and all the while my wound was stabbing, and the bracken pricking me till I groaned aloud.

A day began to break the old man picked himself up, yawned and lounged out, returning after a time with fresh turves for the hearth. He noticed me no more than a stone, but, when the fire was re-stacked, drew up his chair to the warmth and breakfasted on oat cake and a liberal deal of liquor. Observing him, the black cat uncoiled, stretched himself, and climbing to his master's knee sat there purring and the best of friends. I also judged it time to breakfast; found my store, took a bite or two and a pull at the keg and lay back—this time to sleep.

When I woke 'twas high noon. The door stood open, and outside on the wall the winter sunshine was lying very bright and clear. Indoors, the old savage had been drinking steadily, and still sat before the fire with the cat on one knee and his keg on the other. I sat up and strained my ears. Surely if Joan had not failed the royal generals would march out and give battle at once; and surely, if they were fighting, not ten miles away, some sound of it would reach me. But beyond the purring of the cat I heard nothing.

I crawled to my feet, rested a moment to stay the giddiness, and tottered across to the door, where I leaned, listening and gazing south. No strip of vapor lay on the moors that stretched—all bathed in the most wonderful bright colors—to the lip of the horizon. The air was like a sounding board. I heard the bleat of an old wether a mile off upon the tors, and was turning away dejected, when, far down in the south, there ran a sound that set my heart leaping.

'Twas the crackling of musketry.

There was no mistaking it. The noise ran like wildfire along the hills; before the echo could overtake it a low rumbling followed, and then the brisker crackling again. I caught at the door post and cried, faint with the sudden joy:

"Thou angel, Joan!—thou angel!"

And then, as something took me by the throat—"Joan, Joan—to see what thou seest!"

A long time I leaned by the door post there, drinking in the sound that now was renewed at quicker intervals. Yet, for as far as I could see, 'twas the peacefulest scene, though dreary—quiet sunshine on the hills, and the sheep dotted here and there, cropping. But down yonder, over the edge of the moors, men were fighting and murdering each other, and I yearned to see how the day went.

Being both weak and loath to miss a sound of it, I sank down on the threshold, and there lay with my eyes turned southward through a gap in the stone fence. In a while the musketry died away and I wondered, but thought I could still at times mark a low sound as of men shouting, and this, as I learned after, was the true battle.

It must have been an hour or more before I saw a number of black specks coming over the ridge of hills and swarming down into the plain towards me, and then a denser body following. 'Twas a company of horse moving at a great pace, and I guessed that the battle was done and these were the first fugitives of the beaten army.

'Twas, maybe, an hour after that a man came in through the gap; a lean, hawk eyed man, with a pinched face and two ugly gashes—one across the brow from left eye to the roots of his hair; the other in his leg below the knee, that had sliced through boot and flesh like a scythe cut. His face was smeared with blood and he carried a musket.

"Water!" he barked out as he came trailing into the yard. "Give me water—I'm a dead man!"

He was stepping over me to enter the kitchen, when he halted and said:

"Art a malignant, for certain!"

And before I had a chance to reply his musket was swung up, and I felt my time was come to die.

But now the old savage, that had been sitting all day before his fire, without so much as a sign to show if he noticed aught that was passing, jumped up with a yell and leaped towards us. He and the cat were on the poor wretch together, tearing and clawing. I can hear their hellish outcries to this day; but at the moment they turned me faint. And the next thing I recall is being dragged inside by the old man, who shut the door after me and slipped the bolt, leaving the wounded trooper on the other side. He beat against it for some time, sobbing piteously for water, and then I heard him groan at intervals till he died. At least, the groans ceased, and the next day he was found with his back against the cottage wall, stark and dead.

Having pulled me inside, Joan's father must have thought he had done enough, for on the floor I lay for hours and passed from one swoon to another. He and the cat had gone back to the fire again, and long before evening both were sound asleep.

So there I lay helpless, till, at nightfall, there came the trampling of a horse outside, and then a rap on the door. The old man started up and opened it; and in rushed Joan, her eyes lit up, her breast heaving, and in her hand a naked sword.

"Church and King, Jack!" she cried, and flung the blade with a clang on to the table. "Church and King! O brave day's work, lad—O bloody work this day!"

And I swooned again.

CHAPTER XIII.

I MEET WITH MR. HANNIBAL TINGCOMB.

There had, indeed, been brave work on Braddock Down that 19th of January. For Sir Ralph Hopton with the Cornish grandees had made short business of Ruthen's army—driving it headlong back on Liskeard at the first charge, chasing it through that town, and taking 1,200 prisoners (including Sir Shilston Calmady), together with many colors, all the rebel ordnance and ammunition, and most of their arms.

At Liskeard, after refreshing their men, and holding next day a solemn thanksgiving to God, they divided—the Lord Mohun with Sir Ralph Hopton and Col. Godolphin marching with the greater part of the army upon Saltash, whither Ruthen had fled and was intrenching himself; while Sir John Berkeley and Col. Ashburnham, with a small party of horse and dragoons and the voluntary regiments of Sir Bevill Grenville, Sir Nich. Slanning, and Col. Trevanion, turned to the northeast, toward Launceston and Tavistock, to see what account they might render of the Earl of Stamford's army; that, however, had no stomach to await them, but posted out of the county into Plymouth and Exeter.

'Twas on this expedition that two or three of the captains I have mentioned halted for an hour or more at Temple, as well to recognize Joan's extreme meritorious service, as to thank me for the part I had in bringing news of the Earl of Stamford's advance. For 'twas this, they owned, had saved them—the king's message being but an exhortation and an advertisement upon some lesser matters, the most of which were already taken out of human hands by the turn of events.

But though, as I learned, these gentlemen were full of compliments and professions of esteem, I neither saw nor heard them, being by this time delirious of a high fever that followed my wound. And not till three good weeks after was I recovered enough to leave my bed, nor, for many more, did my full strength return to me. No mother could have made a tenderer nurse than was Joan throughout this time. 'Tis to her I owe it that I am alive to write these words; and if the tears scald my eyes as I do so, you will pardon them, I promise, before the end of my tale is reached.

(To be Continued.)

The action of the postmaster of El Paso in refusing to allow the El Paso Times to be transmitted through the mail simply because it contained as news an Associated Press dispatch giving a synopsis of the opinion of the Supreme Court of Louisiana compelling the Secretary of State to submit at the next election a constitutional amendment passed by the last general assembly extending the charter of the Louisiana State Lottery twenty-five years, is deserving of the severest condemnation and censure, not only because of the injustice of such an arbitrary proceeding, but upon grounds of public policy. The business manager of the Times very properly had this postmaster, who bears the historic name of Smith, arrested for unlawfully detaining mail matter, and he was bound over to appear before a commissioner for trial, but the punishment whatever it will be, even if ever meted out after many months of delay, will not fit the crime. Nothing short of absolute and immediate official decapitation, with whatever other punishment the law provides, would be proper for such officious intermeddling with the mails. If the United States mail is to be subjected to such scrutiny and exclusion by the postmaster at El Paso, the postmasters at the various other cities, towns, villages, hamlets and crossroads in the State and throughout the United States have the same right, power and authority, and are of course at liberty to do just as the postmaster at El Paso has done. If the postmaster can stop the transmission of a newspaper because it has in it the decision of a court in regard to the Louisiana lottery, he can also stop it because it mentions the name of the lottery in it, and if he can do this he can stop the Post, because it incidentally mentions the name of the Louisiana Lottery Company in criticising his official conduct. If he can do this, however, he can override the strongest bulwark of the liberties of the people and violate one of the plainest provisions in the constitution of the United States, thereby completely throttling the press.

Upon grounds of public policy the United States government should not tolerate such tampering with the mail. It throws open the doors to fraud and, if permitted, will tend to make the service inefficient and unreliable. Why not detain a letter suspected of containing a lottery advertisement, and why not open it to ascertain if the detention is legal? If its contents are legal why then of course it might be permitted to continue on its journey.

The great wrong done newspaper publishers, however, is to allow a postmaster to authoratively detain mail matter which in his opinion is illegal. He ought not to be permitted to do this. If the publisher has committed any wrong he can be held responsible and be made to suffer the penalty; but a postmaster may detain an entire edition of a newspaper, entailing a heavy loss upon the publisher, and yet when the matter comes to a final trial the court may decide that the papers are mailable. The damage has then been done the publisher, and there seems to be no adequate remedy for him. Suppose the politics of a newspaper are objectionable to the postmasters generally, and throughout the State they choose to hold a paper because in their opinion it is not mailable, it would thus put it within the power of the postal department to stop the circulation of a newspaper and bankrupt it, leaving the publisher with a lot of suits against postmasters as assets. Such a state of affairs leaves newspaper publishers without adequate remedy, and to allow such arbitrary conduct on the part of officious postmasters is contrary to the institutions of this government, and a violation of the legal maxim that each wrong has its adequate remedy.—Houston (Tex.) Post, May 16.

How can you expect to get information from a letter when it is not posted?

A BEAUTIFUL PIECE OF DENTAL SURGERY.

Just sixty days ago Dr. G. W. Leek of 6 O'Farrell St., San Francisco, operated on a young lady of 15 years, who was disfigured by a hair lip and cleft pallate with a hole as large as a marble. The lip was cut in alternating strips; these strips were twisted and brought from one side to the other and sewed with strong cat gut ligatures, then covered with adhesfon plaster, and for two weeks the lady was kept in a dark room and feed on soft food. No person except her mother being allowed to see her for fear she might move the muscles of her face and break up the adhesion. A small gold plate was fitted to the cleft in the mouth and attached to teeth on each side by gold bands; the teeth around which the bands were put were covered with gold, ordinary cold gold crowns so as to prevent any wear from the movement of the band when the aparatus is being removed once a day to be cleaned.

The scar has almost disappeared and the articulation is perfect.

It is not generally known that Dr. Leek can perform any of these wonderful operations, painlessly, by the use of his local anaesthetic, the same as he uses in the painless method of tooth extraction, without the use of any dangerous gas such as Colton gas or laughing gas.

We cannot recommend any person going to San Francisco for dentistry to any other dentist than Dr. Leek, because in his building, three stories high, he employes nineteen expert dentists, and claims to be the only dentist in the world that performs every operation known to the science of dentistry without going out to call in some specialist not in his employ to assist or perform the operation if it be very complicated, such as removing a cancer, surgical operation for tumors or cleft palate.

Hypochondriac—What springs would you recommend me to try? Doctor (curtly)—Hope springs eternal.

HOW'S THIS!

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions, and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Don't try to make a pet of a bumble-bee because he is pretty. Beauty is sometimes deceitful.

Can the sale of an inferior article constantly increase for 24 years? Dobbins' Electric Soap has been on the market ever since 1865, and is to-day as ever, the best and purest family soap made. Try it. Your grocer will get it.

The devil doesn't care how solemn a man looks if he forgets his religion when trading horses.

Coughs, Hoarseness, and Sore Throat.—"Brown's Bronchial Troches" give immediate relief.

Take time to deliberate, but when the time for action arrives, stop thinking and go in.

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Porterfield & Losey, 828 Market street, San Francisco.

It is true as George Eliot said: "The reward of the duty done is the power to fulfill another.

PILES! PILES! PILES!

Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment will cure Blind, Bleeding, and Itching Piles when all other Ointments have failed. It absorbs the tumors, allays the itching at once, acts as a poultice, gives instant relief. Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and Itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted. Sold by Druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price, 50c. and $1.00 per box. WILLIAMS M'F'G CO., Props., Cleveland, O.

Tin, tin, American tin!
Now's the time for the work to begin.

Use Enameline Stove Polish; no dust, no smell.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation permanently. For sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all druggists.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

"August Flower"

Dyspepsia. There is a gentleman at Malden-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., named Captain A. G. Pareis, who has written us a letter in which it is evident that he has made up his mind concerning some things, and this is what he says:

"I have used your preparation called August Flower in my family for seven or eight years. It is constantly in my house, and we consider it the best remedy for Indigestion, and Constipation we have ever used or known. My wife is troubled with Dyspepsia, and at times suffers very much after eating. The August Flower, however, relieves the difficulty. My wife frequently says to me when I am going to town, 'We are out of August Flower, and I think you had better get another bottle.' I am also troubled with Indigestion, and whenever I am, I take one or two teaspoonfuls before eating, for a day or two, and all trouble is removed."

Indigestion.

Constipation

STEINWAY, Gabler and Pease Pianos

Meaning the Best Piano Made, and the favorite cheaper Pianos; all Musical Instruments; Bands Supplied; large stock of Sheet Music. STEINWAY HALL, 206 & 208 Post Street, MATTHIAS GRAY Call and see our new rooms and new stock.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted ..... Sold by druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco

A bridegroom is like a car-coupler. He is the most insignificant object in sight; but the thing can't go on without him.

ACROSS THE DEEP, TO THE FAR WEST,

On steamboats, cars and stage-coaches, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is carried as the most important item in the materia medica of the traveling public. It deprives vitiated, brackish water of its hurtful properties and execrable flavor, counteracts the pernicious effects upon the stomach of bad or indigestible food, renders cramps, heartburn and wind upon the stomach. It is a fine defense against malarial disorders, nullifies the effects of excessive heat, cold and damp, relieves sick-headache, and is an incomparable cure for costiveness and biliousness. The fatigue of travel often tells most disastrously upon invalids and convalescents, occasionally to such an extent as to jeopardise life. Persons in feeble health, apprehensive of bad effects from travel, will, if provided with the Bitters, be far less likely to have their fears realized.

Never ask an idle man to do anything for you. It is only the busy man who can find time to do anything more.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

A Pure Cream of Tartar Powder. Superior to every other known. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

Delicious Cake and Pastry, Light Flaky Biscuit, Griddle Cakes, Palatable and Wholesome.

No other baking powder does such work.

I took Cold, I took Sick,

I TOOK

SCOTT'S EMULSION

RESULT:

I take My Meals, I take My Rest,

AND I AM VIGOROUS ENOUGH TO TAKE ANYTHING I CAN LAY MY HANDS ON; getting fat too, FOR Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda NOT ONLY CURED MY Incipient Consumption BUT BUILT ME UP, AND IS NOW PUTTING

FLESH ON MY BONES

AT THE RATE OF A POUND A DAY. I TAKE IT JUST AS EASILY AS I DO MILK." SUCH TESTIMONY IS NOTHING NEW. SCOTT'S EMULSION IS DOING WONDERS DAILY. TAKE NO OTHER.

MORNING SCHOOLS, AT SEA-SIDE,

JUNE 16— —JULY 31

Greek, German, Mathematics, English Literature, Physics, Chemistry, taught by College Professors. 4 P. M. Bible Study, Free! Evening Lectures Free. Warm Salt-water Bathing in TWIN LAKES.

LORENZO D. ISSEKEF, Santa Cruz, Cal.
Sec'y California Baptist Resort.

BROOKLYN HOTEL Bush St., bet. Montgomery & Sansome, S. F.; conducted on both the European and American plan. This Hotel is under the management of Charles Montgomery and is the best Family and Business Men's Hotel in San Francisco. Home comforts, cuisine unexcelled, first-class service, highest standard of respectability guaranteed. Board and room, per day $1.25 to $2.00; single room, 50 cts. to $1.00 per night. Free coach to and from the Hotel.

Old Gold and Silver Bought; send your old Gold and Silver by mail to the old and reliable house of A. Coleman, 41 Third street, San Francisco; I will send by return mail the cash, according to assay; if the amount is not satisfactory will return gold.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE

Best in the World! Get the Genuine! Sold Everywhere!

INFANTILE SKIN AND SCALP DISEASES CURED BY Cuticura

EVERY HUMOR OF THE SKIN AND SCALP of infancy and childhood, whether torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, scaly, crusted, pimply, or blotchy, with loss of hair, and every impurity of the blood, whether simple, scrofulous, or hereditary, is speedily, permanently, and economically cured by the CUTICURA REMEDIES, consisting of CUTICURA, the great Skin Cure, CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite Skin Purifier and Beautifier, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new Blood and Skin Purifier and greatest of Humor Remedies, when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. Parents, save your children years of mental and physical suffering. Begin now. Delays are dangerous. Cures made in childhood are permanent.

Sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by Potter Drug and Chemical Corporation, Boston, Mass. Send for "How to Cure Skin and Blood Diseases."

Baby's skin and scalp purified and beautified by CUTICURA SOAP.

Kidney pains, backache, and muscular rheumatism relieved in one minute by the celebrated CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25c

HAY FEVER & ASTHMA CURED TO STAY CURED. We want the name and address of every sufferer in the U. S. and Canada. Address P. Harold Hayes, M.D., Buffalo, N.Y.

CREOSOZONE THE GREATEST

Flea & Chicken Lice Killer.

Ask your dealer for it, or send for Free Circular to Petaluma Incubator Co., Petaluma, Cal.

LOOK AT THIS

We offer 12 yds. Victoria Suitings, an elegant wash fabric in stripes, plaids or combinations for $1.00.

We offer 12 yds. of Novelty Dress Plaids, 22 designs, all black, white, and other modest colors, mostly large plaids, $1.00.

We offer 10 yds. select patterns of Dress Plaids, fast colors in extra quality, good for long wear, a few stripes and combinations among them, plain at same price.

Do you want sample? Do you want our 40 page June list?

Smith's Cash Store,

416-418 Front Street, SAN FRANCISCO.

WANTED SOLDIERS' HOMESTEADS The addresses of all soldiers who homesteaded a less number of acres than 160 and made final proof on the same before June 22, 1874. W. E. Morris P. O. Box 1765, Denver Colo. Mention this paper.

Cultivators
Iron Age
New Styles, Old Styles
For Vineyard, for Orchard.
Stock just arrived.

Baker & Hamilton,

San Francisco, Cal.

DROPSY

TREATED FREE.

Positively Cured with Vegetable Remedies

Have cured thousands of cases. Cure cases pronounced hopeless by best physicians. From first dose symptoms disappear; in ten days at least two-thirds all symptoms removed. Send for free book testimonials of miraculous cures. Ten days' treatment free by mail. If you order trial, send 10c. in stamps or pay postage. DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Atlanta, Ga. If you order trial return this advertisement to us.

"THE SPECIFIC A NO. 1."

YOUNG MEN! Cures all unnatural discharges of men, no matter of how long standing. Prevents stricture, it being an internal remedy. Cures when everything else has failed. Price, $3.00. Circular on application. Sold by Druggists or sent on receipt of price by The A. Schoenhelt Medicine Co., San Jose, Cal.

FOR MEN ONLY!

VIGOR AND STRENGTH For LOST or FAILING MANHOOD; General and NERVOUS DEBILITY; Weakness of Body and Mind, Effects of Errors or Excesses in Old or Young. Robust, Noble MANHOOD fully Restored. How to enlarge and Strengthen WEAK, UNDEVELOPED ORGANS & PARTS OF BODY. Absolutely unfailing HOME TREATMENT—Benefits in a day. Men testify from 50 States, and Foreign Countries. Write them. Descriptive Book, explanation and proofs mailed (sealed) free. Address ERIE MEDICAL CO., BUFFALO, N. Y.

BIG G. Cures in 1 to 5 DAYS. Guaranteed not to cause Stricture. Mfd. only by THE EVANS CHEMICAL CO. CINCINNATI, O. U. S. A. The G is the acknowledged leading remedy for all the unnatural discharges and private diseases of men. A certain cure for the debilitating weakness peculiar to women. I prescribe it and feel safe in recommending it to all sufferers. A. J. STONER, M. D., DECATUR, ILL. Sold by Druggists. PRICE $1.00. Trade Mark.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH, RED CROSS — DIAMOND BRAND

PENNYROYAL PILLS

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE. The only Safe, Sure, and reliable Pill for sale. Ladies, ask Druggist for Chichester's English Diamond Brand in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with blue ribbon. Take no other kind. Refuse Substitutions and Imitations. All pills in pasteboard boxes, pink wrappers, are dangerous counterfeits. At Druggists, or send 4c. in stamps for particulars, testimonials, and "Relief for Ladies," in letter, by return Mail. 10,000 Testimonials. Name Paper. CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO., Madison Square, PHILADELPHIA, PA. Sold by all Local Druggists.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

Best Cough Medicine. Recommended by Physicians. Cures where all else fails. Pleasant and agreeable to the taste. Children take it without objection. By druggists.

CUMBERLAND COAL.

HUSBAND & BROOKS' BRAND.

Absolutely Pure and Dry

This Coal is stored away from the sun and rain. Keeps proper fire. No loss of time. No loss of material from bad fires. Always reliable. Blacksmith's use this brand when they want the best.

HUSBAND & BROOKS — IMPORTERS — 14 & 16 SPEAR ST., SAN FRANCISCO.

Even the little pig in the picture is a more agreeable companion than a man with a dirty collar or a woman who presides over a tawdry house. But nobody wants the reputation of being a pig under any circumstances.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

Independence, Cal.,

FRIDAY, JULY 24, 1891.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

VOL. XXIII. NO. 5. INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CAL., JULY 24, 1891. WHOLE NO. 1082.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

IRV. H. MULHOLLAND, Editor & Proprietor.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One Year (post paid)	$4.00
Six Months	2 25
Three Months	1.50
One Month	.50
Single Copies	.10

THE "WATER ANGEL."

The Legend Connected With its Discovery.

A BEAUTIFUL FLOWER OF CHINA.

A Forerunner of Good Luck.—Curious Superstition.

Another superstition which is almost universal among my countrymen is the belief that the hooll sin fah will bring good luck to them. The hooll sin fah is a slender lily like plant which grows from a bulb closely resembling an onion, and in the early spring some of them may be seen in almost every laundryman's window, where the bulbs are imbedded about one-third in clean pebbles placed in a bowl. No soil whatever is required for the growing of the plant, but dozens of tiny roots force themselves down between the pebbles and into the water, with which the Chinaman has about half covered the pebbles.

The hooll sin fah takes about thirty days to come to its maturity, and during this time the water on the pebbles must be changed every day. When full grown the plant consists of half a dozen or more bright green stalks, with blossoms which somewhat resemble the narcissus in shape, but they are of a pure waxy whiteness, with a small golden crown in the center. The plant, the name of which signifies water angel, is thought by the Chinese to have had a miraculous origin from the fact that it is found growing in the clear water of running brooks where it apparently lives without sustenance.

Many years ago a rich Chinese farmer married a wife, whose cramped little feet and long, tapering finger nails incapacitated her for work, and soon after, according to the custom of the country, he took to himself another wife. The second wife was of low degree, a strong country girl who could do the work on the farm and wait upon him and his "lady" wife.

Now it happened that the "lady" wife grew violently jealous of the other, and when, in due course of time, each had a son born to her the hatred only increased. When the boys had reached the age of about 5 years the farmer died, and the "lady" wife, by virtue of her high station in life, confiscated nearly all of the property, leaving to the other only a barren little plot of swampy ground between two high hills, upon which was a little tumbled down thatched cottage.

The poor mother and her son went there, and, though they had a hard time to scrape out an existence, they were happy in each other's company. Then came a great rain storm, which continued for a week, and their little swamp plot was transformed into a pond, the water coming up almost to the door of their hut.

They nearly starved to death, but one day it was found that the sun was shining once more and that the waters had gone down. The little boy went out into the sunshine and he found that the ground was covered with bulbs about the size of onions. He eagerly ate one of them and then picking up as many as he could carry in his arms hurried back to his mother, who prepared them for dinner.

The bulbs sprouted and grew, and then when the flowers appeared the story of the miracle of the water god spread through the country.

As no one had ever seen the plant before, hundreds of people came to see the widow's beautiful flower garden. Each of the visitors bought some of the bulbs for good luck, and in a short time the widow had more money than her persecutor, and virtue got its final reward.

The flowers of the water angel are very fragrant, and are almost reverenced by the Chinese, for a flowering hooll sin fah is esteemed the choicest gift that one Chinaman can give to another.—Moy Lee in Boston Globe.

Evening Things Up a Little.

In the early history of the European and North American railroad the female passengers did not enjoy that exemption from the annoyances of tobacco smoke which is now accorded them. Among them on one trip was an elderly lady of stern countenance and an elevated nose, whose whole affection seemed to center in a mongrel little cur which she held in her lap and favored with many tender endearments. A little way in front of her sat a "great, horrid man," industriously and peacefully puffing a large cigar. The wrathful lady viewed him for a time in cold displeasure, and then stalking majestically down the aisle she seized the offending cigar and threw it out of the window, with the disdainful remark: "If there is anything in the world I positively despise it's a nasty cigar." The owner of the cigar said nothing, but quietly picked up a newspaper and began to read. An hour or two later he passed down the aisle, and pausing in front of the proud lady he seized her precious little dog and threw it out of the window, with the quiet remark: "If there is anything under heaven that I hate it is a miserable little dog."—Kennebec Journal.

What an Observing Boy Learned.

"Papa," said the son of a railroad conductor who was accompanying his rather on a short run, "who is that thin, sickly looking man in the front of the car?"

"He's agent for a patent medicine that is warranted to cure every disease that was ever known and restore anybody to perfect health."

"Who is that big, fat, jolly looking fellow in the seat behind him?"

"He's an undertaker."

"Oh! What does that little bit of a fellow with the duster on do?"

"He's going to play Macbeth in the next town."

"Who is that man with the sad eyes and the lonely look on his face? Hasn't he got any friends?"

"Not many; he writes funny things for the newspapers."

Electrical Treatment of Sewage.

A paper on "The Electrical Treatment of Sewage" was read by Mr. W. Webster, F. C. S., at a meeting of the Society of Chemical Industry, in London. This gentleman has devoted some ten years to experiments on the problem, and has carried out some experiments on a large scale with the sewage of Salford, which is of an exceptionally complex character. He has succeeded in reducing the albuminoid ammonia to .14 parts per 100,000, thus leaving an effluent which may be turned into any stream or river. He uses cast iron electrodes, finding that platinum is too costly, and carbon disintegrates in the presence of nascent oxygen and chlorine. He places the electrodes in a shoot eighteen inches deep, two feet wide and 200 feet long.

Twenty-five pairs are connected in series, and a pressure of 1.8 volts is used between them. Sir Henry Roscoe had entire control of the experimental works for about a month, and found that from 70 to 80 per cent. of the organic matter was precipitated as a sludge. From the experiments on 20,000 gallons of sewage it is estimated that to deal with 10,000,000 gallons in twenty-four hours at Salford 400 indicated horse power will be necessary, as for each gallon .37 ampere hour is required. Experiments made during the lecture on London sewage showed that a flocculent precipitate was formed within a few seconds. If sewage sludge be of any value as manure it should be economical to use that produced by this process.—New York Telegram.

A Collector of Skeletons.

In southern Egypt, near the Nubian border, there lives a rich retired Parsee whose sole ambition is to enlarge a collection of skeletons of eminent persons. In his tropical garden, amid fountains, flowers, rare exotics, statuary and bowers of equatorial verdure, stand dozens of skeletons of famous warriors, statesmen, kings, queens, lawyers, ecclesiasts, etc. This earthly paradise (barring the presence of the skeletons) is four acres in extent, and is surrounded by a high stone wall provided with four grated iron doors. It is believed that he keeps a score of men in every community in the world constantly on the lookout for rarities in his ghastly line. To a correspondent of a Berlin newspaper he admitted that he was the owner of the bones of George III of England, and even hinted that he would like to have the bones of our Washington to stand beside them. Is it not possible that this crank has the bones of many Americans that are missing?—St. Louis Republic.

Rage Restored Her Voice.

The vegetable cook at Green's hotel, whose name is Mary Murphy, has been dumb for three years, but recently, being aroused to a fit of intense anger by the impudence of a colored waiter named Joe Todd, she suddenly recovered her speech. Miss Murphy is a buxom Irish girl about 25 years of age, and she has been a prominent official in Green's kitchen for several years. Three years ago she suffered from a bad bronchial attack and completely lost her voice.

All the employes in the kitchen were astounded to hear the autocrat of the vegetables speak. What the doctors for years had failed to do rage had achieved. The girl's hot blood had loosened her tongue. There was much rejoicing over the event, and a festival was extemporized. Miss Murphy, in her joy, took back all the cruel things she said to Mr. Todd, and everybody was happy and joyful.—Philadelphia Times.

Broke a Muscle in Stretching.

The Rev. Ezra H. Yocum, D. D., pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church of Harrisburg, injured himself in a peculiar manner Tuesday morning. Upon arising from his night's rest the reverend gentleman threw his arms back over his head and stretched himself. Suddenly there was a rather loud report, as of something snapping, and Mr. Yocum fell to the floor. He managed to reach the bed and lay on it unconscious for a time. Members of the family discovered him there and sent for a doctor. After making an examination the physician stated that, in the act of stretching, Mr. Yocum had snapped a muscle back of his ear which had connection with the shoulder, and this caused the loud report. It is a painful injury, and will require an absolute rest of some days before Mr. Yocum can resume his pulpit duties.—Philadelphia Press.

The Father of Engine Drivers.

Adrien Poncet, the father of engine drivers in France, has had the Cross of the Legion of Honor awarded him by M. Carnot for long and meritorious service. In 1832 this veteran drove the first locomotive made in France, over the line from Saint Etienne to Rouen, and also conducted the first engine on the railroad from Paris to Saint Germain. Poncet, who is 75 years of age, has had forty-eight years of engine driving.—London Tit-Bits.

Robert Coleman, a farmer's boy, of Little Britain, Lancashire county, Pa., caught in a steel muskrat trap recently, it is reported, a fine fish of the bass species, which on measurement was found to be 13½ inches long and one pound six ounces in weight. The creek had risen during the night and the water flowed over the trap.

There is some talk of Bishop Hare's relinquishment of his work as missionary bishop of South Dakota in order to take charge of a field of religious labor in Japan, but the clergyman himself says that his visit to Japan may not result in his giving up his work in Dakota. Bishop Hare belongs to an eminent Philadelphia family.

The surviving Union generals who commanded departments during the war of the rebellion are Gens. Banks, Buell, Butler, Rosecrans, Sigel, Lew Wallace, D. N. Couch, C. C. Augur, J. M. Palmer, N. J. T. Dana, J. J. Reynolds, H. G. Wright, G. M. Dodge, Schofield and B. F. Kelley.

GLADY'S MAKES TROUBLE.

The Cat That was Five Times Buried

EXERCISE FOR REDUCING THE FLESH.

A Desire for Household Pets Results in a New Invention.

Another new method for the reduction of obesity has been discovered, as all great discoveries are brought about, purely by accident.

You see, it was just like this, expounded its inventor. My wife and I went to housekeeping a while ago for the first time, and she thought she couldn't keep house without some pets. Well, I got the pets, a cat and a dog.

At that time I was working a rowing machine night and morning, swinging a fifteen pound club, and various things of that kind to keep my flesh down. Well, the first week after the dog came, it kept me so busy effecting reconciliation between her and the cat, teaching her that I didn't enjoy tearing off down the block after her every time the door opened, and curbing her propensity for rearranging rugs and the little curtains and sashes my wife hangs around on tables and chairs, and in bringing things, particularly my wearing apparel, from the the back yard, where she had a trick of dragging them, that I didn't have time to use the machine and club at all. At the end of the week I had a whip on every floor, and had lost two pounds of flesh.

After harmony had been established between Gladys and the cat, peace seemed to have been declared on her part with all the feline race. She began to cultivate a gaunt tomcat that came growling into the yard, but Tom didn't reciprocate her friendly approaches. He had known bitter experiences, and his instincts were pessimistic and aggressive. He made a dive at Gladys, who was all unprepared for the onslaught, and, of course, she got the worst of it. In a lull in the proceedings I put a bullet through Tom's back and finished the fray. I intended to hit the cat in the head, but with the usual perversity of his kind, he continued to spring just enough to take it in the back. He crawled up a tree in a sickening and writhing way, kicking out his quivering hind legs, and my wife began to cry and get white, and say she knew she was going to faint. I begged of her not to until I could bury my dead, before the neighbors rushed in, and just then the cat gave one last wiggle and dropped out of the tree. I put my wife on the bed with the Pond's extract bottle, as I couldn't find the cologne, and rushed down to bury the cat under a rose bush. Gladys looked on approvingly, and when the grave was smoothed over she snuffed around it in a satisfied sort of way, which intimated that the interment was all correct and proper.

The next night when I got home that cat lay under the rose bush without a hair on its carcass, and beside it sat Gladys triumphant, radiant and expectant, waiting my commendation. Some of the dirt from that grave was on the parlor windows, some in the pan of lettuce set out on the door step, and a lot more was over the fence in the next yard. Well, I licked the dog as usual, as scientifically and handsomely as I knew how, rubbed her nose on the cat, on the spade in the grave, explaining meantime that I wanted the cat left alone. Then I buried it again, Gladys capering about the yard, catching the various fluttering pendant garments on the clothes line in her teeth, and swinging round and round in great glee until the clothes tore or the pins came out.

The next night when I went home my wife was gone. I didn't have to inquire. I knew without. A heavy tiger skin rug had been dragged into the next room and turned upside down, with a white silk scarf off the cabinet around the tiger's head. A large fur rug had been dragged away from the fireplace and piled up with a down pillow and a rug of choice skins from the couch; in a corner a Venitian glass ornament lay in fragments on the floor, and in the midst of the devastation, in a white and gold chair so decked out with blue ribbons and plush that neither I or any guest who ever came here had sufficient temerity to sit down in it, sat Gladys, animated, expectant and delighted to see me. I went to the window to get a whip and looked out. There lay the cat, stark, stiff and staring.

It took me a long time to polish that dog off as she deserved and get the cat buried again to my satisfaction, and it was not quite agreeable, even to me, to be rubbing the dog's nose in the corpse in the way she deserved.

The next night, when I went home, I found my wife crying by the wash bowl and holding some wriggling, squirming thing sewed up in a little muslin bag under water with her finger. It proved to be three of the four kittens which she had asked me to kill, and which I had forgotten. The Lord only knows how long she had been about it, for she sobbed out that they wouldn't die and she was so faint and sick. I went out to enrich another rose bush with the last remains of the three embryonic cats, when Gladys came rushing up so delighted about something that I knew she needed her usual licking. The cat was not entirely disinterred; only his two hind feet stuck up straight and hairless above the ground. Evidently I had in my haste buried him with his feet up. I thrashed the dog and the next night found the two fore feet unearthed. I hammered the dog again and buried the cat. That was the last of it. The fifth time I buried that animal his grave was undisturbed, and I had lost five pounds.

Every night there's some new development. Last night it was a pair of $10 shoes she had attempted to make a meal off of, and to-night it will be something else. Of course it's a little expensive, but I eat and drink everything I like, and the flesh is melting off of me like magic. Beats all the systems of reduction I ever heard of.—New York Sun.

Adventure of a Sagacious Mule.

Mollie, an old piebald mule, had a remarkable adventure in Cincinnati. Her owner, Charles Cole, had led her into the stable yard. Suddenly the treacherous earth caved in and buried the animal under a mass of rock and dirt twenty feet high. Cole escaped falling into the pit. An hour later the exhausted mule showed her head 200 feet away at the mouth of a sewer only two and one-half feet in diameter. She was assisted in emerging from the sewer. She had been almost skinned alive. Her rough hide was seamed and dotted with numberless gashes from which the blood flowed. Great bruises appeared on her sides and abdomen, while her legs were so strained that she could hardly stand.

Nevertheless Mollie was very much alive, as she betrayed by a "Yee-haw-w!" of triumph and a nonchalant twirl of her short tail. The animal had emerged in a ravine near Gilbert avenue. Her trip through the rock bound sewer was somewhat aided by the downward slope of the channel and by the slight stream of water which lubricated the masonry of the lower side. Nevertheless, Mollie's escape was a most surprising one, and probably never equalled in the line of animal adventure. — Cincinnati Enquirer.

He Didn't Like the Dead March.

Among those who watched the Sherman funeral procession was a little boy to whom soldiers are a delight, but too young to see in the Grand Army veterans anything except a lot of tiresome old fellows whose endless lines were so long in getting by that his mother took him home before he had seen the glittering uniforms for which his soul hungered. This of course displeased the boy, and that night he bitterly criticised the arrangement of the procession. His father's attempt to explain matters availed nothing. Other processions, he said, were much better, for in them the soldiers came first and the Grand Army last, and little boys and their mammas didn't lose anything by going home early.

"I could have stood it," he said at last, "if those old men hadn't made their bands play over and over a tune that sounded like 'You've got to see us! You've got to see us! You've got to see us!' That made me mad!"—New York Times.

Mr. Redpath's Sympathies.

The truth is James Redpath was a man of intense feelings and strong sympathies, which were always ready to go out to all whom he believed to be wronged and oppressed. He was an ardent abolitionist. Few men ever labored more for the cause of the Irish people. His regard for President Davis was of the same sort. It was sympathy for the one southern man who was disfranchised and proscribed for a political act in which he had been engaged in common with many thousands of his countrymen. Mr. Redpath in all he did was consistent with his own ardent nature and overpowering tenderness for the weak and the oppressed. He never violated its unities, no matter how strange his conduct in some instances may have appeared. He was true to his own heart all the way through.—New Orleans Picayune.

Hunts Foxes Though an Old Man.

Brisbin Skiles lives at the Gap, Lancaster county. He is at least seventy-five years of age, and is yet able to sit well in the saddle, and when he goes fox hunting, which is almost daily at this season of the year, he eats but one meal and then dashes off with as light a heart as the next one and only eats again when he returns late in the evening. He always makes it a rule to never eat between meals. He has now twenty-seven foxes penned up. He usually catches from thirty to forty in a season and then lets them out in the spring. He has been as successful this winter as in any winter past. There are few who can ride better or have a keener sense of the fun which fox hunters experience in a hunt or chase.—West Chester (Pa.) News.

Marriage of Two Blind Persons.

The Rev. William G. Herbert, pastor of the High Street Methodist Episcopal church, was called upon Thursday night to unite a blind couple in wedlock. They were Mr. W. Tuck Levely, of Annapolis, and Miss Mary Lee, of Baltimore county. The marriage was performed at the bride's home, and was witnessed by several relatives. Mr. Levely, the groom, is young and has a beardless face. He is a piano tuner. The bride is young and handsome. She is an accomplished performer on the piano and is well educated. Both were educated at the Maryland School for the Blind, and it is said that the courtship began while they were in that institution.—Baltimore Sun.

Pity the Blind.

A blind man who plays sacred music upon an accordeon is perambulating the streets of Windsor. His affliction attracted some time ago the attention of her majesty the queen, who while taking a drive saw him in the street and compassionately gave him a gratuity. He now bears upon his breast a placard with the rather ambiguously worded inscription:

"Blind from inflammation. Assisted by her majesty the queen."—London Tit-Bits.

Workmen are just finishing what is claimed will be the longest board fence in the country. It surrounds J. O. Stuyvesant's new deer park at Tranquillity, N. J., and will be when completed twelve miles long. The sawmill at Allamuchy has been running continually cutting out the boards. The fence is ten feet high, and is made of hemlock an inch and a half thick. It will cost $20,000.

A doctor in Paris was called to attend a popular actress whose face had been sadly damaged by a carriage accident. He came to the conclusion that to preserve her beauty it was necessary to repair the lady's face with a piece of human skin, and accordingly he provided the remedy by removing a portion of his own.

WHERE NAPOLEON DIED.

The Old Camden House Sold at Auction.

IT'S PICTURESQUE LOCATION.

A Spot Associated With Lost Hopes and Life Long Sorrows.

The furniture and other contents of Camden House, at Chiselhurst, where Napoleon III breathed his last and where the Empress Eugenie endured so many heavy afflictions, were disposed of under the hammer of Christie & Manson, the auctioneers, who have assisted at the dispersal of so many families and the break up of many homes.

If any man is puffed up with a sense of his own importance, with family pride or with delight in his wealth, a visit to Christie & Manson's ought to bring him to his level. The greatest and proudest of the present day are not more exalted in their own esteem than were the clients, living or dead, whose affairs have from time to time been placed in the hands of the auctioneers of King street, St. James. When Napoleon III took up his abode at Chiselhurst he believed that it was only for a brief season and that the destiny of his son was, at any rate, perfectly secure. That was in 1871, just after the war with Germany which terminated so disastrously for France.

Camden House is a very pretty place, standing in beautiful gardens. Even an emperor might make himself contented there if his heart were not fixed too exclusively upon the thone. Louis Napoleon cared little for the orchards or hop gardens of Kent. "The man fresh from Sedan" could scarcely be expected to lose himself in admiration of carnations and roses. The exile's world was in ruins round him, but his own words, which became the jest of Europe, may still have haunted him: "Tout peut se retablir." Did he not acknowledge in his letter to the national assembly from Chiselhurst that his heart was broken when he surrendered at Sedan? Yet some faint remnants of hope survive even in a broken heart.

Perhaps the emperor did not see that all was over until Sir Henry Thompson whispered in his ears the words which bade him prepare for his long journey. He died in 1873, and still the empress could console herself with the thought that her son would restore his dynasty and bring some compensation to her for the sufferings she had passed through. Who could have supposed at that time that this idolized son, the prince imperial, would perish miserably at the hands of savages in one of England's little wars? What man can foresee his fate, or woman, either?

The prince, then in his twenty-third year only, was weary of inaction and pining for some opportunity of showing that some of the qualities which the world cannot help associating with Napoleon had been transmitted to him. There were no events in connection with his own country which gave him any such opportunity. He had to take whatever came to hand, and he placed himself at the disposal of the country which had afforded shelter to his father and mother.

The great Napoleon, in talking one day to Las Cases, said: "There is nothing more than chance in it," and it must have been only chance which sent the prince imperial to Africa in 1879 to fight in a quarrel which had no interest for him, and there to fall beneath the assegais of some naked Kaffirs. More than ten years have passed, and the world knows something of the sorrows which have descended upon the head of the lad's mother. They say she was the instigator of the war between Germany and France. It is a questionable story, for have not later events made it clear that Bismarck laid the train to the mine and exploded it at the moment which seemed to him most convenient?

In any case, if the Empress Eugenie did any wrong, bitterly indeed has she been called upon to expiate it, for her Napoleonic race has ceased to exist. Although the prince imperial acknowledged Prince Victor, the son of Prince Napoleon, as the head of the family in the event of his own death, the empress has never done so. She allowed Prince Napoleon to leave Chiselhurst after the emperor's funeral without even seeing him.

Some curious reflections must have passed through Boulanger's mind as he stood over the relics of Napoleon I at Mme. Tussaud's most interesting collection of relics. By the way, although very few Londoners condescend to go and see them they are inspected chiefly by our country cousins and foreigners, in which latter category I do not include Americans. As for the house at Chiselhurst, there is no necessity for any Napoleonic devotee to summon up any pious emotions over it. It was taken as a furnished house, and all things in it belonged to the owner, Mr. Strode, and not to the Napoleons. It was the death of the owner which rendered the necessity of the sale. The empress has ceased to reside at Chiselhurst, but the remains of her husband and son still rest there in the sarcophagus which was presented by the queen.

It is scarcely likely that they will ever be taken to repose with those of the great Napoleon at the Invalides, and yet who can say? All things are possible in France—even a greater warrior was allowed to remain for some time neglected in his island prison. Here we have only a few passing thoughts to bestow upon the strange, eventful history of Napoleon, for the brief holiday season will soon be over and then the wild whirl of the London season will begin again, and fun, if there is any fun in it, will wax faster and more furious than ever.—London Letter.

A fleet of small twin screw passenger boats sixty feet long propelled by electricity is to be placed on the Thames this summer

Soap and Steel.

The steel manufacturer is subjected to some rather singular annoyances at the hands of his customers. For example, the other day a Pittsburg manufacturer received a complaint from a firm which uses a good deal of his steel that there was something wrong with the last consignment of steel sent, inasmuch as the men alleged that it was soft. This surprised the manufacturer, as large quantities of the same steel had given satisfaction elsewhere, and he himself went to investigate the matter.

He was still more surprised when he found that the steel was soft after heating and submission to the usual bath. The blacksmith before whom he made the test and the other workmen standing around took little pains to hide their enjoyment of the expert's discomfiture.

"You see, it is soft," said the blacksmith, with a grin, and for a moment the manufacturer was at a loss what more to do. Then an idea struck him.

"Is this bath all right?" he asked, and without waiting for an answer he plunged his hand into the trough and fished up a good sized lump of soap. No steel will harden in a soapy bath, and the mystery was at an end. Of course the blacksmith, who had played the trick, was discharged, and he confessed a rival manufacturer of steel had given him $50 to put the soap in the bath.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Mr. Freeman Two Fingers Short.

A passenger on the 10:25 o'clock express for Boston, which had just arrived, was standing in the doorway of one of the coaches, one of his hands resting in the groove where the door closes. A gust of wind or the swinging of the car caused the heavy door to close with considerable force, catching two of the man's fingers. The sharp edge of the door or the edge of the metal lock amputated the fingers almost as smoothly as would a surgeon's knife. The second and third fingers were taken off at the first joint.

The injured man was Martin Freeman, a New York business man. He was taken up town by Hackman Dunlap, who was requested to drive to some physician's office as soon as possible. The offices of Drs. Mailhouse, Bissell, Russell and Bacon were visited, but all were out. Finally Dr. Hawkes was found at his office, and he dressed Mr. Freeman's wounds.—New Haven Register.

An Old Directory.

John McPherson's directory of Philadelphia, published in 1785, has been unearthed. Among the prominent names it contains are these: "Franklin Benjamin, his excellency, 1 Franklin court; Morris Robert, merchant, 101 Market street; Rittenhouse David, 109 Arch street; Hamilton Alexander, 855 Second street." Although on the title page Macpherson spells his name in that manner, in the body of the work his name appears as John Mc. Pherson, broker, 7 Chestnut street. That all the people of the town were not in sympathy with his work is inferred from these entries: "I shall not give my name," 43 Stampers alley. "I won't have it numbered," 478 Green street. "I won't tell you my name." "What you please," 49 and 59 Market street.—New York World.

Masonic Apron to Go to Jerusalem.

The Rev. Dr. H. M. Wharton received a Masonic apron from South Carolina, which he is to present to the master of the lodge at Jerusalem, the birthplace of Masonry. Some time ago the Jerusalem lodge sent a gavel made of olive wood to the South Carolina Masons, who now send the apron in return. The present, a valuable one, is of lambskin, bordered with black velvet and fringed with silver. The square and compasses and the all seeing eye are stamped in gold. Dr. Wharton is a Mason, and expects to have a pleasant time with the members in Jerusalem. He sailed with his party for Palestine Wednesday.—Baltimore Sun.

The Grip in Japan.

One remarkable peculiarity of the grip in Japan was its prevalence among the upper classes, whereas the cholera selected its victims among the poorer people. Some idea of the extent of the epidemic may be gathered from the fact that at Yokohama the sufferers officially reported numbered over 50,000, and it is estimated that the unreported cases throughout the prefecture were nearly twice as great. Of the 130,000 inhabitants of Kobe, 25,000 were attacked by the disease. In Tokio the epidemic raged with great virulence, and similar reports come from some of the Chinese cities.—San Francisco Call.

Establishing a Precedent.

A case of interest to school teachers came up in Crawford county court recently. A teacher in one of the schools, Miss Alice Bentley, attempted to correct a boy named Guy McClintock, who was smearing ink over another boy's face. Young McClintock picked up a slate and struck the teacher in the face, seriously injuring her and incapacitating her for school duties. The board of directors disposed of the case by suspending the boy for one term. Friends of Miss Bentley then had the case brought into court. It was tried and a verdict of guilty of assault was rendered.—Meadville (Pa.) Tribune.

Poor Cholly.

Maud—Ethel is very conceited.

Cholly—I never thought her so.

Maud—But she is. She told me last night the names of all the fellows who proposed to her last summer.

Cholly (very much embarrassed)—I—er—am afraid I—er—must be going. Important engagement. Good night.—Harper's Bazar.

He Wants His Price.

A West Virginian claims to have discovered a cave filled with boxes of gold, diamonds and rubies—enough to load two freight cars—but he won't give it away for less than $5,000 cash down. He doesn't want to be mean, but he just won't do it, that's all.—Detroit Free Press.

AN AGGREIVED CITIZEN

Pours his Woes Into the Ears of Bill Nye.

THE AUTOCRATIC ELEVATOR BOY.

Endeavoring to Contradict a Newspaper Story.

On board a day coach of the great trunk line running from the Battery via Sixth avenue to Harlem I fell in the other day with a highly cultivated old gentleman who now resides in Brooklyn. Together we enjoyed the delightful stretch of dark red scenery and advertisements which greets the enraptured eye along this great scenic route. Together we inhaled the thousand odors of hot, sour alleys and damp cellars, and together we looked into second story rooms where poverty lay panting in the awful heat that had accumulated all day and now shut down with the night like a stifling garment. In our conversation he said:

"I generally aim to let the papers alone if they'll let me alone, but when I first came here a friend of mine brought me a slip that he had cut out of a prominent morning paper in which my name was used in a way that made me mad; and so I went right down to the office of the paper. Before I went I told my wife about the piece and that I was going to see about it. She saw that I was excited and she became alarmed. She hung on to me quite a while and said she wished I wouldn't go. We had always got along so well, and since we had been married I had never killed anybody, and she wished I would take her advice and not go, but I was thoroughly indignant and mad.

"The young man at the window where I went was counting the words in a 'Want' advertisement, and it was a long time before I could get his eye. Then he said in a brief, cold way that the editorial rooms were on the fifth floor. I did not like his way, and I would have been glad to lick him if I could have got over into his cage, but I couldn't. Then I went to the elevator. I was going to get in, but the elevator boy, who weighed about nineteen pounds, put his hand against my person and gently pushed me out.

"'You can't go upstairs without stating your name and your business and who you want to see. Here is a card that you can fill out.'

"He said I would have to be explicit. If I wanted the city editor, or the marine editor, or the literary editor, or the polo editor, or the birth and death editor, or the scrapping editor, I would find them in; but the managing editor and the telegraph editor and the night editor and the mirth editor and the bathing editor were all out.

"Finally I went in and found a small, good natured man that I could have handled without any trouble, but when I stated my business he said that it was not in his line at all, but that I ought to go to the city editor. By that time the city editor had gone to lunch. I waited for him till I got so hungry myself that I thought I would fall apart.

"When he came he had about nineteen men to talk to all at once for an hour or so; then he let me in and I told him what the trouble was. He didn't remember any such story in the paper as I spoke about, but would find out about it and see what reporter handed it in. Meantime he would advise me to write out a statement of my side of the case and leave it there. He would investigate the matter when the reporters got in in the evening.

"I went to a long table and wrote most all the afternoon on a piece which was not so scathing when I got through with it as I thought it was going to be, so I tore it up. Then I wrote another one. It was quite bitter, but not so bitter as I wished it had been. It had tame places in it where it seemed to all flatten out and fail to get there. I never suffered mentally so much in my life, and now and then when I wiped my brow on the tail of my linen coat I could see that the city editor seemed to enjoy it. By dusk I had completed an article that was carefully written, and yet I did not expect that it would be copied very much. It was inclined to be ornate in its style, and still there were words in it like 'eggregious,' for instance, that I didn't feel sure I had spelled right. It was now night, and I went home, leaving my article for the morning paper and feeling proud that I was getting mixed up with literature.

"My wife was anxious to find out if I had anybody's gore on my hands before I went into dinner, but I convinced her that my heart was still pure and guiltless, but that I had written a piece for the paper that would stir up the town in the morning.

"I looked it through hurriedly, but didn't find my piece. Most everything else was there but that, however. It was crowded out! Probably the mush and milk sociable editor had a piece that he wanted to run in in place of it, and owing to his influence he had succeeded. I was greatly irritated. I had lost one day from my business, but I decided to go down to the office again and see what the matter was.

"This time I got to the city editor at once, and he said if I would write another statement he would promise that it should not be overlooked, and said that as I was cooler now I would no doubt write a better piece. So I was fool enough to write another flapdoodle card for the paper. It took me till 12:30, and as near as I can remember simply proved over my own signature that I was an ice cream man who aspired to be a large, straw colored jackass. When I took it in to the city editor he asked me if I had the slip cut from the paper to which I referred. I produced it. He looked it over a moment, and then he said:

"'I am sorry that you have been here for two days and sprained your Thinker over this matter, and absorbed your time preparing an exhaustive article for our paper in your defense, for this slip is cut out of some other paper. I don't know what paper it is, but we haven't got any such type as that in our office.'

"He then stated that he would not detain me any longer, and I don't believe he could if he had wanted to. I went down the stairs rather than meet the elevator boy again, and soon found myself on the street. I bought my wife a new dress on the way home, and told her I had thought better of my assassination scheme on her account.

"That was ten years ago," said the old man, as he arose to go, "and although I have not always done right, I can truly say that the gore of no newspaper man is on my hands."—New York World.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

Irv. H. Mulholland,
EDITOR & PROPRIETOR.
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JULY 24 1891

It appears that the losses by fire on the national holiday were unusually small, but the following day made up for all deficiencies.

It is stated by an intimate friend of Baron Fava that the New Orleans affair is to be settled by Congress passing a bill providing for the payment of $1,000 to the families of each of the Italians who were citizens of this country when they were lynched. This is an easy plan for covering up an act which, though illegal, was proven entirely justifiable.

While Lord Salisbury declares that home rule has not effected any lodgment in England, Earl Spencer, ex-Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, maintains that the policy of the Liberals in favor of home rule for Ireland is as popular as ever in English constituencies, and that home rule would be the first proposal in the next Liberal Parliament.

The Los Angeles Terminal railway company effected a strong local organization last week by the election of Hon. William H. Workman as president and Messrs. Gibbon and Wincup as directors. Mr. Hobart, of St. Louis, resigned the Presidency of the road because he would be unavoidably absent at the meetings of the directorate, and this idea has influenced the reorganization all through. The powerful pecuniary support of the St. Louis syndicate will, of course, be continued.

The shipment of deciduous fruit from California this season, up to date, amounts to about 600 carloads, which is double the amount shipped up to a corresponding date last year. The prices keep well up and the unchecked demand for fruit is the best answer that could be given the fears periodically expressed of "over production." The market is seemingly enlarging faster than the orchard area. The total shipments of fresh deciduous fruits from California this year are likely to exceed 2,000 car-loads.—L. A. Herald.

It is high time that some friend should drag Mrs. Langtry to the shelter of private life. The spectacle of a battered beauty, who has descended from being the plaything of a prince to the ignoble role of the mistress of what in England would be called a "commercial cad" is a melancholy one. Such careers have a great deal of the very irony of life in them. This woman has illustrated about everything that is triste, and at every stage of her life has been cold, selfish and calculating. The last time she played in California she had already lost her beauty, and such orgies as excited Mr. Abingdon Baird's ire will soon leave her a monumental wreck.

The people of San Diego are justly indignant at the murderous assaults made upon the liberty-men of the crew of the Charleston. One of the sailors was killed in resisting the assault of the self-constituted deputy marshals, who were armed with clubs. It does not detract from the just indignation which this murder excites that these pseudo-officers clubbed the sailors in an effort to arrest them and deliver them to the officers of the Charleston at the rate of $10 a head, the standing reward for the return of man-of-war's men to their vessel when they have overstaid their leave and become constructively deserters. These fellows were earning blood-money sure enough; and it is now to be hoped that they will receive such punishment as their dastardly conduct deserves.

The source of the Salton lake has now been definitely traced. The expedition which started from Yuma to explore the lower Colorado found several places in which the river had broken its western banks and was flowing in deep currents into a chain of lagoons and finally pouring into the Salton sea. As the trip has been made by boat from Yuma to Salton, that settles the whole question about the source of this great body of water. The river is falling and it is of interest to know if it will have enough water at its low stage to keep up a sufficient supply on the desert to overcome what is absorbed by evaporation. If the influx of water should prove to be sufficient then the lake will be permanent and the entire Colorado river will eventually pour into it, until by some other freak during another great freshet it may take a different course and find another outlet for its waters to the sea.

TREATMENT OF CROUP.

WHAT TO DO FOR THE DISEASE IN THE ABSENCE OF A DOCTOR.

Dangerous Croup as Distinguished from False Croup—The Latter May Be Treated Without Medical Aid, but a Physician's Advice Is Always Safe.

The particularly dangerous characteristic of croup is, like pneumonia, its suddenness. Its action is so rapid, and the little patient is so soon in a condition that is very near to death, that parents "lose their heads," and from extreme fear and anxiety are unable to coolly go to work with their best judgment. There are two sorts of croup—one in which the hoarseness and choking are caused by a sort of spasm or contraction of the glottis, and known to physicians as pseudo-croup or false croup, and in this there is little or no formation of membrane. With false croup there is much tightness, the same harsh, brassy cough, the breathing is wheezy, difficult and rapid. The attacks come on with catarrh and hoarseness, and are apt to recur several nights, sometimes coming on in the daytime.

There are many causes for an attack of false croup. Sometimes it originates from the stomach. An exceptionally hearty supper or some indigestible food eaten during the evening may set up an irritation which will bring on the symptoms of false croup, but of course the usual cause is exposure and wet feet. It is really a mild disease, and quickly subsides under proper treatment, and is not apt to be followed by dangerous complications.

For immediate relief wet a towel in cold water and wring it out just dry enough to prevent its dripping, and fold it about the child's neck, then cover this with dry towels or flannel cloths to prevent the pillow, etc., from being wet. In many cases this wet packing of the throat is all that is necessary. Leave it on until the breathing is easy and natural, and be sure to rub the child dry and warm after taking off the pack. It is well to put a light woolen bandage about the throat for the remainder of the night, but never accustom a child to being "bundled up." If the cold pack does not prove sufficient to give relief at once, give repeated doses of sirup of ipecac, larger or smaller according to the violence of the spasm, until vomiting ensues.

An excellent cough medicine to keep in the house, and one which works well in cases of false croup, is the old fashioned mixture of sirup of squills and paregoric, or a mixture of glycerine and water in equal parts. If with this treatment the child does not get easy, and fall into a natural sleep, but, on the contrary, the choking sensation continues or becomes worse, you may conclude that you have a case on hand of true croup and the sooner you get a doctor the better.

GUARDING AGAINST CROUP.

False croup you may relieve tonight, and tomorrow morning there may be no trace of it, tomorrow night and the next night and for several nights it may come on again as badly as ever. It is not so, however, with true croup—there is no "let up" in this case, the condition gradually gets more and more severe until death ensues from suffocation, or until the disease submits to treatment. The average duration of a case of real croup is about seven or eight days, and many methods and remedies are advised.

Both false and true croup may be guarded against in great measure. It is a mistake to accustom children to such bundling and wrapping up when they go out that active exercise is not easily taken, and of course I would not have you go to the other extreme and not clothe them warmly enough, but if they are strong and lively, the latter course is really the safest, provided they can come indoors to rest and get warm. Look to it that their feet are attended to when they come in from playing in the wet. A good rubbing, or better still, bathing in alcohol and water, and then rubbing and dry warm stockings, will often prevent a case of croup or some other form of cold.

If they are weak, or not really active and strong, a course of sirup iodide of iron will usually bring them up. See to it that they are regular and rather lax in their bowel movements, for nearly every preparation of iron has a tendency to promote constipation.

WHAT TO DO FOR CROUP.

Death is almost always caused by suffocation, on account of the closing up of the glottis by the membrane, which forms so rapidly that constant attention with the probang or spray is necessary to impede its growth. Whichever method of applying is used, any application that is irritating is dangerous and should be avoided, as, for instance, nitrate of silver and several of the mineral acids.

Probably the best solvent is freshly made lime water, and it may readily be applied in form of vapor without any apparatus. Small pieces of fresh, unslaked lime may be put into a wide mouthed bottle—a pint glass fruit jar will answer—and water poured upon it to slake it, and the patient may then breathe the fresh vapor as it arises. In cases of true croup this is probably the best course to pursue until the doctor comes. Tincture of iron (full strength) may be applied to the membrane with a camel's hair pencil or a probang. The latter instrument is simply a bit of fine soft sponge, fastened securely with silk thread to the end of a piece of whalebone or reed about as long as a lead pencil, and is simply a swab.

With this swab diluted lactic acid may be applied to the membrane, and next to lime water it is probably the best and safest solvent that can be used. To prepare it for use simply add the acid to water until it has a decidedly sour taste. During an attack of croup it is necessary that we should do everything to keep the patient nourished, as the tremendous exertion of breathing, together with the apprehension of fatal result, are most exhausting.—A Doctor in New York World.

A Matter of Necessity.

"I don't see how you make your patients obey you, doctor. A man who is fond of high living never will diet."

"He can't help himself, madam. When he has paid my bill he has to reduce his living."—Harper's Bazar.

The president of France, who is of course the best paid official of the republic, receives a salary of $120,000 a year, to which is added $60,000 for household expenses and $60,000 for traveling.

LOYALTY.

They live in the halls of the heroes—
The world's Valhalla gray—
True knights, who in storm and battle
Flung the scabbard of life away.

Following a single watchword,
Dying and undismayed,
For the red rose of the Lancaster
Or the Stuart's white cockade.

Oh, clear as the blast far ringing
From the tips of Roland's horn,
That word and its passionate meaning
On the breath of the past is borne!

What though the cause were worthless,
Though the faith rang false when tried?
With as godlike self surrender
They fought on the erring side.

Borne down in the tide of battle
They died, and are conquerors still,
By Culloden or Roncesvalles,
By Cressy or Malvern Hill!

Where the forces of life are meeting,
Strong souls, like warriors, stand
On the side of their Lord's Anointed,
Still ready, sword in hand.

For the white ideal of honor,
The crown of their manhood's pride,
For the rose of a love unsullied,
Into the fight they ride.

Strong in a faith unshaken,
Loyal as those of old,
They lift over storm and struggle
Their oriflamme's white fold.

They raise up hands of power,
They strike where wrong defies,
For a dream, a trust, a symbol,
In a rapture of sacrifice.

Their shield still flings its shelter
The weary and weak above—
For the loyal arm gives justice,
And the loyal heart gives love!

—G. A. Davis in Frank Leslie's.

The Australian Tree Well.

In the vast rainless tracts of central Australia, where water in the shape of streams, ponds, wells, etc., is unknown and where thousands of gold seekers, travelers, hunters and others have perished with thirst, the country is found to be tolerably populated by a hardy race known as "Bushmen." For the past century it has been a standing wonder how these human beings managed to exist in such an arid region. It now turns out that nature has made provisions for the welfare of living creatures even in that inhospitable section of the antipodes. Here the eucalyptus tree, which grows 200 to 300 feet high in more favorable localities, grows to but eight or ten feet, gnarled and thickly jointed, like a reed.

Herein lies the secret of the Bushman's existence. The joints of this dwarf eucalyptus are hollow and filled with pure water, the size of the joint regulating the amount of water to be found within. More than one unlucky being has laid down in the shade of one of these Australian well trees to die of thirst when one stroke with his knife or "machete" would have caused a life giving stream to burst forth.—St. Louis Republic.

"Wait in the Hall."

The author of "England, Without and Within," gives an anecdote of an easy going English gentleman who was not bound by the absurd law against parcel carrying.

A shoemaker had missent to him a pair of shoes intended for a neighbor, and had probably sent to the neighbor the shoes that should have been sent to him. As he had no prejudice against carrying bundles he went with the shoes to his friend's house.

On arriving at his friend's door he asked to see Mr. Dash, but was understood by the servant to ask for Mrs. Dash, and was ushered into her presence. The lady, who had never seen him before, looked up and curtly asked:

"What have you there?"

"Mr. Dash's shoes," replied the gentleman.

"Oh, yes; it's all right. Mr. Dash is out, but he'll be in soon, and if you want to see him you'd better take a seat in the hall and wait till he comes."

"But, madam"—began the gentleman, who was a baronet's son.

"Never mind, never mind; it's all right. Step out in the hall, please, and wait for Mr. Dash."

The gentleman, of course, appreciated the situation at once. But he was too well bred and had too keen a sense of humor to explain, which would have both mortified the lady and prevented him from enjoying her mistake. He stepped into the hall, intending to give the shoes to a servant and leave the house.

But meeting his friend coming in, he gave him the shoes and, after a few words, bade him good morning. Though pressed to remain, he refused, knowing that his return to the wife's presence would cause her embarrassment.

His consideration for the feelings of another person would have made him a gentleman if he had been a hodcarrier.

Cheapness and Dissatisfaction.

Don't you feel sorry for the woman who haunts the bargain room counters? About her face is a weary, anxious look and her clothes have rather a tawdry air. It is proper they should, for the very word "tawdry" is derived from St. Audrey, on whose day fairs were held when the bargain seeking dames were induced to buy worthless things because they were cheap. As if anything you didn't want was ever cheap! Although the old St. Audrey's fair is closed, practically it still exists, for the same result follows all purchases such as were made there, i. e., dissatisfaction.—New York Sun.

France consumes from 4,000,000 to 4,500,000 kilograms of raw silk annually, which may be valued at 220,000,000 to 270,000,000 francs. If to this be added the value of the wool and cotton yarns used in mixed fabrics, the total value of the raw material used by the silk industry is found to be from 300,000,000 to 400,000,000 francs.

If there is one truth which more than another is brought out by the study of geology, it is that from the most ancient period down to the present day there has been a gradual introduction from time to time of higher and higher forms of life on this planet, thus constituting a kind of drama of existence.

If your ears burn, people say some one is talking about you. This is very old, for Pliny says, "When our ears do glow and ringle, some do talk of us in our absence."

Shakespeare, in "Much Ado About Nothing," makes Beatrice say to Ursula and Hero, who had been talking of her, "What fire is in mine ears?"

Sir Thomas Browne ascribes this conceit to the superstition of guardian angels, who touch the right ear if the talk is favorable, and the left if otherwise. This is done to cheer or warn.

One ear tingles, some there be
That are snarling now at me.

Trials of an Author.

There came to a man who has had a success in literature which we should envy did we not all agree he deserves it, a lady who was neither young nor fair, but who had the assurance of youth in combination with the obstinacy of advancing years.

"I have decided," she said to him, "that I must earn my living by writing poems. I sent a poem to the Blank Magazine, and they returned it with a printed slip. Now, I want you to write to the editor, and tell him that he made a mistake."

It naturally seemed to the author that he had to deal with a humorist or a mad woman, but the lady was certainly in earnest and apparently sane. He endeavored to show her that it was not his business to interfere with the decisions of the editors of magazines, who might be supposed to know their own business. The lady insisted, however, and in the end he was forced to decline point blank to do what she asked. Thereupon she turned upon him and declared that he was one of those who endeavor to keep others out in order that they may have the field to themselves, and who are meanly jealous of other authors who are sure to eclipse them if they are but heard.

"It is all a ring," she declared with vehemence. "I have been told so before, and now I am sure of it. I can't make you do justice to me, but I can show you up."

Her method of "showing him up" has been to send letters of bitter invective to the papers, one of which fell into my hands. Of course nobody would print them, but she perseveres, and in addition to this she sends to the luckless author, whose crime is that he did not make the editor of the Blank Magazine print the rhymes of an unknown woman, a letter once a week. Of course he burns them unopened, and it is not easy to see what satisfaction it can be to the woman to keep on with this sort of thing, but the fact remains that she does. The story is not of profound importance, but it throws a curious bit of a side light upon the life of the successful author of today.—Arlo Bates in Book Buyer.

Wanting and Getting.

It has been said that the reason so few people get what they want in this world is that they do not want it hard enough. There is profound truth at the bottom of this odd conceit. Earnest striving and perseverance are rare qualities. A little struggle, and then a falling off; a few faint efforts, and then despair—this is the usual story of attempts to "get anything," whether it be a physical, mental or spiritual good. But to long for a thing so strongly that for the sake of its attainment one can conquer obstacles, live down opposition, ignore discouragement and work persistently and through years of trial and obscurity toward the fulfillment of a hope—is not this the record of all grand achievements and the history of all purposeful lives?

Many more wishes might be realized if people were willing to pay this price for them. Anything worth having in this world is dear, including experience. Genius itself has been defined as only unlimited patience, or an endless capacity for hard work.

It was told of some celebrated general that he never knew when he was defeated. By and by he could not be defeated. A little of the same spirit infused into ordinary life work would make many a dream possible that now seems to the wistful dreamer as extravagant as the cloudiest castle in Spain.—Harper's Bazar.

The Improvised Pianist.

A few weeks ago a dancing party was given at one of the largest clubs in Vienna. The regular pianist did not turn up. A message came to say that he was ill. What was to be done? A porter ran out, hailed a cab and said to the driver:

"Drive me—faith, I don't know where."

"Why, what is it you want?"

"I want a piano player. Do you happen to know of one in the neighborhood?"

"I should think I did, in fact, close at hand. You needn't trouble to get into the cab."

"Where is he?"

"Right in front of you. I play the piano myself fairly well, and shall be glad to accommodate you."

Cabby got down from his box, took his seat at the instrument and kept the visitors dancing till break of day. What is more, he declined to accept any payment; he said he had come as an amateur and for the love of the thing. He considered himself highly honored to have been allowed to spend a night with "such grand company." Where but in Vienna could you hope to find such a sample of musical training, civility and disinterestedness among the cabbies?—Le Monde Artiste.

Dr. Judson Tells a Story.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Judson tells of a Baptist who had been very sick. The physician had given him some medicine, and told him he could go out, but under no circumstances was he to get wet. The man went out on the farm, and a shower of rain came up suddenly. There was no shelter near, and to save himself he crawled into a hollow log. The action of the rain caused the log to shrink so as to endanger his life.

He could not move, and being brought face to face with death the whole of his past life came before him as in a panorama; he remembered the days of his childhood, his entrance upon life, his successes and his sins; then he remembered, last of all, that when he left home that morning he refused his wife, when she asked him, for fifty cents for the church, and the thought made him feel so small that he had no difficulty in walking out of the log.—New York Herald.

Birth of the Car Cable.

The sight of six horses vainly endeavoring to take a street car up one of the steep hills of San Francisco inspired in Inventor Halliday's mind the idea of the cable car system. The hill was slippery as well as steep. One horse fell and carried down his mate. The other horses tumbled, until the six were in a struggling heap. The weight of the car dragged them down to the foot of the hill, bruising and maiming them. Mr. Halliday, looking on, was filled with compassion for the poor brutes, and he says he went to work at once on plans for a substitute for horse power. His thinking brought him to the cable system.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

PINNED A WOMAN TO THE GROUND.

The Matter Made Less Serious by the Fact That She Wore Army Shoes.

Richard M. Sommers, the foreman of the roller department in the mint, was recently chatting with some of the men who had seen service in the late war, and, after relating an interesting adventure that had occurred in 1862, said:

But I never was so frightened in my life as I was the day I pinned a fair young rebel to the ground with my bayonet. I thought I had killed her.

The circumstances were these. In August, 1863, when the Philadelphia brigade was moving toward Mine Run, Va., I was detailed from my command, the Seventy-first Pennsylvania volunteers, known as Baker's California regiment, to watch a farmer who was believed to be a spy.

In order to throw him off his guard and also to enable me to learn the better whether he was a spy or not, I was instructed to report at his house, on the Mountain View farm, in Fauquier county, and state that I had come there by command of Colonel W. Pean Smith, in order to protect his home from any straggling soldiers that might trespass with a view to foraging on the premises.

I was well received by the family, who, living in that out of the way country, were quite timid and in constant fear of the passing troops. I was housed there, and fed at their expense, and soon I realized that the hospitality of Virginia's first families was all that it was reported to be. The two pretty girls, sisters, one a blonde and the other a brunette, were at first a little shy of the "wild Yankee," as they called me, but we soon became friends, however, although they would persist in telling me the Confederate cause was just, and that the Union troops were invaders, and all that sort of thing.

The Mountain View farm covered a good many acres of ground, but the owner was poor at that time, and "sweet sixteen," as I called the pretty blonde, had no shoes with which to cover her well shaped little feet. Now I had a brand new pair of army shoes in my knapsack and a fairly good pair on my feet. I asked her if she would wear my new pair if I would make her a present of them. She seemed a little loath to accept them at first, not because of pride, but because she thought it unfair to take them from a soldier who might soon stand in need of them himself. But at last she did accept them, and was real well pleased to do so. Of course, they were a mile too big for her, but that didn't matter. She soon got used to them.

It used to be her custom to watch for foraging soldiers and then to send me after them to drive them away. One morning she said: "Oh, Yank! there is a forager out there. Don't you see him? There he goes under the trees over there."

I started out after the intruder, but I ran all over the part of the farm indicated without seeing any one. It was very warm, and I was very warm and tired when I returned. On seeing her I told her that I could find no one, when she laughed right in my face and said:

"I just fooled the wild Yank for fun." It was fun for her, but not for me. However, I laughed with her. Just then I put my gun down on the ground, as was my habit, bayonet downward, intending to stick it into the ground and thus let the piece stand reversed, but instead of that I stuck it through her shoe and pinned the beautiful girl fast!

I was never so frightened in my life as I was then. I would not have harmed the young woman for the world; she had become to me like a sister.

Maybe I wasn't glad when I saw a twinkle in her bright, blue eyes, and heard her sweet voice ringing in laughter as she said:

"Well, Yank, you did not hurt me a bit, you know these shoes are a trifle large for me, and your bayonet just went through the upper and sole without grazing my toes."

I was rejoiced to hear her talk that way, I assure you. I was taken away from there in a few days after that, it having been found that her father was not what he was suspected to be. But I often thought about that family, especially of one member, in my marches and in later years, but I never met again with any member of it. Not even with my pretty "sweet sixteen" friend, for I was engaged in a great deal of active service in the army, and when I was mustered out of it I returned to Philadelphia and never went back to Virginia.—Philadelphia Times.

LOVE'S EQUATION.

Scant beauty hers whose beauties tongue can name,
And coll his love whose lips can word its flame—
Sweetheart, thy charms shall never measured be,
Save by that love to which they temper me.
And all the passion reigning o'er my heart
I know but as thy beauty's counterpart.

—Duffield Osborne in Harper's Bazar.

The water of the central basin of the Mediterranean has been found to be warmer, denser and richer in dissolved salts than the western. While a white disk was only visible at forty-three meters photographic plates were affected at 500 meters.

J. W. Murphy.

BLACKSMITHING
—AND—
General Iron Work.

Wagons and Carriages Repaired.

HORSESHOEING, $2 00 for CASH

Shop on Edwards St., opposite the Court House, Independence

BOOTS AND SHOES
MADE AND REPAIRED.
THE BEST MATERIAL.
FIRST-CLASS WORK.

Repairs done Promptly.
Prices Reasonable.

nov-26-tf A. J. DAVIS, Independence.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN S. GORMAN,
Sheriff and Tax-Collector.
INYO CO., CAL.

JOHN N. YANDELL,
COUNTY CLERK,
—AND—
Ex-officio Auditor and Recorder,
INYO CO., CAL.

P. W. FORBES,
District Attorney,
—AND—
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
NOTARY PUBLIC.
Cases in U. S. Land Office a Specialty.
INDEPENDENCE, INYO CO., CALIFORNIA.

S. P. M'KNIGHT, C. E.
COUNTY SURVEYOR
—AND—
U. S. Deputy Mineral Surveyor
For California and Nevada.
BISHOP CREEK, INYO CO., CAL.
Obtaining of United States mineral patents a specialty.
All kinds of surveying given the most careful and accurate attention.

J. J. MOORE,
County Treasurer,
INYO CO., CAL.

J. W. P. LAIRD. P. H. MACK.
MACK & LAIRD.
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW
INDEPENDENCE CAL.

F. E. DENSMORE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Independence, Cal.
Will practice in all the Courts of the State and the General Land Office.

JUSTICE OF PEACE,
C. MULHOLLAND.
Office in the "INDEPENDENT" building, Independence, Inyo county, Cal.

Irving J. Wodin, M. D.,
Physician & Surgeon,
(COUNTY PHYSICIAN)
Louise L. Wodin, M. D.
PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.
NIGHT CALLS ATTENDED.
Office and residence at the Reidy place Independence.

J. B. WASSON. J. B. WASSON JR.
DENTISTS.
Office over the Bank of Bakersfield. Southern Root Extracting given the most careful attention. All work guaranteed. Address
WASSON & WASSON,
Bakersfield, Cal.

FOR SALE CHEAP.
Two span first class work horses, Harnesses. Also three colts. Separately or in lots. No reasonable offer refused. Inquire of J. Vagt, Camp Independence.

Lodge 221, F. & A. M.

Regular meetings of Lodge No. 221, F. & A. M., for the year 1891, will be held at the Lodge room at Independence as follows:

Saturday ..... January 24th
" ..... February 21st
" ..... March 28th
" ..... April 18th
" ..... May 23rd
" ..... June 20th
" ..... July 18th
" ..... August 15th
" ..... September 12th
" ..... October 17th
" ..... November 14th
" ..... December 12th

JOHN S. GORMAN, W. M.
C. MULHOLLAND Sec.

FRED BURCKHARDT
Watchmaker & Jeweler
LONE PINE, CAL.

Time pieces of all descriptions repaired and regulated satisfaction guaranteed. Jewelry made to order. Firearms repaired and loaded.
All orders from any part of the country will be promptly attended to, at the most reasonable charges. At the old stand "Mechanics' Hall," Lone Pine.
FRED BURCKHARDT

NOTICE.

ALL PERSONS HAVING CLAIMS against the undersigned will present the same by the first of each month and payment will be made on the 5th.

FRANK FITZGERALD.
Supt. Modock Con. Mining Co., Modock Cal.

OFFICIAL.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Estate of PAULINO PELLEGRINY deceased

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN BY THE UNDERSIGNED, Administrator of the estate of Paulino Pellegriny, deceased, to the creditors of, and all persons having claims against the said deceased, to exhibit them with the necessary vouchers, within four months after the first publication of this notice, to the said Administrator, at his residence, in the town of Independence, County of Inyo, the same being the place for the transaction of the business of said estate in the county of Inyo.

Dated July 24th, 1891.

WM. F. MAILACK,
Administrator of said Estate.

ASSESSMENT NOTICE

STEVENS DITCH COMPANY

Location of principal place of business, Independence, California. Location of Ditch, near Independence.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT AT A meeting of the Board of Directors held the 27th day of June 1891, an assessment (No 6) of Twenty (20) Cents per share was levied upon the capital stock of the corporation, payable immediately in United States gold coin, to the Secretary, at the office of the Company, at Independence, Cal.

Any stock upon which this assessment shall remain unpaid on the 1st day of August 1891, will be delinquent and advertised for sale at public auction; and unless payment is made before, will be sold on MONDAY, the 24th day of August, 1891, to pay the delinquent assessment together with cost of advertising and expenses of sale. By order of the Board of Directors.

P. H. MACK,
Secretary.

ALIAS SUMMONS.

IDA C. DECKER, Plaintiff, vs. STEPHEN DECKER, Defendant.

Action brought in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California and the Complaint filed in said County of Inyo, in the office of the Clerk of said Superior Court.

The people of the State of California send greeting to Stephen Decker, Defendant:

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above-named Plaintiff in the Superior Court of the County of Inyo, State of California, and to answer the Complaint filed therein, within ten days (exclusive of the day of service), after the service on you of this Summons—if served within this County; or if served elsewhere, within thirty days.

The said action is brought to obtain a decree dissolving the bonds of matrimony heretofore and now existing between the Plaintiff and Defendant; that plaintiff be allowed and decreed to resume her former name of Ida C. Adams, and for general relief, as will more fully appear by reference to the complaint on file herein.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint, as above required, said plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness my hand and the Seal of said Superior Court, of the County of Inyo, State of California, this 17th day of June, A. D. 1891.

[SEAL] J. N. YANDELL, Clerk.
MACK & LAIRD, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER.

$20 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER with 78 characters, and $15 for the Single Case Odell, warranted to do better work than any machine made.

It combines SIMPLICITY with DURABILITY, SPEED, EASE OF OPERATION, wears longer with out cost of repairs than any other machine, has no ink or ribbon to bother the operator. It is NEAT, SUBSTANTIAL, nickel plated, perfect and adapted to all kinds of type writing. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two or ten copies can be made at one writing. Any intelligent person can become a operator in two days. We offer $1,000 to any operator who can equal the work of the Double Case Odell.

Reliable Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to Dealers.

For Pamphlet giving Indorsements, &c., address

ODELL TYPE WRITER CO.,
85 and 87 5th Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

MISCELLANEOUS.

INDEPENDENCE
SHAVING SALOON.
Shaving, Hair Cutting, etc., done in the best manner.
WM. H. HUFF, Prop'r

IRWINS' SALOON
Cor. Edwards and Market Streets,
Independence, Cal.
THE PUBLIC GENERALLY ARE RESPECTFULLY invited to call and inspect my establishment, which has been entirely rebuilt and furnished in a style second to no on this side of the mountains. A SPLENDID NEW BILLIARD TABLE provided for the amusement of patrons.

THE BAR
Is supplied with the most celebrated brands of pure Wines and Liquors and the Finest Havana Cigars.
JOHN C. IRWIN, Proprietor.
feb12tf

P. W. FORBES. P. H. MACK.
MACK & FORBES.
Real Estate Agents,
Address, P. H. MACK, Independence, Cal. P. W. FORBES, Bishop, Cal.

BIG PINE HOTEL.
BIG PINE - CAL.
New House,
New Furniture,
Low Rates
Splendid hunting and fishing near by, in act, it is a veritable paradise for tourists and pleasure seekers.
Special attention given to the wants of every guest.
Thos. Williams,
Proprietor.

INYO INDEPENDENT.

INDEPENDENCE, CAL.

FRIDAY, JULY 24 ..... 1891.

MARKET REPORT.

Bar silver, 1 00¼
Lead, 4 45
Copper, 13 70
Tin, 20 40
Sugar, .05¼
Coffee, 20 @ 21¾
Wool, foothill, 13 @ 19.

COURT NOTES.

Geo. M. Gill, Superior Judge.

FRIDAY, July 17, 1891.

Estate of John R. Hughes—Order approving sale of personal property.

Estate of F. Paderes—Mrs. J. Arbechuca appointed Administratrix.

SATURDAY July 18, 1891.

W. R. Johnson vs. O. I. Mairs—Defendant files demurrer.

MONDAY, July 20, 1891.

Estate of John R. Hugees—Order confirming sale of real estate.

TUESDAY, July 21, 1891

W. H. Russell vs. Smith & O'Neal—Filed original summons.

Nathan Rhine vs. Emilie Thiebaut, Administratrix of Alphonse Thiebaut, deceased—Foreclosure of morigage; filed complaint and issued summons.

WEDNESDAY, July 22, 1891.

Rhine vs. Thiebaut—Filed original summons.

Estate of J. C. Eldy, deceased—Filed inventory and appraisement.

Estate of Thomas Parker, deceased—Filed claim of Henry Febrman.

W. R. Johnson vs. O. I. Mairs—Filed amended complaint.

THURSDAY, July 23, 1891.

Charles Anthony vs. Frank Silva—Filed original summons.

FRIDAY, July 24, 1891.

Estate of Paulino Pellegriny, deceased—W. F. Matlack appointed administrator. John Wilson, James McDonald and O. M. Paris appointed appraisers.

Oren C. Johnson et als. vs. W. K. Miller—Filed complaint and issued summons.

DIED.

JIGGENS—At Maxwell, Colusa county July 23d, Henry E. Jiggens, aged 31 years.

O'NEIL—At Independence, July 23d, Patrick O'Neil, aged about 35 years.

Times were lively in Lone Pine during the week.

P. W. Forbes Esq. was in Benton last last week.

Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Mack visited Bishop during the week.

The thunder of nature's artillery boomed all along the line again to-day.

There were thunder showers along the the Sierras all day yesterday.

The County Clerk has Deputy Clark at work on the Assessment Roll.

S. G. Sneden Esq., of Bishop visited Independence several days this week.

Miss Nellie Squires returned to Round Valley on Wednesday after a lengthy visit to Colorado.

Mrs. John Barnes came up from Keeler on yesterday morning's train and is visiting in town.

Johnny Irwin and Bill Witherall intend making an extensive camping trip on the headwaters of Kern river.

By the use of mechanical apparatus hay can be cut, hauled and stacked at a cost of less than one dollar per ton.

George Story has made a successful run at the Maxim mill on ore from the Poleta mine. He was in town on Wednesday.

Ben. Rosenthal of Hawthorne and Miss Vesta A. Rice of Reno were married at Essex near Reno on Sunday evening last

Fred Holbert has bought the Crocker horses and will drive them to the lower country. He went to Big Pine yesterday.

The latest mining excitement is at Lundy, Mono County. Reduction works are being erected there and buildings removed from Bodie.

The Directors of the Stevens Ditch Company and the Lone Pine Canal Company will meet at the office of the Secretary at Independence to-morrow.

Frank Fitzgerald and family will leave Lone Pine to-morrow for a trip to Los Angeles and the Southern country. They expect to be absent nearly two months.

J. J. Gunn returned from his visit to Modock on Wednesday. It is too hot now to do any work there, but in about a month he will resume operations at the Minnietta.

A number of men have been laid off at Modock until the hot season is past, but work is steadily progressing in the lower tunnel. Ore shipments will be made right along.

Receiver Clark went to Bishop on Tuesday and brought down his young stallion, Gibraltar Jr. He will jog him a while and probably put him in shape for the races next fall.

Deputy Sheriff Borgwardt of Kern county went to Big Pine yesterday to visit friends and will return to Independence this evening. He will start for Bakersfield to-morrow morning with his prisoner.

A copy of the fifth annual catalogue of the Inyo Academy was received last mail. It is very neatly gotten up and a credit to the Register Office. There is no use sending away for work when it can be done just as cheap and neat at home.

Jack Wilson arrived in town from Darwin yesterday morning. He left Modock on Wednesday with a sick man named Pat O'Neil who became insane from the combined effects of lead and extreme heat. The poor fellow was very weak, and died yesterday afternoon.

Death of Harry Jiggens.

Last week a telegram was received at Independence saying that Harry Jiggens was lying dangerously ill at Maxwell, Colusa county, from the effects of sunstroke. On Saturday morning last his wife started for Maxwell to join him. Yesterday morning at half-past eight a telegram was received from W. A. Hampton, formerly of Independence, stating that Harry was dead. O. I. Mairs telegraphed to the depot to hold the train until he could reach it, and started immediately. Henry Edward Jiggens was born in Canada in 1860. He came from the East nearly six years ago and has lived at Independence most of the time since with his uncles, the Mairs Brothers. Five years ago he went into a general merchandising business with James T. McMahon at Independence. The venture ended disastrously in the big fire of June, 1886. The firm was burned out only a few days after opening and only resumed business long enough to sell out a few goods rescued from the flames. Subsequently he was in the employ of Thomas Boland, at Keeler, and for a long time had charge of Mairs' livery stable at Independence. On the 28th of December, 1887, he was united in marriage to Miss Emma Flowers, sister of Mrs. O. I. Mairs. Mr. and Mrs. Jiggens lived in Sacramento for a few months, but the health of the former was poor there and they returned to Independence. A short time ago he accepted a position at Maxwell, Colusa county, where he died. Harry was a very energetic, wide-awake young man; he was temperate in his habits and attended most strictly to business. He was an agreeable companion and was well liked by all. He leaves a large circle of friends in Inyo county who deeply regret his sudden and untimely taking off. The deepest sympathy of the community is tendered the bereaved widow.

An Outlaw Captured.

Last Saturday morning Tom McDonough and an Indian known as "Cæsar," brought to Independence and lodged in jail, "Doc," one of the Indians concerned in the killing of Powers and McCoy at Sage canyon. The murderer had worked his way into Saline Valley; the Indians there promptly disarmed him, notified McDonough of his capture, and brought him up over the Cerro Gordo trail. "Doc." was armed with a long 44 calibre Winchester rifle supposed to have been carried by McCoy and a 44 calibre double-action Smith & Wesson revolver known to have been carried by Powers. He also had a silk handkerchief covered with blood stains and a silk handkerchief was taken from Powers' neck. The stock of the rifle was also blood-stained. The assassin boasted to Cæsar and other Saline Indians of having killed two white men. "Doc." is a son of "Old Mike," a well known Indian about Olancha. He never would work steady and bears an evil reputation. Deputy Sheriff Billy Borgwardt arrived from Kern county on yesterday's train to take charge of the prisoner. He will start with him for Bakersfield to-morrow morning, going around by rail via Reno. The Indian will be held for trial in the Superior Court of Kern county and considering the strong evidence to be presented the Warden of San Quentin will have a disagreeable duty to perform. A report was circulated here that a reward of five hundred dollars had been offered for the capture of any or all of the perpetrators of the outrage. This is a mistake; no definite offer of reward has yet been made. It is quite likely, however, that Kern county will liberally reward the captors; this should be done by all means. If Kern betrays a niggardly spirit in the matter the people of Inyo should, and will, raise a subscription for that purpose. It is a matter of interest to all to see to it that this is done.

Big Pine Correspondence.

BIG PINE, July 20, 1891.

ED. INDEPENDENT—There is a blot on the face of the earth, or I should say, a thing of the world with a man's face on him who writes from Big Pine for the Index, who signs his name "Swamper," and was recently posing as a battle-scarred veteran. I don't know anything about his war record under Uncle Sam, but I will take his word for that rather than look for proof. But I can vouch for one thing—he carries a good many wounds received in battle with King Alcohol; but the most offensive wound he bears is the hole in his face he brought on earth with him—it is a running sore near the chin. This same "swamper" who speaks of the Good Templars as the "water-power" should take a tumble as the Templars can get along very well without the aid of his derogatory pen. He will confer a great favor on us by letting up; a man with his reputation can do no good to an organization or an individual. He has about as much regard for others as a Digger Indian. I can't say that I have any objection to the nom de plume he has assumed—I think it suits him. He belongs somewhere about the tail-end of nothing. Such a contemptible wretch would halt nowhere. He should be condemned to scrape the barnacles off the wrong side of oblivion until the sun turns into an icicle; he would then make a prominent candidate for sheol.

A GOOD TEMPLAR.

Well Merited Praise.

In almost every neighborhood there is some one or more persons whose lives have been saved by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy, or who have been cured of chronic diarrhœa by it. Such persons take special pleasure in recommending the remedy to others. The praise that follows the introduction and use makes it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by A. K. EUGLEY, Big Pine.

Yesterday morning Oscar Dearborn came up from Lone Pine and swore out a warrant for the arrest of a Mexican named Manuel Taran on a charge of selling whisky to Indians. Under-Sheriff Holland at once went down and made the arrest, bringing his man up and lodging him in jail last night. He will be tried before Justice of Peace Hannah this afternoon. It is a clear case, there being three white witnesses, and he will be likely to spend the remainder of the hot season in the cooler. That $40 reward is getting in its work.

Hon. P. Reddy went north on Tuesday's train after a two week's visit at Darwin. The Defiance mine is looking well and about a dozen men are employed taking out ore. There are six men employed at the Independence mine owned by Reddy & Wilson. Mr. Reddy has bonded the Columbia mine, situated about three miles south of Darwin, of Frank Silva for $2,500. This mine is partially developed and considerable ore has been shipped from it.

R. C. Spear and his partner, A. A. Cline, have discovered what promises to be a valuable mine in the Inyo range east of the marble quarry at Swansea. They have taken out a carload of lead ore that assays over 100 oz. silver per ton.

HEIR TO $500,000.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—A dispatch was received yesterday from Baltimore announcing that George F. Beiser of Brooklyn had become heir to a vast estate there valued at $500,000. The property came through relatives who emigrated from France in the days of the Huguenots. Mr. Beiser is an accountant in a Fulton street clothing house. Bruce's Law and Inquiry Agency, of Chicago, Ill., prosecuted his claim.—Louisville Courier Journal, Nov. 27

We are Mr. Beiser's lawyers and by him seeing our advertisement, became the agent of his good fortune. If your ancestors came from the old country write to us, and enclose $1 for our list of heirs. There are more than half a billion dollars in Great Britain and Germany, unclaimed, which rightly belong to people in the United States.

BRUCE'S LAW AND INQUIRY OFFICE,
164 and 166 Randolph St.
Chicago, Ill. U. S. A.

A Suggestion

If you are troubled with rheumatism or a lame back, allow us to suggest that you try the following simple remedy. Take a piece of flannel the size of the two hands, saturate it with Chamberlain's Pain-Balm and bind it over the seat of pain. It will produce a pleasant warmth and relieve you of all pain. Many severe cases have been cured in this way. The Pain-Balm can be obtained from

A. K. EUGLEY
Big Pine.

A Quick Cure For Rheumatism.

In many cases persons subject to rheumatism, have got prompt relief from pain by applying Chamberlain's Pain-Balm. The relief it affords is alone worth many times its cost, which is but 50 cents, and its continued application effects a complete cure. For sale by A. K. EUGLEY, Big Pine.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.

The partnership heretofore existing between W. S. Enos and O. I. Mairs is dissolved by mutual consent.

Witness our hands June 15th, 1891.

W. S. ENOS.
O. I. MAIRS.

BLACKSMITHING,
Horseshoeing, General Iron
—AND—
WAGON WORK.
PIONEER BLACKSMITH SHOP
Cor. Main St. & Depot Ave.,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
W. F. MATLACK ..... PROPRIETOR.
Horseshoeing ..... $2 00 for Cash
For particulars, call and see
W. F. MATLACK.

A. W. Eibeshutz
Independence, Cal.
—DEALER IN—
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
Agent For
Fireman's Fund Insurance Co. of California:
Commercial Union Assurance Co. of London.

INDEPENDENCE
MEAT MARKET,
J. C. ROEPER, Prop.
Keep constantly on hand the very choicest of all kinds of meats, including Beef,
Mutton,
Pork,
Sausage.
A well appointed shop, with refrigerator, ensuring the purity of meat, and every effort made to give satisfaction to patrons.
j19-tf

Wm. Muth-Rasmussen.
Bee Keeper.
Manufacturer of Comb Foundation.
Independence, Inyo Co. Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.

For Sale!
ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTY ACRES, THE CHOICEST TRACT OF LAND UNDER THE
Eastside Canal.
There are irrigating ditches on each subdivision of forty acres, and the tract touches the canal so that no long irrigating ditches will have to be kept in repair. The land is in a nook sheltered by the foot hills of the Inyo Mountains. Mr. McIver, the Superintendent of the canal, kindly advised the selection of the location, and to him reference is made for the truth of the description. Six dollars per acre will be accepted for the tract. Address,
C. MULHOLLAND,
Independence.

BELL'S
Flouring Mills,
A. N. BELL, Prop.
TRY BELL'S
EXTRA PATENT ROLLER FLOUR.
Having added Patent Rolls and other Improvements to our Mills, I am now turning out Flour that is fully
Equal to the Best
Corn, Oats and Barley Cracked on Short Notice.
A. N. BELL,
Independence, Cal.

NORMAN HOUSE,
Independence, - Cal.
New House.
New Furniture.
Low Rates.
☞Special attention will be given to secure the comfort of guests.
O. I. MAIRS, Prop.
feb12tf

GENERAL MERCHANDISE
THOMAS & HILL,
—DEALERS IN—
Staple and Fancy Groceries, Dry Goods, Boots and Shoes, Hardware, Tinware, Queensware, Glassware, Agate Ware, Tobacco and Cigars, Wooden and Willow Ware, Flour and Grain, Baled Hay and Straw, Shingles, Lime and Cement, Doors and Sash, Blankets and Robes, Wagons and Carriages, Harness and Saddles, Mining Tools and Supplies, Powder and Fuse, Miners' Candles, Giant Powder and Caps, Agents for Pioneer Powder, Agents for Pioneer Steam Laundry, Agents for Wells, Fargo & Co. Express, Agents for Cal. Fruit Exchange.
BIG PINE, INYO COUNTY, CAL.
We keep constantly on hand goods of all kinds needed in a country home. We order only First-Class Goods and ask no more than a reasonable profit. Give us a trial.
THOMAS & HILL.

MONEY Beginners earn from $25 to $50 per week, and more after a little experience. We can furnish you employment, and will teach you free. You work in your own locality, wherever you live. Both sexes, all ages. We start you. No risk. Can work in spare time, or all the time. Full information FREE. TRUE & CO., AUGUSTA, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FORBES & TOBEY,
HAWTHORNE, NEV.,
—DEALERS IN—
LUMBER
OF ALL KINDS.
DOORS,
SHINGLES,
SASH AND BLINDS,
LATH,
RUSTIC MOULDINGS,
DRESSED LUMBER.
Matched and Dressed Flooring.
sep11-tf

PALACE SALOON
LONE PINE, CAL.
—THE FINEST—
WINES,
BEER,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS
—o—
☞This Saloon is conducted in a strictly first-class manner, and every attention tendered my patrons. FRED. BURCKHARDT, Lessee.
j12-tf

TO ADVERTISERS
A list of 1000 newspapers divided into STATES AND SECTIONS will be sent on application—FREE.
To those who want their advertising to pay, we can offer no better medium for thorough and effective work than the various sections of our Select Local List. GEO. P. ROWELL & CO., Newspaper Advertising Bureau, 10 Spruce Street, New York

EDWARD CHENOT
Independence, Cal.,
INVITES PUBLIC ATTENTION TO HIS Extensive Stock of
GENERAL MERCHANDIS
....Consisting of....
GROCERIES.
PROVISIONS
Tobacco, Cigars,
WINES AND LIQUORS
FLOUR & GRAIN
Together with an Assortment of
DRY GOODS AND CLOTHING
ETC., ETC
☞Buyers and consumer should call and examine my stock and price before purchasing elsewhere.
E. CHENOT.
Independence, Cal., March 9, 1884.
n47tf

Lake View Hotel
Keeler, Cal.
John Barnes, Prop'r.
☞First-class hotel in every respect. The table always supplied with the best in the market. Clean, nicely furnished rooms. Transient visitors will receive every courtesy and attention.
THE BAR
—Is constantly supplied with the finest—
Wines,
Liquors,
& Cigars.

JEWELRY, DIAMONDS, WATCHES.
Hyman Fredrick, Reno, Nev.
—o—
The attention of the people of Inyo and neighboring counties is respectfully invited to the
LARGEST AND BEST STOCK
of Watches, Diamonds, Ear and Finger Rings, Bracelets and all other kinds of Jewelry this side of San Francisco. Knives, Forks, Spoons, and other Table Ware of the Best quality.
PRICES DEFY OUTSIDE COMPETITION.
☞All repairs done promptly and in a workmanlike manner.
Address orders and packages to
HYMAN FREDRICK, Jeweler,
m30-tf RENO, NEVADA.

BIG TOP ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. E. DUNLAP.
Harness Maker.
Harness of all kinds, from the lightest to the heaviest. Any kind of new work made promptly and of the best material. Repairing done on the shortest notice. A full line of saddles and harness.

Valley View Hotel.
O. H. Hill, Prop'r.
A New House Newly Furnished Throughout. Guests will receive every courtesy and attention.

NEVADA STABLE
BISHOP.
Opposite Valley View Hotel, Main St
In the Livery Department nothing is kept but safe and good traveling carriage and saddle horses. Conveyances of all kinds first-class. Good attendance and the best of hay and grain for all animals boarding at the stable
S. P. SMITH, Prop.

BISHOP CREEK
BREWERY,
L. MUNZINGER & CO.,
Proprietors.
All the appliances and conveniences of First Class Brewery, including a beautiful grove for out-door parties.
☞Customers supplied on all points ☜
☞Of the C. & C. Railroad. ☜
Send orders to
L. MUNZINGER & CO.
Bishop Creek, Cal.

Pioneer
Livery & Feed Stables,
INDEPENDENCE, CAL.
Having returned and resumed the management of the above well known feed and livery stables, patrons can be assured of finding there the best of Buggy Teams, Saddle Horses, and
Livery Accommodations
in general. Also, Hay and Grain for sale by the pound or ton.
O. I. MAIRS, Proprietor.

A NEW DEAL!
LONE PINE
Livery. Feed & Sale Stable.
A. C. HARVEY, Prop'r.
OPPOSITE SEW ART HOUSE.
Transient Stock Carefully Tended.

E. H. Edwards,
—DEALER IN—
General Merchandise,
LONE PINE,
INYO COUNTY - - - CALIFORNIA

A. K. EUGLEY,
BIG PINE INYO CO. CAL.
Dealer In GENERAL
MERCHANDISE,
GROCERIES
MINERS
Supplies
PROVISIONS,
&c., &c., &c.
A. K. EUGLEY,
Big Pine, Cal.

$6000.00 a year is being made by John R. Goodwin, Troy, N.Y., at work for us. Reader, you may not make as much, but we can teach you quickly how to earn from $5 to $10 a day at the start, and more as you go on. Both sexes, all ages. In any part of America, you can commence at home, giving all your time, or spare moments only to the work. All is new. Great pay SURE for every worker. We start you, furnishing everything. EASILY, SPEEDILY learned. PARTICULARS FREE. Address at once, GEORGE STINSON & CO., PORTLAND, MAINE.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Railroad Time Table.
CARSON & COLORADO R. R.
TAKING EFFECT
Sunday, November 16,

STATIONS.	From Mound House. No. 1 Leave—		To Mound House. No. 2. Arrives—
Mound House.....	11:30 p. m.		5.50 p. m.
Dayton	12:00 p. m.		5:10 p. m.
Wabuska	2:05 p. m.		2 50 p. m.
Hawthorne	5 50 p. m.		11:10 a. m.
Luning	7:05 p. m.		9:55 a. m.
Soda Springs.....	8:05 p. m.		9:15 a. m.
Belleville.....	9:15 p. m.		7:55a. m.
Candelaria.....	Ar. 10.00 p. m		Lv. 7:20a. m.
	No. 3. Leave—		No. 4. Arrives—
Belleville.....	8 20 a. m.		5:25 p. m.
Benton	11:50 a. m.		1:25 a. m.
Bishop Creek	2:00p. m.		11:00 a. m.
Alvord.....	2.45 p. m.		10:00 a. m.
Independence.....	4:20 p. m.		8:30 a. m.
Lone Pine.....	5:10p. m.		7:40 a. m.
Keeler.....	Ar. 5:55 p. m.		Lv. 7:00 a. m.

Trains 1 and 2 run daily.
Train 3 runs Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
Train 4 runs Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Passenger trains make close connection at Mound House with express trains of V. & T. R. R., which connect at Reno with east and west-bound trains of Central Pacific Railroad.

Stage Connections:

AT HAWTHORNE with United States Stage Company's coaches for Aurora (26 miles); Bodie (35 miles); Lundy and Bridgeport.

AT LUNING (125 miles from Mound House) with Gilmer, Salsbury & Co's. tri-weekly stages (leaving Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays) for Downieville, Grantsville and Belmont.

AT CANDELARIA with U. S. Stage Co's. stage for Columbus (8 miles), Silver Mountain, Montezuma, Alida Valley, Gold Mountain, etc.

H. M. YERINGTON,
General Superintendent.
R. J. LAWS, Assistant Superintendent.
D. A. BENDER,
General Freight and Passenger Agent.

The Newest Styles
OF
Fashionable Clothing
Dry Goods, Ladies' Wear, etc., etc
AT
L. WOOLF'S
CASH STORE
A small stock of fresh groceries and canned goods constantly renewed.
Fresh Produce, and Grain Flour, etc., constantly on hand.
CANDIES,
PEANUTS,
WALNUTS,
TOYS!
THE CASH STORE
Is Where You Get
WORTH OF YOUR MONEY

LONE PINE
Blacksmith Shop.
R. C. Spear, Prop'r
—ALL WORK ON—
MINING TOOLS,
FARMING IMPLEMENTS
& FREIGHTING OUTFITS
—PROMPTLY ATTENDED TO—
HORSE SHOEING,
CARRIAGE WORK,
GENERAL REPAIRING
☞All work attended to with neatness and despatch. Prices to suit the times.

ANTONS SALOON
KEELER, CAL.
In Lake View Hotel
BEER, WINES,
LIQUORS and CIGARS
All kinds of Fancy Drinks, including pure water. A comfortable and pleasant Hall.
JOHN C. ANTON, Prop.

Palace Saloon.
J. C. MILLER, Lessee.
—THE BAR—
Is constantly supplied with the best kinds of
WINES,
LIQUORS,
& CIGARS
☞The most careful attention given to the the amusement and comfort of patrons.
A FINE BILLIARD TABLE!
Is always at the disposal of visitors at the Palace Saloon.

It's sometimes said patent medicines are for the ignorant. The doctors foster this idea.

"The people," we're told, "are mostly ignorant when it comes to medical science."

Suppose they are! What a sick man needs is not knowledge, but a cure, and the medicine that cures is the medicine for the sick.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures the "do believes" and the "don't believes." There's no hesitance about it, no "if" nor "possibly."

It says—"I can cure you, only do as I direct."

Perhaps it fails occasionally. The makers hear of it when it does, because they never keep the money when the medicine fails to do good.

Suppose the doctors went on that principle. (We beg the doctors' pardon. It wouldn't do!)

Choking, sneezing and every other form of catarrh in the head, is radically cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Fifty cents. By druggists.

The laboring organizations in Nebraska are opposed to allowing the Indian children at the Gonod Industrial School to work in the beet-fields during the season. Commissioner Morgan thinks if that course is insisted on, it were best to remove the school to a State where the citizens will be glad to have such an institution of learning.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE AFFLICTED.

A Remarkable Cure of Rheumatism and Catarrh.

Baldwinsville, N. Y.

Pardee Medicine Co.

GENTLEMEN:—About one year ago I chilled my blood and was under the Doctor's care for about six months when I had a counsel of eight physicians and was given up to die. Soon after, a lady friend came to see me and told me about your great Remedy. She said she had been cured by it after having the rheumatism seven years, and that her rheumatism was first brought on by a cold. At this time I was suffering severe pain all through my body and near my heart. The doctors called it only "frozen blood." Through the persuasion of my friend I procured a bottle. I found some relief. Seeing this I procured more and was entirely cured by its use; and what was my surprise and pleasure at finding that I was not only cured of my rheumatism, but the catarrh, which had been troubling me for years, and had become very offensive, had entirely left me.

Wishing your remedy every success, and thanking you very much for my double cure, I remain,

Truly yours,
MRS. LUCY BRONSON.

Rochester, N. Y.

GENTS:—I was confined to my bed with Inflammatory Rheumatism for over a week; was very badly afflicted, suffering from severe pains in my chest, it was going to my heart. On Thursday the 15th I commenced using Dr. Pardee's Rheumatic Remedy at 9 o'clock, P. M., and on Saturday the 17th, was able to walk all over the house, and have since continued to improve, and take pleasure in recommending it to all who are afflicted with the terrible disease.

EDW. B. WILKINS,
No. 5 East Maple Street.

WHY!

WHEREFORE. The virtues or merits of a remedy for pain do not consist in its being as good for relief as other remedies, but in the fact that it is better, in being more prompt and sure, and therefore the best for the specific purpose. It is not an idle catchline that strikes the eye thus:

ST. JACOBS OIL
THE GREAT REMEDY FOR PAIN,
IS THE BEST.

It is the best cure for all aches and pains, and it holds

THE TRUE PROOF.

To this specific fact Archbishops, Bishops, Clergymen, Lawyers, Doctors, Governors, Generals, Senators, Members of Congress and Legislatures, U. S. Consuls, Army and Navy Officers Mayors and Officials, testify and unite in saying: "We suffered pain;

OTHER REMEDIES FAILED,

and St. Jacobs Oil cured promptly and permanently." For the same reason finds what he seeks and needs, is not deceived and will have it at any price.

THE POOR MAN

INDISPENSIBLE TO HOUSEKEEPERS. Ask Your Dealer for it. Write for Circular. AMERICAN OIL CO., Agts. 11 to 15 Main St. San Francisco, California.

$100 for $20!

ODELL TYPEWRITER.

EQUAL TO ANY $100 MACHINE for speed, clean impression, perfect alignment and manifolding.

Double Case (capital and small letters), 78 different characters	$20 00
Single Case	$15 00

Send for catalogue.

S. DAVIS,
Sole Agent Pacific Coast, 421 Montgomery Street San Francisco.

FRAZER AXLE GREASE
Best in the World! Get the Genuine! Sold Everywhere!

THE SPLENDID SPUR.

Being Memoirs of the Adventures of Mr. John Marvel, a Servant of His late Majesty King Charles I, in the years 1642-3: written by himself.

EDITED IN MODERN ENGLISH BY "Q."

In the first days of my recovery, news came to us (I forget how) that a solemn sacrament had been taken between the parties in Devon and Cornwall, and the country was at peace. Little I cared, at the time; but was content—now spring was come—to loiter about the tors, and, while watching John at her work, to think upon Delia. For, albeit I had little hope to see her again, my late pretty comrade held my thoughts the day long. I shared them with nobody; for though 'tis probable I had let some words fall in my delirium, Joan never hinted at this, and I never found out.

To Joan's company I was left; for her father, after saving my life that afternoon, took no further notice of me by word or deed; and the cat, Jan Tergagle (named after a spirit that was said to haunt the moors hereabouts), was as indifferent. So with Joan I passed the days idly, tending the sheep, or waiting on her as she plowed, or lying full length on the hillside and talking with her of war and battles. 'Twas the one topic on which she was curious (scoffing at me when I offered to teach her to read print), and for hours she would listen to stories of Alexander and Hannibal, Cæsar and Joan of Arc, and other great commanders whose history I remembered.

One evening—'twas early in May—we had climbed to the top of the gray tor above Temple, whence we could spy the white sails of the two channels moving, and, stretched upon the short turf there, I was telling my usual tale. Joan lay beside me, her chin propped on one earth stained hand, her great, solemn eyes wide open as she listened. Till that moment I had regarded her rather as a man comrade than a girl, but now some feminine trick of gesture awoke me, perhaps, for my fancy began to contrast her with Delia, and I broke off my story and sighed.

"Art longing to be hence?" she asked.

I felt ashamed to be thus caught and was silent. She looked at me and went on:

"Speak out, lad."

"Loath would I be to leave you, Joan."

"And why?"

"Why, we are good friends, I hope, and I am grateful."

"Oh, ay—wish thee'd learn to speak the truth, Jack. Art longing to be hence and shalt—soon."

"Why, Joan, you would not have me dwell here always?"

She made no answer for a while and then with a change of tone:

"Shalt ride wi' me to Bodmin fair to-morrow for a treat, an' see the great Turk and fat 'ooman and hocus-pocus. So tell me more 'bout Joan, the Frenchwoman."

On the morrow, about 9 in the morning, we set off—Joan on the strawberry, balanced easily on an old sack, which was all her saddle, and I on Molly, that now was sound again and chafing to be so idle. As we set out Joan's father for the first time took some notice of me, standing at the door to see us off and shouting after us to bring home some account of the wrestling. Looking back at a quarter mile's distance, I saw him still framed in the doorway with the cat perched on his shoulder.

Bodmin town is nought but a narrow street, near on a mile long, and widening towards the western end. It lies mainly along the south side of a steep vale, and this May morning, as Joan and I left the moors and rode down to it from northward, already we could hear trumpets blowing, the big drum sounding, and all the bawling voices and hubbub of the fair. Descending, we found the long street lined with booths and shows and nigh blocked with the crowd, for the revel began early and was now in full swing. And the crew of gipsies, whifflers, mountebanks, fortune tellers, cut purses and quacks mixed up with honest country faces, beat even the rabble I had seen at Wantage.

Now my own first business was with a tailor; for the clothes I wore when I rode into Temple, four months back, had been so sadly messed with blood, and afterwards cut, to free them from my wound, that now all the tunic I wore was of sack cloth, contrived and stitched together by Joan. So I made at once for a decent shop, where luckily I found a suit to fit me, one taken (the tailor said) off a very promising young gentleman that had the misfortune to be killed on Braddock Down. Arrayed in this, I felt myself again, and offered to take Joan to see the fat woman.

We saw her, and the Ethiop, and the rhinoceros (which put me in mind of poor Anthony Killigrew), and the pig faced baby, and the cudgel play, and presently halted before a Cheap Jack that was crying his wares in a prodigious loud voice near the town wall.

'Twas a meager, sharp visaged fellow with a gray chin beard like a billygoat's; and (as fortune would have it), spying our approach, he picked out a mirror from his stock, and, holding it aloft, addressed us straight:

"What have we here," cries he, "but a pair o' lovers coming? and what i' my hand but a lover's hour glass? Sure the stars of heav'n must have a hand in this conjuncture—and only thirteen pence, my pretty fellow, for a glass that will tell the weather i' your sweetheart's face, and help make it fine."

There were many country fellows with their maids in the crowd, that turned their heads at this address; and as usual the women began.

"'Tis Joan o' the Tor!"

"Joan's picked up wi' a sweetheart—teenee!—an' us reckoned her'd forsworn mankind!"

"Who is he?"

"Some furriner, sure, that likes garlick."

"He's bought her no ribbons yet."

"How should he, poor lad, that can find no garments upon her to fasten 'em to?"

And so on, with a deal of spiteful laughter. Some of these sayings were half truths, no doubt; but the truthfulest word may be infelix. So, noting a dark flush on Joan's cheek, I thought to end the scene by taking the Cheap Jack's mirror on the spot, to stop his tongue, and then drawing her away.

But in this I was a moment too late, for just as I reached up my hand with the thirteen pence, and the grinning fellow on the platform bent forward with his mirror, I heard a coarser jest, a rush in the crowd and two heads go crack! together like eggs. 'Twas two of Joan's tormentors she had taken by the hair and served so; and, dropping them the next instant, had caught the Cheap Jack's beard, as you might a bell rope, and wrenched him head foremost off his stand, my thirteen pence flying far and wide. Plump he fell into the crowd, that scattered on all hands as Joan pummeled him; and whack! whack! fell the blows on the poor idiot's face, who screamed for mercy, as though Judgment Day were come.

No one, for the minute, dared to step between them; and presently Joan, looking up, with arm raised for another buffet, spied a poor astrologer close by, in a red and yellow gown, that had been reading fortunes in a tub of black water beside him, but was now broken off, dismayed at the hubbub. To this tub she dragged the Cheap Jack and sent him into it with a round souse. The black water splashed right and left over the crowd. Then, her wrath abated, Joan faced the rest, with hands on hips, and waited for them to come on.

Not a word had she spoken, from first to last, but stood now with hot cheeks and bosom heaving. Then, finding none to take up her challenge, she strode out through the folk, and I after her, with the mirror in my hand; while the Cheap Jack picked himself out of the tub, whining, and the astrologer wiped his long white beard and soiled robe.

Outside the throng was a carriage, stopped for a minute by this tumult, and a servant at the horses' heads. By the look of it 'twas the coach of some person of quality; and, glancing at it, I saw inside an old gentleman, with a grave, venerable face, seated. For the moment it flashed on me I had seen him before somewhere, and cudgeled my wits to think where it had been. But a second and longer gaze assured me I was mistaken, and I went on down the street after Joan.

She was walking fast and angry; nor, when I caught her up and tried to soothe, would she answer me but in the shortest words. Woman's justice, as I had just learned, has this small defect—it goes straight enough, but mainly for the wrong object. Which now I proved in my own case.

"Where are you going, Joan?"

"To 'Fifteen Balls' stable, for my horse."

"Art not leaving the fair yet, surely?"

"That I be, though. Have had fairing enow—wi' a man!"

Nor for the great part of the way home would she speak to me. But meeting, by Pound Scawens (a hamlet close to the road), with some friends going to the fair, she stopped for a while to chat with them, whilst I rode forward; and when she overtook me, her brow was clear again.

"Am a hot headed fool, Jack, and have spoiled thy day for thee."

"Nay, that you have not," said I, heartily glad to see her humble, for the first time in our acquaintance; "but if you have forgiven me that which I could not help, you shall take this that I bought for you, in proof."

And, pulling out the mirror, I leaned over and handed it to her.

"What i' the world be this?" she asked, taking and looking at it doubtfully.

"Why, a mirror."

"What's that?"

"A glass to see your face in," I explained.

"Be this my face?" She rode forward, holding up the glass in front of her. "Why, what a handsome looking gal I be, to be sure! Jack, art certain 'tis my very own face?"

"To be sure," said I, amazed.

"Well!" There was silence for a full minute, save for our horses' tread on the high road. And then:

"Jack, I be powerful dirty!"

This was true enough, and it made me laugh. She looked up solemnly at my mirth (having no sense of a joke then or ever) and bent forward to the glass again.

"By the way," said I, "did you mark a carriage just outside the crowd, by the Cheap Jack's booth, with a white haired gentleman seated inside?"

Joan nodded. "Master Hannibal Tingcomb, steward o' Gleys."

"What!"

I jumped in my saddle, and with a pull at the bridle brought Molly to a standstill.

"Of Gleys?" I cried. "Steward of Sir Deakin Killigrew that was?"

"Right, lad, except the last word. 'That is,' shouldst rather say."

"Then you are wrong, Joan; for he's dead and buried these five months. Where is this house of Gleys? for to-morrow I must ride there."

"'Tis easy found, then; for it stands on the south coast, yonder, and no house near it: five mile from anywhere, and sixteen from Temple, due south. Shall want thee afore thou startest, Jack. Dear, now! who'd 'a' thought I was so dirty?"

The cottage door stood open as we rode into the yard, and from it a faint smoke came curling, with a smell of peat. Within I found the smoldering turves scattered about as on the day of my first arrival, and among them Joan's father stretched, flat on his face; only this time the cat was curled up quietly and lying between the old man's shoulder blades.

"Drunk again," said Joan shortly.

But, looking more narrowly, I marked a purplish stain on the ground by the old man's mouth and turned him softly over.

"Joan," said I, "he's not drunk—he's dead!"

She stood above us and looked down, first at the corpse, then at me, without speaking for a time; at last:

"Then I reckon he may as well be buried."

"Girl," I called out, being shocked at this callousness, "'tis your father—and he is dead!"

"Why, that's so, lad. An he were alive, shouldn't trouble thee to bury'n."

And so, before night, we carried him up to the bleak torside, and dug his grave there; the black cat following us to look. Five feet deep we laid him, having dug down to solid rock; and, having covered him over, went silently back to the hovel. Joan had not shed a single tear.

CHAPTER XIV.

I DO NO GOOD IN THE HOUSE OF GLEYS.

Very early next morning I awoke, and, hearing no sound in the loft above (whither, since my coming, Joan had carried her bed), concluded her to be still asleep. But in this I was mistaken, for, going to the well at the back to wash, I found her there, studying her face in the mirror.

"Luckily met, Jack," she said, when I was cleansed and freshly glowing. "Now fill another bucket and sarve me the same."

"Cannot you wash yourself?" I asked, as I did so.

"Lost the knack, I reckon. Stand thee so, an' slush the water over me.

"But your clothes?" I cried out; "they'll be soaking wet!"

"Clothes won't be worse for a wash, neither So slush away."

Therefore, standing at three paces' distance, I sent a bucketful over her, and then another and another. Six times I filled and emptied the bucket in all; and at the end she was satisfied, and went, dripping, back to the kitchen to get me my breakfast.

"Art early abroad," she said, as we sat together over the meal.

"Yes, for I must ride to Gleys this morning."

"Sha'n't be sorry to miss thee for a while. Makes me feel so shy—this cleanliness."

So, promising to be back by nightfall, I went presently to saddle Molly; and, following Joan's directions and her warnings against quags and pitfalls, was soon riding south across the moor, and well on my road to the House of Gleys.

My way leading me by Braddock Down, I turned aside for a while to examine the ground of the late fight (though by now little was to be seen but a piece of earthwork left unfinished by the rebels and the fresh mounds where the dead were laid); and so 'twas high noon—and a dull, cheerless day—before the hills broke and let me have a sight of the sea. Nor, till the noise of the surf was in my ears, did I mark the chimneys and naked gray walls of the house I was bound for.

'Twas a gloomy, savage pile of granite, perched at the extremity of a narrow neck of land, where every wind might sweep it, and the waves beat on three sides the cliff below. The tide was now at the full almost, and the spray flying in my face, as we crossed the head of a small beach, forded a stream and scrambled up the rough road to the entrance gate.

A thin line of smoke blown level from one chimney was all the sign of life in the building; for the narrow lights of the upper story were mostly shuttered, and the lower floor was hid from me by a high wall inclosing a courtlage in front. One stunted ash, with boughs tortured and bent towards the mainland, stood by the gate, which was locked. A smaller door, also locked, was let into the gate, and in this again a shuttered iron grating. Hard by dangled a rusty bell pull, at which I tugged sturdily.

On this, a cracked bell sounded, far in the house, and scared a flock of starlings out of a disused chimney. Their cries died away presently and left no sound but that of the gulls wailing about the cliff at my feet. This was all the answer I won.

I rang again, and a third time; and now at last came the sound of footsteps shuffling across the court within. The shutter of the grating was slipped back and a voice, cracked as the bell, asked my business.

"Too see Master Hannibal Tingcomb," answered I.

"Thy name?"

"He shall hear it in time. Say that I come on business concerning the estate."

The voice muttered something, and the footsteps went back. I had been kicking my heels there for twenty minutes or more when they returned, and the voice repeated the question:

"Thy name?"

Being by this time angered, I did a foolish thing; which was to clap the muzzle of my pistol against the grating, close to the fellow's nose. Singular to say, the trick served me. A bolt was slipped hastily back and the wicket door opened stealthily.

"I want," said I, "room for my horse to pass."

Thereupon more grumbling followed, and a prodigious creaking of bolts and chains; after which the big gate swung stiffly back.

"Sure, you must be worth a deal," I said, "that shut yourselves in so careful."

Before me stood a strange fellow—extraordinary old and bent, with a wizened face, one eye only, and a chin that almost touched his nose. He wore a dirty suit of livery, that once had been canary yellow; and shook with the palsy.

"Master Tingcomb will see the young man," he squeaked, nodding his head; "but is a-reading just now in his Bible."

"A pretty habit," answered I, leading in Molly—"if unseasonable. But why not have said so?"

He seemed to consider this for awhile, and then said, abruptly:

"Have some pasty and some good cider?"

"Why, yes," I said, "with all my heart, when I have stabled the sorrel here."

He led the way across the court, well paved but choked with weeds, towards the stable. I found it a spacious building, and counted sixteen stalls there; but all were empty save two, where stood the horses I had seen in Bodmin the day before. Having stabled Molly, I left the place (which was thick with cobwebs) and followed the old servant in the house.

He took me into a great stone kitchen, and brought out the pasty and cider, but poured out half a glass only.

"Have a care, young man; 'tis a luscious, thick, seductive drink," and he chuckled.

"'Twould turn the edge of a knife," said I, tasting it and looking at him; but his one bleared eye was inscrutable. The pasty also was moldy, and I soon laid it down.

"Hast a proud stomach that cometh of faring sumptuously; the beef therein is our own killing," said he. "Young sir, art a man of blood, I greatly fear, by thy long sword and handiness with the firearms."

"Shall be presently," answered I, "if you lead me not to Master Tingcomb."

He scrambled up briskly and tottered out of the kitchen into a stone corridor, I after him. Along this he hurried, muttering all the way, and halted before a door at the end. Without knocking he pushed it open, and, motioning me to enter, hastened back as he had come.

"Come in," said a voice that seemed familiar to me.

Though, as you know, 'twas still high day, in the room where now I found myself was every appearance of night; the shutters being closed and six lighted candles standing on the table. Behind them sat the venerable gentleman whom I had seen in the coach, now wearing a plain suit of black and reading in a great book that lay open on the table. I guessed it to be the Bible; but noted that the candles had shades about them, so disposed as to throw the light, not on the page, but on the doorway where I stood.

Yet the old gentleman, having bid me enter, went on reading for a while as though wholly unaware of me; which I found somewhat nettling, so began:

"I speak, I believe, to Master Hannibal Tingcomb, steward to Sir Deakin Killigrew."

He went on, as if ending his sentence, aloud:

"And my darling from the power of the dog." Here he paused with finger on the place and looked up. "Yes, young sir, that is my name—steward to the late Sir Deakin Killigrew."

"The late?" cried I. Then you know"——

"Surely I know that Sir Deakin is dead, else should I be but an unworthy steward." He opened his grave eyes as if in wonder.

"And his son, also?"

"Also his son Anthony, a headstrong boy, I fear me; a consorter with vile characters. Alas! that I should say it."

"And his daughter, Mistress Delia?"

"Alas!" and he fetched a deep sigh.

"Do you mean, sir, that she, too, is dead?"

"Why, to be sure—but let us talk on less painful matters."

"In one moment, sir; but first tell me—where did she die and when?"

For my heart stood still, and I was fain to clutch the table between us to keep me from falling. I think this did not escape him, for he gave me a sharp look, and then spoke very quiet and hushed.

"She was cruelly killed by highwaymen at the 'Three Cups' inn, some miles out of Hungerford. The date given me is the 8d of December last."

With this a great joy came over me, and I blurted out, delighted:

"There, sir, you are wrong! Her father was killed on the night of which you speak—cruelly enough, as you say; but Mistress Delia Killigrew escaped, and, after the most incredible adventures"——

I was expecting him to start up with joy at my announcement; but, instead of this, he gazed at me very sorrowfully and shook his head, which brought me to a stand.

"Sir," I said, changing my tone, "I speak but what I know; for 'twas I had the happy fortune to help her to escape, and, under God's hand, to bring her safe to Cornwall."

"Then, where is she now?"

Now, this was just what I could not tell. So, standing before him, I gave him my name and a history of all my adventures in my dear comrade's company, from the hour when I saw her first in the inn at Hungerford. Still keeping his finger on the page, he heard me to the end attentively, but with a curling of the lips towards the close, such as I did not like. And when I had done, to my amaze he spoke out sharply, and as if to a whipped schoolboy.

"'Tis a cock and bull story, sir, of which I could hope to make you ashamed. Six weeks in your company? and in boy's habit? Surely 'twas enough the pure, unhappy maid should be dead—without such vile slander on her fame, and from you, that were known, sir, to have been at that inn, and on that night, with her murderers. Boy, I have evidence that, taken with your confession, would weave you a halter; and am a justice of the peace. Be thankful, then, that I am a merciful man; yet be abashed."

Abashed, indeed, I was; or, at least, taken aback, to see his holy indignation and the flush on his waxen cheek. Like a fool I stood staggered, and wondered dimly where I had heard that thin voice before. In the confusion of my senses I heard it say, solemnly:

"The sins of her fathers have overtaken her, as the Book of Exodus proclaimed: therefore is her inheritance wasted, and given to the satyr and the wild ass."

"And which of the twain be you, sir?"

I cannot tell what forced this violent rudeness from me, for he seemed an honest, good man; but my heart was boiling that any should put so ill a construction on my Delia. As for him, he had risen, and was moving with dignity to the door—to show me out, as I guess. When suddenly I, that had been staring stupidly, leaped upon him and hurled him back into his chair.

For I had marked his left foot trailing, and, by the token, knew him for the white haired man of the bowling green.

"Master Hannibal Tingcomb," I spoke in his ear, "—dog and murderer! What did you in Oxford last November? And how of Capt. Lucius Higgs, otherwise Capt. Luke Settle, otherwise Mr. X.? Speak, before I serve you as the dog was served that night!"

I dream yet, in my sick nights, of the change that came over the vile, hypocritical knave at these words of mine. To see his pale, venerable face turn green and livid, his eyeball start, his hands clutch at air—it frightened me

(TO BE CONTINUED.

DEAR EYES.

O love, O wife, thine eyes are they,
My springs from out whose shining gray
Issue the sweet celestial streams
That feed my life's bright Lake of Dreams.

Oval and large and passion pure,
And gray and large and honor sure;
Soft as a dying violet's breath,
Yet calmly unafraid of death.

Thronged, like two dovecotes of gray doves,
With wife's and mother's and poor folk's loves,
And home loves and high glory loves
And science loves and story loves.

And loves for all that God and man
In art and nature make or plan,
And lady loves for spidery lace
And broideries and supple grace.

And diamonds and the whole sweet round
Of littles that large life compound,
And loves for God and God's bare truth,
And loves for Magdalen and Ruth.

Dear eyes, dear eyes and face complete,
Being heavenly sweet and earthly sweet,
I marvel that God made you mine,
For when he frowns 'tis then ye shine!

—Sidney Lanier in Albany Journal.

Dressing Children.

For play or school the plainer the dress for children the better it is for both parents and children, for it is torture for children to wear a gown that is on their tender little consciences. The more active and healthy the child the harder it is for it to be restrained by the ever present remembrance of that pretty dress that cost so much money and labor, and that must not be soiled or torn. Dark blue flannel or calico, cashmere in dark colors, and linen and the indestructible nankeen, are all good, sensible materials for ordinary dresses for little girls, and in them they can move unrestrainedly and have a chance to develop healthy bodies, which are the foundations of happiness—I had almost said morality, and I don't know but it is so anyhow.

Quicksand is composed chiefly of small particles of mica mixed largely with water. The mica is so smooth that the fragments slip upon each other with the greatest facility, so that any heavy body which displaces them will sink and continue to sink until a solid bottom is reached. When particles of sand are jagged and angular any weight pressing on them will crowd them together until they are compacted into a solid mass. A sand composed of mica or soapstone when sufficiently mixed with water seems incapable of such consolidation.—Public Opinion.

Mr. A. A. Low, the father of President Low, of Columbia college, has just passed his eightieth birthday. Mr. Low has given $20,000 to his birthplace—Salem, Mass.—to be devoted to the education of deserving boys.

HOW'S THIS!

We offer One Hundred Dollars reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Props., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions, and financially able to carry out any obligations made by their firm.

WEST & TRUAX, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.
WALDING, KINNAN & MARVIN, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

Wibble—Well, they don't boil heretics in oil nowadays. Wabble—No; they merely roast them in religious journals.

RUPTURE AND PILES CURED.

We positively cure rupture and all rectal diseases without pain or detention from business. No cure, no pay; and no pay until cured. Address for pamphlet Drs. Porterfield & Losey, 838 Market street, San Francisco.

Every man will sooner or later meet the man who will knock the chip off his shoulder.

No Safer Remedy can be had for Coughs and Colds, or any trouble of the Throat, than "Brown's Bronchial Troches." Price 25 cts. Sold only in boxes.

There are times when forbearance ceases to be a virtue, but never when you are bothering somebody else.

Try Germea for Breakfast.

ONE ENJOYS

Both the method and results when Syrup of Figs is taken; it is pleasant and refreshing to the taste, and acts gently yet promptly on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, cleanses the system effectually, dispels colds, headaches and fevers and cures habitual constipation permanently. For sale in 50c and $1 bottles by all druggists.

CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
LOUISVILLE, KY. NEW YORK, N.Y.

"German Syrup"

Here is an incident from the South—Mississippi, written in April, 1890, just after the Grippe had visited that country. "I am a farmer, one of those who have to rise early and work late. At the beginning of last Winter I was on a trip to the City of Vicksburg, Miss., where I got well drenched in a shower of rain. I went home and was soon after seized with a dry, hacking cough. This grew worse every day, until I had to seek relief. I consulted Dr. Dixon who has since died, and he told me to get a bottle of Boschee's German Syrup. Meantime my cough grew worse and worse and then the Grippe came along and I caught that also very severely. My condition then compelled me to do something. I got two bottles of German Syrup. I began using them, and before taking much of the second bottle, I was entirely clear of the Cough that had hung to me so long, the Grippe, and all its bad effects. I felt tip-top and have felt that way ever since." PETER J. BRIALS, Jr., Cayuga, Hines Co., Miss.

S. F. N. U. No. 470. New Series No. 25.

SURE CURE FOR PILES.

Sure cure for blind, bleeding and itching Piles. One box has cured the worst cases of ten years' standing. No one need suffer ten minutes after using Kirk's German Pile Ointment. It absorbs tumors, allays the itching, acts as a poultice, gives relief. Dr. Kirk's German Pile Ointment is prepared only for Piles and itching of the private parts, and nothing else. Every box is warranted ..... Sold by druggists and sent by mail on receipt of price, $1.00 per box. J. J. Mack & Co., Wholesale Agents, San Francisco.

A Far-Sighted Youth—"Can you afford to marry?" "I think so. I have a clergyman friend who'll do it cheap."

ACROSS THE DEEP, TO THE FAR WEST,

